Hope

Religion is a boon untold,
The life giving fount of God:
His smiling face we there behold,
'Neath the lifted hand and rod.

Though affliction oftimes goes before,
He guides and loves each erring child;
The ship returns to port once more,
Though oceans roll and storms are wild.

To that haven of eternal rest,
We hope at last in peace to come;
When all the earth by him is blest,
His glorious kingdom is our home.

Mid blooming fields, 'neath azure skies,
And hills bedecked with verdant green;
And glowing landscape charms our eyes,
And God himself rules o'er the scene.

Salvation

No. 2

That a man is not absolutely saved the very moment he sees himself as a sinner under condemnation by God's law, but desires with a great and honest longing to be made free from that condemnation is proven by the word of God. The following inspired records will serve to show how a man is brought into a condition where he is free from past transgressions and is placed on probation for eternal life. Jesus said preach the Gospel. Why? That men may hear and believe. Does this hearing and believing place him where he can say in truth, "I am saved?" He may speak the words but they are contradictory to Jesus' own saying. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." He may hear and believe to all eternity, but is still under condemnation for a broken law. He has faith without works. It is as lifeless as a body without breath (James 2:26).

Now take the case of Cornelius, a devout man, one who feared God One who was good to the poor. Surely if only hearing and believing the Gospel could save one such a man would need only faith. What says the record? "Can any forbid water that these should not be baptized?" Peter certainly knew this must follow belief and evidently feared that the Jews who were with him would object because Cornelius was a Gentile and the men of the Jews did not yet understand that salvation was offered to the Gentiles on exactly the same condition that it was to them, namely, hearing and receiving the good word of salvation through Christ followed by obedience. So we find Peter commanding them to be baptized. He could not separate the Lord's command stopping at belief only. And so these first Gentile converts believed and were baptized for remission of sins as were the Jewish converts on the day of Pentecost.

One other example: Paul. Jesus talked with Paul face to face. Surely if one could be saved by believing, Paul could say, "I am saved." What are the facts. See Acts 22. Mark well the 16th verse, "And now why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins." To one who reverences God's word one plain "Thus saith the Lord" is sufficient. Now we take up the second part of this vital question.

Granting that the word teaches that hearing and believing the Gospel and being baptized are all necessary to free one from past sins, can one who has obeyed them say, "I am saved?" No; because such an assertion is contrary to Scripture and facts. Hearing, believing the Gopel, obeying it in baptism brings the obedient one into a different relation, into a new life. See Romans 6:4 11.18, 20. What do they show? In a figure the old Adam has died and been buried, then resurrected to a new life of service. This is the beginning of our relation to Christ the New Man, not the ending when we shall know absolutely our standing before God. We have entered a race. That all whose names are entered for this race will win, only time can tell.

Read 1 Cor. 9:24 to end of chapter. Here we find Paul the man whom Jesus himself instructed (Gal. 1:12) declaring that only by overcoming the desires of the flesh could he escape being cast away from salvation. Romans 8:1. How many timesI have heard part of this verse quoted. Over and over some have said to me, "I am saved. I know I am saved." What a joy and strength this assurance is to a christian. And then to clinch the assertion they quote, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus." And they always stop right there. I do not know why this is. It seems so awful to me to thus divide the word of truth. Reader, I beg of you read and ponder well these words spoken by the Spirit of the great God of the universe: "There is therefore no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." What keeps one free from condemnation ? To continue to walk faithfully until death or until the Lord come. "He that endureth to the end the same shall be saved."

Who are those who will be condemned if they do not walk according to the commands of the Spirit? Unbelievers? No, those who have heard and obeyed the word. This the record absolutely states. Read carefully Jesus' parable of the sower. The seed was sown into different soil; but it was the same seed each received. What was Jesus teaching by this parable? That not all who receive the word will endure unto the end. His words are plain, some will endure but a little while (Matt. 13:21). These received the word with joy. It may be they said they were eternally saved and could not fall away. We see from this parable of our Lord how unscriptural and misleading is the teaching that if one has once tasted of the grace of God he cannot be lost but is eternally saved. Read carefully Paul's words in the sixth chapter of Hebrews, "if they shall fall away," showing that such a thing might be. What is the true teaching everywhere in the Bible on this vital doctrine? To those baptized into Christ past sins are covered (Acts 2:38; 22:16; Rom. 6). They then enter the race for eternal life. Can no one turn back? See Gal. 5:7. These run well for a while but were turned and driven back. How turn ye back (Gal. 4:9).

When the righteous turneth away from his righteousness and committeth iniquity, all his righteousness that he hath done shall not be mentioned. In his sin shall he die (Ezek. 18:24). Could words be plainer? "Be not deceived. God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he reap." Listen again, "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away." Jesus himself says this in John 15:2. Notice this was a branch (disciple) that had been in the vine (Jesus).

To sum up the whole question from the beginning to the end: A person instructed in the word of the kingdom inquiring what he must do to be saved has only one scriptural answer to receive. "Repent and be baptized into the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38). When he has yielded this obedience of faith, he is born of water through the inceptive influence of the truth; and having entered the name his sins are covered; his transgressions hid; his whole past life is cancelled, and he has commenced a term of probation in which he is a lawful candidate for that birth of the spirit from the grave, which will finally constitute him a Son of God being of the children of the resurrection (Luke 20:36). His ultimate acceptance will depend upon the character he develops in this new relation. If he brings forth the fruit of the Spirit he will be approved by the Lord when he returns. But if he continues to perform the works of the flesh he will be adjudged of those who, when they have heard, go forth and are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of this life and bring no fruit to perfection (R. Roberts).

Written with an earnest desire that God's Word may be exalted above the "vain traditions" of men.

JESUS AS THE SON OF GOD.

Paul, in writing to the Church at Rome said, "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." This enables us to determine the difference between the sacrifices offered by the two sons of Adam, Cain and Abel. They evidently had been instructed as to the kind of a sacrifice to offer and when to offer it. Abel's was accepted having received the witness that he was righteous. Since that time there have been the two systems of worship. One was acceptable to Jehovah, the other rejected because it was not of faith. It is well that we seek and find in what faith was required. There can be but one source.

There had been but one promise made in which faith was required, viz., the promise made to the woman. Her seed was to bruise the head of the serpent seed. The finale of this promise will be the destruction of the works of the adversary. This faith was to be emphasized in the kind of a sacrifice offered. Abel's sacrifice consisted in the death of the victim and the fat thereof. The kid became the covenant victim pointing to that one offering of sin forever. The blood of bulls and goats could not blot out sin. This could only be accomplished through the seed of the woman (Gen. 3:15). A sacrifice is not of faith unless it relates to the promise made. A faith-sacrifice is not the observance of a form but an intelligent knowledge of the promise made. This faith effects the reason and not the emotions alone.

In the system of offering animal sacrifices it was as necessary for the one offering to believe in the death of the covenant victim in the future as it is for those who live in this age to believe that Jesus the Christ, was this covenant victim. It was through the shedding of his blood that he, Jesus, was able to obtain eternal redemption. This constitutes him as the life giver. We are presented today with the two forms of worship, one of faith, the other of sin. The faith in the promise to the woman is the same today as when Abel sacrificed the lamb. To us the fulfilment of this promise is future. The certainty of our redemption comes through the faith of the ancients. Paul defines the faith as the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. This faith is contained in the things hoped for, viz., that Jesus the seed of the woman will prevail over the serpent seed.

The development of the ages has brought to us Jesus the Son of the living God. We shall try and reveal to our readers the only true God and his Son Jesus the Christ. In order to do this we have three propositions which we will state and develop.

1 Is Jesus God as taught in the doctrine of the trinity?

2 Was Jesus the son of Joseph, the husband of Mary?

3 Jesus is the Son of God and the anointed of God.

The first proposition is absurd. It is clothed in the language that is not intelligible, in saying that the Father is God, the Son is God, the Holy Spirit is God. They have a trinity in unity. The doctrine declares that each is a person of one substance. In speaking of this doctrine we wish to glean from "The Faith of The Fathers" by Cardinal Gibbons, page 334. "Is not the Scriptures full of incomprehensible mysteries? Do you not believe in the Trinity, a mystery not only above, but apparently contrary to reason? Do you not admit the Incarnation—that the helpless infant in Bethlehem was God?" You may remove the word "apparently" from the Cardinal's statement and you have the true statement of the doctrine of the trinity. It certainly is contrary to reason. That the Bible is full of incomprehensible mysteries is not true. There is nothing in Jehovah's purpose but what man may reason out. The Scriptures were given by the inspiration of God, and are profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works (2 Timothy 3:16,17)

The Scriptures declare the Eternal to be one. "Hear O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord" (Deut. 6:4). Paul in the Corinthians letter declares that to us there is but One God and Jesus Christ our Lord. To the Ephesians he writes, "There is One Lord and One God who is the Father of us all." In John 17:3 Jesus declares that, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." It seems useless to burden the mind of our readers with further proof on this subject. The Scriptures are positive against such a doctrine. Reason rejects it. The person who would argue that a father and son were of the same age and of the same power would not be considered a sane person. The second proposition that Jesus was the son of Joseph is alike unreasonable.

The Scriptures plainly teach that Jehovah had such a character in his mind when he formed the earth and made man. Adam could have accomplished God's purpose through obedience, but his violation of the law did not change that divine plan. The seed of the woman, without the man, was introduced as a detail in the accomplishment of his design. Jehovah took his own time, four thousand years, in the development of this seed. He became strong through his heredity. Paul makes this plain when he wrote to the Galatian Church, "When the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his Son made of a woman made under the law." The woman, Mary, was directed to call her son Jesus. In his development he is known as the son of Abraham, the son of David, the son of God. These are scriptural announcements. On more than one occasion God recognized him as his well beloved Son.

The third proposition needs but little more testimony as in the rejection of the two preceding propositions we submitted proof that Jesus was the Son of God and not God himself. When the angel made the announcement to Mary that she should be the mother of the Son of God, she was astonished and said, "How shall this thing be, seeing I know not a man?" The angel's answer was, "The Holy Spirit shall come upon thee and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee, therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." There is much more proof in affirmation of this subject, but we will rest.

IF JESUS SHOULD NEVER RETURN, WHAT THEN?

This has been a weighty question upon my mind for some time, and may have borne heavily upon others. Not that we doubt as some do, but the Scriptures speak of so many things connected with the second advent that they would be broken if it should never occur. Paul tells us of a man of sin, "whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming" (2 Thess. 2:8). If Christ should never come this man of sin would never be destroyed, and the earth would be eternally under his diabolical influence. The earth could never "be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea," for the mystery of iniquity would be here to hinder. God's will could not be done here as in heaven, as wickedness would ever abide in "that wicked one."

The righteous would never be rewarded; for he comes and his reward is with him, to give every man acording as his works shall be (Rev. 22:12).

No resurrection of the dead; for "they that are Christ's arise at his coming" (1 Cor. 15:23).

No translation of the living in Christ; for "we which are alive and remain shall be caught up to meet him," when "he himself shall descend from heaven" (1 Thess. 4:16,17).

No glorification of believers; for "when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory" (Col. 3:4).

Christ will never be glorified in his saints, for "he shall come to be glorified in his saints" (2 Thess. 1:9).

No crown of glory for saints; for "when the chief shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away" (1 Thess. 3:13).

No establishment of his peoples' hearts in holiness; for that is to be "at the coming of our Lord Jesus with all his saints" (1 Thess. 3:13).

No realization of "that blessed hope" promised; for it is at the glorious appearing of our "Savior Jesus Christ" and the perfecting of all the saints (Tit. 2:13; Heb. 11:39; 1 Thess. 4:16).

No praise, honor, and glory, for the trial of the saints' faith; for that is "at the appearing of Jesus Christ" (1 Pet. 1:7).

No clearing up of life's mysteries: "Judge nothing until the Lord come, who will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and make manifest the counsels of the hearts" (1Cor. 4:5).

No realization of complete salvation: "Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation" (Heb. 9:28).

No end to the service and waiting of the church;

for it is turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his Son from heaven" (1 Thess. 1:9, 10).

No end to the observance of the Lord's supper. the limit of the observance is "till he come' (1 Cor. 11).

No end to the occupancy of Christ's servants; for he tells them to "occupy till I come."

No reception of the saints; he comes "to receive them" to himself (John 14:3).

No judgment of living and dead: he "shall judge the living and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom."

No entrance into the kingdom; for it is "when the Son of Man shall come in his glory . . . then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." At that time he will say. "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom," etc.

Thus dear reader, if Jesus never comes we have lost all: our hope is nothing, our faith is founded upon falsehood, and we are traveling in a dark and dreary way; but he has promised to come again, and we who look for him shall receive salvation through him. "We have not followed cunningly devised fables when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus," says Peter. Thus his coming is not a fable. He will come, and his admonition is: "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." Readiness is required of us if we wish the reward promised. The unready have none of the good things promsied; they are all for his people.

NO MORE POWER TO THE PAPACY.

Her 1260 years of persecuting are past. In a recent work, published in Cork, Ireland. "Where Are We ?" this subject is dealt with, from which I quote a few extracts. The author is dealing with Rev. 17; he says:

"Verse 16 describes her doom. 'And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the harlot, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh and burn her with fire.' In other words, the kingdoms which have supported her will turn against her and destroy her.

"As noted previously, she is to suffer from a consumption before finally perishing. Here we have the cause and process of this consumption described. Let us look back upon her past history and inquire how the kingdoms which formerly supported her have been acting in later days towards her. England has long ago turned against her and has eaten her 'flesh' by confiscating her property; and though England is at present more tolerant towards her, she will never recover from the severe and humbling blow which she sustained at the time of the Reformation when Germany also broke away. That was the begining of her decline.

"But the process of consumption has become more rapid of recent years. France also revolted at the end of the 18th century. And in 1793 France put into practice against the church of Rome the very lessons of slaughter and piliage she had learned from her. and in the St. Bartholomew of five years (as the French Revolution has been termed), she slaughtered 24,000 priests and monks, and 1,200,000 of the people, and the Roman Catholic religion was abolished for a time throughout the kingdom. In 1870 the kingdom of Italy turned against her, seizing the Papal States, confiscating the rich convents, and making the Pope a prisoner in the Vatican.

"Since then France has again repudiated her rule, and multitudes of her monks and nuns have had to flee from that country. Soon after Portugal also followed suit, and again monks and nuns had to flee.

"It is an interesting fact that the year 1870 was marked by the holding of a great General Council in Rome. Over 800 Cardinals, Archbishops and Bishops from all parts of the world gathered in Rome, and on July 18th declared the new doctrine of the infallibility of the Pope was declared.

"Arrangements had been made for the occasion to reflect by means of mirrors a blaze of light upon the Pope. He was arrayed in jewels, and sat on a throne in such a position that the noonday sun might shed around him a halo of glory as the decree was being proclaimed. But alas for their plans! The sun hid his face behind thick clouds, and the decree had to be read by candle light amidst the thunder and lightening of a violent storm which actually smashed the windows of the cupola of the church over the apse of St. Processus and Martinianus, to which the throne of the Pope was affixed. God's answer to this Papal act of presumption was the blow that shattered the temporal power of the Papacy."

I will add that in recent years, every turn of the wheel of political fortune is against the temporal power of the Papacy. Austria, the most loyal of all his suporters, is the most shattered of all. And the Kaiser, who undoubtedly was to restore the Papacy if victorious, is now without a friend. And the Pope is lonesome in the doctrine of the divine right of Pope and Kings.

Geo. Francis.

THE ANOINTING

But the anointing which you received from him, abides in you, and you have no need that any one should teach you: but the same anointing teaches you concerning all things, and is true and is not a lie. And as it taught you abide in him (John 2:27).

Now brethren, to whom is this language addressed ? Is it not to those that have received the anointing ?

First, then, we must know what the word "anointed" means. We will now go to John 14:26: "But the Helper, the Holy Spirit, which the Father will send in my name, shall teach you all things and remind you of all things which I have said to you." Notice similarity to first quotation. It is very plain to see from this last verse that we receive the anointing then the "Helper" or "Holy Spirit," for says John, "it shall teach you all things." Now as we know that "Christ" means "anointed," how plain it becomes that all those "in Christ" or "in the Anointed," must have a measure of the Holy Spirit given them.

We cannot be in Christ without this anointing (Eph. 1:13, 14). Some may say, "Why do we need a teacher, then ?" John very plainly says that those "in Christ" need no teacher, except that admonition be given them by the Master.

Now there are many texts and very plain ones, too, that tell us how we may know when we are under this divine guidance. Jesus answered Judas, when asked how he would manifest himself to his disciples and not to the world, by saying. "If any one love me, he will observe my word;" and what will follow ? Listen: it is the Master's words: "And my Father will love him, and we will come to him and make our abode with him." Also read Rev. 3:20

It is only by strict obedience to the commandments of God that we have any promise of sharing God's blessings. It does us no good to say, "Oh yes: I love the Lord" unless we keep his word. "If you love me you will keep my commandments." And in another place the spirit speaks through John saying, "For this is the love of God that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not burdensome. because all that they have begotten of God overcomes the world; and this is that victory which overcomes the world —our faith" (or our assurance). Dear children, we should not love in word or in tongue (as in Matt. 7:21), but in work and in truth (as in Matt. 7:21 last part of verse). "By this we know that we are of the truth and shall assure our hearts in his presence (indwelling). Because if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our hearts and knows all things" (meaning that if there is aught in our heart that is not right God certainly knows it. Beloved, if the heart does not condemn, we have confidence toward God, and whatever we may ask we may receive from him, because we keep his commandments, and do what is pleasing in his sight. And this is his commandment, that we should believe in the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love each other as he gave us commandment. And he who keeps his commandments abides in him and he in him, and by this we know that he abides in us, by that spirit which he gave us."

"Now if Christ would work in and through us, we must be clean, pure channels of expression.' Therefore watch your thoughts very closely, and be able to say with the Psalmist at all times: "Search me, O God, and know my thoughts."

Favor be with all those who sincerely love our Lord Jesus Christ.

Grace Lawrence.

"IN THE PLACE WHERE THE TREE FALLETH THERE IT SHALL BE" (Eccl. 11:3).

By S. Roxana Wince

In the place where the tree falleth there it shall be." It cannot change the place of its fall; it cannot transform itself into any other kind of a tree. If a beech or an oak when uprooted by the storm, it must remain a beech or an oak. If gnarled or crooked or hollow its fall does not change it into a stately, straight and valuable tree. Just so is it with man. As he dies he must remain. He cannot change the place of his fall no more than can the tree. If he is a wicked man when he dies he will come up among the wicked when raised from the dead; if a righteous man, he will come up among the righteous. There will be no transformation, no half way classes, no one passing the searching eye of God because he is as good as some church member.

To me this is a startling and an alarming fact, and one that not only actuates me to draw closer to my Lord and to pray for perfect "dominion over self and over sin, over all evil without and within," but also to work to influence others so to do. And, if someone out of the ark of safety, and in eminent danger of being engulfed at any moment by the terrible on-rushing flood. to urge them to make their escape at once by seeking an abiding place in Jesus' name. How I tremble for dear ones that know the truth, and who still keep putting the day of obedience off. Will they ever come to Jesus ? They have said they would. They have said I want to be a Christian, but there they stand; not a step do they stir.

Some day the tree will go down and there will be no hope, for its life will not be hid with Christ in God. The Christ name will not have been taken, the sin-covering robe will not be on. How dreadful, how inexpressibly dreadful, to rise from the grave in that condition, or to have Christ come now, and be left to perish ! Four or five years at most will bring the resurrection of the holy dead and the change of the living saints of God. We do not know the exact time, but the thirteen hundred and thirty five day period of Daniel twelve, runs out in 1923, and it was at the end of those days that Daniel was to stand in his lot. Do we want to stand with him ? then we must be ready. No one can come to the marriage of Jesus without a wedding garment, and the garment cannot be gotten after he comes. How foolish to make delay.

"Futurism," an eight page booklet by J. J. Schaumburg is an able and scriptural exposition of prophecy that is worthy of wide distribution. It may be ordered of the Author at 716 Seventh Street, Oakland, Calif. Twenty cents per dozen or one dollar per hundred.

"The Faith Epitomized" has been delayed in publication, but we are now busy at the job, and all advanced orders will be filled by the 10th of March. It is a thirty-two page vest pocket edition, with colored binding. It just fits an envelope for convenience in mailing. Altogether the work is unique.

As it takes money to do the Lord's work the same as it does any other work, we have mailed statements for the subscription accounts which have expired as at Dec. 31, 1918 or before. If your subscription is due will you kindly forward the amount as instructed in the paper, or if circumstances do not permit and you cannot afford to pay for the paper and you desire it to be sent, kindly notify us and we will be perfectly willing to forward it: but when you are able we would like very much to receive same. If we have made any mistake in your statement kindly advise.

Statements for subscriptions expiring each month will be forwarded from now on. If you will take notice of the date on your address slip and send money when due this will save us quite an amount of postage. The statements now sent out have cost over $7 for mailing, which money could have been used for better purposes if these amounts had not been overdue.

ENQUIRIES CONCERNING THE LORD'S SUPPER

Dear Brother Huggins:

I would like to ask your advice about a matter that worries me. There are a few of our people (ten or twelve perhaps) in this place, and we have been having a Bible class once a week. Lately the brethren have their class on Sunday afternoon, and we from the country, join them. Last Sunday we spoke of the communion service. All desire very much to partake of it as often as we should. Now what I want to know is, in a case of this kind where we have no minister or elder with us, whether it would be right for one of our number to administer the emblems?

Again, there is a lady and her husband in our class who are earnest learners. They were both baptized into the Dunkard church. At the time Brother — ——— was here he took the lady into the church under her Dunkard baptism. Now the question arose among us, If we have communion service, and all of our little crowd being baptized believers, excepting these two or three perhaps, should we pass the emblems to them (or the lady rather, as she thinks she is in the church), or should we not? Some contend that if we do not, we might offend them, and we do not want to do that, for we hope to teach them; others that it would not be right to do so. For myself, with the understanding I now have, I could not possibly offer it to them, for I think the communion is of grave importance. One should be very careful not to eat or drink unworthily. Is there anywhere a Scripture which tells us how often we should have this service? Brother Anderson preached for us for a year, but after he went to Virginia, we have had no regular preaching. Now dear brother if you can find time to tell us what to do, I shall be both glad and thankful.

Your Sister, trying to serve the Master acceptably,

A Sister.

EDITOR'S REPLY

This sincere but distressed Sister has raised some very interesting and important questions; and as they are more than of local application and belong to the entire brotherhood as matters of essential importance, we shall reply to them in the hope of benefiting many others beside herself and the little body of believers to which she belongs. The principal interrogations are three, namely:

Who Should Officiate at The Lord's Table?

There is no pastor, elders, or deacons in the church; and the question is substantially this: Do members of the church have the right to administer the Lord's Supper at the Lord's table? That they have the right is made plain by the fact that they are members of the Son's house (or family), and are joint-heirs with him (Heb. 3:6; Rom. 8:17). Each member of this house belongs to a holy and royal priesthood, and may offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ" (1 Pet. 2:5). Each saint is a king and priest (Rev. 5:10). If so, the question, instead of being, Can a saint do this and that? becomes, What is it he cannot do? Instead of the church waiting a month or a year for the "annual meeting" to be in session, that they might break bread with the preacher, Paul tarried in Troas a week to break bread with the church! (Acts 20:6, 7).

In view of these facts we ask our Sister and the class to which she belongs, May not "holy" and "royal" members of a "spiritual house" (family) thank God for the Lord's table, its loaf and wine? Do not "kings and priests" have the right—the right? Forgive both the question and the word; for what man or set of men have greater rights than kings and priests? May not such dignitaries, without the assistance of a human being, be he priest or preacher, approach the Lord's table, and handle the loaf and cup? If the Aaronic priests did not fear to approach a golden table, and to place upon it the loaves of the divine presence; if they hesitated not to eat that consecrated loaf, because they were priests according to the flesh—shall "royal priests" of the Lord's "spiritual house" fear, without the intervention of the hands of some preacher or other official, elected by human wisdom and human vote, to approach the table of the Lord's communion? If we are sons and daughters of God Almighty, do we not have the rights of sons and daughters? Are preachers more than sons, kings and priests? If only preachers and officers can officiate at the Lord's Supper, then while Catholics are priest-ridden, we are certainly preacher-ridden and officer-ridden! After the Catholic gets the priest between himself and his God, and we get the preacher between us and our God, do we not thank God for the loaf and cup while the officer stands by the table; and do you not handle the bread and wine when they come to you? Now would not your prayers, thanksgivings, and praises have been as acceptable to God, and as edifying to yourself, if the human mediator had not been there, and your participation as well pleasing to God if you had been the first to handle the emblems, as when you are the second or forty-second? Brethren and sisters, let us send back to the Vatican, from whence they came, the haughty assumptions of priests and "the holier than thou" arrogance of preachers, and enjoy the freedom of sons, appreciate more highly the consecration of Jesus and the value of our high calling and exalted privilege of being kings and priests unto God, and joint-heirs with Christ.

Whom Shall We Fellowship?

This question is discussed in Bible Lesson XII, page 6. To this our Sister is referred for proof that communion is limited to baptized believers of the gospel. To accept a Dunkard and a Dunkard's baptism is to sell the truth for a mess of pottage. If this interested friend should get "offended" because you tell her the truth, her identification with you now is a mere formality and farce, in no way benefitting you or herself. In accepting her triune immersion, you have unwittingly accepted the doctrine of the Trinity upon which triune immersion is built and accepting the Trinity all "the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ" are nullified entirely (Acts 8:12). When we have accepted the Dunkard with her gospel nullifying traditions, consistency will soon drive us to accept all other orthodox sectarians—and then where are we? Nowhere! If we can take them in with us, we can go in with them; and we might just as well disband and be swallowed up in denominational extinction.

How Often Should We Break Bread?

There is a cheap kind of argument afoot to the effect that we are not told in the Scriptures how often to commune; this question is left open, they say, by the words "as often." But we have shown in Bible Lesson XII, page 14, that these words denote manner, not frequency. And the similar argument that the words are, "Upon the first day of the week," not upon the first day of every week, shows painful ignorance of the meaning of language. The language of Holy Writ is: "Upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them" (Acts 20:7). Upon what first day did they celebrate his death? "Upon THE first day." We are nowhere told in the word of God that they made any difference in first days; they were all alike, hallowed by the same great event and held sacred to its commemoration. When God commanded Israel to remember the seventh day as a Sabbath Day, and keep it holy, mean, stiff-necked, stubborn, and rebellious as they were, we never read of them seeking to excuse their desecration of the Sabbath by saying, "But your never said for us to keep every Sabbath Day." Such an unfair argument to dodge plain duty they never thought of; such foolishness is a modern product of the apostasy. If, then, when God commanded ancient Israel to keep the Sabbath Day holy, he meant, and they understood it to mean, every Sabbath Day, then when it affirms that the disciples come together on the first day of the week to break bread, it is just to conclude that it meant on every first day. The phraseology is the same in both cases, and the meaning is without question the same. Those who are afraid they will express too often their flickering love to Jesus by weekly communion, think it not too often to celebrate the Lord's resurrection weekly. Why do they celebrate his resurrection fifty-two times in a year, and his death twelve, twice, quarterly, once or not at all? Why do they think so much more of his resurrection than his death? In eagerness and patience we wait for an answer to this question.

THE DRIFT OF THE TIMES

By "Cisalpine"

So much has been said of late concerning a secure and lasting peace safeguarded and enforced by a League of Nations, that we are moved to give several reasons for our conviction, that however strong and universal this expectation or desire may be, it can never be realized, and that those who look for its fulfilment are foredoomed to disappointment. Now how can there be any lasting peace in the absence of the Prince of Peace? But still more to the point is the fact that God has announced a totally different program.

In the 9th chapter of Daniel, verses 24-27, two comings of Christ are in view. In his first coming he was to be "cut off"—that is, put to death; but in his second coming he will "finish the transgression" and "bring in everlasting righteousness;" and of the interval between them it is said, "And till the end is war. Determined are desolations" (Young's Idiomatic Translation) or "Even unto the end shall be war. Desolations are determined."

This is confirmed by our Lord when he told his disciples, in Matt. 24, that "wars and rumors of wars" and other disturbances were to characterize the entire period of his absence. Other passages from the New Testament quite in accord with these might be cited, while on the other hand not a single passage can be found in the whole Bible that will justify the belief that an enduring peace is possible before Christ comes again to purge the world by terrible judgments and to begin his own reign in righteousness.

We are aware that the great majority of men are looking for a long and universal peace before Christ comes, but in this they are very greatly mistaken; and the mistake is all the more unnecessary and culpable since the Scriptures are so clear—"Even unto the end shall be war." That settles it. And so it follows as a necessity, that any League of Nations, whatsoever, will be utterly powerless to enforce peace when God calls for war.

Notes From Minnesota

Brother Savage was here on his usual trip January 11th, and we had meetings Saturday night and Sunday, and also Sunday School. The meeting for the 8th of February was postponed on account of the flu. Sister Howard and daughter Mildred and the Roebuck family had the flu, but all are up and around again. It is not until sickness and danger are at our door that we realize how weak we are, but God has given us a promise in the 91st Psalm, and if we are faithful to him, he will surely help us in time of trouble and sorrow.

Brother Geo. Byrum has returned from camp. It seems nice to have our boys home again and we hope the time is not far distant when we shall part no more.

We would like to have reports from all the local Minn. committees. Send all reports to Mrs. A. Sandberg, Mora, Minn. R. 2.

Extracts from Letters Written by The Isolated Ones

"I have at hand your welcomed letter, and am very much pleased to hear from one of God's people. It seems good to talk to those who love our Lord, and when one is isolated it surely brings some cheer to their lonely hearts."

"Your letter received some days ago. Indeed we are sad and lonely, and appreciate your words of comfort and feel that they came from the heart. We can truly say that all who have written us words of comfort are fulfilling the law of Christ, when he says through the apostle, 'Bear ye one another's burdens.'"

"I am always glad to hear from some of the faith as there is only one sister here of our faith besides me. There is need of encouraging the isolated ones, and I know how glad I am to get letters from the brothers and sisters."

I consider our work of trying to cheer and encourage our isolated brethren of the Church of God a grand work and one, too, that has been neglected, and is now badly needed. Now that I am myself isolated I see what it means to be cut off from meeting with the "household of faith," and it makes me realize, as never before, how much such work is needed among our isolated church people. I wish all who read these lines and who feel interested in this branch of church work, but which is almost altogether carried on by the Bereans, would co-operate with us by sending names and addresses of brethren known to be isolated, to my address.

Miss Anna Adams.

Dear Bereans:

We are looking for Jesus to come again to earth—that same Jesus who, when he dwelt on earth, was so full of tender compassion and pity for human woe, whose hand was ever ready to help, and whose voice ceased not to comfort the afflicted and to warn and instruct those who were shrouded in mental and moral darkness. He healed the sick cleansed the lepers, cast out demons, raised the dead. See his sympathy at the tomb of Lazarus, at the bier of the widow of Nain. Then listen to his lamentations over Jerusalem where he had been detained and persecuted. He wept over it, saying: "Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killeth the prophets and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how oft would I have gathered thy children together as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wing, but ye would not."

Again, while suspended on the cross his thoughts were turned from his own suffering to pray for his murderers: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." We look for his return to complete the work of restitution, to gather the dispersed of Judah, to raise up the throne of David which is fallen down. Luke says: "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Yet know that when he was here before, and before he departed, he said to his disciples: "Whither I go, ye cannot come. A little while and ye shall not see me, and again a little while and ye shall see me. If I go away I will come again and receive you to myself, that where I am ye may be also" (John 13:33; 14:3; 16:16). Having led his apostles to Bethany he was parted from them while blessing them, and a cloud received him out of their sight. While they stood looking steadfastly toward heaven, he went up. Behold two men stood in white apparel who also said: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus who is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." And the message he sent back to his disciples and to the loved ones of earth was, "Surely I come quickly." Already the cry has gone forth, "Behold he cometh." Are we ready? Ready for honor, glory and immortality at the coming of the Son of Man when these poor, frail, mortal bodies of his saints shall be fashioned like unto his glorious body. "Behold he cometh with clouds." His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the Mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley. Thus shall he inaugurate the changes that he will work upon the planet earth, when, instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree. The wilderness and the solitary places shall be made glad and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose; the eyes of the blind shall be opened; the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped; the lame shall leap, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing; and the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads. They shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

May Moore.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brother:

Sister Anderson was taken to the Memorial Hospital, Winchester, Va., yesterday for an operation for appendicitis, gall stones, and some other troubles, what the doctors do not quite understand until they operate. I am writing to ask you to remember us in your prayers. Sister Anderson will be away for two weeks or more (John 14:14; 15:7; Jas. 5:16). Believing you are one of this class referred to in these verses, we ask to be remembered in your prayers.

Your brother,
J. H. Anderson.

The following may be interesting to the household of faith:

Dr. Simons, for many years head of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Russia, giving in his testimony before the senate, said: "Most of the Bolsheviki leaders were Jews, many from the east side of New York, who have set aside large sums for the spread of their doctrine in all the countries of the world."

Is it possible that Judah whose hand shall be in the neck of his enemeies (Gen. 49:8) is the stone cut out without hands and which has already become to smite the image upon his toes (Dan. 2:34, 35)? See what more he is to do, and the results in Zech. 10:3-5; Psa. 18:34, 35; Jer. 51:17-25. If this be true, brethren, ye are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Therefore let us not sleep as others; but let us watch and be sober."

"Who can utter the mighty acts of the Lord? who can show forth all his praise? Blessed are they that keep judgments, and he that doeth righteousness at all times."

"MY CUP RUNNETH OVER"

By S. Roxana Wince

David said, "My cup runneth over." I can say the same. Never since I came to that little uncomfortable cabin home, on the banks of Eel River in Whitley County, Ind., the unprecedently cold 10th of February, 1838, have I had a bithday so full of holy joy as this has been.

It has been almost more than I could bear; it was so unexpected, so surprising. It was just like going to a big prayer meeting, only the prayer meeting came to me instead of my going to it. And the burden of every petition was that my poor little life might be spared unto the coming and kingdom of Jesus.

May God bless every one of you, dear brothers and sisters, all the precious young people and the little children who have so lovingly remembered me. And whenever your bithdays come,

Whether in time of winter's snow
Or when the sweet June roses blow,
When springtime's soft reviving showers
Call up the dainty woodland flowers.
Or autumn time with frosty breath,
Chills lovely things to seeming death.
O may our Father be with you,
And gladness give the whole day through!

Quicken your faith, renew your hope,
As path leads on o'er greener slope,
And by the waters cool and still,
Toward Zion's beauteous glowing hill;
Whate'er of trouble comes to earth,
Of war, of famine, or of death,
In going out, or coming in,
May you be safely kept of him!

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

James Crothers Adams was born March 11, 1830, at Mount Vernon, Ohio, died at Gifford, Ia., Jan. 28, 1919, aged 88 years, 8 months and 18 days.

He moved with his parents from Ohio to Illinois in 1840 where he married Miss Sarah Ann Piggott in 1853. To this union was born 8 children, four boys and four girls: Almus Adams, of Omaha, Amanda Adams, of Gifford, Ia., John Adams, Holbrook, Neb., Mrs. Elva Gearhart, Arapahoe, Neb., Mrs. Nora Patton, Holbrook, Neb., and Mrs. Cora Levie, Ellison, Neb. One son and one daughter died in infancy. His first wife died in 1885. Some years later he married Mrs. Lydia Chase. To this union was born one son, Edmond Adams, of Ola, Idaho. The last wife died several years ago, since which time he has made his home with his children. He moved to Hardin County, landing April 17, 1855. There was at that time only three houses in the township. He died in plain sight of the place he settled on almost 64 years ago. Besides his children he leaves 29 grandchildren, and 30 great grandchildren and one brother.

The deceased comes of a long lived family. His father lived to be 88, his mother 77. His grandfather on his father's side came from Ireland, and died at the age of 104. His surviving brother will be 91 April 1st. There were 12 children in his father's family, all living to manhood and womanhood, and a number in the eighties and nineties. The first gospel sermon he ever heard was preached by J. T. Prime. He believed the truth from the first, and was baptized by Elder C. C. Ramsey over 40 years ago. In his last days his greatest concern was about those he thought not ready for the kingdom. He now awaits the summons to come forth to life eternal.

The funeral was held from the M. E. Church at Gifford. Interment in the Henia Cemetery. Elder G. E. Marsh spoke words of comfort to a house full of old neighbors and friends. We sorrow not as others who have no hope.

The Family.

Brother Marsh also sends a report of Brother Adams' death and funeral.—Editor.

Every good work is followed by blessings upon him who does it. It is a divine law that the good we do comes back to us.

"Life consists in benefit," says Emerson, then asks the question, "Who is greatest, He who receives or he who confers the most benefit?" Jesus answered that question when He said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive,' and "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant: even as the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister."

GOLDEN TEXT: Galatians 5:6

HEAVEN COMES BACK

By Walter S. Percy

Heaven comes back to the soul that speeds it
Out to the blessing of other lives;
Heaven comes back to the soul that shares it
Into the hope which gladder strives;
Nothing goes out without returning,
Nothing comes back unless 'tis sent:
This is the lesson worth our learning,
Nothing is blest until 'tis lent.

Heaven comes back to the soul that shares it
Daily with other lives in need;
Heaven comes back to the soul that bears it
Into the world by life and deed:
Blessing hath wings to hasten thither
Others to bless and come again;
Blessing hath wings to hasten thither
When it hath helped the souls of men.

Heaven comes back to the soul that loving
Scatters its sunshine in the world;
Heaven comes back to the soul by proving
Joy is the gift by giving pearled;
Evil returns but good is surest,
For 'tis the jewel never lost;
Love is the treasury securest,
Heaven comes back to crown the cost.

Duty

By Dr. Frank Crane

Duty is the idea by which we rob ourselves of the joy of work.

The pleasure of the soul is self-expression. Self-expression is found perfectly in work. Whoever has discovered his work has come upon the secret of happiness.

That is, provided he does not spoil it all by putting the duty-thought upon it and making it drudgery.

Of course one should do his duty, and is for it entitled to his reward and praise. It is not that I would rob him of his deserts. It is because he is missing the finest element of his deserts.

Why not call it Privilege, instead of Duty ? The one word connotes a banquet, the other a whip; one the chosen opportunity of a free man the other the forced labor of a slave.

It is a wife's duty to take care of her children, to keep the home, and to make her husband happy, but she is not much of a success if a sense of duty is all that moves her, if she has not the inspiration of love that makes a woman glad to be a wife and mother.

Duty is iron; Privilege is golden.

The college boy whom his father compels to go to school, and who has only the feeling of duty to keep him at his books, is not going to get the good out of his opportunities that the boy gets who is working his way, and looks upon the school as an estimable Privilege.

Duty, unrelieved, made the hard Puritan.

Duty makes a man a religionist: Privilege with love, forms the Christian. Duty forces a man to go to church, but it is the knowledge that "God is love" and our willingness to serve him and do his will, as a privilege, that makes us sons and daughters of the Most High.

Duty, alone, makes a faithful clerk. But when it is lit up by a sense of opportunity, and the clerk transforms his duty by his enthusiasm, the first thing you know he owns the business.

Duty is stern; Privilege is joyous.

The great Teacher called on us to take his yoke upon us; but it was a transforming yoke; "Ye shall find rest," he added.

When we put enthusiasm, vim, and interest in anything we have to do, Work becomes Play, Labor becomes Craftsmanship, Duty smiles and is changed to Opportunity.

Duty obeys the Law. Privilege knows no Law, but operates by Love; and Love is the fulfilling of the Law.

Duty, taken alone, is dead. The joy of doing comes from the emotions. Whatever we do without feeling, whatever is not the forthputting of soul energy, is second-rate. We are artisans, not artists.

Duty is cold. And cold contracts. Duty, alone, makes life wintry and bleak.

Pour love into your work. Let the labor of your hands be the gestures of the soul, and you are carried up to the heights of genius by the exhilaration of the outflowing forces.

Alcohol

A simple word, yet freighted deep with woe;
Learn but the meaning, seek no more to know;
Cast not upon your life the cruel blight;
Of a dread evil, fearful in its might:
Heed well the warning words of sage and seer;
O friend he holds you fast when once he grips;
Let not this liquid demon pass your lips.

March

March was not always the third month of the year, for in England until 1752 it was the first, the legal year commencing on March 25. Scotland changed it from first to third in 1599. France was the first country to change the calendar, for in 1564, Charles IX ordered that "from thenceforth January was to be the first month of the year."

March has 31 days, and originally was known as "Martius," the name given it by the Romans from their god Mars, which also is the foundation of the present name.

Answer to puzzle in issue of February 18:

The passage was written by the apostle Paul to Timothy, and the commandment referred to is, "But thou, O man of God, flee these things (the love for, and care of the things pertaining to this world); and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love patience, meekness. Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art called, and hath professed a good confession before many witnesses."

Pontius Pilate was the Roman Procurator of Judea, was very arbitrary, and on more than one occasion nearly drove the Jews to insurrection through his harshness and overbearing manner.

A record of the good confession made by Jesus before Pontius Pilate will be found in John 18:36, 37.

"Unrebukable" means "beyond rebuke" or something regarding which you can not find fault.

"Potentate" means "A king, a ruler, one who has great authority."

The "Potentate, the King of kings and the Lord of lords," is Jesus the Christ.

The passage can be found in 1 Timothy 6:13,14, 15.

VOLUME 71 CLEVELAND, O. MARCH 11th, 1919 NUMBER 10

A Little While

There's just a little while to turn from sinning,
To shun the pleasures that would but defile,
To take the narrow way in hope of winning,
The life eternal; just a little while.

A little while to tell the old, old story,
To see its message bring a happy smile
To darkened ones; the hope of coming glory
Dispels their gloom; there's just a little while.

A little while the Christian armor wearing,
To battle unto death against the wrong
'Twill not be long till palms of victory bearing,
In Canaan's land we'll sing the conqueror's song.

Though we may sow the precious seed with weeping
Soon we will bring the ripened sheaves with song:
Till the little while that we now have in keeping
Will give place to eternity ere long.

A little while for those who now are waiting
To don the wedding garment as his bride,
To watch and pray with their love unabating,
Although he tarry faithfully they must bide.

O then redeem the time, the days are evil;
The tempter oft with snares would you beguile,
Gird up your loins, press on though men may cavil;
We can be steadfast yet the little while.

"A little while and he that shall come will come"
And light earth's shadows with his blessed smile,
Then ever ready be to bid him welcome;
For he will tarry but a little while.

"THE TEMPLE OF GOD"

"And there was given me a reed like unto a rod; and the angel stood, saying, Rise and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein. But the court which is without the temple leave out, and measure it not; for it is given unto the Gentiles; and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months (Rev. 11: 1, 2).

Introduction

A few weeks ago we considered Rev. 10: 10,11. We endeavored to show that "eating the book" was emblematical of John the Apostle considering and, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit understanding, its contents. John thus made it his own for the express purpose for which he had received it. The knowledge of future events was at first very sweet to him, as honey is to the palate: but as they became unfolded to him they occasioned him grief and anguish of heart, revealing the sufferings the church must endure for Christ, and the great apostasy that would follow, already pointed out by Paul in 2 Thess. 2: 3-12.

By publishing the contents of "the little book," and the rest of the predictions, which were revealed to him, "he prophesied before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings." Today this is being done wherever the Scriptures are translated and circulated among the nations of the earth. A thoughtful study of Rev. 10 to 16 chapters must impress our minds with this fact that Christ, since his ascension following his first advent has, and is dealing with the nations of Europe, continuously.

The Reed Like a Rod

"And there was given me a reed." The thought is a rod for the purpose of measuring, or a measuring intrument. It means that actions or conduct is to be measured and judged. Paul in 1 Cor. 4: 21 gives us the exact thought: "What will ye? shall I come unto you with a rod, or in love, and in the spirit of meekness?" See also Isa. 28:17; Zech. 2: 1, 2; Gal. 6: 14-16.

The rod measures and determines the value of our conduct. The opposite to this is love. This principle, if ruling in our hearts, will influence our faith, our daily practice, and the employment of our time. Hence then the rod or reed deals with faith, practice, and time, especially so during the period of forty and two months, or 1260 years. During this period power is given unto God's two witnesses. Paul in writing to Timothy declares that "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in rightreousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Tim. 3:16,17). In Heb. 12:6 we have the same thought: "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." For the period of 1260 years the church was under the iron heel of the Gentiles, being chastened that God may refine her as gold rare and precious. The rod also is an emblem of majesty and authority. See Rev. 2: 27; 12: 5; 19: 15; Psa 149: 6-9; Heb. 1: 12.

Rise Resurrection

"Rise and measure." Notice the peculiar significance of the word "Arise." What does John mean? We think he refers to the temple of God, or the church in glory and power. In type wood always stands for mortality or the flesh and blood condition; gold the immortal or spirit condition. Hence in Rev. 21:15, we read that the angel holds in his hand a golden reed. Our text is considering the temple of God prior to our Lord's second advent a condition of humility and suffering; under the rod of God's golden measure the conditon of the church in glory and power.

Revelation then reveals to us the church

First—In affliction during the period of 1260 years, being measured by the rod of wood: and

Secondly—The church immortal, being measured or existing under the rod of gold. One is prior to his advent, and the other following his second advent.

The End Stated First

To understand the book of Revelation it is necessary to know and read the prophets. Zech. 4:1-14 is the foundation upon which rests the eleventh chapter of Revelation now under consideration. As a preface to this Daniel was also given to understand "What shall befall thy people in the latter days" (Dan. 10:14). Hence Daniel and Zechariah are commentaries on the bo of Revelation. God often states the end, or rather the condition existing at the end, first. In Rev. 1: 17,18 John first in symbol dies. The same is true in the case of Daniel and others. God then wakes them out of sleep and reveals to them things that will follow after he raises them from the dead. This does not for one moment imply that all the book of Revelation will be fulfilled, as our futurist friends say, after the church is exalted in power. Isa. 26: 19,20 and Daniel 12:1, 2, prove that events will transpire following the resurrection of the saints in the order revealed to John. What was to be measured? The word "measured" means, in this connection, to destroy, to preserve. In 2 Sam. 8: 1,2 we read that "David smote Moab and measured them with a line casting them down on the ground; even with two lines measured he to put to death." The angel commanded, "Rise and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein." In the year A. D. 70 this was literally fulfilled respecting the temple and nation of Israel. But there is also a spiritual application of these words. Jesus in John 2: 21 speaks of a temple which he says is his body. Paul in 1 Cor. 3: 16,17 reveals the secret of who compose this body or temple of God, viz.: the church, Christ being its head. In 2 Cor. 6: 16 he positively declares that we are not only the temple of God, but God dwells in this temple now. To prove it is not a material temple or a temple built with hands in Rev. 3:12 those who are overcomers are promised the positions of pillars in this temple. Paul on Mars' Hill declares that God no longer "dwelleth in temples made with hands" (Acts 17:22-31). Jesus as he wept over Jerusalem pronounced these terrible words: "Behold your house is left unto you desolate."

The Temple of God the Church

On the day of Pentecost, as the apostles were gathered together in one place, we read that there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. Here then was the beginning of God's departure from the temple made by hands, fulfilled finally in A. D. 70, and the beginning of his taking up his abode in the temple of his body which is the Church of God. This was soon demonstrated, for Peter in Acts 5:4 claims that Ananias and Sapphira lied not to them but to God, who was present in their hearts or sitting in the Temple or the Church of God represented by the apostles and brethren. In Eph 2:20 this is so clear that the question of a material temple should never again be raised. So then in whatever people the Spirit of God dwells, there is the temple of God.

Our futurist friends are looking and waiting for the revelation of the "Man of Sin" or the anti-Christ. This man has existed in power and ruled as such for forty and two months. Please notice Paul's description in 2 Thes. 2:4: "Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." If a clearer or more accurate description of "his holiness the Pope" during the period of 1260 years that he claimed to sit in the temple of God can be given than this, I do not know where to look for it. History reveals to our astonished gaze the fulfilment of this description of the Man of Sin in the person of the Pope. We bow our heads in worship and praise to God, for the correct understanding of his inspired word.

John or rather the angel had the papacy in mind when he commanded him to measure or divide off the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein. The language here used is borrowed from the Old Testament. Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple mentions three clauses, the priests, the Jews, and the Gentiles (1 Kings 8:41,42). This temple had two courts (2 Kings 23:12). Notice in our text the measure was to be made of the temple and the altar, and those that worship therein. But the court which is without the temple was not to be measured. Paul shows us the meaning of this court which is without (1 Cor. 5:11). In verse 12 he says the judgment or measure is with those who are within. This same class Jesus says it was given to know the mystery of the Kingdom of God, but unto those without he spoke in dark sayings or parables (Mark 4:11).

No Court of Israel in the Apocalypse

Beloved, get this point clear in your mind: Israel after the flesh is in the outer court with the rest of the world. God has ceased to deal with them since Jesus declared he has cast them off until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. Hence nowhere in the Apocalypse is the court of Israel introduced. When the veil of the temple was rent asunder God at that moment opened up a new and living way into his presence, "Blotting out the hand writing of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of way, nailing it to the cross" (Col. 2:14). "For he is our peace who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us" (Eph. 2:14). All that was typified in the temple of Solomon is now realized in the Church of God, which is the temple of the living God; for Jesus, "having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances, for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace" (Eph. 2:15). Beloved, let us heed the solemn injunction, "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defileth the temple of God him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are" (1 Cor. 3: 16, 17).

JEHOVAH'S MASTERPIECE

From harmony to harmony
This universal frame began:
From harmony to harmony
Through all the compass of the notes it ran,
The diapason closing full in man. —Dryden.

God made the light and darkness, the seas and the mountains, the fishes of the water and the birds of the air, and the beasts of the field, He saw it was all very good, but there was still something better to be made. Heaven and earth were filled with the majesty of his glory, and these declared his might, but not his likeness. The last stage in the work of his creation has been reached, and he is about to produce his masterpiece, his noblest earthly work. To the Elohim, who were co-workers with him in this task, he said, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness and let them have dominion over all which has been created. And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living being. And God saw everything that he had made and behold, it was very good. And he planted a garden eastward in Eden, and there he put man whom he had formed to dress it and keep it." Bestowing the final touches to his work he withdrew from the scene to contemplate and rest.

In speaking of man as being created in the image of God, the first thought is the intellectual powers with which he has been endowed. If the wisdom and power of Jehovah occupy the first place in the mind of one who contemplates the heavens and earth, certainly the second place must be reserved for admiration of the wonderful mind with which man has been endowed, the powers which thus enable him to study the works of God. The supreme object of his creative genius and energy, it sets man in his divine likeness to be ruler of things created. All else is secondary whereby God's work advanced along the vistas of time to the dawn of human existence. Man alone of all his creation could praise him for his marvellous works. Endowing him with these intellectual powers, God placed upon him, in giving him the earth to rule, great responsibility. If God's purpose was to make everything good, man's greatest privilege as well as duty was to cooperate with him in realizing that purpose.

The distinction between man and the animal is in the capacity for knowing God and holding communion with him. Having been made in the image of God, it does not seem strange that Adam and Eve received constant communication from the Elohim. Why should not the angels have been happy to talk with beings whom God took such pleasure in creating? It was the fascinating and destructive spell of the tempter which lured man into forbidden paths and separated him from this direct, personal contact with God and the angels. Sin entered this beautiful garden and man, surrounded as he was with all the material comforts which the earth afforded and with the association of angels, fell and the world's history was transposed into another key. "The wages of sin is death." In sorrow he was to labor and produce by the sweat of his brow his material needs.

After six thousand years of rulership and sway, we see his inability and helplessness to rightly discharge this responsibilty. Instead of the earth yielding her increase, she groans and travails to be restored to her former fertility and beauty. instead of filling the earth with joy and gladness, it is filled with violence and bloodshed. Instead of the rose, thorns and thistles; and God's perfect work marred by the creature to whom it was given as a permanent home.

"And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually, and he repented that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart. And the Lord God purposed to destroy the greatest work of his hands, over which he had spent such tender and thoughtful care. The earth also was corrupt before God, and it was filled with violence. All flesh is corrupt and behold, I will destroy them with the earth. All things in the earth shall die." But in wrath God remembers mercy and his tender mercies were over all his works. A new era will dawn when the earth will be full of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea.

In the 96th Psalm we are told, "The earth shall sing unto the Lord, and fear before him, and that we shall worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness. The field will be joyful and all that is therein and the trees of the wood shall rejoice before the Lord, for he cometh to judge the earth: he shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with his truth." Again in the 97th Psalm, "The Lord reigneth, let the earth rejoice. Let the multitude of the isles be glad thereof. Righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his throne, and mankind saw and trembled. Zion heard and was glad; and the daughters of Judah rejoiced because of thy judgments, O Lord. He cometh to judge the earth: with righteousness shall he judge the world and the people with equity." Evil in every form shall be suppressed, and a greater than Solomon will assume his prerogative and dispense justice to the inhabitants of a purified and restored earth.

"Twas great to speak a world from nought,
"Twas greater to redeem.

THE FEAST OF TRUMPETS

S. H. Thomas

In Lev. 23 we have a description of the seven feasts of the Lord. These feasts were most holy invocations, and obedience to every detail was strictly commanded, and the march of time has shown that they were types or shadows of notable events that should afterwards happen in the history of the Church; and in these last days a study of these feasts and the events which they foreshadow is big with interest to those who are looking for the Lord.

The first was the feast of the passover, and pointed forward to the crucifixion of our Lord. He was "The Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." Paul tells us that "Christ, our Passover, is sacrificed for us" (1 Cor. 5:7), thus positively locating the antitype in the sacrifice of Christ. The paschal lamb was slain each year on the 14th day of the first month, and our Lord was nailed to the cross on that self same day.

The feast of unleavened bread reached its antitype in the Lord's supper, as is evident from such Scriptures as these: "Purge out therefore the old leaven;" "Therefore let us keep the feast not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth" (1 Cor. 5.7,8). This feast was commanded to be observed on the fifteenth day of the first month, the next day after the feast of the Passover.

The feast of the first fruits was in "the morrow after the sabbath," or on the first day of the week, and pointed to the resurrection of our Lord, which also occured "early in the morning of the first day of the week" (Matt. 28). "Now is Christ risen and become the first fruits of them that slept" (1 Cor. 15:20). "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive: but every man in his own order, Christ the first fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming" (1 Cor. 15:22, 23). These Scriptures are sufficient to show that the feast of the first fruits was a shadow of the resurrection of Christ.

The feast of Pentecost was manifestly a type of the day of Pentecost. This feast occured each year, on the first day of the third month, and it was on that very day, when the diciples were all in one place,"there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting, and cloven tongues like as of fire sat on the head of each of them, and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and began to speak with other tongues as the spirit gave them utterance" (Acts 2:1-9). All of these wonders happened on the exact date of the feast of Pentecost: not one day sooner or later, but on that very day.

After the feast of Pentecost comes a long period when there is no feast. May this not point to the long period of Gentile dominion, when the Pentecost spirit is gathering from Jew and Gentile a people for the name, the body and bride of our Lord Jesus Christ. When that is accomplished, he will, at the sound of the trumpet, raise the dead saints, change the living ones, and together take them up to meet the Lord in the air.

The feast of trumpets occurred on the first day of the seventh month, which is the Jewish New Year, and a great holiday among the Jews. It sometimes occurs in the month of September, and sometimes the fore part of October. We have seen that each of the preceding feasts have had an antitypical fulfilment in the history of the Church, of a most positive and startling nature. But as yet the feast of trumpets has reached no antitype. Have we any Bible evidence that it may yet do so, and if so, what will its nature be? As each of the preceding feasts pointed unmistakably to a notable event in the development of the body of Christ, it would seem reasonable to conclude that this one also may be a type, a shadow. It is significant that the sounding of trumpets is often used in connection with the thief coming of the Lord and the rapture of the Church. For example we read: "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air."

Again, we read: "Behold I show you a mystery: We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed "(1Cor.15:51-52).

Again: "He shall send forth his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather his elect from the four winds" (Matt. 24:30,31). If as these Scriptures seem to indicate, the feast of trumpets is a shadow or type of the coming of the Lord, and the rapture of the Church, then may we not reasonably expect this glorious and notable event to take place on that day; for as we have seen in each former case, the type was fulfilled on the exact day of the feast. We do not know the day or hour, but in view of above Scriptures and facts, may we not with some reason conclude that when he does come it will be on the first day of the seventh month, according to Jewish reckoning, which is the Jewish New Year and the feast of trumpets. This date occurs for the next six years as follows:

1920	Sept. 13
1921	Oct. 3
1922	Sept. 23
1923	Sept. 11
1924	Sept. 29

In conclusion, dear ones, I would not have you understand me to teach that the Lord will surely come on that day. My purpose in writing this article is merely to open up an interesting subject for consideration by the brethren. I frankly admit, however, that in view of the evidence submitted, each succeeding date of the feast of trumpets is for me an interesting date, and especially so that one which occurs in 1922, if the Lord tarry that long.

ITEMS

A little book treating of baptism was handed to me that I might read it. Two statements in this book arrested my attention:

1st. The substitution of some form of baptism other than the one which Christ ordained, is a wilful misrepresentation if his thought, and in so far as it misrepresents, is the thwarting of his purpose. To substitute another form and solemnly declare it to be done in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, when the officiating minister knows that Jesus commanded immersion very nearly approaches blasphemy.

2nd. That baptism is only a form, and one form is as good as another, provided it is done in the right spirit and with a good conscience is the view which many earnest and evangelical Christians who practice sprinkling or pouring take when they discover that the arguments for immersion as the mode of Christian baptism cannot be answered.

Note the term, "earnest and evangelical Christians," although they are doing that which he called in another place, "almost blasphemy." Because he says, "They found that baptism by immersion is unanswerable." Oh consistency, truly thou art a jewel rare! It seems the words of Christ might apply here. They are found in Luke 19:22: "For as it was in the days of Lot, even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of Man shall be revealed" (Luke 17:28-30). How was it in the days of Lot? From Genesis 19 we find there was no separation of Lot from Sodomites until the angels appeared to save him from the destruction that was coming upon the city and its inhabitants. Their social and business relations were suddenly severed, no previous getting ready. Two shall be in one bed; the one shall be taken and the other left. Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken and the other left. Two men shall be in the field; the one shall be taken and the other left (Luke 17: 34-36). See also the parable of the wheat and the tares. Let both grow together until the harvest (Matt. 13:30). Watch ye therefore, lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping (Mark 13:35, 36).

From these Scriptures it seems there is no separation of the saints as a body until Jesus comes to the air and sends the angels to call the faithful ones to meet him. They seem to be working and dwelling together in the world; only separated to Christ by their obedience (not personally), until one is taken and the other left.

When one becomes weary of the strait and narrow way, and desires something more pleasing to the fleshly mind, how easy it is to convince such an one that darkness is light, and error truth. What ardently we desire to believe we soon bring ourselves into believing. When ones face is once turned away from the truth towards error, the world, the flesh and the devil (the desires of the old Adam) become as angels of light to beackon one on. Happy the one who meets the angel of the Lord in the way and turns back before it is too late. Error, however honest and zealous one may be, will never bring eternal life, neither will good moral deeds. There was a man who was devout, who feared God, who gave much to the poor, who was of good report among all who knew him, and who prayed to God always. If morality was sufficient to bring salvation, surely this man needed nothing more to save him. If you will read Acts 11:15 you will see that it was necessary that he should hear the word of truth in order to be saved. We find another man so zealous for God that he put all to death whom he could lay hands on who differed from him, and he verily thought he was doing God service. We find him saying in Acts 23: 1, "Men and brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day." Thus we see neither morality, an approving conscience, nor honesty of mind are sufficient to save, if the gospel is not known and obeyed.

After hearing and obeying the gospel "the commandments of Christ must be obeyed." Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you (John 15:14). Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven (Matt. 7:21). If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love (John 15:10). He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar and the truth is not in him (1 John 2:4). Only by obedience is eternal life obtained. Thus we see to quote the words of another: "The orthodox doctrine of justification by faith only, has obscured the principles of obedience as a condition of salvation and has reduced the commandments of Christ to a practical nullity as a means of attaining a justified standing before God."

  Should seem too long for thee,
Turn thou to God and live,

Editorial

Sister Cassie writes:

"There is Brother and Sister Chapmans, Brother Wilson and Wife, Brother Saylor and Wife and myself. We meet and have Bible readings at our homes, and partake of the emblems in remembrance of our absent King. Brother Saylor lives near Culver City and the Palms, Brother Wilson at Lynnwood, and I live at 332 E 82 St., Los Angeles, California."

Readers of The Restitution are indebted to Brother George B. Alldridge for several editorial sermons on different subjects; but we wish to specially mention those on Revelation. At a time like this when prophecy is being so rapidly fulfilled, and when Futurists are unusually busy ignoring history and making all kinds of predictions concerning the Kaiser and "the revival of the Roman Empire," it is particularly needful for us to brush away cobwebs about Enoch, Elijah, the Jews, Rome, etc., and begin to seriously look for the Lord. Are we looking, and "loving his appearing"?

The little horn power that had destroyed the Asiatic Jerusalem, disregarded the god of his fathers called Jupiter; and this new god, whom his predecessors knew not, he honored and legally established in his estate or empire (Dan. 11:37, 38). This was the little horn ecclesiastical element, into whose hand Daniel was told that the saints should be given, until the elapse of "a time and times and the dividing of time" (Dan. 7:25). Many periods of forty-two literal months elapsed in these two hundred years in all of which the saints were untrampled by the nations. But when this new god came up in the midst of their court, the situation of the Holy City was entirely changed. Forty and two months of years have nearly expired since then; and in all this time the Holy City has been in the altar-worshipping and sackcloth prophesying measurement of time. Shall we ignore this remarkable fact and say, "Oh that is nothing at all"! and, for the sake of reducing all students of prophecy to one common level of ignorance, affirm "that the fulfilment of what is written in the Revelation, from chapter four inclusive, is still future"? For men to affirm this is proof of their entire ignorance of the whole subject. But many people, who are lost in the night of Egypt, desire to be though wise by others as they are in their own conceits. In regard to the Apocalypse, they feel poingnantly and painfully their deep and eradicable ignorance, they can make nothing of it, and being too self-conceited to be taught, or envious and hateful of those who are able to teach them, they allay their vexation by the comfortable delusion that its events and times are all in the future, and "in close connection with the appearing of Christ"; so that, of course, the most intelligent and the most ignorant in the word and history are equally in the dark concerning it. This is very consoling to the envious, who love darkness rather than light, if the light proceeds from any but themselves. The Apocalypse all in the future except the first three chapters! If the leaders have followed our exposition from the beginning of the fourth to the present writing, we believe he will find it impossible to endorse such "a foolish notion." He will be able to say boldly that the dogma of the Futurists is a mere old wife's fable; and utterly unworthy of the grave consideration of a true believer—a servant of the Diety, sealed in the forehead with the seal of the living God (Rev. 7:2, 3; Eureka, vol. 2 page 604).

ARGUMENTS FOR LARGER HOPE STATED AND ANSWERED

Dear Brother:

Please explain in the columns of The Restitution the sixteenth and seventeenth verses of the thirty-first chapter of Jeremiah. I have just heard a sermon where this was used to prove that children would have a chance after the close of the thousand years' reign.

I would also like to have some explanation in regard to "the little season" and the loosing of satan, spoken of in the twentieth chapter of Revelation.

Yours truly,
Mrs. Lorenzo Orr.

EDITOR'S REPLY

The facts in regard to Jer. 31:16, 17 are these:

The Historical Facts

The Israelites were captives in Babylon (Jer. 25:12; Dan. 7:1); "the land of the enemy" was, therefore, Babylon (Ezra 1:5; Hos. 1:11; Ezek. 11:17, 18). The "hope in thine end" consisted in the fact that at the expiration of the seventy years captivity the children of Rachel would come back to their own border the word "border" indicating the national boundry line, the word in Hebrew being gebul, which means "enclosure, enclosed place" (Young); as "the border of the Mount" (Ex. 19:12); "the border of Egypt" (1 Kings 4:21); "the border of the sanctuary" (Psa. 78:54); "the borders of Israel," etc. (Mal. 1:5). Now Rachel had all her life pined for children (Gen. 30:1). She died with "sorrow" at the birth of Benjamin (Gen. 35:18, 19, margin; 1 Sam. 10:2). She was buried at Ramah near Bethlehem, and in poetic personification is represented as raising her head from the tomb and breaking forth into "weeping" at seeing her sons, the Ephraimites, captives in a foreign land. Her grief is assuaged by the comforting reflection that her affliction in the loss of her children shall not be fruitless, as in the case of giving birth to "the child of her sorrow," Benjamin. Her grief would not be perpetual; the exiles shall return, and the land be inhabited again.

Matthew's Quotation Only Partial

In his comments on Jer. 31:16 Adam Clark says: "St. Matthew, who is ever fond of accommodation, applies these words to the massacre of the children at Bethlehem (Matt. 2:17, 18). That is, they are suitable to that occasion, and therefore he so applies them; but they are not a prediction of that event."

However, we can in truth say more than Dr. Clark himself says. Matthew's words including both his preface and quotation, are: "Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, In Rama was there a voice heard, lamentations, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not" (Matt. 2:17, 18). Notice; Matthew only quotes a part of the prophecy. The part he quotes is the lamentation, weeping and great mourning. The part which says "Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy. And there is hope in thine end saith the Lord, that thy children shall come again to their own border" (Jer. 31:16), and which Larger Hope advocates build their theory upon, are not quoted by Matthew at all! That is, to prove their point they quote Scripture which Matthew does not quote, speak where he is silent, and add what he omitted! Thus they are convicted of manufacturing Scriptures to suit themselves.

"The Little Season" of Revelation

As to people having a chance in "the little season" at the end of the thousand years, the idea is so illogical and far-fetched, we wonder that any ordinary mind is deceived by the argument. The logical argument for the theory of fair chance, and ther one we would make if we believed it, would be to prove that there is a universal resurrection at the coming of Christ before the reign of Christ begins. Then when the thousand years began we would at least have the irresponsible alive and ready for a "chance" under the priestly reign of Christ and his saints. But a universal resurrection at Christ's advent, to prove that there's the rub! They shrink from undertaking to prove what they know cannot be proven. Therefore in a disregard for logic, analogy, and the fitness of things that almost borders on madness they teach that only the saints are raised at Christ's second appearing, and then the millennium begins and continues to its end with the children and the other irresponsibles all dead! Teachers galore, but no pupils to instruct! Then after the reign is over, when only a "little season" remains, which forms no part of the thousand years, all these unfortunates are given a chance! Given a chance at a time when the devil is loosed out of his prison, and when deception is so deep-plotted that "nations" and people in numbers like unto "the sand of the sea" are hurried on in rebellion to sudden destruction by a downpour of fire from heaven! A "chance" in such times is surely not to be coveted. Immediately beyond this "season" lies eternity, in which is "no more death" (Rev. 21-4); and if no death, no mortal people who are liable to death. A chance in the immortal state is not needed; and a chance in the "little season" preceding it would be an unmitigated curse. The only time possible for a chance would be during the thousand years. This is possible in both time and consistency, in throwing away which our dear friends abandon their "last chance."

THOSE BEASTS AGAIN

No 2.

Brother Adams asks, "Now does history tell when and where any earthly power rose up and demanded that all must worship the Roman beast?" And answers, "I am sure it does not." We might be like the negro when the Campbellite was telling him that there was no Holy Spirit now, say, "so fa' as you knows;" but others see differently. We wish for space in The Restitution to show such a power as existed as the prophecy demands.

Was there a two-powered empire in the past since the one spoken of by Daniel passed into history? Let history answer: "The splendid donation was granted in supreme and absolute dominion, and the world beheld for the first time a Christian bishop invested with the prerogatives of a temporal prince (A.D. 755); the choice of magistrates, the exercise of justice, the imposition of taxes, and the wealth of the palace of Ravenna." "In the dissolution of the Lombard kingdom, the inhabitants of the Duchy of Spoleto sought refuge from the storm, shaved their heads after the Roman fashion, declared themselves the servants and subjects of St. Peter, and completed, by this voluntary surrender, the present circle of the ecclesiastical state" (Decline and Fall, vol, 5, ch. 49, secs. 14, 15).

Those states in which is situated the city of Rome have for centuries been known as the Papal States, or the patrimony of St. Peter, and states of the Church. "In this capital and these states the pope has been the unlimited sovereign since the days of Pepin and Charlemagne, until dethroned in 1370." "These states had a population of 3,000,000 inhabitants, furnished a revenue of $14,000,000 annually which the pope collected" (W. E. Brown). "The papal states were bounded on the north by Venitian Lombardy, on the east by the Adriatic, on the southeast by the kingdom of Naples, on the southwest by the Mediterranean, and on the west by Tuscany and Modena. There extreme length is 260 miles; their breadth varies from 20 to 95 miles. They extend along the shores of the Adriatic from the Po to the Toronto, a line of 175 miles, and 120 on the Mediterranean. The government is wholly ecclesiastical, no one being eligible to fill any civil office who has not attained the rank of Abbot. The pope enacts all laws, and nominates to all clerical appointments. He is assisted however, by the college of Cardinals, comprising about seventy members and the different branches of the government are conducted each by congregations with a Cardinal at its head. Rome, the capital of the Papal States, which had been governed by kings, was given by king Pepin to Stephen II, pope of Rome, in A.D. 756, and confirmed by Charlemagne in 774" (The World, Geograph., Hist. Statis., p 370). "And thus was the pope of Rome finally raised to the station of an earthly sovereign, and took rank among the kings of the earth" (History of Romanism, by Dowling, p. 172).

Mr. Bower remarks on this point: "And now that we have seen the temporal power united in the Popes to the spiritual, the crown to the mitre, and the sword to the keys, I shall leave them for a while, and close this present volume" (Hist. of popes, vol. 3). Gibbon also says: "The sovereignty of Rome no longer depended on the choice of a fickle people; and the successors of St. Peter and Constantine were invested with the purple and prerogatives of the Caesars" (Decline and Fall, vol. 5, ch. 49, sec. 16).

Much more history could be quoted to the same effect; but we think this fully establishes the fact that a small two-powered state or kingdom has in the past been established. and it now devolves upon us to show that the prophecy has been fulfilled in its entirety by said powers, and that will leave little room for speculative guess work of Futurists. and right the mistake into which our dear brother has fallen. As Brother Huggins admonishes, "Prove all things, and hold fast to that which is good." Don't take the word of this or any other scribe unless found in harmony with fact.

IS ELIJAH YET TO COME?

By J. J. Schaumburg

This is a very important question, and one that should receive prayerful consideration. Many of the modern delusions are here because the people do not understand the Bible touching this matter. Some of our people may be led away on thistopic in the future, for the "strong delusion" period is here, and more and more are being deceived. It takes no more than ordinary intelligence, a careful reading of the word, and faith in what it says, to get the truth on this question. And when you once have the truth on it, the "false prophets" of the day who launch the claim that they are the Elijah, cannot deceive you. We know of several cases where men and women have been deceived and have actually joined a body of people among whom was this so-called "Elijah, the Restorer," all because they were not acquainted with the Bible teaching concerning this topic.

Elijah; His Coming

> The Lord said through Malachi: "Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the great and terrible day of the Lord come. And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers; lest I come and smite the earth with a curse" (Mal. 4:5, 6). English Revision. The margin of the A. R. V. has, "with the children," and "with their fathers."

There are three things here worthy of note:

(1) Elijah will be sent before the great day of judgment;

(2) He will turn the hearts of the fathers to the children;

(3) If Elijah does not come, Jehovah will curse the earth.

Now let us see what the New Testament says. It will give us light. Matthew reports Jesus as saying: "And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence . . . . all the prophets and the law prophesied until John. And if ye are willing to receive it (margin, "him"), this is Elijah that is to come" (A. R. V., Matt. 11:12-14). "And his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes that Elijah must first come? And he answered and said, Elijah indeed cometh, and shall restore all things; but I say unto you that Elijah is come already, and they knew him not, but did unto him whatsoever they would" (A. R. V., Matt. 17:10-12). "And they asked him, saying, How is it that the scribes say that Elijah indeed first come? And he said unto them, Elijah indeed cometh first, and restoreth all things: and how it is written of the Son of Man, that he should suffer many things and be set at nought? But I say unto you that Elijah is come, and they have also done unto him (Elijah) whatsoever they would; even as it is written of him" (A. R. V., Mark 9:11-13). "But the angel said unto him, Fear not, Zecharias: . . . . . Elizabeth shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John . . . . . And he (John) shall go before his face in the spirit and power of Elijah, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to walk in the wisdom of the just; to make ready for the Lord a people prepared for him" (A. R. V., Luke 1:13-17). "John . . . . confessed, and denied not; and he confessed, I am not the Christ. And they asked him what then? Art thou Elijah? And he saith, I am not" (A. R. V., John 1:20, 21).

Regarding the prediction of Malachi relative to the coming of Elijah, we found four references in the New Testament. Touching the question of the priests and Levites whether John were Christ, Elijah or the prophet, we have one refernce in the New Testament. (It should be understood that the question was put to John, 1:20, 21, "Art thou Elijah?" had no reference to the prediction of Mal. 4 at all; and so John's denial here does not prove that he was not the Elijah of Mal. 4. If we allow the view that the questin was a reference to Mal. 4, then we have John's words arrayed against Christ's! In case we are forced to accept both testimonies, it should not take us long to decide that Jesus must be believed, no matter what we do with John's testimony. But all can see that it is not necessary to array John against Jesus, for the question put to John had no reference to the Elijah of Mal. 4, but simply showed that the people believed some of the prophets would re-appear on earth personally).

In the first reference Jesus says, "This is Elias, which was for to come." He prefaced that remark by these words, "And if ye will receive it." Did he mean, "John is the predicted Elijah if you receive it, but if you reject it he is not that spoken-of Elijah"? In other words, Did Jesus teach that Malachi's forecast could be fulfilled only when the Jews believed it? Or, yet in other words, did he mean that Malachi's prophecy of the coming of Elijah was conditional? We answer, No, for, (1) no conditions are stated at all by Malachi; and (2) our blessed Lord does not affirm Malachi's forecast to be of that nature. And Jesus knew.

The Jews thought Elijah would appear presonally, and they also believed that Jeremiah and other prophets would come personally to usher in the Lord Jesus as Messiah. "His disciples . . . said (to Jesus), Some say thou art John . . . some, Elias; and others Jeremias, or one of the prophets" (Mat. 16:13, 14). He knew what the Jewish people believed about these prophets, viz., that they would come personally. Now he also knew if he said that John actually was the promised Elijah, and fulfilled the prediction, he would contradict their views touching the manner of the coming of Elijah, therefore he said, "If ye will receive it," proves conclusively that Jesus was about to state a truth that would clash with Jewish conceptions regarding the very subject under consideration.

In the second reference Jesus stated: "Elias is come already." And the Evangelist records these words immediately following that statement of Christ: "Then the disciples understood that he spoke unto them of John the Baptist" (Matt. 17:13)). Jesus does not qualify his positive statement, "Elias is come." He adds, they "have done unto him whatsoever they listed," or wished (Matt. 17:12). In Matt. 14:10 we read of John, how he was killed. So Jesus' statement that "Elias is come," referring it to John, was made after John was dead. And his "disciples" perfectly understood him to refer the prophecy to John, for he had in the eleventh verse quoted directly from Malachi the fourth chapter. If people in these days understand that John did not fulfil the divine prophecy; they do not get such an understanding from anything Jesus said, for he taught the directly opposite. If his disciples "understood" him wrongly, then Jesus ought to have corrected them. We say so reverently.

The third reference makes Jesus say: "He (Jesus) answered and told them, Elias verily cometh first, and restoreth all things." Does not Jesus here quote directly from Malachi? Yes, certainly. Now hear him: "But I say unto you, that Elias is indeed come, and they have done unto him whatsoever they listed." Mark 9:11-13. This statement was made by Jesus after John was dead. "But did John restore all things?" they ask us. We answer, by restoring all things Jesus meant that John would turn the hearts of the fathers with their children, and the hearts of the children with their fathers — turn both to the Lord. This expression, "restoreth all things" is not Malachi's expression, but the inspired comment of Christ on the words of Malachi, "He shall turn the heart of the fathers to (with, margin) the children," etc. And the angel positively said to Elizabeth that John would "turn the hearts of the fathers to the children" (Luke :13-17), or to use, Christ's words the angel affirmed he (John) would restore all things.

The fourth reference names the "angel" affirm of John the Baptist: "And many of the children of Israel shall turn to the Lord . . . And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias, (for what purpose?) to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, etc. (Luke 1:15-17). Did Malachi prophesy that? Yes. Read it. Did the angel say John would fulfil this prophesy? He did. Then what can we as Bible believers do but believe it?

To sum up: 1. Malachi said Elijah would come. 2. The angel said John was to do exactly what Malachi said Elias must do; and that he would do this "in the spirit and power of Elijah." 3. Jesus said before John died that John was the Elijah which was for to come" and after John was dead Jesus said John fulfilled the prophesy and they killed him. 4. The disciples of Jesus "understood" the statement of Jesus, that "Elias is come," to refer to John the Baptist. And Jesus did not correct their conception and views, hence they "understood" him rightly.

These points are as well established as the teachings of Christ are anywhere else in the New Testament; and it ill becomes Jesus' disciples of today to question Christ's own testimony in this matter!

We hear people saying: "Yes, John was purposed to be the Elijah; but the Jews killed him. Hence he did not do his work, and so we look for the one to come now."

To this it may be answered that Jesus said (after John's death) that Elias had come and the Jews killed him; and Jesus never hinted that John had not finished his predicted work, nor that the church should ever look for another. And it is only where a self-appointed "teacher" and an egotistical self-anointed "prophet" wants to be a great leader, deceiving the people, that the argument of a future Elias is used; and in that case the "prophet" is of course the "Elijah"!

We do not hesitate to say that the modern teacher who claims to be the "Elijah, the restorer," is a deceiver, no matter who he is. The Lord is permitting him to do this work. God's true people are beinn tried as never before by every ism and schism that can come from the pit. All that is necessary is to brush these pretenders and their pretensions aside and study the word for yourself. And God will lead you into the truth. But the modern dupes are not allowed to study that Book by themselves. We heard one of these would-be Elijahs say in Oakland, Cal., that the word without his interpretation was a dead letter and would kill the searcher! These are times of deception hitherto unknown. Let us go to the precious Book and stay there. Even leaders among us are not infallible. Then let each one of us study the book for himself or herself.

Dear Restitution:

Standing on the threshhold of this new year, we can look back and see the trials and heartaches we have passed through in 1918. I can thank my heavenly Father that his grace has been sufficient for me.

All the years that have gone by I have trusted in him, and he has not forsaken me. We must face about, for the things of now demand our attention. Not far in the future we know there is a time of eternal gladness, but to reach it we must take a step at a time. Does the last year show blots and crooked lines on its once white page? Very few will say that no blot mars it. We have a blank page for 1919 before us: what will be written there? Will the vile trail of the serpent defile it, or will it be filled with good will toward God and man? God sees and knows. He has given us a present duty; he has told us the ultimate outcome. We know the time is near, yes, even at the door for the return of the Master. Are we rejoicing and ready with our white robes and our lamps burning? The promise is that those who work with him in his humility and share in his reproach will be with him and share in his glory when he comes to be admired in all them that believe.

If we would thus be honored we must walk with him in white. To do this involves complete separation from every thing that is unclean and impure. White robes cannot be worn among filth without being soiled. Who is it that has the promise of seeing the King in his beauty ?" He that walketh upright; he that despiseth the gain of oppression." "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord, or who shall stand in his holy place? "He that hath clean hands and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully. He shall receive the blessing from the Lord, and righteousness from the Lord of his salvation." Let us then be ready, for soon our King will return.

P. S.—I will say there are a few of us that meet to study the word and partake of the emblems in remembrance of our absent King. -Cassie.

As ever I remain,

Sister Cassie.

The devil gives the hardest blows to the most effectual instruments in God's hands. Be not alarmed, dear one, when thes battle rages. God's instruments are worth trying. Rest assured, Christ is Conqueror. God's work cannot be overthrown. The things that cannot be shaken will reainm.

PEACE BE STILL

Peace be still!
What awaits this futile struggle of thy will
Against the will divine?
Why dost engage in useless strife
Against the lot and part of life
That now are thine?

What though you are denied your choice
And longings, hush and hear the voice
Within, that bringeth thee peace.
Peace sweeter than the world can give
To her most favored ones who live,
Be wise, and cease.

This vain rebellion, grief, and hate
Against the bonds imposed by fate.
They're yours tho' good and ill,
Then take them, use them for the best,
Thus only may thy soul find rest,
Then, peace, be still.

"Peace I Leave With You"

The above words were spoken by Jesus to his apostles a short time before his crucifixion, and having spoken them, he added, "Not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your hearts be troubled, neither let it be afraid." But though spoken to the apostles, they apply with equal force to us today.

In the world is tribulation, and if we follow after the world we shall be rewarded with trials, sorrows, and vexations, because the world is not stable. The things of the world rust and decay, they constantly are changing, while the things of God are sure and everlasting. Regarding God himself, we read, "With whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." And of Jesus his Son it is written, "The same yesterday and today, and forever."

What the world gives it exacts payment for, often with our health, at times with our life; but its greatest demand is on the future life. Man generally values only what he has, or what he sees. Not seeing the future he lets it pass from him for some temporal bauble that perishes in his hand. God offers us peace, comfort, and consolation durour mortal existence, and an endless life of glory and power in his own presence in the hereafter, if we will but believe on him and his promises accepting the gift of his love, even Jesus the Christ, as our "wisdom and righteousness, and sanctification and redemption."

The things of God and the things of the world are opposites; they can not be compared, they can not be mixed. Man either is "of the earth, earthy, or of heaven, heavenly:" he cannot be both. If he is of the spirit, minding the things of the spirit, then is his delight in spiritual things, and God will enter into him, dwelling with him.

God will watch over him and lead him, guiding him in the perfect way.

"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in his law doth he meditate day and night." It is to the one that delighteth in the law of God, that is a humble, consistent follower of Jesus, that has faith in Jesus as the Christ, and is looking for his soon return, knowing that the kingdom that is coming not only shall eternal life be given, but we shall see God the Father, and Jesus the Son, and live with them throughout countless ages. It is to such an one that drawing on the grace of God, accepting God at his word, and believing on Jesus, that will know what this peace means, that constantly will have this peace, that peace that Jesus left with us, that peace that Jesus gave us, that peace which, when we possess it, will drive out all trouble and fear from our heart. And why is this peace so potent? Simply because the man who possesses it, fully knows and understands the truth of Paul's reckoning, "that the sufferings of this present time are not to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us." No earthly trial, sorrow, or tribulation, will have any weight with us if our faith is solidly built on Jesus. We will not fret; we will not worry. If our faith is right, then the greater the trial the stronger the trust; and the stronger the trust, the sweeter and more serene will be the peace which God, through Christ Jesus, will fill our hearts. And having that peace, our hearts neither will be troubled nor afraid.

A Child's Prayer

Father! Now I go to rest,
In my safe and quiet nest,
Keep my little heart tonight
Close toThine till morning light.

Bless all friends, and in Thy love,
Watch and keep us from above,
Till the morning comes again.
For our Saviour's sake, Amen!

What more beautiful and profitable thing can there be than to teach a child that God is the creator, that he watches over and cares for us, that our very life and existance are in his hands; and that we are to go to God with both sorrows and joys, in one case, asking strength to bear them; in the other, with thanksgiving for his goodness and grace.

When the peace of God reigns in the heart, the face shines with a peaceful, heavenly radiance.

Answer to appear in issue of March 25.

Answer to puzzle in issue of Feb. 25:

The "Sheep" represent those who believe that "Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God," and so believing live a peaceful life, doing the will of God: while the "goats" represent those who know not God nor his Christ.

"He" refers to Jesus Christ.

The "King" is this same Jesus.

No, the King was not then reigning.

The "Father" is the Lord God.

Regarding the time of his Kingdom, Jesus said unto Pilate "My Kingdom is not of this world" this is recorded in John 18:36, the passage can be found in Matthew 25:34.

An Acknowledgement With Thanks

We wish to publicly acknowledge, and at the same time thank our Brother William for his gift of three volumes of Bible Readings to aid us in our work. The books will be a great help, and the page will be brighter, hence more readable in consequence. Again Thanks.

All the Old Testament apocrypha, fourteen in number, have been translated into English and are included as apocryphal books in some editions of the Bible. They were formerly printed under a distinctive heading between the Old and the New Testaments, and in that form can still be found in many old family Bibles. They are always included in the so-called Sentuagint, a version of the Bible used by the Greek Church.

The Restitution

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defense of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ. — Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 71 CLEVELAND, O. March 18th, 1919. NUMBER 11

Is Man A Unity or A Trinity?

Theologians generally have taught that man is a trinity—body, soul, and spirit—and that the soul and spirit act and think independently of the body, thus causing confusion in the understanding of God's word.

A writer, whose name is unknown, has composed the following lines on the subject, which illustrate the difficulties encountered by those who hold to the foregoing view:

Is man so great a mystery as theologians teach?
Possessing other entities, the eye can never reach,
The outer man of dust was made, in which they all agree;
And in this house there dwells a soul and spirit making three.
By this arrangement don't you see, a triune man appears,
Mysterious as the three-one God who centers everywhere,
For in the outer man there dwells the mystic man, the soul,
Also a third the spirit man, which makes the compact whole.
Soon, body man returns to dust, the spirit man to God,
The soul man down to hell is cast to writhe in fire and blood;
So must Cain for six thousand years in these conditions dwell;
One Cain in dust, one Cain with God, the other Cain in hell.—Selected by Brother A. C. Boyer.

The Holy Spirit And Its Gifts

No. 1.

"He said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Spirit since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Spirit" (Acts 19:2).

Its Importance

No question is of more importance today than the above, and no answer better expresses the vague, uncertainty of religious professors of these Laodicean times; and no condition is more fatal to the professed bride of Christ, than that of uncertainty of possessing the Spirit of her Beloved. "It is the Spirit that quickeneth." "The body without the Spirit is dead." "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, and have been all made to drink into one Spirit." "Now if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Dear reader, "receive with meekness this engrafted word, which is able to save our souls" (James 1:21; Rom. 8). The word is the instrument that points the way to a knowledge of God through his indwelling Spirit (1 John 1:1-5). "If we live in the Spirit, let us walk in the Spirit."

No Time to Waste

The night is far spent, and "the great and dreadful day" of the Lord's judgment is here; "the Gentile times" have ended, and "the fulness of the Gentiles" is either in, or nearly so. God's commandments and word are the lamp for our feet (Psa. 119:5; Prov. 6:23). The oil that produces the light is the Holy Spirit (Lev. 8:12; Acts 10:38). The lack of oil will leave the purest virgin in outer darkness (Matt. 25). The bride must make herself ready, and the King's business requires haste, "for he will finish the work, and cut it short in righteousness; for a short work will the Lord make upon the earth" (Rev. 19; Rom. 9:28).

Indifference is Fatal

The lukewarmness of Laodicea, the deadness of Sardis, and the drunkeness of Babylon, are the curse of the church today. Justification, or pardon of past sin may be obtained without receiving the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:38, 39; 8:12-18); but sanctification, or salvation from sin, from the old man, or inbred disposition to sin, is impossible without the new heart and new Spirit of Christ possessing us; for "of him (God) are ye in Christ Jesus, who is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption" (1 Cor. 1:30). "God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation, through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth" (2 Thess. 2:13).

The Present Reign of God

To see the government, or sovereignty of God, we must be born from above (John 3). To enter the government of God, by coming under God's laws, under Christ as our head, we must be born both of water and of the Spirit. This government of God does not come to the natural senses by observation, but can only be seen by the eyes of our understanding, or the spiritual eye (Luke 17:

Oregon Bible College
Oregon, Illinois

20,21). God's throne is in the heavens, and his sovereignty is over all (Psa. 103:19). Every member of the body of Christ comes under the laws of God's kingdom when he accepts of Christ, and becomes a subject of God's universal kingdom now, while running the race for a crown in the future Kingdom of God on earth (Luke 16:16; Matt 25:34).

● The New Creation

The new heart and new spirit and newness of life and new creature, are not future resurrection products, but are a new moral and spiritual birth, that must follow baptism, or the new physical birth at the resurrection will never occur. It is now that the members of the body of Christ must purify themselves as he is pure, and become righteous, and put away all sin, as he is sinless, if we would be like him, when he shall appear in body (1 John 3). Since it is not our old spirit but the spirit of Christ within us that is our righteousness, our sanctification, our life, and our source of all holiness and power, shall we limit the power of him who is the same, yesterday, and today, and forever (Heb. 13:8) ? The covetous, extortioners, and unrighteous, shall not inherit the Kingdom of God (1 Cor. 6:9-12). Oh who can estimate the millions who will be lost on account of the above sins, and whose destruction will be due to false teachers, who have always justified sin in the body of Christ, "in whom is no sin" ? "He that committeth sin is of the devil" and "every sin committed is without the body"—of Christ (1 Cor. 6:18; 1 John 3:5, 6). "All things are possible to him that believeth" (Mark 9:23).

Pray for Spiritual Appetite

"For every one that asketh (with importunity), receiveth, and he that seeketh, findeth (what he seeks for with his whole heart), and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened." "Man ought always to pray, and not to faint" (Luke 11:18).

"Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled." "As the heart panteth after the waterbrooks; so panteth my soul, for thee, O God; my soul thirsteth for God; for the living God." "For he satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness" (Psa. 42:1; 107:9). "And ye shall seek me and find me when ye search for me with all your heart" (Jer. 29:13). "And they sought the Lord with their whole desire, and he was found of them" (2 Chron. 15:15).

Oh where are the souls who, with all their heart, are 'longing,' 'hungering,' 'thirsting,' 'seeking,' and 'praying without ceasing' for righteousness, holiness, truth; and for the source of all grace and power, the Holy Spirit? How many have set their affections on things above, and not on things on the earth (Col. 3)? How sadly true it still is! "For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are enemies of the cross of Christ, whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, who mind earthly things" (Phil. 3:18,19). Oh let us pray for those who hunger for a knowledge of the living God, as a present refuge and help; and for that holiness which alone prepares us for communion with God and with Christ our Savior!

Hindering Causes

All spiritual people emphasize as the greatest hinderances to fellowship with Christ, and to deep Christian experience, to be the following: Self-satisfaction, indifference, selfishness, covetousness, love of the world, carnality, false doctrines, prejudice, and love of popularity. Let us examine our hearts on the following: Do we prize knowledge that puffeth up, more than the greatest thing in the universe—love? Do we prize the gifts of God, more than the Giver? Are we praying for the rewards, more than to know as our personal companion, the Rewarder? Are we violating the new covenant law by worrying and carrying our cares, instead of casting all upon the Lord, and thus finding rest to our souls? Are we content with little in temporal things, while ever seeking to grow in grace and in deeper knowledge in spiritual experience? Are our hearts, like that of David, ever overflowing with gratitude to God for present blessings, while patient and longsuffering under affliction?

Have we strong faith in things not seen, or do we crave for feelings and signs and emotions, rather than for understanding and knowledge of God's word, and of his spiritual presence with us?

Do we violate the law of Christ by fears for the morrow, or do we walk in the spirit of perfect love that casteth out all fear?

Are we seeking power more than purity, or selfish wants more than self sacrifice for others?

Is our light shining for others; is our talent increasing by use; are we fruitful branches in the vine?

God's promises stand firm that he will return with favor to us when we fully return to him; but let us remember that our return requires a higher righteousness under the new covenant than that of the Jews under the old covenant (Matt. 5:20).

One of the least of these requirements on the part of both Jews and Gentiles, whom Christ gathers in as his "Jewels" is, that they cease from robbing God, and bring all his tithes into the storehouse. Many who think that they are Christians could not do this with a free heart (Mal. 3; Heb. 7:8; Matt. 23:23).

"Be not deceived:" "Covetous and extortioners shall not inherit the Kingdom of God" (1 Cor. 6; Eph. 5). Our faith is measured by our works and our love by our actions and sacrifices.

Have we simply complied with the form of water baptism while never having the real "baptism of repentance" and death to sin, and resurrection to a new life (Rom. 6; Col. 2)?

Are we satisfied with justification from past sin, without the sanctification that saves us from the love of sin?

Justification versus Sanctification

Justification is the act of a judge delivering us from the guilt and penalty of past sin through grace or mercy.

Sanctification is deliverance from the power of sin or the disposition to sin, by the new spirit within.

Justification may be instantaneous, as when the publican's prayer justified him (Luke 18:14).

Sanctification is deliverance from the carnal and worldly disposition, by a change of affections, and is a growth in grace, as we walk with Christ, and perceive more and more by the spirit the defects in our character that hinder our full enjoyment of his fellowship and fulness.

Justification comes when we fully yield our will to God's will, with a willingness to fully obey the gospel, and to consecrate all to God; and this willing mind, when guided by intelligent study of the gospel of Christ, will lead us to obey the steps of justification; which are; repentance, faith, confession, baptism, and of consecration of all we are, and have, to God.

Sanctification is the setting apart of the new life by God's spirit within, by which we daily die to self and the world, and live for God and for humanity. "He that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and he in him."

Justification enables the pilgrim to drop his burden of sin at the cross; but santification gives rest to his soul; a peace that passes all understanding to his mind and heart, and a joy unspeakable and full of glory, now and here; so that he can find joy in trial, and can rejoice in the Lord always.

George Muller said that his mission on earth was not so much to found a great benevolent institution, as to teach men that if we obey all of God's commandments through Christ, that it was safe to trust his promises; to cast all our care upon the Lord; and to rest in his love; and that obedience, prayer, and faith, never go unrewarded here and now (Psa. 46).

He said that the secret of his service to others began when he utterly died to himself, to the world, and to the praise or blame of man; and sought, and studied, and prayed, only to be approved of God; and that God's children sadly needed a visible proof that God was still a refuge and strength, and a very present help in trouble; and that he will supply all our needs, according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus. A favorite text with Muller was, "Open wide thy mouth, and I will fill it" (Psa. 81:10).

The sanctified Christian does not have to be satisfied with hope of future joy, peace, rest, and glory; for through the Holy Spirit he has a large foretaste of all these now. He is not satisfied with theories gathered from the dead letter of the Bible; but enjoys a sweet fellowship with Christ in Spirit, and a deep spiritual experience, "unspeakable and full of glory," here and now. His preaching is not a flowery oratory, or in merely nice sentiment, mechanically delivered, but it is "in demonstration of the Spirit and of power;" from the heart of one who talks from fellowship and experience, and not from worldly wisdom or mere theory. "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature." If not a new creature his baptism was but an empty form (2 Cor. 5:17; Gal. 6:15). "If ye being evil know how to give good gifts to your children; how much more will your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him" (Luke 11:13). "Holy Spirit" here does not mean "word" or "Bible," nor is the promise limited to the apostles, or to the first century of the church. It is for you and me today, as sure as pardon of sin is for us (Acts 2:38,39).

For proof that "the gift of the Holy Spirit," is the Holy Spirit himself, compare Acts 2:38 with Acts 10:45; 11:17.

Offices of the Holy Spirit

1. The Comforter Is Jesus Himself

"Lo I am with you always," means that Jesus, through the Holy Spirit, is Omnipresent with all believers in the world, in whom he dwells now as in a temple or sanctuary. So he said: "It is expedient that I go away or the Comforter will not come." "If a man love me he will keep my word, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." He will "manifest himself to us as not to the world," and will "come in and sup with us, and we with him" (Rev. 3:20).

But how could it be "expedient," or better, to have Jesus with us in spirit than in flesh, unless his presence in spirit were as real, and as sweet, and more universal, than when he was here in flesh on earth? "Hereby we know that he dwelleth in us, because he hath given us of his spirit" (1 John 3:24). The beloved disciple shows us that it is life eternal "to know the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom He hath sent;" and that this knowledge can come only by the unction, or anointing of the Holy Spirit, and by the indwelling of this one Spirit of God and of Christ. "That ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son, Jesus Christ" (1John 1:3).

2. The Holy Spirit is the Unifier.

"That they all may be one; as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me" (John 17:21).

Therefore all the sectarian confuson of Babylon is due to the lack of the Holy Spirit, for "by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body and have been all made to drink into one Spirit" (1 Cor. 12: 13). "There is one body and one Spirit" (Eph. 4). "God is not the author of confusion" (1 Cor. 14:33). "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it" (Psa. 127).

3. The Holy Spirit is the Life of the Church.

As the sap is the life of the vine and its branches, and the blood is the life of the animal body, so the Holy Spirit is the life of the body of Christ. As a branch separated from a vine dies from lack of the sap of the vine, or as a human member dies when amputated from the body, man spiritually dead without the Spirit. The living water is the Spirit flowing out from the life and words of the believer, to refresh and give life to the world. The woman clothed with the sun, was the early church, before apostasy set in, radiating to the world the light of God's truth and Holy Spirit. "The darkness is past, and the true light now shineth" (1John 2:8). "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life." "He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you."

The magnetic connection between wireless instruments, all around the earth, is a small illustration of how Christ the head of his congregation is always in touch with every member of his body, and it was due to ignorance of this magnetic spirit connection, and control of every member, that led sectarians to set up mortal men as heads of so called churches. "Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty" (2 Cor. 3:17). Where every member is not free to speak, the Spirit of the Lord cannot dwell. He will accept no secondary place in his body (Eph. 1:23; 5:23).

The promises of the Scriptures give us comfort and hope, but the Bible is not the Comforter, but Christ himself (Rom. 15:4; Acts 9:31).

4. Our Teacher and Memory Quickener.

"But the Comforter, which is the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you" (John 14:26). God pity those who think they do not need this Teacher still, and this quickener of our memories, so that we may be always prepared to speak a word in season to the weary, the sinful, and to the discouraged pilgrims (Isa. 50:4).

THE HOUSE OF GOD

Blessed are they that dwell in thy house; they will be still praising thee (Psa. 84:4).

On each "first day" of the week I awake with a song of praise and thanksgiving in my heart to God the fountain and source of all life and blessing. This day I eagerly look forward to during the week. The fellowship of God's dear ones, all precious in his sight and by faith meeting my absent Lord, thrills my soul with delight and gladness.

I look around and notice some are absent, why I cannot tell. Like a flash Heb. 10:25 floats in upon my mind: "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another; and so much the more as ye see the day aproaching." In the next verse Paul intimates that in doing so we sin wilfully, and for such as do this, "there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin."

The Roman Catholic Church teaches that by the sacrifice of "the mass" the sacrifice of our Lord Jesus is renewed and accepted by God as an atonement for the sins of those participating. But what is the significance of "There remaineth no more sacrifice for sin," to us? Paul says in 1 Cor. 11:26: "For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup ye do shew the Lord's death till he come." In Rom. 8:3, 4, we read this remarkable statement: "For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh; that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit."

Now listen closely to this recorded in Rom. 6: 10, 11: "For in that he died he died unto sin once: but in that he liveth he liveth unto God. likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord." What do we then show in the Lord's death till he comes? Peter makes this point very clear: "Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness; by whose stripes ye were healed" (1 Pet. 2:24). Paul still further elucidates this point in Col. 1:22, 23: "For the body of his flesh through death to present you holy and unblameable and unreproveable in his sight if ye continue in the faith, grounded and settled and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel." Now what was entailed in the death of Christ? Sacrifice and suffering. If then, God sees me as a new creature, he must necessarily first have seen me baptized into Jesus, and hence baptized into his death (Rom. 3:5). If then, I have been baptized into the death of Jesus, I am now freed from sin (Rom. 6:7).

If I am freed from sin my life must necessarily follow, a life full of suffering and affliction (Col. 1:24). Why then do so many neglect the meeting in the house of God upon the first day of the week? We answer, because to show the Lord's death faithfully means to us, as his death meant to him, a daily dying of sin, a crucifying of "the old man," a destroying of the body of sin (Rom. 6: 6), a transforming by the renewing of our minds by daily doing the will of God (Rom. 12:1, 2). If this be our heart's honest intention, what should be our experience? David answers our question. "How lovely are thy dwelling places, O Jehovah of hosts. My soul desireth, yea, it longeth for the courts of the Lord. My heart and my flesh cry out for the living God." Jesus said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." Every soul that hungers and thirsts after righteousness longs to be separated from the evil existing in the world today. Where at present can we find this asylum? we answer no where but in the house of God. Paul says: "The Most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands" (Acts 17:48). In 2 Cor. 6: 16; 1 Cor. 3:16 we read that "Ye are the temples of the living God," and that "I will dwell in them and walk in them."

Temples are usually very beautiful. Is God's temple an exception to this rule? No; it is very beautiful. Read Rev. 21:18-22. Any lapidary will tell you this description is the most beautiful blending and harmony of colors known to his art. In Malachi 3:17 the prophet declares that they who love and fear the Lord constitute these precious jewels.

Beloved, is there any quality of character that we love and admire more than amiableness? David says: "How amaible are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts." What makes them so? Ah yes, I wish I had more of it. It is the indwelling of the sweet spirit of the truth. The more we possess of this spirit, the more beautiful, lovely, and amiable we become. And by thus possessing this sweet spirit of truth and love we fellowship and commune with God through each other.

In this temple Jesus is already in place; he is the chief corner stone. Peter says this stone was disallowed by men, but chosen of God, and precious. He adds: "Ye also as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ" (1 Pet. 2:3-10). These living stones are now being developed, fitted, polished, proved, and selected for positions in the glorious temple of God. Oh, beloved, my heart is full, as I contemplate these glorious courts or dwelling places of God! My mind fails me to appreciate how transcendantly grand they are! Think, being in the immediate prsence of God and face to face with my dear Redeemer; to be like him, possesing the same loving and sweet disposition and character! Beloved, for this my heart and my flesh cry out.

Some time ago we preached a sermon upon the text: "Yea, the sparrow hath found an house, and the swallow a nest for herself, where she may lay her young, even thine altars, O Lord of hosts my King and my God" (Psa. 84:3). We tried to point out that as the sparrow and swallow found rest and protection in their nests, so the saints of God find rest, peace, and happiness in the courts of the Lord's house symbolized in its altars. Indeed "we have an altar whereof they have no right to eat which serve the tabernacle" (Heb. 13:10; Rev. 11: 2; 8:3).

Each "first day" of the week as I separate from my brethren, I realize how true David's words are: "For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand (elsewhere). I had rather be a door keeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness. For the Lord God is a sun and shield: the Lord will give grace and glory; no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly."

Indeed, as I listen to the ministry of God's word, like the sun it enlightens my mind and vivfies my heart, filling me with a deep sense of his greatness and perfection, and then as I partake of the emblems of the body and blood of Christ, I realize that the robe of his faultless righteousness is a shield, that will, when I stand in his presence and will be known (1 John 3:2; 1 Cor. 13:12) as I am known, insure me "grace and glory."

Beloved, let us try to be practical in our dealings with God and with one another. If any one came and said to you, "Jesus is about to pass by," instantly everything would be dropped; at a bound, you would leave everything: you would eagerly push through the crowd to get near him, and then having seen him and obliged to return, there would ever be a different look in your eyes, and your deportment would change. Henceforth the continued thought in your mind would be, "I have seen Jesus." Beloved, Jesus indeed is present with us, if we go to the place where he has promised to meet us. By faith he fixes his gaze upon us; his hands are outstretched in blessing over us; he utters as of old, the word that touches our heart's core, the tone is so tender, so loving, so kind, so penetrating. It is the old familiar words that have so often quieted our hearts: "It is I, be not afraid."

Beloved, God is never weary with me. I may become faint and weary; but if I meet with God's children my spirit is renewed, and like Paul, I thank God and take courage (Acts 28:15).

Faint not amid the battle smoke,
Nor falter in the fight,
Press on until the foe gives way,
Walk in the Savior's might.
Thy breastplate, helmet and thy sword,
Take up and ne'er lay down;
He that endureth to the end,
The same shall wear a crown.

If sometimes weary in the way,
And courage seems to fade,
Go trusting in his word of cheer,
Be strong and not afraid.
The Lord our leader goes before,
His children to defend;
He holds for thee a crown of life,
If faithful to the end.

Then sound the battle cry of faith,
Catch and repeat the strain,
Till every heart shall be inspired,
And swell the glad refrain.
Endure all hardness for his sake,
Like soldiers overcome,
E'en till from labor to reward,
The hosts are marshalled home.

March on, march on,
Nor lay thine armor down;
Enduring bravely to the end,
Beyond there is a crown.

Take Everything To God In Prayer

"Rejoice evermore. Pray without ceasing. In everything give thanks for this is the will of God in Jesus Christ concerning you."

The Psalmist found in his day that the eyes of Jehovah were toward the righteous, and that his ears were open to their prayers. And it is a consolation to us to think that this same Jehovah is "the same yesterday, today, and forever," and is "able to do exceeding abundantly above all we can ask or think." The Father hath appointed a new and a Living Way whereby we may approach him; and the One who constitutes the way hath not left us in doubt as to the form our petitions should take.

Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? let him sing psalms.

Obituaries

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Carrie Gladys Craig, daughter of Charles and Lizzie Craig, was born in Monroe Township, Kos. Co., Ind., Oct. 27, 1877, and died at her parent's home in Pierceton, Ind., Feb. 11, 1919, aged 41 yrs. 3 months, and 14 days.

She became totally blind when but 15 years of age, loss of sight being brought on by a severe spell of sickness; yet in all these long years of darkness and suffering from poor health from 1892 to 1919 she has been patient, uncomplaining, and thoughtful of the pleasure and comfort of others. She began attending a little Sunday School at the home of Auntie Wince the winter of '92 and '93, went with her and Mr. Wince to our meetings and Conferences, and having learned the truth, became an obedient believer the very next summer, uniting with the little church at Gospel Grove. She corresponded for quite a while with four young sisters, belonging to the Plymouth and Argos churches, and their letters were a source of great delight and very helpful to Carrie, and they will be glad to know that Carrie, the dear lover of music and sacred song, was not afraid to die, looking forward to that bright and fast nearing home where, beyond the gloomy night of death, she would be free from her blindness, sickness, and suffering. I think it was the evening before her death that she walked to the stove, lay down on a little pallet, and while her sister played, sang "The Church in the Wildwood" and "Nearer My God to Thee".

Brother Van Vactor was sent for, to preach the funeral discourse, as she had requested, but he could not come. A Baptist Minister, Mr. Rush, conducted the services, Sunday Jan. the 16th.

Carrie is survived by her father and mother, four brothers, Harry, William, Leroy, and Frederick, all of Pierceton; and four sisters, Mrs. Leona Johnson and Mrs. Jessie Hull of Wolf Lake, Ind., Mrs. Milly Wolfe and Miss Olive Craig of Pierceton.

Mary A. Hunt was born Feb. 3. 1855, at Winton, Benton Co., Ia., died Feb. 21, 1919, aged 64 years, and 18 days.

She was married to Philip M. King Aug. 20, 1889. To this union was born eight children, four sons and four daughters. Ethelbert, Myrtle, Basil and Adelbert preceded her to the grave. The husband died Aug. 20th, 1889. The following are left to mourn: Merton A. King, of Palmer, Neb.; Ivena B. Myers, of Hemmingford, Neb., Alta A. and Lilian M. King, of Palmer, Neb.; two brothers and one sister, O. G. Hunt, of Loup City, Neb.; A. C. Hunt, of Arcadia, Neb.; and Mrs. E. C. McMillan, Palmer, Neb.; also six grandchildren.

Sister King with her husband removed to Palmer, Neb., in 1875. Here she was left a widow with four small children. The country was new then, and no one but herself will know the efforts put forth to keep her children together and provide for them. She lived in St. Paul, Neb., for a time, and it was here the writer first met her and taught her the truth. We have not the date, but she united with the church of God more than 25 years ago. If every one whom she has helped over the rough and strong places in life could have been present at her funeral it would have made a goodly sized audience. Her first thought was for the comfort of others and not her own. She valued the truth above every thing else. In every act of life her first thought was, Is it right ?

In her passing her children have lost a most devoted mother, her brothers and sisters one of their best members, the community a good citizen, the church one of the most conscientious and devoted members—a sister in deed, not in name. She helped many to learn and obey the truth, and then afterwards she did all in her power to look after and keep them interested and obedient. She tried in every way to obey her Master's will and follow his example. Her life was the greatest eulogy that could be pronounced.

The funeral took place from the Glenwood Church, and the writer dwelt upon her hope of immortality through Christ and her life which gave assurance of its realization. The choir led by Helen and Frances Zeller lent their voices to hope, love, and consolation; the floral offerings gave testimony to friendship and love that precedeth death. Then she was laid quietly away in her last resting place to await her Master's summons, which she fully believed would not be long. What a joyful meeting it will be to meet those who sleep in Jesus.

CONVERSION

Conversion: In a general sense a turning or change from one state to another, change from one side to another (Webster).

Convert: from con and verto, to turn: to turn from one destination to another (Webster).

In previous articles we have spoken of salvation, what it is and how it is to be obtained. Surely no one will deny that the very first step to be taken to secure this priceless state is conversion. Then a right understanding of this term is absolutely necessary to salvation. I have been told that when one sincerely repented he was converted. Repent: to feel pain, sorrow or regret for something done (Webster). We might feel sorrow for past sins truly and sincerely, but if we only felt this in mind without any act or work following, can we scripturally or in fact be said to be converted ? Consider again the word "convert" to turn from one destination to another. We see action must follow sorrow for sin to accomplish salvation. Now we can understand Peter's word in Acts 3:19: "Repent and be converted," and in Acts 2:38 he shows us what he means by converted: "Repent and be baptized." Paul says to the Thessalonian brethren that when they heard the gospel and believed, they turned from idols to the service of the true and living God (1 Thess. 1:9). And James tells us plainly that faith without works (action) following will profit us nothing (James 2:14,26) "Then they that gladly received the word were baptized" (Acts 2:41). That was conversion in the true sense of the word both etymologically and scripturally. Convert—to change from one state to another.

How is this change made ? In or by the feeling only ? Let inspiration and not man-made theories be our guide. In Ephesians 2:12 we find some whom Paul says were at one time aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world. This is the state of all unconverted persons. In the next verse Paul tells them that they had gotten out of that terrible state and were in Christ Jesus. How was this change made ? How did they get into Christ Jesus ? By feeling sorry they had sinned and desiring to be cleansed and serve God ? This state of mind must be reached and if it is not, no subsequent act can bring a new relation, neither will this state of feeling without action convert a person in the Bible use of the word. Faith and works; belief and action are inseparable to conversion.

Listen again to the words of our Lord: "He that believeth (the gospel) and is baptized shall be saved." "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." "In the greek conversion is always in the active voice. Conversion is a human effort. We are active, not passive in conversion. We are converted by using our eyes, ears and understanding (Acts 28:27). A man becomes a sinner when he errs from the truth. He is converted when he returns to the truth by obedience (James 5:19,20). The law (doctrine, margin) of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul (Psalm 19:7)"—R. G. Huggins.

From all the Scriptures quoted we see a man is converted or changed from one destination to another by hearing the word of truth, styled by Jesus the gospel; then acting or obeying in baptism. Thus he is brought into Christ Jesus and made an heir of all the promises of God to Israel (Gal. 3:29). By hearing, believing, and obeying the word they have turned from the destiny of the sinner which is eternal death, to the destiny of the righteous, which is eternal life at the appearing of the Lord (Col. 3:3,4). They have been converted; and if they continue faithful to the end, will receive that eternal life which is promised to the faithful ones (Hebrews 3:14). The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin (1 John 1:7).

In the type we find the blood of cleansing placed or sprinkled upon the person or thing to be cleansed (Ex. 24:8; Lev. 16:14). Jesus being the antitypical Lamb of the sin offering (1 Pet. 1:19), how is his blood applied to us? In other words, how does his death make us free from sin? Once again we quote from our Lord: "Preach the gospel. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." How does this bring Christ's blood to us as a cleansing fountain? See Romans 6:2,3. In a figure we have died with Jesus; we have been buried with him, and we have risen with him to a new life. Before we entered into this death, burial, and resurrection we were in Adam. We were strangers to the covenant of promise. We were aliens to the commonwealth of Israel. We were without hope and without God. Now all that old relation has been left behind. We are related to Christ. We are members of the commonwealth of Israel. We have a hope that is sure and steadfast. We are children of God. This is what Paul calls "made nigh by the blood of Christ" (Eph. 2:13).

Now we ask once more the question, Does this step absolutely insure eternal life? Let inspiration answer. See 1 Tim. 4:16. "Take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrine; continue in them, for in doing this thou shalt save thyself." We see that by taking heed to ourself, bringing forth the fruits of the spirit, and continuing in the doctrine to the end, we shall be saved when he who is our life shall appear. Otherwise we will be cut off from life (Hebrews 3:12,13,14; 1:1-11). How beautiful, how logical, how satisfying to the sin-sick one is this way of salvation given to us in God's word! What a firm and unchanging foundation upon which to stand as compared with the vague unreal, sandy foundation of merely feeling you are saved, and therefore you are saved. What a libel upon God's word that if you once feel this you are saved eternally and cannot be lost! Truly his word is a light unto our path, and makes wise unto life.

No. 3.

To be sure that we are correct in teaching that a two-horned beast is representative of a two-powered nation we will quote from Daniel: "Behold, there stood before the river a ram which had two horns: and the two horns were high; but one was higher than the other, and the higher came up last" (Dan. 8:3). "The ram which thou sawest are the kings of Media and Persia." Thus a two-horned beast represented a kingdom composed of two states; and just such was our papal kingdom. The horns on a lamb are small, and of equal size. and nothing is said of one growing larger than the other; but in the Medo-Persian empire one horn was much larger than the other, and is proof that one power became the chief ruling power. Now we read, "And he spake as a dragon." Did this Papal kingdom so speak ? "The rites and institutions by which the Greeks, Romans and other nations had formerly testified their religious veneration for fictitious deities, were now adopted, with some slight alterations, by Christian bishops, and employed in the service of the true God. They imagined that the nations would receive Christianity with more facility, when they saw the rites and ceremonies to which they were accustomed, adopted in the Church, and the same worship paid to Christ and his martyrs which they had formerly offered to their idol deities. Hence it happened, that, in these times, the religion of the Greeks and Romans differed very little in its external appearance from that of the Christians. They had both a most pompous and splendid ritual. Gorgeous robes, miters, tiaras, wax-tapers, crossiers, processions, lustrations, images, gold and silver vases, and many such circumstances of pageantry were equally to be seen in the heathen temples, and Christian churches" (Mosheim, Vol. 1, p. 192).

"Rome deifies her heroes; the papacy canonized her saints, the ghosts of the departed were the Gods of the heathen; and the papists supplicate the dead. The pagans burned incense to their gods; the papists burn incense in their religious ceremonies. The ancient heathen sprinkled themselves with holy water; the papists use the same material in a similar manner" (Bliss on the Revelation).

Lactantius says: "The pagans light up candles to God as if he lived in the dark; and do they not pass as mad men who offer lamps to the author, and giver of light ?" "This custom is imitated by the papists in the use of wax candles on their altars" (W. E. Brown). "The old Roman pantheon, which was dedicated by Agrippa to Jove and all the gods, was rededicated by pope Boniface 4th to the blessed Virgin and all the saints." "The ancient statue of Jupiter stands now as the statue of St. Peter." "The Pagans have their vestal virgins: the papists have their nuns" (Bliss, p 190).

Dr. Middleton, who visited Rome in 1720 says: "Nothing, I found, concurred so much with my original intention of conversing with the ancients; or so helped my imagination, to find myself wandering about in old heathen Rome, as to observe and attend to their religious worship; all whose ceremonies appear plainly to have been copied from the rituals of primitive paganism" (Dowling, p. 114).

Thus we see that the papal kingdom aped the Dragon or paganism in all things. "And he causeth the earth and them that dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed." The earth as here used can only be the earth out of which the two horned beast arose, and into which the dragon was cast, and which helped the woman (true church) in her flight from the face of the dragon. It was the Christian Roman empire; for that helped the woman escape the Pagan persecutions, and swallowed up the waters—peoples, multitudes, nations and tongues--the dragon cast out of his mouth that he might cause her to be carried away. The word "worship" used here means to do homage, or obey the mandates of another, and is exactly what the papal kingdom caused the dwellers of the earth to do. "Upon the ruins of the ancient Roman empire there arose gradually, a new empire, which soon became all the more powerful, as it claimed control over the souls of men as well as their bodies, and extended its dominion beyond this life into eternity. Rome became, after a short interregnum, once more the seat of the 'eternal city.' They claimed and gradually obtained superior powers, presided at great councils, and enforced obedience to their decrees. The bishops of Rome not only inherited the prestige of the former capital of the world, but skillfully enhanced it by claiming superior spiritual authority as successor to St. Peter, whom they presumed was the first bishop of Rome" (Johnson's Cyclopaedia).

This quotation shows that the decrees of the pope were enforced; and now if we can find that he caused men to bow to the leopard beast we will have proven that he caused them to do homage unto him. Pope Innocent 3 said: "As God has placed two great luminaries in the firmament, the one to rule the day, and the other to give light by night, so he has established two grand powers, the pontificial and the royal; and as the moon receives her light from the sun, so doth royalty borrow its splendor from the papal authority" (Koch's History, p.41). Says Gibbons: "Europe received her religious opinions from the oracle of the vatican" (Decline and Fall, vol. 4, p. 512). At the council of Toledo it was decreed: "We the Holy Council promulgate the sentence pleasing to God, that whosoever hereafter shall succeed to the kingdom shall not mount the throne till he has sworn, among other things, to permit no man to live in his kingdom who is not a Catholic. And if after he has taken the reins of government, he shall violate this, let him be anathema maranatha in the sight of the eternal God, and become fuel for the eternal fire" (Caranza on Fifth Council Tol., p. 404) Pages of quotations to the same effect might be given: but this proves our point; and that is sufficient. The popes required that the kings be Catholic, and all that were subject to them be killed if they rejected that faith Those who honored the pope as the great light must honor the King as the lesser light according to his dictates: and thus we see that he causeth all to worship the first beast, or Pagan Rome. But we failed to quote the first part of the verse under consideration, and will now give it as a clincher to the point we have made: "And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him," Gr. enopion auto, i. e., "in his presence," or in his sight, according to all translations except the Common Version. This proves that both beasts exist at the same time. The fact that the first or leopard beast is an object of worship, also proves the same point.

ACCURSE

To devote to misery or destruction.

Who is accursed? He that is hanged is accursed of God (Deut. 21:23). And the city shall be accursed even it, and all that are therein, to the Lord (Josh. 6:17, 18; 7:12, 13). The sinner being an hundred years old shall be accursed (Isa. 65:20). No man speaking by the spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed: and no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 12:3). Paul declares that whoever preaches any other gospel than the gospel he preached, let him be accursed (Gal. 1:8, 9). Now if we can find there is any by inspiration of God" (2 Tim. 3:16; 2 Pet. 1:20). Did accursed. Did Paul preach that the Bible was not inspired? No. Hear him: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God (2 Tim. 3:16; 2 Pet. 1:20). Did he preach Christ personally existed before he was born of the virgin Mary; that Joseph was the father of Christ; that the Holy Spirit is a person; that man has an immortal soul; that the righteous go to heaven when they die; that the wicked go to hell when they die, and are tormented with fire forever; that the devil is an immortal being; that the kingdom of God is the church; that Christ will not come till the close of the thousand years; that the law of Moses is the gospel; that sprinkling is Scriptural baptism; that a knowledge of Paul's gospel is not necessary to make immersion a valid and scriptural baptism; that faith alone, without works, will save; that whatever you believe, if you are sincere in it will save you; that whoever has learned part of the gospel, and dies before being baptized, will have another chance in the coming age, known as the "Fair Chance or Larger Hope" theory; that every one who has died will be raised to life to be judged ? No! No! Paul never preached any of these modern ideas, they are the inventions of man, and conform to the doctrine taught in the garden of Eden, as recorded in Gen. 3:4. Christ said, "In vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men" (Matt. 15:8, 9; 1 Tim. 1:3, 4; Titus 1:13, 14). So after investigating Paul's gospel and finding no such doctrines taught of him, we conclude that the teachers and believers of it also will be accursed. If they have any hope in any of thse popular doctrines it is a false hope according to Paul, and he is our authority.

There is no promise of anyone being saved by believing a part of the gospel, as taught by Paul, and adding to it something else. "Why will ye die, O house of Israel ? For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God. Wherefore turn yourselves and live ye" (Ezek. 18: 31; 32; 33:11). "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord" (Rev. 14:13). There is none that die in the Lord outside of Paul's gospel.

Then we'll strive to serve our Savior,
Walk along the narrow way;
It will lead us to the kingdom,
Which will come on earth to stay.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

By S. Roxana Wince

Everything is, in the word of God, made to depend upon a name. If we are to be "heirs of the grace of life," we must bear a name that will give us heirship to that grace. If we are to share with Christ in the coming kingdom, we must bear the same name that he bears, and that name must have been legally acquired.

To call ourselves "Christs," or Christ's ones." without going through the God-given formula that gives us the right to so call ourselves, is a vain and foolish thing to do. We can "put on Christ" or the Christ-name, only by being "baptized into Christ." For so God explicitly says in the Galatian letter.

What's in a name ? Adoption into the family of the Most High, the removal of condemnation, the remission of sin, equality with the angels, the regaining of the dominion lost by Adam, the filling of a position higher than that occupied by any earthly potentate, an eternity of bliss and glory.

And what a privilege is given to the Christian to be fellow-helpers with God in saving men, to be able to say truly,

Christ's spotless robe of righteousness,
It covers me! It covers me!
Poor me.

I beg you take that snowy dress,
That it for you a cover be,
A cover be!

Poor sinner! lost, and hopeless one,
Misled and wrecked and all undone,
All undone.

No way to bridge the flood of death,
No power to breathe elysian breath,
Elysian breath.

What's in a name ? Salvation to the ages of eternity—salvation for ourselves, and the power to rescue and save others.

Let us keep these things ever before us, and let us also remember that "The knowledge of the name of God is held by the inspired writers to be a matter of the highest importance toward the possssion of trust in him, and the consequent result of the enjoyment of peace and security."

"Jehovah our righteousness"--that is the true name of the Holy One of Israel. In his name we trust, because, "power belongeth unto him';" power in and through which we may overcome and so help others to trust and to overcome.

Answers to puzzle in issue of March 4:

The passage was written by the apostle Peter to the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia.

Baptism is a rite, ceremony, or ordinance, in which the applicant is buried under water and immediately lifted therefrom, symbolizing a burial and a resurrection.

The subject of the preceding verse is the salvation of Noah and his family from death by flood, by means of the ark, through God's grace and Noah's faith.

"Resurrection" means a "rising from death to life."

The passage can be found in 1 Pet. 3:21.

Prepare ye the way of the Lord	Isa. 40:3
So shall the King greatly desire thy beauty	Psa. 45:11
The Lord is not slack concerning his promises	2 Pet. 3:9
Freely ye have received, freely give	Matt. 10:8
It is more blessed to give than to receive	Acts 20:35
The Lord, he it is that doth go before thee	Deut. 31:8
Speak unto Israel that they go forward	Exod. 14:15

Afflictions

"For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory: while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal."

The Psalmist who had a splendid knowledge of human nature, makes the confession: "Before I was afflicted I went astray, but now I observe thy word." In this confession we have an interesting bit of autobiography. The Psalmist practically admits that when everything was going well with him and he was experiencing abounding prosperity, he did not seek that help from Jehovah which he ought to have done.

Affliction changed the whole aspect of things, however, and after he had been tried, as gold is tried by fire, he prayed that God would teach him his statutes. He found that the law of Jehovah was better to him than "thousands of gold and silver." This has been the experience of men and women from the beginning of the ages

Truth and Toil

By truth and toil united,
We strive with loyal heart,
To gain life's deepest blessing
And learn life's noblest part.
For truth is life's great secret,
Which we, through toil, may share,
And by that truth made wise and free
To be all true shall dare.

Truth cometh not unsought for;
The spirit's purest light
Must burn undimmed and clearly,
To guide our minds aright.
So standing here together
Triumphant thanks we give,
That here our spirit's flame is fired
By truth and toil to live. —A. W. A.

All Things Are Thine And Thou Art God's

It is pretty hard to keep anything in this world just for yourself, particularly when there is no reason why you should. An Indian rajah had a tree on his estate on which grew a mango of marvelous delicacy. In order to keep the delicious fruit to himself he built a twelve foot wall around the tree and had soldiers guard it night and day. But one day a wind storm came along, and one of the twigs which was broken off was blown over the wall. A pedestrian walking along, realizing that the twig belonged to the precious tree, took it home, put it in a piece of bamboo cane with moistened cotton at each end, and mailed the whole to a friend in Florida who had an orange grove. When the twig reached Florida only one little bud, an "eye" about the size of a small pearl, was alive, and this the grove owner put in sand and nursed until it began to sprout. That was some years age. The little bud is now a tree, and last summer it bore its first fruit of forty mangoes. One of the mangoes was sent to me, and it was the most delicious specimen of this aristocratic member of all the fruit kingdom which I ever ate. The grove owner will now of course, propagate the fruit, so that it will not be long before there will be in the United States a grove of mango trees of the same heavenly fruit, of which in all India there is but one tree.—L H. "Just as good" seldom is "good" and never "just."

None of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself (Rom 14:7).

Every man lives for others as well as himself; and, while the tenor of his life should be that of cheerful industry in his calling, he should keep open every avenue to compassion and liberality. The business of such a man is habitual, and includes no unreasonable cares; his benevolence is uniform, and finds opportunities for exercise. He lives reputably, and is believed by his contemporaries. In this way he secures a fair share of happiness.

The daily admiration given to whatever is expensive and rare, the worship paid to success as such, the deference shown to men who are even known to have risen to place and power by dishonorable means, afford continual nourishment to that keen desire for wealth which is the source of much meanness and knavery.

Building

To Auntie Wince

There are words that are eternal,
  That shall never fade away.
If we build them in our life work
  It will never know decay.
For the spirit is the builder
  And he has the needed skill:
He will build with gold and silver
  If we let him have his will.
If we find but hay and stubble
  Are all that we have today,
When the fire shall try our life work
  It will all be burned away.
We had better clear the rubbish
  From off the foundation stone.
And start with the Master-builder
  Never try to build alone.
It cannot but bring us sorrow
  That work of the past is gone,
But joy we may, to yet have time
  For more to be built upon.
And that, though late, we shall find
  We have builded with such care
We shall have our reward at last
  When we meet our Lord in the air.

The Holy Spirit and Its Gifts

No. 2.

5. Our Guide into all Truth.

"Howbeit, when he the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself: but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come" (John 16:13).

With error and corruption in everything founded or handled by man, there can never come unity, or harmony, or peace, to the church until every truth lover looks directly to the fountain head, Christ, himself, for infallible guidance. "But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man (pope or priest or preacher) teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, abide in him" (1 John 2:27).

6. The Anointer of the Christ Body.

"And you have an anointing from the Holy One: you all know it" (Diaglott, 1 John 2:20). "How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth, with the Holy Spirit and with power, who went about doing good; and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with him" (Acts 10:38).

Since the same anointing is promised the whole Christ body, the same results should follow—Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today, and forever (Heb. 13:8). To be "in Christ" means to be in the Anointed. If not anointed we are not in him.

7. Our Source of Power.

"But ye shall receive power after the Holy Spirit is come upon you" (Acts 1:8; 2:1-5). "The same Holy Spirit is promised to all whom God calls by the gospel to obedience. "The Holy Spirit which God hath given to them that obey him" (Acts 2:39; 5:32).

8. God's Seal of True Disciples.

"In whom ye trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise" (Eph. 1:13).

"Now he which stablisheth us with you in Christ, and hath anointed us is God: who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts" (2 Cor. 1:21,22).

"And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption" (Eph. 4:30).

"Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his" (2 Tim. 2:19).

What force has a legal paper wthout an official seal? The meaning of Christ is antonted and only those anointed and sealed are in the Christ body or on this sure foundation. Let us wrestle with God in prayer until we are blessed with his seal and anointing. May God impress its tremendous importance upon the reader! We stand on the dead line this moment.

9. The Revealer of the Mind of God.

"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." "The things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. But we have the mind of Christ" (1 Cor. 2). The letter of the Bible may be understood by the natural man, but not the deep things of the spirit. without revelation to the mind, from the Spirit of God (1 Cor. 2:14).

10. Our Intercessor.

"Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with aspirations which cannot be uttered. And he that searcheth the hearts, knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit" (Rom. 8:26,27). This is the great universal medium, through which we are always in touch with Christ and God; but living in one known sin severs this connection (Gen. 3:24; Heb. 10:26,27).

11. The Sanctifier.

"That the offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being sanctified by the Holy Spirit" (Rom. 15:16). "But we are bound to give thanks always to God for you, brethren beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation, through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth" (2 Thess. 2:13).

No one is sanctified in error or in sin. "Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not, he that committeth sin is of the devil. In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil" (1 John 3). Let the word of God settle it as to whose children we are.

"Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near." Forsake sin and unrighteous thoughts, and turn unto the Lord for pardon and cleansing (Isa. 55). "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right Spirit within me" (Psa. 51).

12. Our Spokesman under Severe Trial.

"Ye shall be brought before kings and rulers for my name's sake. But when they shall deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak: for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak. For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you" (Matt. 10:18,19). If we were in perfect harmony with God this would still be for us.

13. Convictor of Sin for the World.

"And when he (the Comforter) is come, he will convict the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment" (John 16:7-13). It was the Holy Spirit that gave the preaching of Peter such convicting power on Pentecost that 3000 souls were added to the church (Acts 2). They were convinced of sin, because that by unbelief they had rejected and crucified Jesus: and of his righteousness, because the outpouring of the Holy Spirit proved his acceptance with the Father: and of judgment to fall on the Jews, because they were responsible for the death of their Messiah, and had invited his blood upon themselves and on their children. And the Holy Spirit still accompanies the gospel to convict the world of sin, in contrast with the righteousness of Christ, and of judgment to come, on the guilty rejectors of God's mercy and redeeming love. No true conviction of sin, or genuine repentence, is ever accomplished by preaching the word where the Spirit of God is not present as the convicting and drawing power. "No man can come to me except the Father which hath sent me draw him. It is written in the prophets, And they shall all be taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me" (John 6:44,45). The world must hear, learn, be taught and be drawn by God to the Son, Not one of these items can be omitted in a true conversion.

14. The Inner Man

In 2 Cor. 4, Paul refers to his persecutions as the death of his fleshly body for Jesus' sake, that the life of Christ might be manifest in his mortal flesh; and that while his body, or outward man, was perishing daily, his inward man,the new man, new heart, new spirit, and mind was being renewed day by day, in holiness, faith, and spiritual power.

In Ephes. 3: 16,17 Paul prays that the believers may all be strengthened with might by the Spirit of Christ in the inner man, the mind, the heart, or affections; that Christ might dwell in their hearts by faith, so they might be rooted and grounded in love.

In Pet. 3: 4, this meek and quiet spirit of Christ within is called "the hidden man of the heart." and "incorruptible;" and in Col. 1: 27, the mystery of God among the Gentiles is Christ dwelling within, as the hope of glory; and in Gal. 4: 19 Paul speaks of travailing in birth for his children in the gospel, until Christ be formed in them. Since the mind heart and spirit of the new man is said to be the mind, heart and spirit of Christ: therefore no heathen, or wicked person or infant could have an inner man, unless we might personify the spirit of the devil as an inner man. Adam Clark's commentary on these texts is so good that I must give a few extracts: "God, in the beginning, formed man to be his temple: and while in a state of purity he inhabited this temple: when the temple became defiled, God left it. In the order of his eternal mercy, Christ the Repairer of the breach, comes to purify the temple, that it may again become a fit habitation for the blessed God. The man's heart, which is not God's house, must be a hold of every foul and unclean spirit: as satan and his angels will endeavor to fill what God does not."

Knowledge, love, peace and holiness, are the food of the inward man, or rather Christ Jesus, the true bread from heaven; and the soul must, by daily study of the word, and by daily prayer for the spirit, be "renewed day by day," or the spiritual nature will die; even as the natural man will die if not fed. The Holy Spirit is the only fountain of spiritual energy that can supply the spiritual strength necessary for spiritual work and conflict.

"Men may dispute as they please about Christian perfection; but without it no soul shall ever see God. He who is not saved from all sin here, cannot, to his joy, see God hereafter."

15. The Fountain of Divine Love.

"God is love, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and he in him" (John 4:16).

Love is a fruit of the Holy Spirit. Love endureth all things; is not easily provoked; thinketh no evil; seeketh not for self; covereth a multitude of sins; vaunteth not itself; envieth not; rejoiceth not in iniquity; rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things; hopeth all things; is the bond of perfectness; never faileth; and is the greatest thing in the universe. God is love (1 Cor. 13).

16. The Fruit of the Spirit

In Gal. 5 Paul contrasts the fruit of the Holy Spirit in the new man, with the works of the flesh in the old, carnal man. As a tree is known by its fruit, so the Christian will be known by his fruit, or his lack of Christianity by the works of the flesh. The bad seed produces the bad tree, bearing the bad fruit: and the good seed produces the good tree, bearing the good fruit. The one is the tree of the flesh; the other the tree of the Spirit (Adam Clark). Paul gives nine varieties of fruit as follows:

1. Love. The very soul and spirit of true religion.
2. Joy. The Christian should rejoice in the Lord always, and count it all joy when he is subjected to trial, to develop in him fortitude and firmness of character.
3. Peace. Calm quiet, that comes from a sense of pardon, and the Spirit of Christ within.
4. Longsuffering. Patience under provocation. To suffer long and kindly under hateful treatment.
5. Gentleness. A very rare characteristic under harsh opposition or trial. "A soft answer turneth away wrath; but grievous words stir up anger."
6. Goodness. Readiness to do good.
7. Faith or Fidelity. Trustfulness and carefulness in transacting business of others. Faithfulness in our stewardship is also implied in the word.
8. Meekness. Mildness; indulgent toward the erring; placid amidst turmoil.
9. Temperance. Moderation and self control of all appetites and passions. The Vulgate, Itali, and some ancient Mss add a tenth fruit, or manifestation of the Spirit; chastity. Against these there can be no law, because they fulfil the design of all law (Adam Clark).

Can we wonder that the above glorious fruit is so lacking among professing Christians when most of them deny the existence on earth of the tree that bears this fruit?

Athenagoras, who wrote A. D. 177, says: "The Holy Spirit himself also, which operates in the prophets, we assert to be the effluence from God, flowing from him, and returning to him, like a beam of the sun."

The early church fathers all testify to the personal presence of the Holy Spirit. Even the Bible itself is a dead letter without the Spirit. "The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life" (2 Cor. 3). "He therefore that despiseth, despiseth not man, but God, who hath also given unto us his Holy Spirit" (1 Thess. 4: 8).

The gospel message is truly God's power to save the believer, but the crowning work of the gospel message for man in this life, to prepare him for eternal life, is the work of the Holy Spirit now in its transforming and sanctifying work in life of the believer. The preacher who leaves out this, leaves out all the life of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away" (2 Tim. 3).

The pardon of past sin is not the chief joy in "the gospel of the grace of God" (Acts 20: 24). The sweetest promise of the good news is that "the Comforter will abide with us for ever," to save us from the power of sin now, and to immortalize us at the resurrection morn (John 14: 16; Rom. 8: 11; 1 Cor. 15).

It was the Holy Spirit that changed Saul to Paul; Jacob to Israel, a prevailer with God; and vacillating Peter to Cephas, a stone; conveying a new power in all ages. His presence is the presence of God. His departure is the departure of God. "And the spirit of the Lord shall come upon thee; and thou shalt prophecy, and shalt be changed into another man." "And Saul was afraid of David, because the Spirit of the Lord was with him, and was departed from Saul." "And Saul said: The Lord hath departed from me" (1 Sam. 10:6; 16:14; 28:15; 18:12).

Joshua was "full of the spirit of wisdom," and Jesus had "the spirit of wisdom, of understanding, of might and of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord," so that he knew the hearts of all men (Isa. 11). The redemption of the earth will not come by might of human armies, or by physical power, "but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." "Until the spirit be poured out from on high then judgment shall dwell in the wilderness, and righteousness in the fruitful field; and the work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever" (Isa. 32).

Every reader with a spiritual mind will see that the above sixteen glorious offices of the Holy Spirit are still for all who seek the Lord with the whole heart, and who meet all the conditions. Praise the Lord that it is still true that the Lord is still looking over the earth to find those whom he can use in the ages to come as teachers and rulers in the earth (Rev. 5:9,10). "For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show himself strong in behalf of them whose hearts are perfect toward him." (2 Chron. 16:9).

COMING JUDGMENT.

The writer used to think that all evil, sickness, pain, misery, and trouble were directly caused by, and sometimes through the direct instrumentality of "a fallen angel," generally designated by the nominal Christian world, "The Devil." God in his mercy and goodness through the operation of the Spirit of the truth, has removed these strong delusions (2 Thess. 2:10-12) from his mind. Now he is rejoicing not in "the spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." 2 Tim 1:7; Isa. 45:7 and Amos 3:6, 7, prove conclusively who is responsible for the evils and judgments befalling the nation.

We wonder how many of the brethren thoughtfully consider Psa. 75:6-8: "For promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south: but God is the judge: he putteth down one and setteth up another for in the hand of the Lord there is a cup, and the wine is red; it is full of mixture, and he poureth out of the same; but the dregs thereof, all the wicked of the earth shall wring them out and drink them." If we read Isa. 51:16-23; Jer. 25:15-38; Rev. 14:6-12, some light will be shown on what we are now stepping upon, the threshold. Paul in 1 Cor. 2:1-16 reasons that it is only the spiritual mind, or the mind of the spirit, that can comprehend God's dealings with humanity. His exhortation is "comparing spiritual things with spiritual." In Isa. 26:21; 27:1, 2 the prophet speaks of "that day." We ask humbly (in the spirit of meekness and the desire to learn from the Lord), What day ? Isaiah answers, in the day when "the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity."

Daniel says that in "that day," "there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time" (Dan. 12:1). Malachi declares, "Behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble."(Mal. 4:1). Malachi is searching our hearts today; he asks: "Who may abide the day of his coming? And who shall stand when he appeareth? For he is like a refiner's fire and like fuller's soap" (Mal. 3:2). Just now the great nominal system known as Christendom both Protestant and Catholic, are united into a confederation. The nations through their political leaders are doing likewise. Matt. 13:30 and Matt. 13:40-42 is being fulfilled today right before our eyes. God's messengers are "binding them into bundles." The political heavens as a scroll is rolling together. The various Protestant bodies, secret organizations, labor unions etc., are all bundles being formed, ready to be cast into the great furnace of "the great and terrible day of God Almighty."

The Churches are going to work miracles through prohibition. Indeed! Do they realize that in God's sight they are all drunkards? Listen, "Woe to the crown of pride, to the drunkards of Ephraim, whose glorious beauty is a fading flower, which are on the head of the fat valleys of them that are overcome with wine. Behold the Lord hath a mighy and strong one which as a tempest of hail and a destroying storm, as a flood of mighty waters overflowing, shall cast down to the earth with the hand. The crown of pride, the drunkards of Ephraim, shall be trodden under feet" (Isa. 28:1-3). Paul warns us to compare spiritual with spiritual. Who is the "crown of pride, the drunkards of Ephraim?" Surely this is symbolic. Who does the name Ephraim stand for? Isa. 26:4 gives us the key. It is that "lofty city;" "that great city Babylon" (Rev. 16:19; 17:5; 18:2). Today their great boast is, "We are the Kingdom of Christ." Under the type Ephraim was fruitful. In the antitype, Ephraim the great world of Christendom. claims to be fruitful. Yes she is fruitful in worldly prosperity, wealth and power, but God calls it not the fruit of the Spirit but "hasty fruit," sour and bitter, like that forced before the summer (Isa. 28:4).

Today in Russia, Germany, Britain, and in our own United States, her false doctrines and authority that have made the nations drunk are boldly called into question. Her "crown of beauty," authority, her fat valleys, her virtual and vain worships, are all withering like a fading flower. Jesus, "The mighty and strong one," is at the helm. The sunlight is beginning to break up and dispel the darkness of the past six thousand years. "The knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth as the waters cover the sea." But to preceed this, there must be as in nature, first, "a tempest of hail" "and a destroying storm." Today in clarion tones the trumpet is sounding, "Come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues."

Beloved brethren, how is the Church of God standing today? "Babylon (Ephraim) has become the hold of every foul spirit and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird." In type Nebuchadnezzar saw this (Dan. 4:10-12). Are we holding to her false doctrines and practices ? Are we lodging in her branches? If so, in God's sight we are unclean and hateful birds. Are we drinking of her intoxicating cups of pleasure and delusion? If we find our hearts are worldly and long for the cup that Babylon holds in her hand, "then eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die."

How forceful the language of the prophet is: "But they also have erred through wine, and strong drink, they are swallowed up of wine, they are out of the way through strong drink, they err in visons, they stumble in judgment." Notice the harmony with the symbolic character of the prophecy referring to the coming of judgment. The wine and strong drink as in the use of strong liquor, is deceptive and intoxicating in its effects. How deceptive and intoxicating are the love of the world, and of the world's approval and emoluments. Under its influence its devotees "err in vision and stumble in judgment." "For all tables are full of vomit and filthiness so that there is no place clean."

When we gather around "the Lord's table," can we realize that it is "the table of the Lord" prepared for us and furnished in the presence of mine enemies? Or are we making it a table of filthiness by fellowshipping those possessing and following the spirit of the world? Listen, "The Lord hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God. Depart ye, depart ye, go ye out from thence, touch no unclean thing; go ye out of the midst of her; be ye clean, that bear the vessels of the Lord" (Isa. 52:10, 11).

Beloved, the Lord's judgments are upon us, we must separate ourselves from the worldly and indifferent, we must cleave unto the Lord, we shall suffer from those who profess the name of the Lord Jesus, but whose lives are bringing reproach upon his holy name. God help us and make us as Paul exhorts us, "Be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity" (1 Tim. 4:12). Let this be my prayer.

Our capacity for loving may be safely gauged by our ability to forgive.

THOSE BEASTS AGAIN.

No. 4.

In exercising the power of the first beast the two horned beast did the things of the leopard, and made himself like the leopard or Christian Roman empire. "He doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on earth in the sight of men" (ver. 13). This verse, if taken literally, was fulfilled in the trick the papists had of secreting some one in the loft of certain buildings, and causing lighted tow to fall down into the building at the prayer of the priest, as though it actually came from the literal heavens. That was their claim, and history attests that many believed that the fire did actually come down from heaven, hence were deceived by the trick. But if the heaven and earth here mentioned are the heaven out of which the dragon was cast, then it was the Roman political power to destroy and consume saints at the stake. We will see later that the two horned beast was not the persecutor, but the cause of persecution, and hence he caused the Roman heavens to bring fire down upon their earth in their persecution of saints or those he termed "heretics." Gibbons says: "The credulity or prudence of Gregory was always disposed to confirm the truths of religion by ghost miracles and resurrections, and posterity has paid to his memory the same tribute which he granted to the virtues of his, or the preceding generations" (Vol. 4, p. 422).

It would be useless to produce the proof of the many miracles the Catholic Church have claimed to produce, and as an illustration we will only mention two more. It is claimed that there has been wood enough produced from the cross on which Jesus was suspended to load several cars; and the Christ flesh is produced from bread and eaten by Romanists every Sunday in the year. "And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast" (ver. 14). The word semeia, rendered "wonders" (ver. 13) and miracles (ver. 14) means signs. We do not think it possible for the popes or their dupes to work actual miracles. "Saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by the sword and did live" (ver. 14, latter part). The image was to be like the leopard beast, or the Roman Empire after she had become Christian, and such was the two horned empire. If the reader will turn to any reliable history he will find that in the days of Constantine the Roman emperor was not only head of the kingdom, but also head of the church, and this continued until the days of the two horned beast, and from that time onward the popish emperor of the states of the church was also head of the church. "In consequence of this possessions of the crown were by degrees reduced to nothing, and the authority of the emperors declined with the diminuation of their wealth. The bishops, at first devoted to the emperors, both from necessity and gratitude, no sooner perceived their own strength, than they were tempted to make use of it, and to join the secular princes, in order to sap the Imperial authority, as well as to consolidate their own power. To these several causes of the downfall of the empire must be added the new power of the pontiffs, the origin of which is ascribed to pope Gregory 7th. Koch's Hist. Europe p. 31. Again, "While occupied with the means of extending his power over the clergy, Gregory did not let slip any opportunity of making encroachments on the authority of princes and sovereigns which he represented as subordinate to that of the Church and the pope. As supreme head of the Church he claimed a right of inspecting over all kings and governments. He presumed to listen to the complaints of subjects against their princes, and claimed the right of being a judge or arbiter between them. In this capacity he acted toward Henry 4th of Germany, who had enjoyed the rights of sovereignity over Rome and the pope." Koch, p. 38. The Henry here spoken of was caused to wait in the cold three days as a penance for violating the new law the pope had made before he could get to confess to him. Before this time Emperor's called councils, but now the pope takes that authority, and instead of popes being nominated and elected by the emperor he must now be elected by cardinals of the church. Hence, we can see how the new empire was an image of the old. "And he had power to give life unto the image of the (leopard) beast, that it should both speak," Brown says, "The papacy, had now arrogated to itself such a power, that it could thoroughly vitalize its ideal vicariate of God on earth." He became the head and centre, body and circumference of all ecclesiastical and national life speaking for God, and commanding the world! pp. 151, 152. Could prophecy be more exactly fulfilled ? "And he causeth that as many as would not worship the beast should be killed." The two horned image "causeth to be killed." Bellarmine, a Catholic writer says, "The ecclesiastical officials punished rebelious subjects, by delivering them over to the civil arm; which punished heretics according to the will of the papacy." Com. Apoc. p. 210. Lucius 3d, and Innocent the 3d by formal decrees required them to be seized, condemned, and delivered to the civil magistrates to execute on them the sentence denounced by the canon and civil laws." Lord's Expo. of the Apoc. p. 434. The third canon of the fifth council of Toledo reads, "we, the Holy Council, promulgate this sentence, pleasing to God, that whosoever hereafter shall succeed to the kingdom shall not mount the throne till he has sworn, among other things, to permit no man to live in his kingdom who is not Catholic. And if, after he has taken the reins of government, he shall violate this oath, let him be anathema maranatha in the sight of the eternal God, and become fuel for eternal fire." Caranza, p. 404. How beautifully the prophecy fits every niche, and should it have said he should kill instead of cause to be killed there would have been a misfit, and then we might be looking to the future for the two horned beast; but as it is can we?

Editorial

"The Faith Epitomized" is now ready. All advanced orders have been filled.

The Editor has obtained a clergy certificate, and can now travel on the railroads for one half the usual fare.

We regret to lose Brother Alfred Titman, who has, on account of business necessity, removed to Detroit, Michigan.

We thank Sister W. L. Robbins for a likeness of Brother A. S. Bradley. She requests that his picture appear in The Restitution, but an electrotype made from a snapshot is not a success.

Brother S. Cronkhite writes:

"Will some of the writers of the Restitution please give its readers an exposition of Gen. 27:29, which reads as follows: 'Let people serve thee and nations bow down to thee: be Lord over thy brethren, and let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee.'"

Sister J. A. Garard writes:

"I understand you are very active in the Master's vineyard. It is a help to me to know it. I read in The Restitution of those who donated their services to the building of the printing press house a labor of love to them. How every one who has taken on the name of Jesus should be always ready to do work for the Master. How much easier it would be if it was a labor of love. It helps those who are isolated and where live only a few to know of those who are active in the Lord's service."

Accompanied by Wife and Baby Huggins, we spent last week with "the little flock" at Roll, Indiana. We made our home with Brother and Sister Cantwell Drabenstott, and visited among others of like precious faith. On our way home we stopped over night with Brother and Sister Ernest Drabenstott, and had a short visit with Sister Ettie Fry, at Huntington, Indiana. It was refreshing to find these dear ones awake to righteousness, with a heartfelt interest in the things pertaining to the truth. Mr. and Mrs. Ott. the parents of Sister Drabenstott, although not in the truth, added much to the pleasure of our visit.

Communications

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

Dear Brother Huggins:

We are glad to announce that Brother A. S. Bradley has been with us and held some good meetings. He began meetings at Riviera Saturday evening, Feb. 8, and closed Sunday evening, Feb. 16. He baptized three, then went to Kingsville on Monday and preached until Sunday evening and baptized two. Attendance was very good. Every one semed deeply interested. Brother Bradley is truly a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the words of truth. I believe the seed has been sown in good and honest hearts and will bear fruit. We were with him in both meetings and enjoyed the sermons very much. Each one seemed the best. We expect to have Brother Bradley with us again in the summr, the Lord willing. If any of the brethren come through our part of the country, we would be glad for them to stop with us.

Your brother in the one faith,

W. L. Robbins.

To The Restitution and all the Household of the One Faith:

I am still strong in the faith once delivered to the saints. I am watching the signs of the times. I don't see how things could have been any worse in the days of Noah than they are now. I am looking, waiting, and praying for the coming of our Redeemer, King, and Elder Brother to restore the kingdom to Israel and rule the house of Jacob forever.

The world and the Church are trying to do the work that Christ and his saints are to do in establishing peace and harmony among the nations. When they cry peace, peace, sudden destruction shall come upon them. We will not have peace until Christ comes and reigns in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem and before his ancients gloriously. Then the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ. His kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever (Daniel 2:66) "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Then the kingdom and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens shall be given to the saints of the Most High. They will take the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever and ever. May that time soon come. Then men will beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks, and learn war no more. Nations shall not lift up sword against nation, nor kingdom against kingdom; but every man shall sit under his own fig tree and nothing shall make him afraid; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, and shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. Then we will have peace, and not until then. It looks from the signs of the times that that day is not far away. Brothers and sisters, let us keep our lamps trimmed and burning that when the Bridegroom comes he will not find us sleeping. This is the prayer of one who is watching for him.

Jesse Harrold.

Dear Brother Huggins:

In The Restitution of March 4, 1919, on page 102, there is a letter from a sister which contains the following statements: "Again, there is a lady and her husband in our class who are earnest learners. They were both baptized into the Dunkard Church. At the time Brother——— —— was here he took the lady into the the church under her Dunkard baptism. Brother Anderson preached for us for a year, but after he went to Virginia, we have had no regular preaching."

Now Brother Huggins, when the people read these statements they will think I am the brother who took that lady into the church on her 3 dip baptism. I wish to say I am not guilty of changing the One baptism of the Bible into the three of the Dunkards. I never took any one into the church on an old baptism into some sect. You have no right to print the article with a blank after "Brother," thus leaving the impression that is was I. I ask you or the sister to correct it.

J. H. Anderson.

We gladly give place to Brother Anderson's request for a correction of the matter to which he refers. All who know Brother Anderson will know that he is not the "blank" referred to; and for those who are unfortunately not personally aquainted with him, his reputation for faithfulness prohibits such a supposition. The "blank" brother has since left us, having been disfellowshipped by us in Cleveland where he was baptized, which fact was duly published in the pages of The Restitution. —Editor.

Dear Brother Huggins:

I was glad to read your answer to a sister regarding the Lord's supper. I have often thought of the things asked by this sister, and believe anyone who is a "Priest unto God," has the right and duty to minster in the house of God and unto his household. But how is it, Brother Huggins, when one is absolutely alone, as many diciples are? How can such an one show forth the Lord's death until he come again in this sacrament? I wish if you can you would add a few lines on this.

You know many are baptized and it is often years before they again meet with those of "like precious faith" and, perhaps, never. I am glad the brethren are thinking more of the isolated ones. I do think more personal letters ought to be written, and a column in our beloved paper devoted to exhortation and encouragement for the lone ones in Christ would help us so much. Of course we have the whole paper which does strengthen and build us up continually; but you know a personal word of love and remembrance from those who are more to us than all others out of Christ is such a comfort.

Your Sister in Christ,

Flora A. Wood.

It appears from Matt. 18 that "two or three" are required for the communion service. Whether this means two or three believers is a matter open to discussion. If the promise, "there am I," means that Christ is to be counted, than an individual believer would be one and Christ would be two the number required. As to a special department for the isolated, as Sister Wood says, "the whole paper" is theirs, and especially the department called "Communications." Here is the opportunity to speak a "personal word," and we wonder that communications are so few. If exhorting each other kept pace with the words, "as ye see the day approaching," we would have more communications than we could find room to publish. Will not every subscriber to The Restitution, upon reading this appeal, write us a letter for "Communications"? This one department of the paper is one feature of the work of the truth which the Editor cannot do. The responsibility rests upon the readers, and we pray that they may take a few moments of time as they may be able, and do this necessary and appreciated work. Editor.

BE KIND TO THE AGED.

S. H. Thomas.

It seems to one that the saddest of all human experience is old age. It seems but yesterday to grandpa and grandma when they were full of life and rugged strength, and in full enjoyment of all their faculties, and at the head of every undertaking of the family, and it seemed to them as if it must always remain so; but at fifty years there come whispers of a change; their eyes get dim at times and hearing dull, the step is less elastic than of yore, and when grandpa undertakes to lift a stone that twenty years ago he could lift with ease, he finds with something like a shock that he cannot move it.

At sixty grandpa and grandma are expected to step aside, and let some of the children run the farm or business, and manage the affairs of the family, occasionally perhaps, cousulting with grandpa.

At seventy and onward, grandpa and grandma are feeble and tottering, almost blind, and deaf, they realize but a part of what is going on around them. They are not consulted any more, but the family life with its joys, sorrows, and ambitions, go on without them or their help; and they now begin to feel that dreadful fear that at last they have reached that point in life where they are only in the way, and a burden on the hands of those they love; no pen can picture, no word express the anguish of the dear ones who reach this milestone. They realize that they are dull and old-fashioned; that somehow the world has forged ahead and left them behind. When company comes they feel awkward and out of place; they become supersensitive, and ever looking for yet dreading to see some expression or evidence that they are a burden, and in the way.

This being so, let us who are yet young, and in the enjoyment of the pleasure of health and youth pity and comfort the aged: tell them often that we love them, and would hardly know how to live without them. It is not sufficient to tell them this at long intervals, or on special occasions: speak kind and loving words often. Let each day and hour witness little acts of love and attention to grandpa and grandma.

God will surely reward those who do this in the ages to come, nor do we have to wait that long for our reward. When grandma's willing hands try to do something to help or please us, and we speak in return words of love and appreciation, surely her look of love and pleasure is ample reward. Little words of love and acts of kindness, cost us nothing, and dear old grandma prizes them above pearls or rubies. Why should we withhold them? Why leave unspoken our words of love and appreciation, until she lies cold and unconscious in death, when she so hungers for them now? God knows that we love and honor him, and are truly thankful for those blessings which he from day to day confers upon us, yet he delights to have us tell him so often. If for us to repeat the old, old, story of love and faith often, gives God pleasure, who is so strong; how much it will please dear old grandpa and grandma, who are so weak, tottering and feeble. Then dear ones, let us give it to them often and without measure.

One eloquent way to make grandma feel contented and happy is to allow her to help with some of the light home duties, if she offers to do so. And do not forget to praise her work, and express to her the truth that nobody else could quite fill her place in your home and heart. Repeat these and similar expressions often. Depend upon it, such words will never grow stale to her, for as she grows older and more feeble in mind and body she will treasure them more and more. Let us not, by look, word, or deed cause grandpa or grandma to feel that the time has come when they cannot help any more, but must stand to one side, and keep out of the way, but rather go to them often for counsel and advice and whenever possible do them the honor to follow their advice.

One of the severest heartaches known to man comes to those of us who realize, when too late, that we have not been so kind and considerate as we could have been, as we gaze on the loved features, now so calm and peaceful in death. Oh, how the lost opportunities come up before us, and how keen the anguish we feel, as we remember when too late the kind words and acts we might have given the loved one, but carelessly withheld from them. Dear ones, if you would escape these heartaches be kind and considerate to all, and especially to the aged.

WILSON TO BACK JEWISH NATION

WASHINGTON, March 2.—President Wilson tonight told a delegation from the American Jewish congress that he was persuaded that the allied nations, with fullest concurrence of the American government and people, were agreed that in Palestine should be laid the foundations of a Jewish commonwealth.

The delegation, headed by Judge Julian W. Mack of Chicago, and including Miss Marshall, Dr. Stephen S. Wise and Bernard G. Richards of New York, declared they had found the President sympathetic with the "incontestable principle of the right of the Jewish people everywhere to equality of status."

He reminded them that he previously had expressed personal approval of the declaration of the British government respecting the historic claims of the Jews regarding Palestine.

Britain To Be Trustee

Great Britain would act as trustee of the new commonwealth on behalf of the proposed league of nations, according to the delegates. They said that organization of a Jewish state would include express stipulations that nothing should be done which might prejudice the civil and religious rights of non-Jewish communities in Palestine or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country.

The delegation presented to the President a memorial setting forth the present status of the Jews in eastern European lands and the effect upon them of the organization of new and enlarged states growing out of the war.

Required Guaranties Told

Resolutions adopted by the American Jewish congress in Philadelphia last December also were submitted. They set forth the guaranties required by the Jews to secure their fundamental rights, including civil, political, religious and national equality. Immediate action to assure the Jews of these rights was urged upon the President.

Judge Mack, president of the American Jewish congress, will leave soon for Europe to join other members of the delegation sent by the congress to present Jewish claims to the peace conference.—Selected by Brother D. L. Clem.

HOW THE PAPYRI PROVES THE TRUTH OF THE SCRIPTURES

Mr. Cobden M. Coburn says:

"A term, long ago explained by the papyri, Mahaffy, but recently illustrated by the papyri, which gives a new and important meaning to a Scripture passage is paidagogos, translated "schoolmaster" (Gal. 3:24). This well known individual was not the head master but at best an inferior instructor, often being merely a faithful slave, whose chief duty was to bring his master's sons safely to and from school, guarding them from mischief on the way. When St. Paul said the "law was the pedagog" to bring us to Christ, it was Christ of whom he thought as the true "teacher" the Old Testament law being only the Father's trusty servant to bring the world to him. Multitudes of such suggestions of a more vivid meaning in the original Bible terms might be mentioned, as for example, when we find St. Paul counting up the honors and hopes of his youth and declaring that he counted all these things which he had given up to be "loss" for Christ (Phil. 3:8). How it strengthens this expression when we find that a papyrus uses this same word (zemia) for the bones thrown out on the street to the dogs ".—From New Archealogical Discoveries. Selected by S. MEMORY VERSES: MICAH [illegible]

GOLDEN TEXT: 1 Peter 1:15, 16

AIM HIGH!

Aim high, aim high!
There is no reason why
You can't succeed, if from the start
You've learned to work and do your part;
Ever alert to learn, quick to discard
The non-essentials of your art.

Aim high, aim high!
There is no reason why
The ladder you can't climb,
Though it takes grit, the time
You spent in what you do.
Is going to mean a lot to you.

Aim high, aim high!
There is no reason why
Ambition should debar you from Little tasks; they're bound to come
They always are a sort of test;
To judge your mettle and your best.

Aim high, aim high!
There is no reason why
We should ignore our God above
Who sent his Son to show his love
For if our heart is right
Our future will be bright.

Aim high, aim high!
There is no reason why
You should lose your human traits,
Success for mortals always waits,
Who aim high, high,
And on their God rely. —O. V. B.

"As Lights in the World"

Do you use electric lights in your home? If so you will have an electric meter and a cable conveying power to it from the power house. Do you ever wonder how much power that cable can carry? At the present moment it is probably doing nothing, for it is almost mid-day and no lights are burning. Presently as the winter's afternoon draws in one light will be turned on and a little current will pass along the wire. Later still, another light will be needed, and a little more current will pass. As each successive lamp thus glows into life the current increases in volume, for the amount of current passing along the wire at any moment is exactly the amount that is being used.

Has it ever occurred to you that your own life is an electric meter? Day by day it is silently registering the amount of energy that you use. "Ye are the light of the world." You cannot save the world from sin, but it is your privilege to light up your lamps so that those who live in the dark places of earth may see the pitfalls. Are all your lamps burning? Remember the current costs you nothing. Jesus Christ is an exhaustless power-house, and he will give you an unlimited supply—but you are not a storage battery. You cannot accumulate divine power in yourself and then use it at your convenience. God will give you the amount of power you are using, and no more.

How many lamps have you lit? There is the lamp of personal service. If God calls you to "go" to your own townsmen, your own family perhaps then be sure that there and there only will your lamps shine clearly. In no other place can you earn his "well done."

How many other lamps can you think of? Are they all lit? Remember the energy you use is not your own—your only cost is the cost of keeping your connections sure. Sometimes that will cost you dear, but it is worth it.

The world's darkness is very great and you ask, "Can my light make any appreciable difference—I am shining all I can what can I do more? I have no more power to spare." That is exactly the point. God never gives you any power to spare, he gives you as much as you will let him give. "If the love of God be in you and abound" it will find some way of reaching out to help where the need is sorest. A need so claimant as that indicated in the first paragraph of this article is a challenge to God's people everywhere.

If Christ means anything to you if you have proved that "he satisfies my longings as nothing else can do" you inevitably long that the thirsty souls everywhere should be watered at the same Fountain. Might I suggest that prayer is the lamp whose rays penetrate farthest? Will you pray? And as you pray some other mode of service may be revealed to you. M. J. M'K. Swanson, in "Words of Life."

A conscience without God is a tribunal without a judge.

Would You?

If I knew that a word of mine,
  Might leave its trace
  On a loved one's face—
I'd never speak harshly, would you?

To Obey is Better Than Sacrifice

It is never, under any circumstance, a trifling thing to disobey the word of the Lord. To know his will is to be involved in the responsibility of doing it. And for any man to treat this obligation lightly is but to assure himself of ultimate disaster. And yet how thoughtlessly we are prone to find excuses for our own shortcoming in this respect, masking the real cause of every defection that our hearts are not perfect toward him. For the secret of unfailing obedience is unfailing love If we loved him truly, in return for the great love wherewith he has loved us, we should find his yoke easy, his burden light, and all his commandments acceptable. Shall we not seek thus, at the very source, to assure our lives of worthy quality?

The Tree

I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.

A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the world's sweet flowing breast.

A tree that looks at God all day
And lifts its leafy arms to pray;

A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robin's in her hair;

Upon whose bosom snow has lain,
Who intimately lives with rain.

Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.

Our Weekly Puzzle

Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light.

Who is this "chosen generation"?

Why have they the benefits of all these high callings?

What is the meaning of the word "peculiar" as here used?

Who is the "him" who hath called?

Who wrote the above?

Where can the passage be found?

Five credits for each correct answer.

Answers must be mailed before April 5.

Answers will appear in issue of April 8.

Answers to puzzle in issue of March 11:

The meaning of "justified" is "lawfully free from the penalty of sin," that is we have sinned against God and the penalty for our disobedience is death, but through our faith in Jesus—who knows no sin—as our righteousness, his perfection is placed on and over us, so that our sin is covered, hid: and before God we "are justified by faith."

"Access" means an entrance into.

The definition of "grace" is "unmerited favor" or love.

As above noted, we have sinned against God, and in consequence we are aliens to God. To be partakers of God's peace and grace we must be holy, righteous, and godly, which in our natural state is impossible. Therefore we must partake of the holiness of Jesus, his righteousness and godliness; and the only way we can do this is to have our faith firmly placed on Jesus as the Christ, the Son of God.

The passage was written by the apostle Paul to the Romans, and may be found in Romans 5:1, 2.

Daily Thoughts

I will commune with thee from the mercy seat	Ex. 25:22
All that is within me, bless his holy name	Psa. 103:1

A Prayer

Let me be a little kinder,
Let me be a little blinder
To the faults of those about me,
  Let me praise a little more;
Let me be when I am weary
Just a little bit more cheery;
Let me serve a little better
  Those that I am striving for.
Let me be a little braver
When temptation bids me waver,
Let me strive a little harder
  To be all that I should be;
Let me be a little meeker
With the brother who is weaker,
Let me think more of my neighbor
  And a little less of me. Selected.

"After this manner pray ye," says the Lord, and he for our guidance and edification places on record a pattern prayer, which is charming in its simplicity, and at the same time marvelously comprehensive. The Lord devoted whole nights on the mountain slopes to communion with the Father, and a feature which we must ever keep before us is the prayerful spirit which he exhibited under what were often trying conditions.

Remarks

During January the flu slowed up which allowed us to meet in the city, but still the word kept coming. "We cannot meet yet, and just as a point or two had thought to try it, a telegram came telling of our father's death. We hastened there. Just a year ago we visited him, and held a few meetings, the result being we baptized seven. When we went back we found these faithful and outsiders said to me, "Those you took into the fold last winter are certainly living in accordance with their faith."

Some of their lives had been so transformed that it seemed almost a wonder. This makes us think our work is not in vain. While there we were urged by this little band of faithful ones, to hold a few meetings, which we did. Then we were called home by telegram, but urged to return, when some will no doubt be baptized. It seems queer sometimes how the gospel is spread. A young man, an operator at Gifford, was among the above mentioned number. He was so earnest he wanted everyone to hear. He was finally made agent at another town, but went to Gifford every Sunday and helped in the Sunday School; and now his mother wants to be a child of God. Now she has the flu and her baptism is put off. Maybe when we return we can see the wisdom of the delay.

Today's mail brought a letter from a sister from another state, saying, "The ban is lifted in our city. I lay by a tenth of all I earn, and can arrange for expenses. Won't you come? We need you so much." A letter yesterday from one in another state, who had urged us to come, said don't come, flu too bad. So it may be the Lord wanted me to go elsewhere first. Oh Lord I wish I had a flying machine so I could drop gospel bombs on some of the orthodox strong holds, and break up some of their artillery nests. But seemingly how futile our efforts: we only subdue, not convince, in most cases.

When we go over the top with the two-edged sword drawn they just cry out, "kamarad"; and we have to walk off. We cannot even make them prisoners of Jesus Christ. They are conscientious objectors, non-combatants, but finally they will be court martialed and get a death sentence. Let us all try to rescue a few more before the door is closed.

BIBLE PROMISES AND CONDITIONS.

How often we quote Bible promises! We quote them because of the help we derive from them, and we quote them to others that they may receive benefit But is the benefit we derive from quoting them as full as it might be? Is it not too often transitory? Should not such promises have a transforming effect upon our character? While thinking over Matt. 11:28,29, I was suddenly struck with the fact that this soul comforting verse, this verse to which thousands had fled in special time of distress, had conditions attached; and it seemed to me that here perhaps was the true solution why we did not get the full blessing we had not noticed the conditions.

The Promise:

"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "What!" you say, "Christ said he would give us rest, and you talk about conditions!" Stay—do we not all value more highly those gifts we obtain upon conditions, than those we do not? Assuredly we do! With this thought in mind let us now see what the conditions are which Christ himself attaches to the gracious promise quoted above, and then consider if lived up to, they will or will not make an enduring difference in your life and mine, and a deeper appreciation of the value of the promise.

The Conditions and the Result.

"Take my yoke upon you and learn of me and ye shall find rest unto your souls."

VOLUME 71 CLEVELAND, O. April 1st 1919. NUMBER 13

One More Birthday

By Frances T. Chapman.

Over the wonderful ocean of time
With beautiful treasures from many a clime,
Another fair ship comes safely in,
Just as the dawn of a year begins.

What is its freight of joy or woe?
Only your heart can truly know.
But blessings a many are stored away,
In the hold of that ship, and we earnestly pray

You may find them all: a blessing from one
Who sought your door 'neath the burning sun,
Weak, weary, and faint of heart.
With love and faith, you smoothed the smart.

Cheering and strengthening and guiding aright,
Giving the blind the gift of sight,
Sending her cheerily on her way,
Bearing a prayer and a love away;

O! Sister mine, there are many of these
You have carried to God on your patient knees!
Their blessings and prayers have loaded that ship,
A whisper has gone from lip to lip—

"The bread on the waters, oh let it drift back;
Of loving return, let be there no lack!"
You, freighted that ship, a year ago,
With love and blessings and prayer you know,

And sent it forth to comfort and bless
The struggling hearts in the storm and stress
The whole world over. It comes again.
The talents five are the talents ten.

Another ship, you will send away,
When it comes again—your natal day.
For wherever you go, or wherever you turn,
There are many to help and much to learn.

And woeful the day when it comes no more,
When the ship goes down, ere it reaches shore!
There'll be aching hearts and swimming eyes,
Gazing far out where the good ship lies!

The Gospel of the Kingdom the Only True Gospel

Lesson 3

I. MEANING OF THE WORD "GOSPEL"

THE WORD "gospel" comes originally from "god-spell," "god" being an Anglo-Saxon adjective for "good," and "spell" meaning "news." The gospel, then, both etymologically and scripturally, means "good news" or "glad tidings" (Luke 2:10; 8:1; Isa. 61:1).

II. THE GOSPEL IS PREACHED IN BOTH TESTAMENTS

The glad tidings of the gospel, instead of being limited and confined to the pages of the New Testament, as is generally supposed, are also published in the writings of the Old Testament. These were preached to

(a) The antediluvians (1 Peter 4:6; 2 Peter 2:5);

(b) Abraham (Gal. 3:8);

(c) The Israelites in the wilderness (Heb. 1:1, 2).

(d) The contemporaries of David (Heb. 4:7);

(e) The people contemporary with John the Baptist (Mark 1:1, 14, 15; Luke 16:16);

(f) The house of Israel before the death of Christ (Luke 4:16-22; Mark 1:14; Luke 20:1) and

(g) All who received "the ministry of the prophets" prior to the birth of Christ (Hos. 12:10; 1 Peter 1:9-12).

III. FOUR GOSPEL CONDITIONS REQUIRED OF SINNERS

God has conditioned the sinner's salvation upon

(a) Hearing (Deut. 30:10-20; Rom. 10:5-17; Matt. 13:23);

(b) Believing (1 Cor. 1:21; 15:1,2; Mark 1:14,15; 16:15, 16; Rom. 1:16);

(c) Confessing (Rom. 10:8,9,10; 1 Tim. 6:13; Heb. 10: 22,23); and

(d) Obeying the gospel (1 Peter 1:22-25).

IV. SUBJECT MATTER; OR "THE THINGS" COMPOSING THE GOSPEL

The gospel consists of "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Mark 1: 14; Luke 4:18,43; 8:1; 9:2,6; Acts 8:12; 19:8; 20:25; 28:23, 30,31).

V. "THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM" THE ONLY TRUE GOSPEL

"The gospel of the kingdom," consisting of "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ," is the only true gospel. A double curse has been pronounced against either man or angel who shall dare to "pervert" this gospel, or preach "any other" (Gal. 1:6-9).

Synthetic Remarks on the Lesson

I. MEANING OF THE WORD "GOSPEL"

THIS WORD etymologically signifies a "good spell" caused by hearing a good report. "As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country" (Prov. 25:25). Scripturally the gospel is called "good tidings" (Isa. 40:9; 41:27; 61:1) and "glad tidings" (Luke 8:1). Not good news about health, riches, fame, and many other temporal and worldly things, good and valuable perhaps in their place; not good tidings about anything; but "the glad tidings of the kingdom of God" (Luke 8:1). Notice the definite article in this passage. "The glad tidings of the kingdom of God" contain the "good tidings of faith" (1 Thess. 3:6).

II. THE GOSPEL IS PREACHED IN BOTH TESTAMENTS

This proposition is pregnant with meaning and should be considered carefully and seriously. Many claim that the gospel consists merely of the the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ; therefore they reason it dates from, and was first preached at, Pentecost. This leaves the world without the gospel from Adam until the death of Christ in A. D. 33. In direct contradiction of this idea are dozens of unequivocal Bible declarations which affirm that the gospel was proclaimed previous to the death of Christ. To see this, let us begin the evidence with Christ himself. The whole of his ministry was before his death except forty days between his resurrection and ascension (Acts 1:3). For three years and a half, dating from his baptism to his death "he preached the gospel" (Luke 20:1). The affirmations which declare this are numerous, emphatic, reiterated, and unmistakable (Mark 1:14; Matt. 4:17; 6:33; 9:35; Luke 4: 43; 8:1; 9:1-13:22). In the beginning of his ministry he preached "the good tidings" of Isaiah 61:1 to the people of Nazareth, closed the book and said, "This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears" (Luke 4:21). "He hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor."

Now let us consider the ages prior to Christ and we shall find the gospel existed even then. John's preaching is called "the beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God" (Mark 1:1). As the "beginning" of a subject is a part of the subject, so "the beginning of the gospel" is a part of the gospel. "The law and the prophets were until John" (Luke 16:16). From John, who preached the gospel, "the law and the prophets" traverse the centuries back to Abraham, who was a prophet (Gen. 20:7). In all the centuries preceding Christ the people and the "ministry of the prophets" (Hos. 12:10). Their ministry was a ministry of the gospel. This is what Peter affirms, writing after the day of Pentecost, and alluding to that very day. He says the prophets bore testimony to both the sufferings and the glory of Christ, consequently "they did minister the things which are now reported unto you by them that have preached he gospel unto you with the Holy Spirit sent down from heaven" (1 Pet. 1:11, 12). "The spirit of Christ was in them" (vs. 11), they were sons of God (Rom. 9:9, 14), heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ (vs. 17); and were therefore "holy men of God" and "spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit" (2 Pet. 1:21). They "preached the gospel with the Holy Spirit sent down from heaven" as literally and truly as the apostles did on the day of Pentecost and thereafter. Noah was "a preacher of righteousness" (2 Pet. 2:5). He preached the gospel to the antidiluvians with the spirit of God assisting and cooperating (1 Pet. 4:6 3:19,20; Gen. 6:3; Heb. 11:7). And the gospel was current with Israel in the wilderness and during the reign of the law under Moses. "Unto them was the gospel preached as well as unto us" (Heb. 4:2. "The word preached," however, "did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it" (vs. 2). The same gospel, the same rest, and the same promise offered to them, and which they failed to obtain "because of unbelief" (Heb. 3:19), are now given to us. (Heb. 4). Paul has asserted that the gospel is older than the law of Moses, having been "preached to Abraham" four hundred and thirty years previous to its inauguration (Gal. 3:8, 16, 17). It is by adding baptism into Christ to these Abrahamic gospel-promises that makes us "Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise" (Gal 3: 8, 16, 26-29).

III. FOUR CONDITIONS OF THE GOSPEL REQUIRED OF SINNERS

The Scriptures preach the gospel (Gal. 3:8). "The word of the Lord endureth forever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you" (1 Pet. 1:25). When we recognize that the gospel is contained in the word of God, as these texts declare, and that the gospel proclaimed in "the Scriptures of the prophets" is the gospel "made known to all nations for the obedience of faith" (Rom. 16:26), then we realize that the gospel is as old as the Scriptures themselves. As the gospel, then, has been contemporaneous with all ages it follows that the conditions of the gospel are applicable to all men in whatever age they live. In their application to sinners these conditions may be summarized in four propositions, namely:

(a) Hearing the Gospel.

Pointing to "this book of the law" (Deut. 30:10) Moses says: It is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off. It is not in heaven, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it? Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldest say, Who will go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it? But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it" (Deut. 30:11-14). "This book" (the book, the Bible) is "not hidden" from us. Were it up in heaven or over the sea it would be beyond our reach. In the providence of God it has been brought "very nigh" to us. Holding "this book" in our hands, it is criminal to be ignorant of it. After paraphrasing this Scripture in Romans the tenth chapter Paul goes on to say: "How shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard?" (vs. 14). Hearing first, then faith. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God" (vs. 17). Hearing God's word, that is, understanding it, always precedes belief of it. Speaking agriculturally, "the seed is the word of God" (Luke 8:11). Amplified, the word of God is "the word of the kingdom" (Matt. 13:19). "He that receiveth the seed into good ground is he that heareth the word (of the kingdom), and understandeth it; which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, some an hundred fold, some sixty, some thirty" (vs. 23). The word of God is the incorruptible seed by which we are begotten (Jas. 1:18) and born again (1 Pet. 1 23-25). When farmers can raise corn without planting seed and wheat without sowing the grain, then, but not until then, will we believe that men and women can become Christians without hearing and understanding the word of God. Blessed are your eyes, dear reader, if they see; and your ears, if they hear (Matt. 13:16). My mother and my brethren are these which hear the word of God, and do it" (Luke 8:21).

(b) Believing the Gospel

In his summary of the conditions of salvation Paul includes belief: "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed?" (Rom. 10:13, 14). Belief must be added to hearing. God saves only believers (1 Cor. 1:21). Now before the gospel can be believed it must be learned. And after it has been understood and believed it must be kept in memory, or we will be "forgetful hearers" (Jas. 1:23. 24) and will "have believed in vain" (1 Cor. 15:2). But believe the gospel we must before we can have the promise of salvation (Mark 16:15,16). The power of God to save is only exerted upon those that believe (Rom. 1:16). Where there is ignorance of the gospel there can be no belief of it; and where there is no belief in it there is no "power unto salvation." Ignorant as well as enlightened unbelievers are alike beyond the pale of salvation offered by God to mankind upon the-condition of faith (Rom. 5:1). Belief is listed with repentance as a commandment (Mark 1:14,15), making both equally binding as conditions of salvation. Belief is called a "commandment" in so many words (1 John 3:23). Since only those who do his commandments have a right to the tree of life and an entrance into the city (Rev. 22:14), it follows that all unbelievers must be destroyed with the abominable "without" the city of life (Rev. 22:15; 21:8).

(c) Confessing the Gospel

Adverting again to Paul's summary of the conditions of salvation, we notice that as belief follows hearing in logical sequence so "calling on the name of the Lord" or confession, follows belief. When Paul speaks of the word which is nigh us, "even in thy mouth, and in thy heart," he explains that he means "the word of faith which we preach" (Rom. 10:8). Notice, then, that the confession which the apostle proceeds to talk about is a confession of this "word of faith," not a confession of sin; "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto (Greek, eis, for) salvation" (vss. 9,10). We must not only believe the truth in our hearts; we must "acknowledge" it with our mouths also (2 Tim. 2:25). This acknowledgement or confession was made by Christ before Pontius Pilate, and is called "a good confession" (1 Tim. 6:13). This confession on the part of Christ was a confession of "the word of faith," and related to the kingdom of God, and not to sin, as you may see by reading John 18:36,37. He had no sin to confess (Heb. 4:15; 7:26). Observe also that he made it "before Pontius Pilate," that is, publicly; and that Timothy made the same "confession before many witnesses" (1 Tim. 6:12). "This commandment" is then passed on from Christ and Timothy to us to be kept "without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ" (vs. 14). Paul himself "called on the name of the Lord" that is made this confession when he was baptized (Acts 22:16). And in keeping this commandment "without spot" it appears that all converts were required to make this confession in conjunction with their baptism: "Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, ... and our bodies washed (baptized) with pure water. Let us hold fast the confession of our faith without wavering" (Heb. 10:22,23). "The confession of our faith," notice, not our sin. To confess our faith is to tell what we believe. And to meet the divine requirements in the case, this must be done "with the mouth" and "before witnesses." The "confession of faith" has been abolished today in a degenerate Christianity, for it is ignorant and has no "faith" to confess. Confession "with the mouth" has been superceded by rivivalists who urge the people at blatant protracted meetings. "Only stand up"; "Just raise your hand"; "Sign this card"!! Such evasions and nullifications as these of God's command to make a confession of faith with the mouth and in the presence of witnesses are too palpable to need refutation here.

(d) Obeying the Gospel

When an ignorant man hears the gospel, he awakes to the fact that he is a sinner (Rom. 7:8,9); when he trembles and believes it, he does nothing more than a devil (Jas. 2:19); when he confesses it, he is in his sins still. What must he do then to be saved from his sin? The answer is, he must obey the gospel. "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth," is the way an inspired apostle puts it (1 Pet. 1:22). Purification comes, not by hearing, not by believing, not by confessing the truth, but by obeying it. Obedience implies a command. The sinner is told to repent and be baptized "for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38). Baptism is repeatedly called "obedience" in the sixth chapter of Romans, because it is a command (Acts 10:48). Because it is a divine command baptism is appropriately called "the washing of water by the word" (Eph. 5:26) and "the obedience of faith" (Rom. 16:26), because faith in the word which commands it moves the believer to obey. Thus it "saves us' (1 Pet. 3:21) by "purifying our souls" (1 Pet. 1:22) in giving us the birth of water (John 3:3). Unless we are born of water as well as of the spirit we cannot enter the kingdom of God (John 3:5). Unless born again we shall perish like the grass of the field and fade like its flowers (1 Pet. 1:21-25). Understanding that baptism includes confession, as we learned under "c," Acts 18:8 is most significant in the order of its statements: "Many of the Corinthians (a) hearing (b) believed, and (c,d) were baptized."

THOSE BEASTS AGAIN

No. 5.

"And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads: and that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name."

To economize time and space, I will refer to the books from which proof is gleaned, and the reader, if he wishes to read and can obtain them, can see that only a fractional part of the proof can be given in a short series of a articles like these: Macauley's History of England; Motley's Dutch Republic; D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation; White's Eighteen Christian Centuries; Elliott's Romanism; Gibbon's Decline and Fall; Mosheim's History of the Christian Church; and Fox's Book of Martyrs.

Mark, as symbolically used, is intended to designate the followers of the system or power that does the marking. The mark is given as a promise of protection, and favor to those who bear it. The symbolic mark or seal of God, is always put in the forehead (Ezek. 9:4; Rev. 7:3; 9:4; 14:1), and is typical of an intelligent reception of the truth and willing obedience thereto. The beast can place his mark indiscriminately in the right hand or in the forehead: for it makes very little difference to him whether his teaching is received intelligently or in ignorance, just so it is accepted. What is the mark? Under the preceding verse we saw that kings were made to swear "to permit no man to live in their kingdoms who was not a Catholic." Here none are permitted to buy or sell who have not the mark, and name of the beast, and the number of his name. What distinguishes Catholicism from every other form of Christianity? Is it not her peculiar ceremonies and name (we leave out the number here for future comment). We think it is, and now if we can give historic proof that the predictions of this passage have been fulfilled, we think the proof is positive.

The fourth Lateran Council decreed: "We ordain . . . . that no person shall presume to print, or cause to be printed, any book or other writing whatsoever, either in our city, or Rome, or in any other cities or dioceses, unless it shall first be carefully examined, if in this city by our vicar, and master of the holy palace, or if in other cities and dioceses, by the bishop or his deputy, with the Inquisitor of heretical pravity, for the diocese in which the said impression is about to be made; and unless also it shall have received under their own hand their written approval, given without prime and without delay. Whosoever shall presume to do otherwise, besides the loss of his books, which shall be publicly burned, shall be bound by the sentence of excommunication."

Here printers of approved works were not permitted to sell them, and the excommunicated were usually killed, hence not permitted to buy. "Christian Liberty, respected by the Catholicity of the earlier ages, was first limited, then chained and finally stifled . . . the hierarchy, from age to age, and almost from year to year, has gone on restricting the liberty allowed for a time to the human mind, until, at last, by successive encroachments, there remained no liberty at all." No liberty at all cuts out liberty to buy or sell. "The establishment of the Inquisition in Rome . . . sealed the doom of Protestantism in Italy. Spies were dispersed over the country, who insinuated themselves into private families, trapped every vestige of heresy, gave secret information of their discoveries; and all who fell under their suspicions were arrested, and arraigned before the Holy Office at Rome." Arrested people could not buy or sell.

"Emperors were persuaded to declare that those who resisted the judgment of the clerical body in matters of faith, should prepare for exile. And their decisions were declared to be of divine authority." Would exiled people be allowed to buy or sell ? "Waldenses who had emigrated from Gascony to England, were ordered by Henry II, men and women, to be publicly whipped, branded on the cheek with a red hot iron, and driven half naked out of the city in the dead of winter; and none were permitted to show them pity or grant the slightest favor." Certainly they could not buy or sell.

"Frederick, Emperor of Germany A. D. 1224, sentenced heretics of every description, alive to the flames, their property to confiscation, and their posterity, unless they became persecutors, to infamy. Here instead of being allowed to sell their property it was taken from them, and after that they would have nothing with which to buy. "Lewis, King of France, A. D. 1228, published laws for the extirpation of heresy, and enforced their execution. He forced Raymond, Count of Toulouse, to undertake the extermination of heresy from his dominions without sparing vassal or friend. Charles V, emperor of Germany and king of Spain and the Netherlands, persecuted the friends of the Reformation throughout his extensive dominions. Supported by the diet of Worms, he proscribed Luther, his followers, and his writings; and condemned all who sheltered Luther or read his books, to confiscation of their property, the ban of the empire, and the penalty of high treason."

"The massacre of Merindol, planned by the French king, and approved by the French parliament, was committed to the president, Opeda, for execution. The president was commissioned to slay the population, burn the towns, and demolish the castles of the Waldenses, large numbers of whom resided in that section. Roman Catholic historians admit that in compliance with this commission thousands, including women and children, were massacred; twenty four towns were ruined, and the country left waste and desolate. Men, women and children fled to the woods and mountains for safety and were pursued and put to the sword. Many who remained in the towns met the same or worse fate. Do you think they could buy or sell during this persecution ? In 1641, an Irish massacre in Ireland occurred in which we are told: "Protestant blood flowed freely throughout Ireland; houses were reduced to ashes, towns and villages were almost destroyed. Some were forced to murder their own relatives and then take their own lives; the last words that fell upon their ears being the assurance of priests, that their dying agonies were but the beginning of eternal torment. Thousands died of cold and hunger (which would not have been the case if they had access to the markets), while endeavoring to emigrate to other lands. In Cavan, the road for twelve miles together was stained with the bloody tracks of wounded fugitives: sixty children were abandoned in the flight by parents fiercely hunted, and it was declared that any who should in any way help those little ones should be buried by their sides. What think ye dear reader ? Has the prophecy been fulfilled ? If not, what would it take to fulfill the prophecy ?

THE DEATH OF CHRIST.

Christ died to redeem the human race from the limbo into which it had fallen by the transgression of Adam, its federal head.

The same principle is operative in the redemption as was in the transgression: as it is written, "As in Adam all die: so in Christ shall all be made alive." The law demands the death of the sinner; and to win the crown of life demands faithfulness unto death (Rev. 2:10).

Adam by disobedience lost access to the tree of life: and Christ by obedience gained back to the race, what was lost by Adam. The presence of the tree of life in the garden indicates that the creator contemplated life eternal for the race: therefore the life giving tree in the new Jerusalem.

Christ by obedience earned life, but received the wages of sin without earning it: therefore, the virtue of his sacrifice on behalf of his race.

He was the passover lamb without blemish. He fulfilled the law and made it honorable, so God could be just, and the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus, therefore the proclamation, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

"Death came by sin," but Christ by death broke its grip on the human race. "By death he destroyed him that had the power of death" (Heb. 2:14). It is written of Christ, that "he abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel" (2 Tim. 2:10).

This must be understood in the light of Rom. 4: 17: "As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations, before him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things that be not as though they were."

If Christ were God he could not die, for even those that are made equal to the angels "die no more," and if he had been of angelic nature his death would be no benefit to our race. His sinless life and death in human nature is credited to our race, on the same principle that Adam by sin got his race into trouble.

Christ by obedience had a right to the tree of life: therefore his death was not a penal death, but sacrificial on behalf of others.

In the plan of redemption, the work was appropriated to Christ, as it is written, "Thou hast laid on him the iniquity of us all" (Isa. 53). "I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep" (Jon 10:11) "No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself." "Who for the joy that was set before him endureth the cross, despising the shame" (Heb. 12:2). If there were no future life the death of Christ the righteous could not be justified: but he voluntarily offered himself a sacrifice, knowing that the justice of God would not allow him to remain dead, but would raise him to immortality and eternal life and dominion over the earth; thus restoring to him the first dominion lost by Adam. In the death of Christ we see—justice, judgment, and mercy inhering in the throne of God: Justice to Christ, judgment in the law, and mercy to the sinner.

Editorial

"The Faith Epitomized" sets forth our position on war, and for this reason alone, every believer should be conversant with it.

Get your money before you spend it. The man who makes the future pay for the present may find the future empty when he gets there.

What men do is the true index of what they think. Words may be used clumsily and be mistaken in interpretation; but actions show the inclinations of the heart.

We are printing the second edition of Bible Lessons. As The Restitution is evangelical as well as pastoral we think it will not be amiss for them to appear again in our pages in their revised form.

It is a sorrowful fact that people do not read the Bible. One can hardly go into a prayer meeting without hearing a quotation for Scripture that it not in the Bible and never was. You may hear, "In the midst of life we are in death," from the prayer book; "He tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," from an old romance; "God unchangeably ordains whatever comes to pass," from the Catechism; Sunday is often called "the Sabbath" from ignorance; "Cleanliness is next to godliness," from a worldly maxim, accompanied by passages [illegible] quoted [illegible] and misapplied which show that the people do not read their Bibles, and the worst thing about it is, one half the people who go to meeting do not know the difference.

"FEW SAVED"

This is the title of a 20 page booklet containing a "sermon" by Robert G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Ave., Cleveland, Ohio. The effort deals with the question of whether few or many will be saved. The following are the principal points: 1. Salvation of the Few a Dictate of Science. 2. A Decree of Fact. 3. A Dictum of Bible Teaching. 4. Recognition in the Kingdom (not heaven). 5. Future Happiness does not depend upon the Salvation of our Relatives. This is followed by "succinct exegetical remarks" upon Rom. 7:2; 1 Cor. 7:29-31; Gal. 3:26, 27; Luke 20:33-36. The pamphlet makes some good points, and, though somewhat pedantic, is a very readable production. A. H. Zilmer.

Communications

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

Dear Restitution:

How gladly we welcome you every week, full of instruction and kind and loving thoughts. We the scattered ones, can realize more fully the good in the paper. We are surely living in a wonderful age. The cry of "peace" is being sounded the world over. But we watch and wait.

I am so thankful the printing press is at work. Surely it was a mountain to climb. I would be glad to work but my strength has failed. I am 83 years old, but not sick. My thoughts go out to all the dear writers of The Restitution. I feel acquainted with them all.

Mrs. G. W. Merwin.

Dear Restitution:

I hope you can fill the orders for the three copies of Restitution, dated March 4th. It seems to me that this is an unusually good number, and would like to pass them along. The paper is getting better all the time, and I receive each one with joy and anticipation of "the feast of good things" within its pages to be devoured mentally.

I am surely isolated in this busy hustling city (Hutchinson, Kansas) of about 23,000 inhabitants. Beautiful church buildings greet the eye, throughout the wide streets, their carpeted isles are pressed by many feet, but no "glad tidings" or gospel truth is ever proclaimed from those pulpits to be caught by listening ears, or echoed to the lofty ceilings. The great glittering electric cross in the tower of the Catholic Chuch, with is School and Hospital are close by, while the catholics are ever up and ready, eager [illegible] to touch these [illegible] Our [illegible] Christian Science, [illegible] Nazarenes, [illegible] who care to [illegible] Holy [illegible]. Many [illegible] Adventists and a few Russellites are here but there is not one in the city that I know now that I could take by the hand and feel that I had a real sister in the blessed hope. Not long since a family, intelligent and educated, came here who said they belonged to, or were believers in the Church of God, but after several conversations with the wife I found she was a very radical believer in "Joseph [illegible]" and had written a book in support of her ideas. Oh how hurt and disappointed I was! I had hoped, when they came, that it might be the beginning of a little band of true worshipers. However the family moved away. Thus we find the world to-day. We are living in a wonderful age, each day seems to fulfill some prophecy. May the Lord find us watching, and "our vessels filled with oil" is my earnest prayer.

Yours, looking for the glorious morning,

Mrs. Lanie Loveridge.

THE RESTITUTION SUNDAY SCHOOL LEAF

Lesson XXXII

JESUS OUR PRIEST

No. 1

Memory Text: Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus (Heb. 3:1).

1. Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession.

2. For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities;

3. But was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin (Heb. 4:14, 15).

4. Though he were a son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered;

5. And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto them that obey him.

6. Called of God an high priest after the order of Melchizedek (Heb 5:8-10).

7. A minister of the sanctuary and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched and not man.

8. For every high priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices: wherefore it is of necessity that this man have somewhat also to offer (Heb. 8:2, 3)

9. But Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle.

10. Not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building;

11. Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us.

12. So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation (Heb. 9:11, 12, 28).

PRACTICAL TRUTHS

Under the law of Moses there were offerings made of different animals upon an altar of stone. These were [illegible] and [illegible] a [illegible] was made every year, (Heb. 10:11), yet the sin was not taken away [illegible]. Jesus as our great High Priest made one offering forever. He offered himself without spot unto God. His was not an offering of animals upon an altar of stone, but his own blood, which represented a pure life, a life in harmony with the will of God, which he offered in heaven itself as the altar. Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, for we may enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus (Heb. 10:19).

Notes on the Lesson

Heavenly Calling.—Exalted calling. The apostle elsewhere calls it a "high calling."

1. High Priest. The chief, the one who alone was permitted to enter the holy of the holies once a year.

2. Touched. Moved by sympathy for our weakness and temptations.

3. Tempted. Jesus passed through all the trials and temptations of our own experiences, yet conquered them all.

5. Being Made Perfect. Or having been perfected. This shows a growth in Jesus toward perfection.

6. Order of Melchizedek. The Melchizedek order differs from the Aaronic: 1. In the manner of appointment. 2. In associating the kingly function with the priesthood; and, 3. In the eternal nature of its priests. Under the Aaronic, the law made priests; these priests died and they were not allowed to have an inheritance. While under the Melchizedean order the priests are not only to be inheritors of the land and kings, but also be endowed with the power of an endless life.

7. A Minister. One who serves in the sanctuary or at the altar.

8. Offer Gifts and Sacrifices. The office of a priest was to stand between God and the people and do the service of offering.

12. Once Offered.—He made an offering once for all time to come. Bear the Sins of Many.—Died for our sins (1 Cor. 15:3).

Suggestive Topics and Questions

1. The Offering.—What is meant by the word "offering"? Answer: That which is brought as an atonement for sin—a sacrifice. Under the law of Moses, who brought the offerings? Who presented them to the Lord? What was the object in bringing and presenting these offerings to the Lord? How often did their high priest enter into the holy of holies? (Heb. 9:7). What were all these things a figure of? Who is our great High Priest? What offering has he made for us? (11, and Heb 9:14, 28; Eph. 5:2; Heb. 7:27; Titus 2:14).

2. The Altar.—When these offerings were made under the law, upon what were they laid? What is an altar? How was it first made? (1 Kings 18:31, 32). How was it made by Moses? (Ex. 30: 1-8). How was it made by Solomon for the temple? (2 Chron. 4:1). Was the altar this side of the veil which separated the holy from the most holy, or upon the other side—was the altar in the holy or most holy? Where was the atonement made? If the two parts of the tabernacle are a pattern, what do they represent? Did Jesus make the offering on earth or in heaven? Has he made the atonement?

GOLDEN TEXT: John 11:25

WHEN THE LORD RETURNS

As Jesus died, and rose again
  Victorious from the dead;
So will his servants rise and reign,
  With their triumphant head.
The time draws nigh, when from the clouds
  Christ shall with shouts descend;
And the last trumpet's awful voice
  The heavens and earth will rend.

The living saints will then be changed
  And they who sleep, awake;
The graves shall yield their ancient charge,
  And earth's foundations shake.
The saints of God, immortal made,
  With joy shall mount on high;
The heavenly hosts, with [illegible]
  Shall meet them in the [illegible]

Together to the promised land,
  With joyful hearts they [illegible]
A glorious and immortal band,
  Now with their Lord "at home."

Where death-divided friends, at last,
  Shall meet to part no more.

"I Beseech You By The Meekness And Gentleness Of Christ"

This morning, while conversing with a brother, he asked me to read a letter in which a third brother criticized a fourth for "his cold and harsh manner in presenting the truth of God's love to mankind. The letter was not wholly of condemnation: it was written more in the spirit of pity, that one, with the knowledge of the criticized brother, with his power of expression and anxiety to please could not see his fault, and shake one side his "harshness and coldness" and adopt the spirit of love, of gentleness, of toleration. Not that truth should be compromised, no, not under any circumstances. But neither should we present the truth in a narrow, selfish manner. It is an old saying and just as true as ever, "That more flies can be caught with molasses than vinegar." The manner we adopt in the presentation of truth has much to do in creating a favorable or unfavorable impression on the minds of our hearers.

Christ said, "Be ye wise as serpents and harmless as doves." If this was good advice to the twelve at that time, it is better advice for us today. We have the truth; of that there is no doubt; then let us be wise in not forming attachments for nor entanglements with the world. And, as we are admonished to have the wisdom of serpents; we also are told to have the harmlessness of doves. Therefore as representatives of the meek and lowly one we are to practice moderation and meekness and humbleness, and temper them all with love.

Would you buy a suit of clothes from a tailor who criticized the suit made by another tailor you were wearing? I trow not. Therefore, in speaking or writing regarding the truth as it is in Jesus to another not in full sympathy with you, don't approach him as a bull dog would approach a burglar. Don't appear as if you "know it all," and in your heart feel the other person was ignorant. Don't "fire" your argument at him. Approach him in gentleness, draw him to you, lead him, and in time you will win him. Every harsh word uttered, every "cold" expression made, every sign of narrowness in your make-up will repel him and drive him from you so that he will have none of you or your teaching. And what is worse, he will judge all Christians by you, and through your narrowness, coldness, and harshness you cast reproach on the name of Christ.

Peter writes: "Add to your faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity," then adds "if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

The man of the world makes success of worldly things by being courteous, affable, considerate, generous, and always attending strictly to business. Can we, as ambassadors of Christ, afford to be or do less? Let it not be said of us that "the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light." We have the truth of God; we have the example of Jesus our Lord. Let us combine the two, and spiritual success is assured.

Serving God

"Ye serve the Lord Christ" (Col. 3:24). This saying enobles the weary routine of earthly employments, and sheds a halo around the most humble occupation. The shop, the barn, the scullery and the smithy, become temples when men and women do all to the glory of God. Then "divine service" is not a thing of a few hours and a few places, but all life becomes "holiness unto the Lord," and every place and thing as consecrated as the tabernacle and its golden candlesticks.

God takes very good care of his creatures especially his faithful children, who repose all their confidence in him and strive to do his will. At any rate, he does not allow them to go unfed, even if he has to spread a special table and get an angel to serve, as he did in the case of Elijah, who was both hungry and discouraged. Poor fellow, he was cut off from court favor and fellowship, and was tried within an inch of his life by the prevailing wickedness of the people. Finally, he sought the seclusion of the desert, where the rocky wilds afforded him rest, and God sent an angel, who brought him a drink and baked him a cake, and sent him on a special mission rejoicing.

Our Weekly Puzzle

All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers; but the sheep did not hear them. I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture.

Who spoke the above?

What is meant by "thieves and robbers"?

Who are the "sheep"?

Who is "the door," and what is meant by the term?

Where can this passage be found?

Five credits for each correct answer.

Answers must be mailed before April 10.

Answers will appear in issue of April 15.

Answer to puzzle in issue of March 18:

Solomon was David's youngest son. He was a prophet, a poet, a philosopher, a preacher. He succeeded his father as king of Israel. He was the author of the books of Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and Solomon's Song.

The "him" for whom Solomon built an house was the Lord God Almighty.

The Old Testament record can be found in the 6th chapter of 1st Kings. Read it; it is most interesting.

The "Most High" is the Lord God Almighty.

Today the "Most High" desires to dwell within the hearts of men: that is, he wants to control our thoughts and actions so that we will worship him in simplicity and in truth.

The lesson can be found in Acts 7:47-49.

Pure Religion

Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world (James 1:27).

There is a so-called religion that is not pure: "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain" (James 1:26).

A religion that is vain is not pure. A religion that worships with worldly orders, secret societies, and such like, is not pure. A religion that seeks to please man, at the expense of God, is not pure. You cannot please man and be a servant of Christ (Gal. 1:10). At one time, in a city, I was passing a saloon, and a man who claimed to be a member of the Church of God came out and spoke to me. His breath bore the odor of liquor and was very disagreeable. I asked him if he thought it a Christian duty to patronize such places. He answered, "When I want a glass of beer I'm going to have it." I replied, "A man is known by the company he keeps," and I thought he needed his hat on, which story illustrates the idea I have.

A man came to a house and seeing a small boy asked him,

"Boy, where is your Dad"?

The boy, with a peculiar drawl to his voice, replied:

"Dad, O yes, Dad is down in the lot with the hogs; you want to see Dad?"

"Yes, I would like to see him."

"Well, you go down the lane to the bars, then go into the field, and you'll find Dad there with the hogs. You'll know Dad; he's got his hat on."

What to Do With It

If you have a hard task, bury it;
If a dark doubt, bury it.

If you have a sound creed, teach it;
If a faith, preach it.

If you have a good hope, live it;
If a kind word, give it.

If you have God's peace, share it;
If sorrow's burden, bear it.

Humanity

Oh! be little, be little; and then thou wilt be content with little; and if thou feel now and then, a check, or a secret smiting in that is the Father's love; be not over-wise, nor over-eager, in thy own willing, running and desiring, and thou mayest feel it so and by degrees come to the knowledge of thy Guide, who will lead thee, step by step, in the path of life, and teach thee to follow. Be still and wait for light and strength. --I. Pennington.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Matilda Johnson was born in Galt, Canada, Dec. 29, 1853; died March 5, 1919, at the age of 65 years, 2 months and 7 days. She came to Nebraska about 1870 with her parents, who located on a farm near Union, Corvallis, Oregon, being her home since 1903.

She was married to A. W. Harlan Oct. 20, 1873, to whom were born six children, four boys and two girls. The living children are H. B., of Corvallis, Ore., Mrs. Woolman, of Republican City, Neb., Ray of Yakim, Wash., and Cyrus, of Eastern, Ore.

Mrs. Harlan is survived by her husband, four children, fourteen grandchildren, two sisters, two half sisters, and one half brother.

Sister Harlan was baptized in 1878, and became a member of the Church of God. We laid her away in Crystal Lake Cemetery, Corvallis, Ore., to await the coming of Jesus the life giver. Thus we have laid away a loving wife, an affectionate mother, a friend in time of need, and a faithful Christian woman.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer

A. N. Darby.

BRAND MARKS

On the great ranges of the Southwest, there are many and diversified brands. Each brand is placed on record in the state's herd-books together with the name of the applicant for certain marks, letters, or designs. Each herdsman is desirious of having a brand that will be hard to disfigure alter or change.

The ingenuity of man is always alert, and the cow puncher's ambitions of having a herd of his own some day, starts the slick ear job, and some times is quite successful in changing and altering brands and getting his stolen cattle to some distant range.

My brother, sister, are you carrying any brand marks around in your body? Do you now feel or have you ever felt the hot branding iron either inside or out? If not, where do you belong? Paul says: "I bear in my body the brand marks of Jesus." Paul, what kind of brand marks are you carrying? The answer is plain, "The cross of the Lord Jesus." That was Paul's brand mark through which he says, "The world has been crucified to me and I to the world."

Is your brand mark in the body, as Paul says his was, or on the surface where it can be altered and changed by the thief, and drawn across the divide to other ranges to feed on different pastures? The brand mark must be hidden in the interior or heart. Do we know then where our pasture or range is? Have we any marks to go by? Have we been crucified to the world and the world to us, or will we have to have a very strong telescope turned upon us to tell us from the world?

Have we put down malice, envy, hatred, strife, jealousy, backbiting? Are we sure we have put on love, peace, longsuffering, doing good, and not evil? Do our daily lives attest to those with whom we come in contact, that we have a different disposition? Do you feel that they think we are queer? Can you notice whether your interest is the same as theirs?

Would they come over into your pasture and feed with you should you invite them?

If the brand is on the surface, he will begin to look for marks on you to see what church you belong to. If he cannot see a double bar xx or bar w or some other brand he shakes his head and turns his eyes to the grass he is used to. He will be glad though if you will come over with him. Surely the grass is better, for there are more of us.

Then are you lonely? No! the pasture is ever green, and a ceaseless flowing spring, and a shade from the scorching heat.

You are at peace if you carry in your body the brand marks of the Lord Jesus, looking to him for your life, pouring out all the old man (or life) to make room for the new, for he has said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

Paul writes the Colossian brethren: "The secret which was concealed from ages and from generations, but now is manifest to his saints: to whom God wished to make known what is the glorious wealth of his secret among the nations, which is Christ in you the hope of glory."

If your heart is full of love, if you love to do his commandments is he not more than ready to help you? Can you not realize that he is leading and guiding you? Then is he not in your life?

Can you do this alone? I say no, for the Master is just as near his true followers today as he was to those who came to him for help and healing when he was here.

F. H. Lawrence.

When one of the big trees in California fell John Muir counted 4000 rings from the heart out. That meant the tree was 40 centuries old. Thus it was a strong young tree when Abraham went into Egypt; it was bearing seed when Sodom and Gomorrah was destroyed; is was old as America when Joseph was sold into Egypt, nearly a thousand years old when David slew Goliath, and older when Christ was born than the Christian religions is today!

THE DARKEST TIME IS BEFORE THE DAWN

Dear Brethren In Christ:

As we see darkness settling down upon an ungodly world, we who are of the light can lift up our heads and rejoice as no others can, because we know the darker it grows the nearer we are to the approach of the day; the day when the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in his beams. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." The morning here spoken of is a morning in which a sun shall rise never to set again; a sun from whose rays the whole earth will be beautified. Surely there will be healing in his beams.

If the apostle back in his day could say "the night is far spent," we may know about where we are now; and especially when we see trouble on every hand strikes, political commotions, upheavals of all kinds, "men's hearts failing them for fear of the things coming upon the earth" Surely the powers of the heavens are being shaken as never before. Surely it seems that we are in the darkest time of the night. The darkness will not effect us if we hold fast to the word of God. "Thy word is a lamp to my feet." Let us watch and be ready, because the thief comes in the latter part of the night when people are in the soundest sleep. The eyes are heavy then. How applicable to the world in this day. Let us strive to be of the jewels, for if we are [illegible] he will not steal us away. He wants precious jewels, polished stones for his temple of which he is the chief corner-stone.

When the world is shaken sufficiently to be aken out of their deep sleep they will find the jewels gone. The treasures of earth will be missing. What a terrible time when men run to and fro trying to find the word of God and cannot find it, "a famine not of bread, but of the word of God."

It seems that we are now in the tarrying time. Let us not let our lamps go out because our Lord delays his coming, but keep them burning so that when the call comes to go out to meet the Bridegroom we will have a light to show us the way.

Brethren, let us not sleep, but work while we can as the time is short.

Yours waiting for the King

LAW AND RIGHTEOUSNESS

Law: A rule of action established by authority. The authority in the case of the Mosaic law was God, and was given to the Jews through Moses (Ex. 21:12; 22:15,16).

Righteousness is purity of life, and is of God by faith, and is given to all obedient ones through Christ. Paul's own righteousness was through the law, but he wanted to be found having the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith (Phil. 3:9).

The promise to Abraham that he should be heir of the world, was not through the law, but through the righteousness of faith (Rom. 4:13). Without faith it is impossible to please God, and the law is not of faith (Heb. 11:6; Gal. 3:12). Faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness (Rom. 4:9). A man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law (Rom. 3:28). Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth (Rom. 10:4). Righteousness comes by faith, and faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God (Rom. 10:17). Israel followed after the law of righteousness, but did not attain it. Why? Because they sought it by the works of the law, and not by faith (Rom. 9:31,32). I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, for therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith. The just shall live by faith (Rom. 1:16,17). The law is a curse, and Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law (Gal. 3:11,12, 13).

Righteousness does not come through the law, neither does eternal life. God has not promised life, righteousness, nor immortality through the law; these all come through faith. If there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law. No man is justified by the law in the sight of God, nor by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ (Gal. 2:16; 3:21). The law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ that we might become righteous through faith in Christ, and after that faith is come, we are no longer under the law (Gal. 3:24,25). The righteous are not the followers of the law of Moses; Christ did not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance (Matt. 9:13; Mark 2:17; Luke 5:32). The eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers. If ye suffer for righteousness' sake happy are ye: and be not afraid, neither be troubled (1 Pet. 3:12,14). If the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear (1 Pet. 4:18). There is no life in the law. Eternal life is the gift of God through Jesus Christ our Lord (Rom. 6:23). This life comes through faith in Christ, which is doing right; and that is righteousness. We cannot get eternal life through the law for there is no promise of it. Why will ye die (Ezek. 18:31; 33:11-19). Because ye have no faith, and accept a law which is not of faith (Gal. 3:12).

Fate

This age of sin is passing on, the new will soon appear;
It is the time we're longing for, the grand sabbatic year;
No peace can ever bless this earth till Jesus comes again,
'Twill ever be bloodshed and war which is ruled by men.

Tho' man may prophecy of peace that ever will remain,
Some despot will unsheath the sword, and blood will flow again;
And all the treaties man can make will not abate the woe;
God has decreed that it shall be, and man must onward go.

But, when at last we reach the end of human greed and hate,
God then will take the reins in hand, and rule [illegible] mundane [illegible]
Then all shall bow to his decree, [illegible] heavenly [illegible] and love,
Like serpents, men shall then be wise, but harmless as a dove.

The Holy Spirit and Its Gifts

No. 3.

17. Spiritual Gifts

"Now concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant." "But covet earnestly the best gifts." "Follow after love and desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophecy" (1 Cor. 12:1, 31; 14:1).

Some suggest that as the word "gifts" is not in the Greek text, that "persons" is the proper word; but the nine endowments mentioned cannot come under the word "persons," but are all truly "spiritual gifts." Truly those who deny that these gifts are for the church today must remain "ignorant" of what they can neither "desire" or "covet." How natural it is for those who lose the favor of God to claim that they are "rich, and increased in goods, and have need of nothing," and that such gifts are not for the church today! (Rev. 3:1, 14-22).

Paul illustrates the church by a human body, and the different gifts bestowed by the Holy Spirit, by the different offices filled by each member of the body. He shows how the lack of one of these gifts would produce a schism in the body, and that therefore no one member could say to the other, "I have no need of you." "The manifestation of the Spirit is given to every one (in the body) to profit withal." God hath set officers gifts of healing, helps, etc., in the church, and the eye cannot say to the hand, "I have no need of thee." Hence wisdom or knowledge cannot say to healings or tongues, "I have no need of thee."

Yet three of these gifts are to cease "when that which is perfect has come" (1 Cor. 13:10).

The imperfect state of the church covers the period while the church "knows in part," "prophecies in part;" "speaks as a child," and sees "through a glass darkly." The nine spiritual gifts are to continue from A. D. 59, when Paul wrote this, until "that which is perfect is come."

The perfect state is when "we know as we are known" of God; when we "see face to face;" when we no longer see "through a glass darkly," or know only in part," when the child state is ended, and the perfect man state is attained.

The nine gifts are: Wisdom; knowledge; faith; healing; miracles; prophecy; discerning of spirits; tongues and interpretation of tongues. One of these gifts, faith, is said to continue into the perfect state, as also hope and love, which are not classed as gifts.

Three of these gifts are said to end when the perfect state is reached: prophecies, tongues, and knowledge in part.

It is generally assumed that miracles, healings, and wisdom, were to cease; but Paul does not say so; and surely if faith, hope, and love, never forsake the church, miracles and healing have always acompanied faith and love.

Reader: Can we candidly say that after A. D. 59, the church reached the perfect state where she no longer "knew in part," and prophesied in part," and "understood as a child," or saw "through a glass darkly?" This was the very age of the church when the mystery of iniquity was already at work; when the falling away from the faith had begun, and when there were many antichrists (2 Thess. 2; 1 John 2:18). Five years after this, Paul accuses the church as still being babes, needing milk, and not able to receive strong meat (Heb. 5). Thirty-one years after this, John recognizes "little children," "young men," and "old men," spiritually, in the church (1 John 2).

Some say that a completed Bible took the place of these spiritual gifts, and they refer to 2 Tim. 3: 15-17, where Paul says that the Holy Scriptures are able to make the man of God perfect, and they add, "without these spiritual gifts."

However Paul is not speaking of a perfect Bible, but of a perfected church, in 1 Cor. 12; and these Scriptures very clearly teach that a lack of the Holy Spirit is a lack of life and power, and that a lack of one spiritual gift leaves a schism in the body. To deny the spiritual gifts is to deny a large part of the word.

Truly this perfect state is not until the resurrection, when the whole church, head and body, living and dead, are builded together and immortalized. Until then, wisdom and knowledge, in part, are needed, and healing in part also.

Some reason that because Paul had a thorn in the flesh that was not removed, and Timothy stomach trouble, and Trophimus was sick, that the gifts had then ceased. But even Christ did not heal many in his own land, because of unbelief; and healings were only for some, where it was for God's glory.

Josephus says: "Nor does God use to give help in small difficulties to those whom he favors, but in such cases where no one can see where any hope in man can better their condition" (p. 71).

Justin Martyr, who wrote about 150 A. D., says: "For the prophetical gifts remain with us, even to the present time. And hence you ought to understand that the gifts formerly among your nation have been transferred to us" (p. 202).

Gibbons says: "But the miraculous cure of diseases of the most inveterate kind can no longer be an occasion for surprise, when we recollect that in the days of Ireaneus, about the end of the second century, the resurrection of the dead was far from being esteemed an uncommon event; that the miracle was frequently performed on necessary occasions, by great fasting and supplications of the church of the place, and that the persons thus restored by their prayers had lived afterwards among them many years. If the truth of any of these miracles is appreciated by their apparent use or propriety, every age had unbelievers to convince, heretics to confute, and idolatrous nations to convert; and sufficient motives might always be produced for interposition of heaven" (Vol. 1, pp. 401,402).

A large volume could be filled with the testimonies to healings and miracles in the first three centuries of the church, so we here just refer the reader to the writings of Iraneus, A. D. 190; Theophilius, A. D. 180; Tertullian, A. D. 200; Origen, A. D. 230; Cyprian, A. D. 250; Arnobius, A. D. 303; Lactantius, A. D. 310, and the History of Eusebius.

Why Spiritual Power Was Withdrawn

The nation of Israel was typical of the Christian Church (1 Cor. 10:11; Heb 10). The conditions of their favor and power with God are the conditions of our favor and power with God. These conditions are stated in the following texts:

"The Lord is with you, while ye be with him; and if ye seek him, he will be found of you; but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you." "And they entered into a covenant to seek the Lord God of their fathers, with all their heart, and with all their soul and sought him with their whole desire; and he was found of them: and the Lord gave them rest round about" (2 Chron. 15).

"Behold the Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy that it cannot hear: But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear" (Isa. 59:1)

Among the blessings pronounced on Israel for obedience, were healings of the sick: and among the curses for disobedience, were the diseases of Egypt (Deut. 28; Ex. 15:26). When they came out of Egypt, "there was not one feeble person among their tribes" (Psa. 105:37).

Doubtless all sickness is the result of violation of some law of God, or of nature; hence we must return in obedience to the laws of health before prayers for health can be answered. How well David describes the dyspeptic who gives his stomach no rest, as follows:

"Fools, because of their transgressions are afflicted. Their soul abhoreth all manner of meat: and they draw near unto the gates of death. Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and he saveth them out of their distresses... He sent his word and healed them, and delivered them from their destructions" (Psa. 107). Heeding the laws of health in God's word, would save many from premature death.

"Ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you," on this condition: "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you" (John 15).

"Whatsoever we ask we receive of him," on this condition: "Because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight" (1 John 3:22).

Jesus is always and everywhere present in Spirit with his followers, on this condition: that they teach the observance of all things whatsoever he commanded (Matt. 28:20). Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law"- from all its curses.

We are like a house founded on the rock, if we hear his sayings, and do them (Luke 6:46-49).

Christians are under the law of Christ, as found in the New Testament, by which they will be judged at the last day (Gal. 6:2; John 12:48,49).

"He that turneth away his ear from the hearing of the law, even his prayer shall be an abomination" (Prov. 28:9).

"If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me" (Psa. 66:18).

"When ye make many prayers I will not hear; your hands are full of blood" (Isa. 1:15,16).

"Now we know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth" (John 9:31). Let no one who says that he cannot quit sin, expect an answer to his prayers.

"Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil; learn to do well; seek judgment; relieve the oppressed. If ye be willing and obedient you shall eat the good of the land: but if ye refuse, and rebel, ye shall be devoured by the sword" (Isa. 1).

But to fully obey the New Covenant law is impossible to the natural man; hence the new heart and Holy Spirit are promised to enable us to walk in God's statutes, and to do them (Jer. 31; Heb. 8; 2 Cor. 3; Rom. 8).

To have the perfect love for God and for man, enjoined by Christ; and to be meek, longsuffering, patient, merciful, and loving to enemies; to have no worry as to food or clothing; to cast all care upon the Lord; to have perfect love, that casts out all fear; to have our affections set on things above, and not on things on earth; to love not the world, nor the things of the world; to overcome all evil with good, etc., is a hygienic, and supremely spiritual law, but impossible to keep without the indwelling of the spirit of Christ; yet a return to complete obedience to hundreds of neglected New Testament commands, is the condition that we must be met, if the Holy Spirit, and spiritual gifts are to be restored to the church.

Reader, do you know one professed Christian who keeps all God's New Testament law? "Come and let us return unto the Lord; for he hath torn, and he will heal us; he hath smitten, and he will bind us up." "And he will come to us as the early and latter rain to the earth" (Hos. 6, Douay Version).

The Early and Latter Rain

Adam Clark says on this:

"The rain of seedtime; and the rain of ripening before harvest: the first fell in Judea, about the beginning of November, after the seed was sown; and the second toward the end of April when the ears were filling; and this prepared for a full harvest. Without these two rains, the earth would have been unfruitful" (James 5:7).

How strikingly this applies to the church! The Holy Spirit is represented by the anointing oil (John 4:14; 7:37, 38); by living water, springing up into everlasting life (John (John 4:14; 7:37,38); and by rain (Psa. 72:6; Joel 2). The dry season between the two rains aptly represents the dark ages until the Protestant Reformation, when droppings of the latter rain began to fall on hungry and thirsty souls

Since the harvest represents the end of the age, and the wheat God's people (Matt. 13; Rev. 14; Matt. 3:12), and the early rain, the pentecostal outpouring, it is evident that the latter rain does not follow the gatherng of the saints, but precedes the harvest, to unify, empower, and to purify the bride for the great wedding (Rev. 19).

The former rain was given "moderately" as an "earnest" or "firstfruits of the Spirit," but should be expected more profusely in the last days of our age (Joel 2:23-31).

At the time when the church is troubled by vanity and lies from false teachers; and are scattered like sheep, having no shepherd; then, they are to "Ask of the Lord rain, in the time of the latter rain;" before the harvest (Zech. 10). To "ask for the latter rain," is not to deny it.

When could this apply better than today, and what kind of rain could refresh and mature the church for the rapture, only the Holy Spirit?

At what time does the fifth chapter of James apply, when the sick are to call in the elders for anointing and healing? It is when treasures are heaped up for the last days; when armies of laborers are being defrauded by unjust laws; when the coming of the Lord is (not past, but) nigh, when the husbandman is waiting to harvest the precious fruit of the earth, after it has received both the early and latter rain (vs. 1-10). It is then that the sick are to call in the elders of the church appointed, not by man, but by the Holy Spirit (Acts 20:23; 13:2; 1 Cor. 12:28), to anoint the sick with oil, and to pray the prayer of faith, without wavering (Jas. 1:5-8; 5:16); "and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven." "The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

Dear reader: Because all around is "gross darkness," and "spiritual deadness," and "the land is barren of faith;" let us not "deny the power of God" (2 Tim. 3); but let us hear and do all that the greater prophet than Moses has commanded (Deut. 18:18,19).

Read prayerfully the sermon on the mount, and all the New Testament commands, and find the law of the Lord that is perfect, converting the soul (Psa. 19:4-7; Rom. 10:16-18).

I am convinced that looking to the old law shadows, and to the ministration of death engraven on stones, the ten commandments (2 Cor. 3; Col. 2; Gal. 4) that do not point out over 100 duties enjoined in the New Testament law of God and of Christ is the main cause of spiritual deadness in the church, and will debar many from the kingdom of God (Matt. 5:20,33,34,38,39,43,44,48. Eph. 2:15). Read these texts and see Old Testament commands abolished by Christ. "Hear ye him!" says the Father. "Ye are complete in him."

The Gift of Faith

All the church had saving faith in the gospel, but all did not receive the gift of faith (2 Thess. 3:2; 1 Cor. 12:30). "With God all things are possible," and "all things are possible to him that believeth," for if any man have pure unmixed faith, like a grain of mustard seed, nothing shall be impossible to him (Matt. 17:20; 19:26). This faith must not be mixed with a single doubt, or waver of mind; no double minded man, who doubts, shall receive anything of the Lord (Jas. 1:1-9). No present symptoms, pains or feelings, should cause a doubt that we are healed, for faith is the basis of things hoped for, and form a confidence in things not seen." God's promise must be accepted as the substance. To reject as spurious Mark 16:9120, does not set aside scores of promises that nothing is impossible to "the faith of God." This faith is the result of both God and Christ, through the Holy Spirit dwelling in us, and walking with us (2 Cor. 6:16).

No one questions the genuiness of this text: "Therefore I say unto you, what things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them (now), and ye shall have them" (Mark 11:24). Verse 23, proves that this power to remove mountains, is for "whosoever shall not doubt in his heart, but believe that what he says is being done; he shall have it" (Greek text).

"Nevertheless when the Son of Man cometh, shall he find the faith on the earth?" (Luke 18:8). "And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye search for me with all your heart" (Jer. 29:13).

Paul says that the spiritual gifts and officers were placed in the church, for the followning eightfold work:

(1) For the perfecting of the saints;
(2) For the work of the ministry;
(3) For the edifying of the body of Christ;
(4) Till we all come to the unity of God;
(6) Unto a perfect man;
(7) Unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ;

(8) That we henceforth be no more children carried about by every wind of doctrine" (Eph. 4:8-17).

Dear reader think on these eight points, and decide in your own mind as to whether this perfect unity of faith, and perfect fulness of Christ, can ever be until the immortal state of the church is reached.

Therefore the withdrawal of the Holy Spirit and of spiritual gifts from apostate Christendom. resulted in all the confusion of faith, and in all the spiritual deadness of Babylon and her daughter sects. The time to favor both the natural Zion, and the spiritual Zion; "yea, the set time, is come" (Psa. 102). The Lord is now making bare his holy arm in the eyes of many nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God (Isa. 51:9; 52:10-13). As in the days of the coming out of Egypt, God is again doing marvelous things. (Micah 7).

THOSE BEASTS AGAIN.

No. 6.

The name by which this kingdom was known is The Latin kingdom, and its number must be the numbers designated by the numerical value of the Greek letters which are used to spell the words of the name; and we find by good lexical authority the Greek letters "E Latine Basilein." equals 8 plus 30 plus 1 plus 300 plus 10 plus 50 plus 8 plus 2 plus 1 plus 200 plus 10 plus 30 plus 5 plus 10 plus 1 equals 666. Why so if the papal kingdom does not follow out to the very letter the demands of the prophecy? Is it in an accident that the predictions concerning the two horned beast has been so exactly fulfilled? Nothing has yet been done to fulfill the prophecy if it is to be fulfilled in the future. Could it be more literally fulfilled again than it has been in the past?

Now we will turn to the little horn of Daniel seven and see whether it represented the papacy or the Roman Empire in its divided state, or one of the divisions of that empire. John says: "And it was given unto him (the leopard beast) to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations" (Rev. 13:7). Thus we see that the leopard beasts had "given unto him" power to make war with the saints. Who gave him this power? The two horned beast should cause (not kill himself, but cause some one else to do that) that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed." Here one was to kill, the other cause to kill. Now let us go to Daniel and see what his little horn was to do: "I considered the horns, and behold, there came up among them another little horn, before whom there was three of the first horns plucked up by the roots: and behold in this horn were eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things" (Dan. 7:8); "I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them." This horn, like the leopartd beast, had "eyes and mouth" "speaking great things." It should be borne in mind that Daniel saw both the pagan and christian Roman empires in the one beast; and the little horn to him was what the leopard beast was to John. After John had seen pagan Rome represented by a dragon, the eyes and mouth of both were fulfilled in the Roman Catholic Church. The mouth commanded and the beast did the killing. He killed about all that the mouth called "heretics." Any one wishing to verify this statement can find abundant evidence in works mentioned before.

The man of sin mentioned by Paul is equivelent to the two horned beast. "Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposed and exalted above all that is called god, or that is worshipped; so that he sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God" (2 Thess. 3:4). Who did this represent? or must we as Dowieites, Sanfordites, and many others look for a future coming of this man of sin? Has there been in the past a power that represented itself as God? Farraris' Ecclesiastical Dictionary, a Roman Catholic work, says: "The pope is of such dignity and his highness that he is not simply a man but as it were God. Hence the pope is crowned with a triple crown, as king of heaven, of earth, and of hell. Nay, the pope's excellence and power is not only about heavenly, terrestrial, and infernal things, but he is also above angels, and is their superior; so that if it were that angels could err from the faith, or entertain sentiments contrary thereto, they could be judged and excommunicated by the pope. He is of such great dignity and power that he occupies one and the same tribunal with Christ; so that whatsoever the pope does, seems to proceed from the mouth of God. The pope is, as it were, God on earth, the only prince of the faithful Christ, the greatest king of kings, possessing the plentitude of power; to whom the government of the earthly and heavenly kingdom is entrusted. The pope is of so great authority and power that he can modify, declare or interpret the divine law. The pope can sometimes counteract the divine law by limiting, explaining," etc.

In bull Sixtus declares: "The authority given St. Peter and his successors, by the immense power of the eternal King, excels all the power of earthly kings and princes. It passeth uncontrollable sentence upon them all. And if it find any of them resisting God's ordinanee, it takes more severe vengeance on them, casting them down from their thrones, however powerful they may be, and tumbling them down to the lowest of the earth as the ministers of aspiring Lucifer."

St. Bernard says: "None is like the pope except God, either in heaven or on earth."

Constantine said: "Pope Nicholas first conferred the appellation of God on the pope: who therefore, being God, cannot be judged by man."

Pope Innocent III said: "The pope holds the place of the true God." The cannon law designates the pope "Our Lord God."

This we think sufficient to prove Paul a true prophet even though there is not yet to come a future antichrist, and hence fulfills the prophecy. This man of sin is to be in existence when the Lord comes, and then consumed "with the Spirit of his mouth, and destroyed with the brightness of his coming." "And I saw the beast (leopard, no doubt), and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army. And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image" (Rev. 19:19,20). Who received the mark of the beast? Who did miracles in his sight? The two horned beast and his followers. This two horned beast was the deceiver of those who worshipped the leopard, and thus was the false prophet who was cast alive into the lake of fire at the advent. The man of sin who is destroyed then, must be the same fellow, as he too was worshipped (2 Thess. 2:4). If the false prophet was Mohammedanism, then the two horned beast was also the same thing. It is preposterous to say Mohammedanism caused men to worship the Roman beast, or as a brother puts it. "Catholic Rome," and thus his theory crumbles to the earth.

We do not wish to go off in a wild goose chase about what pregnant women will do seven years before the advent, nor whether the Holy Spirit will again be poured out just before the Lord arrives, but wish to say Peter declares of the pouring out of the Spirit in his day, "This is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel," and quotes all that Joel says about the pouring out of the Spirit. Now it was that or it was not. A writer says it was not by saying Joel's prophecy was not all fulfilled there. Peter says "this is that spoken by Joel," and quotes Joel as though it was all; and if there is not another prophecy declaring the outpouring of the Spirit, future, I would be afraid to state that Peter stated too much in his declaration. Peter being full of the Holy Spirit must teach what was given him through it. "All flesh" sometimes as used for only a portion of humanity (Isa. 66:23,24). "The world cannot receive the comforter" (John 14:16-18), and hence the "all flesh" must be less than the world. This pouring out must occur before the great and notable day of the Lord; and as the pouring out was before that time we have the objection of our critic answered

We are now done; and if any one can show that our evidence is not sufficient to show that the two horned beast was the papal government we shall be pleased to see his proof. As we have said, we do not make prophecy a test of fellowship, nor do we claim to know more than others. But to us this is the most conclusive theory, and history gives so much evidence of its proof that we must believe till another idea is shown to fill the bill better. We could only cull out a minor portion of the historic evidence at hand, and usually not the most conclusive, but the shortest statements we could get. And now if the ten kings have reigned, as we have shown, we must be near the advent. Then we should have our garments white, and be ready; for in such an hour as we may think not the Lord may come. Let us cling to the word, and not fly off into speculative theories about nonessentials, and secret things that belong unto the Lord. The apostles spoke much about the second coming of Christ, and admonished readiness for the events very often in their writings, but never speculated as to what will be done with the pregnant women at that time; nor ever stated that the word would be taken from the earth just before he came. Then why should we? The fact of the advent, and our being ready is enough; and if we are looking earnestly for it we will be making preparations to see the same.

PARABLE OF THE TEN VIRGINS

"Which took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom, five of them were wise, and five were foolish. They that were foolish took their lamps and took no oil with them."

What is this oil which the foolish failed to obtain? "Thou shalt command the children of Israel, that they bring thee pure oil olive beaten for the light, to cause the lamp to burn always" (Exod. 27:20). This is the type of the oil referred to in the parable. The words of the Lord are pure words (Psa. 12:6). Thy word is very pure (Psa. 119:140). Every word of God is pure (Psa. 30:5). Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (Psa. 119:105). The entrance of thy words giveth light; they giveth undertanding unto the simple (Psa. 119:105). The law of the Lord is perfect converting the soul. The testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple (Psa. 19:7). If so be that ye have heard him and have been taught by him, as the truth is in Jesus: (Eph. 4:21). When thine eye is single, thy whole body is also full of light; but when thine eye is evil, thy body also is full of darkness (Luke 11:34-36). If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness! (Matt. 6:23). But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost, in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ who is the image of God, should shine unto them. For God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ (2 Cor. 3:6). The light of the righteous rejoiceth; but the lamp of the wicked shall be put out (Prov 13:9). The wise shall inherit glory: but shame shall be the promotion of fools (Prov. 3:34). O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth (Gal. 3:1). Open ye the gates that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in (Isa. 26:2). O Lord are not thine eyes upon the truth? thou hast stricken them: but they have not grieved, thou hast consumed them, but they have refused to receive correction; they have made their faces harder than a rock, they have refused to rteurn (Jer. 5:3). If ye know that he is righteous, know ye that every one that doeth righteousness is born of him (1 John 2:26-29).

As vegetation in exposed places is hardier than that which grows in protected and favored spots, where the wind cannot reach, so character forms more robustly in the tempests of life than in the serenity and coddle which mistaken kindness would throw around us. MIRACULOUS ENDOWMENTS

Our readers have been privileged to peruse a series of articles by Brother Crowe on "The Holy Spirit and Its Gifts." They have been universally enjoyed, and he proposes to issue them in booklet form. Readers who would like to join him in this work can send either advanced orders or pledges to Brother Crowe, Chanute, Kansas.

The last number of the series appears in this issue. He advances the orthodox idea that the gifts of the Holy Spirit are extant now, or may be: and at any rate they will reappear before the coming of Christ. The antidote for this theory is complete in Bible Lesson VIII, to which the reader is referred. It may not be amiss to add here a few more thoughts on miraculous endowments.

If ever it was incumbent upon the people of God to set themselves against the delusions and absurdities of fanaticism, it is now just before the Lord comes. Futurism with its promised "wonders," is already powerfully at work, driving many into extravagances, which, so far as they are suffered to prevail, threaten to uproot the truth entirely by substituting in its place error; the coming of miraculous endowments instead of the coming of Christ; the coming of Elijah instead of Jesus. Novices in the truth are caught in the subtle snare. The weak are carried away by pretensions which dazzle and confound them. The greatest enemies of faith are the credulous, and of truth, those who propagate the errors that best counterfeit its similitude.

Miraculous Endowments Permanent an Egregious Mistake

To reason with persons who are ingeniously insane would be a fruitless attempt. But there are people to whom the subject has all the charm of novelty who are awed by the very assumption of supernatural powers by persons of whose devout character they entertain a favorable opinion, and who know not how to meet the arguments of permanent endowments and miraculous powers which, to their uninformed understandings, appear to be built upon the authority of the Holy Scriptures. The arguments for permanent supernatural endowments in the church are two:

1. The miraculous endowments possessed by Christ, and his inspired teachers of the apostolic age, are the perpetual inheritance of the Christian Church; and
2. The church (in which this doctrine is taught) lays claim to these endowments, and is in the present exercise of the powers which they are supposed to confer.

Now we hesitate not to say that those who claim that the power of working miracles, to the full extent in which it was exerted by Christ and his apostles, is the grand dowry, the preeminent distinction, the perpetual inheritance of the church, to be exercised by her through all her successive generations, is an assumption which, while it indicates a perverted understanding, it is to be feared has its chief origin in the heart.

The abettors of this extravagant notion have been deceived into its adoption by the confusion which exists in their minds regarding the distinction which the Scriptures everywhere teach us to recognize between miraculous operation and divine influence. Both are predicted in both Testaments; both are subject of express assurance and promise; and the delusions of modern prophets and Elijahs seems to arise from their inability to discriminate between them. Therefore it comes to pass that the predictions and promises which refer to the latter, chiefly and exclusively, are interpreted as applying equally to the former. When the grace of the Holy Spirit is assured as the perpetual inheritance of the Church, because it is associated with the extraordinary manifestation of its gifts, the assurance is supposed to extend an equal duration to both. That which is temporary is confounded with what is permanent; and pretensions, set up in behalf of the Christian dispensation, as a dispensation of miracles, which are totally incompatible with its character, as a system of moral evidence and spiritual influence.

Miraculous Endowments Promised and Given

There is no evidence in the Bible to support the idea that supernatural powers were to be placed at the disposal of the church for any definite time. They were promised, and they were given, is all the Bible says. However, of the Holy Spirit's influence, its dwelling in believers to the end of time, the proofs are numerous, specific, decisive. The error of modern Elijahs, as we have previously said, is in mistaking the nature of this gift, and confounding it with miraculous endowments, not remembering that the one is indispensable both now and forever while the other was only intended to subserve a temporary necessity, and, with that necessity, was destined to pass away.

There is, admittedly, the miraculous character of that special providence which regulates the affairs and accomplishes the destinies of the state and the church. The miracles thus wrought, however, are without our intervention or participation and they evince the continued agency of Christ, who is invested with all power in heaven and on earth, and who is carrying forward the plan of his government in conformity with the scheme of his word and prophecy, guiding and controlling events ecclesiastical and political, depressing or exalting individuals and nations with a view to the establishment of the kingdom of God. When he puts forth his power, and works out the purpose of his will by an energy which not only conquers the antagonistic powers of the world, and renders them subservient to the very designs they are united to frustrate—miraculous interposition is acknowledged; but mark you: It is interposition which neither asks nor accepts the aid of human agency; it requires neither prophets to foretell, nor orators in unknown tongues to declaim. This wise arrangement, however, which holds God and the creature each in his proper sphere, the advocates of miraculous gifts dislike, they want to be of the divine council and to be the interpreters of the movements of providence. This ambition is at the root of all the sophistry with which they labor to support the idea of the continuance and perpetuity of miraculous gifts in the church, or their revival preceding the Lord's advent. The source of their misguided zeal in upholding this dangerous doctrine, is to be found in the pride and manifold selfishness of the human heart. What but insufferable arrogance could induce the imagination that, through time undestined, as an ordinary and common occurrence, men and women should wield the prerogatives of omnipotence yes, endowed with and exercising higher powers than the Son of God himself! Thus they degrade the Deity for the purpose of exalting fallen human nature to his throne. In the case of individual assumption, can we conceive anything more daring?

Miraculous Endowments Compatible with Immorality

Discriminating between the miraculous endowments and the spiritual influences of the Holy Spirit demolishes completely the arguments which Brother Crowe has advanced in his article. It will have to be revised and rewritten to save the cause of present day healing. Inordinate desire for miraculous power is a fallacy always. Almost from the beginning the church attached undue importance to her miraculous gifts; she regarded them as indispensable to her existence; the notion in the primitive church of their perpetuity almost universally obtained; and amidst the imposing splendors of preternatural phenomena, the influences not less divine that were silent and unostentatious, working imperceptibly in the formation of Christian character were frequently overlooked as subordinate, inferior, worthless. This was exactly the state of things in Corinth when Paul addressed them in his epistle clothed with the divine authority of his apostolic mission. The wise and humble were ready to receive his announcements with acquiescence. In the 13 chapter of his first epistle he enumerates the various gifts which had so long distinguished this church and which, to a large extent, were the universal inheritence of all the collected bodies of the faithful. Then follows the fourteenth chapter, which contains a variety of salutary exhortations, all tending to restrain the exercise of miraculous gifts within the limits of order and usefulness. He more than intimates their temporary nature, and final disappearance. He prepares the way for this conclusion gradually, and by a train of reasoning which shows that he was aware of the prejudice he had to encounter, and which he was anxious to overcome. He knew he had to contend with an excessive attachment to miraculous endowments He therefore proceeds to dissociate them from genuine piety that divine influence which renovates the heart and fits it for the enjoyment of the kingdom of God He assumes what our Lord expressly affirms, that many in that day would address him in the language of unavailing expostulation: "Have we not cast out devils in thy name, and in thy name done many wonderful works?" to whom he replies, "Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity, I never knew you." He proceeds on the principle that these gifted disciples ought not to rejoice that the devils were subject to them, but rather that their names were written in heaven How liable even the miraculously endowed were to false delusion, and how little qualified by their supernatural gifts to profit by the saving influences of the Holy Spirit, he intimates in the implied contrast between love, upon which he pronounces eulogy, and the gifts of the spirit, which he depreciates. Look at the moral disposition of those gifted Corinthians: Paul represents them as envious, vaunting in pride, puffed up in conceit, behaving themselves unseemly, rapacious and selfish, unstable and censorious, regardless of the truth, but rejoicing in iniquity, suspicious, uncredulous of good, impatient under restraint and opposition. A more unlovely protraiture can hardly be imagined! He mentions not one grace of the spirit which dignified these brethren who had the gifts of the spirit. Yet with all these moral deformities he describes them as endowed with the gift of tongues, as being able to prophecy and understand all mysteries, as possessing supernatural knowledge as having the faith of miracles to remove mountains, as ostentatious in their almsgiving, and as indulging in this virtue to such an excess as to give all their goods to the poor. The apostle even insinuates that they were ready to become martyrs to their profession and the cause they had espoused. "A mixture of strange qualities here," you say; and so there is. From hence he infers that, though extraordinary endowments are excellent in themselves, they are not unfrequently combined with some of the most odious vices which can corrupt the human heart.

Miraculous gifts have ever been questionable distinctions. Faith to remove mountains too often superceded the faith in the gospel of the kingdom. Prophesying which cheered others with a hope of immortality, had no power over the prophet. The gift of tongues that charmed multitudes as with angelic eloquence, annihilates not the baseness of its possessor that love which is of God. To moderate the attachment of the Corinthians for miraculous powers Paul affirms that they were only suited to the infancy of the church, appertaining properly to her only in her childhood. "When I was a child, I spake as a child, but when I became a man, I put away childish things." This illustration has no relevancy unless as pointing out the object of miracles, which is to attest a divine mission and to confirm a divine revelation till both are consummated, and no longer. The idea of perpetual miracles is a natural absurdity and a contradiction in terms.

Revival of Miraculous Endowments Before Christ Comes A Fallacy

The arguments we have advanced against the perpetuity of miraculous powers are unanswerable, and Brother Crowe, recognizing the fact, has admitted their cessation, but pleads for their revived manifestation before the Lord comes. The servant that says, "My Lord delayeth his coming," can preach 'delay' all he pleases; he can invent an Anti-christ to come before Christ, Elijah to precede the Savior, the gifts of the Spirit before he comes to bestow them, and a thousand other things that must happen before Christ can come; but the Bride cannot be deceived by such specious arguments. The idea of the restoration of Holy Spirit powers before the Savior's advent is a dangerous fallacy, as every reflective mind must see when it but incipiently realizes

1. That a miraculous return of supernatural endowments before Christ comes would be an acknowledgement that Dowieism, Christian Science, Unity, and all the healing cults of apostate Christendom are making scriptural claims and teaching correct doctrine;

2. That as healing powers precede Christ's advent, and as they have not arrived yet, therefore the coming of the Lord is remote,

3. That since miracles must appear prior to the coming of Christ, they are premonitory signs of his coming, about which neither Christ nor any divine writer says one word!

4. That since Elijah, Anti-christ, and the Holy Spirit must come before Christ returns, we must confess to be looking for not Christ!

5. That since John the Baptist came "in the spirit and power of Elijah" as the harbinger of Christ at his first coming, and yet "did no miracle" (John 10:41). If the same "spirit and power" rests upon another John the Baptist to introduce the Lord's second advent, analogy leads us to expect nothing miraculous;

6. And finally: Does not the theory inculcating the revival of miracles, the coming of Elijah, etc., before the coming of the Son of Man, open the door for the entrance of impostors like Dowie and Sanford and make possible and probable their claim, "I am Elijah"? And does it not prepare the mind of him who believes it to receive such an impostor instead of Christ?

Dear Restitution:

Will some dear writer in The Restitution tell an old isolated sister what to do as regards the Lord's supper. There is only myself and son of the faith here; we cannot partake of the emblems of our Lord with any other church. Would it be right for us two to partake of the bread and wine by ourselves and so show forth the Lord's death till he comes? We are anxious to do everything that our Lord commanded. Will our dear Editor or some one of God's dear children kindly write us through The Restitution. With love for the children of God.

Your sister looking for the King,

Clarissa Campbell.

The promise, "there am I," is for "one or two;" why then hesitate to obey the Lord? Sister Campbell has her son and two make the requisate number. Why speak of "just us" when a son and daughter of God are referred to? Dear Sister Campbell, obey the Lord; obey his command and he will verify his promise and bless you. Let us not depreciate ourselves by saying "just us" when referring to kings and queens of God Almighty of whom he says: "The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing" (Zeph. 3:17). Editor.

Dear Brother Huggins:

I have studied all twelve of your Bible Lessons on First Principles. They certainly are wonderful, and a great help to Bible students.

Will you please explain fully the parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus. What is meant by the beggar dying and the great gulf fixed and the rich man's five brethren? I know what the parable has reference to, but I would like to have your idea especially concerning these three questions. Please find enclosed one dollar for which please send me six copies of your ninth lesson, six copies of your fourth lesson, one of each of your other lessons six copies of "The Smoke of Their Torments Ascendeth up Forever," and five copies of "Paradise Lost, Paradise Regained." Please send them at your earliest convenience. May God bestow his richest blessing upon us, and grant us eternal life in his kingdom.

Your brother in Christ,

Eugene C. Miller.

We have only sent Brother Miller one copy of lesson four, as the issue of this number is practically exhausted. This will explain to him and others who may have ordered this lesson why they have not received it. As soon as we can print a second edition all orders will be promptly filled. All other numbers of the series are in supply except lesson three, which we are reprinting now.

As to Brother Miller's request concerning the Rich Man and Lazarus, we shall keep it in mind, and when opportunity offers, will try and give a scriptural exposition of the parable.—Editor.

Dear Brother:

Enclosed please find post office money order for $2.00 in payment of subscription till July, 1919.

Would you be kind enough to let me know what points of belief differ in The Restitutionist doctrine as compared with the people known as Christadelphians? This age is probably nearing the climax and the movements in Palestine reflect the trend of affairs as never before. A groaning creation awaits the redemption and the pride of mankind destroyed by an infallible and unerring Judge.

With best wishes,

G. H. Sunley.

There are several bodies of people known as Christadelphians. With some of them the Church of God differs materially. With the body of original Christadelphians, we are in fundamental agreement. Editor.

Dear Brother Huggins:

I am interested in Brother Crowe's articles, but cannot agree with him that the Holy Spirit is the oil. If the sword of the spirit is the word of God (Eph. 6:17) then the spirit-filled word is all we require to "guide us into all truth." Jeremiah says, "Thy words were found, and I did eat them, and thy word was unto me the joy and the rejoicing of mine heart." If the word of Christ dwells in us richly in all wisdom (Col. 3:16), are we not then filled with the Holy Spirit? The trouble with Methodist theorists is they do not observe who is addressed, and for what purpose. The Holy Spirit was promised and given to the apostles and their converts that they might be witnesses unto the uttermost parts of the earth. Acts 1:8 quoted by the brother does not finish the subject. It was in regard to their baptism. And even after "they were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus" the Holy Spirit did not come on them until Paul "laid his hands upon them"; then they spake with tongues and prophesied. We have no Paul present to lay his hands upon us, and every one who has claimed to speak with tongues and prophesy have proved themselves impostors, because Paul tells us "prophecies shall fail, and tongues shall cease, and knowledge (by the Holy Spirit separate from the word) shall vanish away" (1 Cor. 13:8).

Here is a quotation from a chaplain in the army regarding the church (?): "The divisions, the impotence, the worldliness, the coldness, the sin and failure of the church stands revealed in the lurid lights of this war; and there are many indications that when the army returns there will be a great social upheaval. Many feel they are out to fight Prussianism, but they are becoming growingly conscious of Prussianism in our own national life." What a joy it is to be living in these times! and what a blessing to have the "word for a lamp and a light unto our path," amid this awful darkness! "How great is thy goodness which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee, which thou hast wrought for them that trust in thee before the sons of men.' Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

M. Louise Atwell.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.—Psa. 116:15.

Mrs. Amanda Case was born Aug. 10, 1850, died Mar. 8, 1919. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas and Winnie Case. She married J. Manning Case, and eight children were born to them, four of whom preceded her in death. The four living are Mrs. B. A. Taylor, H. C. Case, B. K. Case and J. G. Case. They were all with her when death took place. She leaves her husband and four children, twenty-three grand children, and ten great grand children to mourn their loss. However, we sorrow not, as some, for we believe she sleeps in Jesus. She embraced the faith of the Church of God several years ago, and lived in the faith till death. She was never better pleased than when conversing on some deep Bible subject. She liked to talk to her children and tell them of the great Bible promises, and to others who liked to listen.

The funeral was held from the Refuge Baptist Church at Dana. Interment in Refuge Cemetery. Words of comfort were spoken by Rev. T. J. Waters, a Christian minister.

PROTECTION

Wondrous the might of God! Held in the grasp
Of omnipresent Mind the world remains,
And in Love's tender, all-embracing clasp
The bruised heart may lose its sin and pain.

The mountain crags poise in their strength sublime;
The frailest floweret sways all unafraid;
Man, beast, and bird reflect the Life divine,
Who saw that all was good that he had made.

Shall I then fear? If God is mine, and All,
Nothing remains his children to affright
"Be still, and know"—and on the ear shall fall
The voice that earliest spake, and there was light.

How to Use the Bible

The following was written many years ago by the late Dwight L. Moody. As it contains much good counsel we here reprint it, trusting it will be of service to our younger readers.

Having studied the Bible, it is important we know how to use it, and nowhere is this knowledge so essential as in our personal work for Christ. In this personal work we can divide those we meet into classes:

First—the professing Christian who has no liberty, and no assurance, but is in "Doubting Castle." The whole of John's first epistle was written for such. Use 1 John 5:13; 3:2,24

The second class are backsliders. Use Jeremiah 2:5, 13, 19, 27, and 32; 3:12, 13, 14, and 22; Hosea 14 1, 2 and 4. Examples of backsliders reclaimed: David, Peter, Thomas and all the apostles.

The third class are those not deeply convicted of sin. Use Romans 3:10, 12 and 23; Isaiah 1.5 and 6; 1 John 1:10; Isaiah 53:6.

Avoid speaking false peace. Don't tell a man he is converted. Let God tell him that (Jeremiah 6:14).

The fourth class think themselves too great sinners. They are under very deep conviction. Use Isaiah 1:18; 53:4, and 5; 1 Peter 2:24; Isaiah 43:25; 44:22; Romans 5:6.

The fifth class don't know how to come to Christ. They must receive a person, not a creed (John 1.12). They must believe (John 3:15, 16,18 and 36; 5:24; 6:40,47). They must trust (Isaiah 26:3; Psa. 34:8). They must take a gift (Revelation 22:17; Pas. 116:13; Romans 6:23. They must come (John 6:37; Isaiah 55:1).

The new birth (John 3:7; 1 John 5:1, 4).

The sixth class do not feel that they are saved. Nowhere in the Bible is feeling coupled with salvation.

The seventh class go away trusting and come back doubting. They have neglected to confess Christ. Use Romans 10:9, 10; Matthew 10:32.

The eighth class are afraid they will fall. Use Jude 24; Isaiah 41:10, 13; 2 Timothy 1:12. Romans 8:35, 39; Colossians 3:3, 4.

The ninth class say they will try to be saved. Use John 7:17.

The tenth class say they will try to be saved. Use Romans 4:5.

Why people are unsaved (John 5:40).

Who are invited? (Luke 19:10; Matthew 9:12; Luke 5:32).

The time to be saved (Isaiah 55:6; 2 Corinthians 6:2; Hebrews 3:7).

The danger of delay (Proverbs 1:24, 28).

Warnings (Psa. 9:17; 2 Peter 2:9).

The Love Story of Ruth

Under date of March 16 the "New York Tribune" prints a full page colored picture of Ruth and Boaz, and this is what it says concerning it:

You can search through many volumes without finding a more exquisite love story than the one of Ruth and Boaz told in the greatest of books.

Ruth's father had died in a famine in which his father and his mother also perished. And Ruth, with her mother-in-law, Naomi and the other son's wife started to find a place where bread was plentiful.

On the way Naomi said: "Go, return each to her mother's house: the Lord deal kindly with you, as ye have dealt with the dead, and with me."

So the other son's wife went away. But Ruth said: "Whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God."

Then there came into the country of Boaz "a mighty man of wealth," and he saw Ruth, and he heard of her kindness to her mother-in-law, and he was gentle and gracious and told his servants to keep her as she was working in the fields. So she went home with an abundance of barley.

And their courtship ripened with the harvest, until Boaz called all the elders before him and told them that Ruth was to be his wife.

Take down your Bible now and read that story. It has more beauty than anything you have read for a long time.

The above is the opinion of a secular newspaper, and we are pleased to bring it to your notice. To you who feel that you must read "love stories"; to you who feel you must read stories of adventure; to you who want to read stories of war take your Bible, you will find them there, and what is more, they are written in good style, with pure grammar. You will not find anything to abase, or make you ashamed. Truly the Bible is the greatest of books.

Pope Concerned Over Palestine

We'll let you do your own thinking, without even a suggestion from us.

Clipped from "The New York Evening Sun"

ROME, March 10 (delayed).—Pope Benedict today issued the following allocution:

"I am anxious regarding the fate of the Holy Land. At present it is in the hands of Christians, but I am anxious regarding the decisions of the Peace Conference. I am aware that non-Catholic foreigners, supplied with great wealth, have taken advantage of the war's misery to disseminate their doctrines in Palestine. It is intolerable that so many souls losing the Catholic faith should go to perdition from the spot where the Savior bought eternal salvation."

Our Weekly Puzzle

Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning. Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of firstfruits of his creatures.

What is a "gift"?

Who is the "Father of lights"?

What is the meaning of "variableness"?

What are "firstfruits"?

Name an Old Testament text in which the word is used.

Who wrote the above? To whom written? Where can the passage be found?

Five credits for each correct answer.

Answers must be mailed before April 18.

Answers will appear in issue of April 22.

Answer to puzzle in issue of March 25:

The "chosen generation" are a people who, on account of their faith, humbleness, sincerity, and willingness to serve, God has chosen to be a light in this world, reflecting his love and truth.

They have the benefits of the mentioned high callings because they have "forsaken all and followed Jesus."

The meaning of "peculiar" is different, that is, the people of God in their manner and mode of life, with its joys and pleasures, show a marked difference to the people of the world.

The "him" who has called is God.

The passage was written by the apostle Peter, and can be found in 1 Peter 2:9.

Andrew Jackson

We presume that every reader has heard of Andrew Jackson, the seventh president of the United States, who was born March 15, 1767, and died June 8, 1845.

He was without regular education, was self-made, was true to his friends and relentless to his enemies, was not suspicious hence confiding; he displayed perseverance, energy, and skill which made him successful in most undertakings. Still when any of his personal acts were criticized he became quarrelsome and at times violent. In his ideals and manner of living he was plain, meek, humble, and very democratic. It has been said of Jackson that "he was the only president that went out of office more popular than he was when he entered."

Shortly before his death, a band of his friends bought and offered Jackson for his acceptance a Syrian sarcopragus on the condition that it be used as his tomb in death. In a letter of which the following is a part, Jackson refused the offer, stating his reasons

Hermitage, March 27, 1845.

Commodore J. D. Elliott,
United States Navy.

My dear Sir;

Your letter of the 18th inst. is now before me.

Although laboring under great debility and affliction, from a severe attack, from which I may not recover, I raise my pen and endeavor to reply.

I have read the whole proceedings of the presentation by you of the sarcophagus, and the resolutions passed by the board of directors so honorable to my fame, with sensations and feelings more easily to be conjectured than by me expressed . . . I cannot consent that my mortal body shall be laid in a repository prepared for an emperor or a king. My republican feelings and principles forbid it; the simplicity of our government forbids it . . . Please accept for yourself, and convey to the president and directors, my most profound respects for the honor you and they intend to bestow. I have prepared a humble depository for my mortal body beside that wherein lies my beloved wife, where without pomp and parade, I have requested, when my God calls me to sleep with my fathers, to be laid, for both of us there to remain until the last trumpet sounds to call the dead to judgment, when we I hope shall rise together, clothed with the heavenly body promised to all who believe in our glorious Redeemer, who died for us that we might live, and by whose atonement I hope for a blessed immortality.

I am, with great respect, your friend and fellow citizen

Andrew Jackson.

To Auntie Wince

How sweetly falls that blessed word
  Upon our listening ears!
And how we all in rapture cry
  That nothing through the year
Has brought us half the sweet content
  That this one word has given,
For when we live our lives aright,
  It is a type of heaven.

And when we near an altar there
  Upon the one foundation stone,
And kneeling to our Lord in prayer
  We call on him alone,
Receiving strength and grace
  To battle for the right,
He keeps us pure and undefiled
  And spotless in his sight.

'Tis there we build our character
  That shall eternal be:
If our pattern is the word,
  What beauty we shall see!
For Jesus is the Word made flesh,
  Perhaps some day we'll find
Our own is fashioned like the one
  Round whom our love is twined.

We must build then here below
  In likeness to our Lord above,
For all who'd share his home must walk
  In harmony and love.
And sweet will be the rest that then
  Unto our hearts is given,
For only Jesus in the home
  Can make it like to heaven.

Easter Reflections

O "Sun of righteousness, arise with healing in thy wings,"
Thou art our only hope and guide, from whom all blessings spring;
Jesus rose triumphant from the dead, victorious o'er the tomb,
Death lost his lordship o'er mankind, thou hast sealed his doom.

O conquering Lord, we long thy smiling face to see,
The earth o'erspread with holy joy when we abide with thee;
The trumpet call we long to hear, the dead shall then awake;
When thou shalt come to earth again, thy chosen ones to take.

Christ tasted death for every one, and in the tomb he slept,
While nature groaned in agony, and mankind feared and wept;
But God has called, thou didst obey, rose to immortal life;
No death or sorrow canst thou know, no pain, or care, or strife.

Thus when we rise at thy command triumphant from the grave,
Immortal life we then shall share, for thou hast power to save;
We'll hail the power of Jesus' name, let mankind prostrate fall:
God crowns him conqueror, "King of kings," and ruler over all.

Multum In Parvo

Article One

Prove all things, hold fast that which is good (1 Thess. 5:21).

The important thing in human effort should be to ascertain what is truth, especially God's truth revealed in his infallible Book of truth. God is not a man that he should lie (Num. 23:19). God cannot lie (Titus 1:2). Therefore I will trust him in all his infallible words. Lay up his words in thine heart (Job 22:22). Every word of God is pure; he is a shield unto them that put their trust in him (Prov. 30:5). The Bible to us is an unerring guide free from human opinions, and endless adversity of thought. God's Book is the only safe guide to lead us safely through all problems of life, and to attain a glorious future. The great need of mortal man is faith in God's device to give him in the world to come eternal life (Mark 10:30), which will be age lasting. The Greek word for life is zoe, and those that attain to zoe life will not die again. What is God's plan to give zoe life to mortal man (Job 4:17)? His plan is two Adams. 1 Cor. 15:45: "The first man (Adam) is of the earth earthy: the second man (Adam) is the Lord from heaven"—a quickening Spirit (1 Cor. 15:45-49). The first Adam was only a dust soul. God formed man of the dust of the ground; and Adam was made; (Heb.

Oregon Bible College

chai) a living animal (Heb. nephesh) soul by receiving animal life (Heb. neshamah) breath in his nostrils. Therefore as Paul says, "The first man is of the earth, earthy" (1 Cor. 15:47). Man was formed of the dust, which material all living things in the sea or on the land are formed. Therefore a man is only a dust-soul and in his nostrils has the same breath as a beast. "Yea, they all have one breath; so that man hath no preeminence above a beast. All go into one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again" (Eccl. 3:18,19,20). "Thou takest away their breath; they die, and return to their dust" (Psa. 104:29). "And in that very day their thoughts perish" (Psa. 146:4).

The contrast is great in the two Adams: The last Adam was made a quickening spirit (1 Cor. 15:45). Christ was the Son of the living God (Matt. 16:16). "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness: even so must the Son be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have (Greek, zoe, life) eternal life. For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have (Greek, zoe, life) everlasting life" (1 John 3:14-16).

Praise the Lord for his goodness and for his wonderful works to the children of men. Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness (Psa. 107:15,31). "Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies and the God of all comfort" (2 Cor. 1:3). Notice here the cosmogony of the Chief Architect of the universe. After he had created heaven and earth (Gen. 1:20) God said: "Let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creature." Notice here the word "moving" in the Hebrew is chai, and only implies living or alive. And the word "creature" in the Hebrew is nephesh, soul. The above words "moving creature," expressed in the English language we would say "moving soul" or living soul, as these are synonymous words (Gen. 1:21). God created every living (Heb. nephesh, soul) creature that moveth (Gen. 1:21) God said let the earth bring forth the living (Heb. nephesh, soul) creature. And the numerous living souls God formed each one after its kind. The Hebrew language calls everything both in the sea and on the land living souls. God made all the living souls before he formed the first Adam. "And God said, Let us make man." Notice carefully what material he used to form man. All animal or beast souls are formed of the dust (Eccl. 3:20). "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground; and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became. (Heb. chai, living, nephesh, soul) a living soul." Adam only received the same breath the beasts had (Eccl. 3.19). All flesh have the same breath (Gen. 6:17). And they went unto Noah into the ark, two and two of all flesh wherein is the breath of life (Gen. 7:15). Therefore the breath in Adam's nostrils did not give him any preeminence over the beast; as the one dieth, so dieth the other (Eccl. 3:19). Then shall the dust (soul) return to the earth as it was; and the spirit shall return to God who gave it (Ecl. 12:7).

Notice carefully what it is that returns to God when the dust-soul returns to the earth as it was. It is only the air from our nostrils that returns to God. We cannot get away from God to die. In him we live, move, and have our being (Acts 17:28).

Omnipresence is an attribute of God. He is present in all places at the same time. Therefore when the atmospheric lamp or candle, which is the spirit of man, is put out, God is there. He is universally present. Thus the spirit has returned to God who gave it. "If I make my bed in (sheol) hell, behold thou are there" (Psa. 138:8). The spirit of man is the candle (Heb. neshamah, breath; Greek ruach, breath, air, wind, spirit) of the Lord, searching all the inward parts of the belly" (Prov. 20:27). The same word spirit is rendered "lamp" (Prov. 20:20). And if any one curseth his father or his mother his (Heb. neshamah, breath) lamp shall be put out in obscure darkness. All living souls have only one breath; air in motion (Eccl. 3:19). The breath of man or beast is never said to live or die. It has no organism. Air, the universible fluid, is all there is to it. It consists essentially of two gases, oxygen and nitrogen. All of the firmament is air space. A man's breath is like the steam in the engine: cut off the steam, and the engine stops.

Notice the Antediluvians: "All in whose nostrils was the breath of life died; and every living substance was destroyed; both man, cattle, fowl, and creeping things. Noah only remained alive, and they that were with him in the Ark" (Gen. 7:22,23). Therefore the soul that sinneth it shall die (Ezek. 18:4). In Adam all die (1 Cor. 15:22). The life of all flesh (souls) is the blood (Lev. 17:11; Gen. 9:4). "And have made of one blood all nations" (Acts 17:26). In the past ages one event has happened to all living souls: death strikes its fatal blow; and all go to the dead. The living know that they shall die but the dead know not anything (Eccl. 9:5). He spared not their souls from death (Psa. 78:50).

The state to which death reduces man is represented by sleep, cessation of all life, thought, or action; rest, resting place, home, silence, oblivion, darkness, destruction, and corruption. There is no work, device, knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest (Eccl. 9:10). Therefore be careful when a false statement is intended to deceive (Gen. 3:4). Ye shall not surely die. There is no truth in him; when he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar and the father of it (John 8:44). But it is impossible for God to lie (Heb. 6:18).

When God completed his formation of all souls, he formed ample provisions for the sustenance of all living souls on the earth. God said, "Let the earth bring forth grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in its self upon the earth. And the earth brought forth grass and herb yielding seed after his kind; and the tree yielding fruit whose seed was in its self after his kind" (Gen. 1:11,12). Thus ample provisions were made. Also God put seed into all the souls he formed, to make offspring possible. By their fruits ye shall know them. Can a corrupt tree (the first Adam) bring forth good fruit? God looked upon the earth, and behold, it was corrupt: for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth (Gen. 7:12). Therefore all souls born since Adam are only like their progenitor, of the earth, earthy (1 Cor. 15:47). God's sentence is, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:19). The soul that sinneth it shall die (Ezek. 18.4).

Therefore the fountain head (Adam) must be increased before it is possible for the stream of human souls to ascend higher than the earth, earthy. Not one of Adam's descendants can keep his dust-soul from returning to dust. God only used one material (dust) to form all souls that are in the sea or on the earth (Eccl. 3:18-20): and the only cause of life in all souls is breath (Heb. ruach, air, wind) in their nostrils. "Thou takest away their breath, they die and return to their dust" (Psa. 104:29).

Therefore the present state of dead souls is plain: "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence" (Psa. 115:17). If there is no resurrection all dead souls are perished (1 Cor 15:18). Are there any of the following words in the Bible? Deathless souls, neverdying souls, immortal souls, neverdying spirits, immortal spirits, disembodied souls, go to heaven when you die, the death that never dies, eternal hell, endless misery, etc.

All of the above words are mythical; they are not found in the Bible. All souls have only animal life. Therefore Joshua, in a plurality of cities, utterly destroyed all souls therein (Joshua 10:31-41). In the present war millions of souls were killed. All souls born since Adam are only flesh souls. That which is born of the flesh is flesh (John 3:6). Let not sin therefore reign in your (mortal soul) mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof (Rom. 6:12).

All the souls born to the house of Jacob were three-score and ten (Gen. 46:27). All souls born of the flesh are like their original progenitor, of earth, earthy (1 Cor. 15:47).

What is a living soul? Anything alive in the sea or on the land (Rev. 16:3; Gen. 1:24; 2:7; Lev. 22:11). "If a priest buy any soul with his money he shall eat of it, and he that is born in his house, they shall eat of his meat." The soul the priest bought, was likely a goat or a sheep. I have killed and eaten a multiplicity of souls myself. Millions of souls are eaten every day. The life of all flesh in either man or beast is the blood (Lev. 17:14; Gen. 9:4).

Notice the only way man is a dual or tripartite being. "Love the Lord thy God with all thine (Heb. mind, yetser) heart, all thy (Heb. nephesh, soul) soul, and all thy might" (Deut. 6:5). To serve the Lord thy God with all thy mind, heart, and with all thy soul, to keep the commandments of the Lord (Deut. 10:12, 13). Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy (greek, dianoia, mind) heart, and all thy (Greek, psuche, soul) soul, and with all thy mind. (Matt. 22:37). Luke 10:27 says all thy heart, all thy soul, all thy strength and thy neighbor as thyself. Thus you see man is both dual and tripartite, in his animal soul. To be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace (Rom. 8:6).

God created man in his own image to have dominion over all other souls he had formed. He gave man brain superiority to rule all by intellectual power. As a man thinketh in his heart (Heb. lhab, mind) so is he (Prov. 23:7). Man is wonderfully made (Psa. 139:14). But it is appointed unto man to die, and in death he knows nothing, and his memory is forgotten (Eccl. 9:5). Man is the topmost piece of God's work. In Bible terms heart and mind are synonymous words (1 Sam. 2:35).

WHAT IS IT TO BE A CHRISTIAN?

By S. Roxanna Wince.

Does taking the name of Christ in baptism for the remission of sins that are past, make a man or a woman a Christian, even though such a man or woman has full belief of the gospel, and thoroughly repents of all that has been wrong in their lives? I do not think so. We take the name of Christ for a purpose; that purpose is to become "doers of the word." A christian cannot be a hidden thing, a poor cringing coward who dare not let the world know that he is "a bond servant of Jesus," "set for the defence of the gospel." Nor can he fail to show to the world by a life "full of good works," of self-denial, of forebearance, of gentleness, of holy living what the life of Jesus was. Any one who might imagine that he can be a christian and keep the great, wicked world in ignorance of the fact is sadly mistaken.

The whole matter, the confession of faith, the repentance, the baptism, the enlistment as a soldier to help fight the battles of God against all that is wrong must be open and above board. Jesus was not ashamed to have the world know that he had been baptized to fulfill all righteousness. He was not ashamed to have it known that he had come into the world to save it "by the sacrifice of himself," nor that he was the Son of God and the predestined "King of the Jews" and "of Israel." He did not deny his mission. "I am come," he said, "to work the works of my Father."

What were those works? What were those works? The healing of the sick; the opening of blind eyes; the unstopping of deaf ears; the giving of speech to the dumb; the making of the lame to walk; the casting out of devils; the feeding of the hungry; the rebuking of sin; the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom; the teaching of absolute purity of life; the promising of crowns and of thrones to the overcomers.

To us it has also been given to work the work of the Father. Insofar as it is possible for poor human hands to do this, we are the sons and daughters of the Almighty. If we are Christians indeed and in truth we have been "born" to be kings. Anything in that to be ashamed of O foolish, cowardly man? What would your country think of you if you said, "I want to be a soldier, but I do not want my body to know that I have enlisted, nor that my name is on your army rolls. I do not even want to fight in any of your battles." Would the great cruel war just over have been won if all the soldiers in the allied armies had been such soldiers as that?

And what of good would have been accomplished in the world if all who have embraced Christ had been ashamed to own him before the world as Peter was for a little time inclined to be?

Who would have preached the gospel? Who would have told men about Jesus? Who would have said, "There is life beyond death for all who believe in and obey him?" Who would have told the hopeless, sorrowing ones of the resurrection of the dead? Who would have turned men from idols to serve the living and the true God? Who would have died as more than 50,000,000 have died rather than deny Christ? Who would have gone to Burmah to suffer as Judson did; to the Cannibal Islands of the Pacific to dare death as Paton did?

No one, if all men were like you! No churches would ever have been built, no Bible societies founded; no Bible translations made; no missionaries ever gone into heathen wilds.

> "Ashamed of Jesus! can it be
> A mortal man ashamed of thee?
> Ashamed of him whom angels praise,
> Whose glory shines through endless days?
> No! when I blush be this my shame,
> That I no more revere his name!"

A man who truly loves Jesus will not want to keep people from knowing that he believes the gospel, has repented of his sins, has been baptized and is henceforth going to be an out and out soldier, though such a cause lead to the casting out of his name as evil, to revilement, to confiscation of goods, to prison, and to death. What did Jesus care for the shame, the mocking, the cruel thorny crown, the purple robe, the derisive laughter, the cross, the spear-thrust, the dying? It was all as nothing when weighed against the redeeming of a world, and the future rulership over all the kingdoms thereof. Paul was willing to endure the loss of all things if only so he might gain Christ and have part in the first resurrection. And so were all the worthy ones whose names are recorded in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews.

"A Christian is the highest style of man." There is no higher promotion, no higher commission than to be one of God's chosen ones for the evangelization and the saving of a lost and ruined world. Let men laugh if they want to, I thank God that he has given me the high and holy privilege of being a Christian and as such, of owning the name and "the words of Jesus" before men.

CHANGING THE TRUTH FOR A LIE

Who changed the truth of God for a lie, and worshipped and served the creature rather than the Creator (Rom. 1:25).

Notice the change in this verse, the difference between the Authorized Version and the Revised Version rendering. The Revised Version in this instance is undoubtedly more correct. Truth, especially "the truth of God," cannot be changed into a lie. It may be changed "for" a lie, and not unfrequently is when men and women fear and serve the creature rather than the Creator.

"Oh! They would not think of asking you—your views are too well known." So said the leader of a Methodist Bible Class to whom I offered my services for a Sunday in place of the teacher, who was sometimes absent through lack of interest in his congregation.

It is the old story; the one thing they cannot endure is the belief we hold that when a man dies he is not living but dead. They utterly fail to answer the plain straight question that a literal reading of such passages as John 3:16; Rom. 6:23, and 1 Cor. 15:13-23 demand. They quote broken fragments of passages. "To die is gain;" "To depart and be with Christ, which is far better," deliberately ignoring the context, and wilfully overlooking the fact that the sentiments they express are not found anywhere in St. Paul's letters. They persistently fail to appreciate that Paul was not seeking "gain" for himself but for Christ; and that that which Paul longed for was "far better" than either living or dying, viz; the returning of Christ and being with him. Surely it is nothing less than remarkable that the very word here translated "depart" is in Luke 12:36 translated "return." No writer, to my knowledge, has ever questioned that the parable is prophetic of the return of Christ, or that the word is correctly translated "return"—indeed the context establishes it. That being so, it is surely a precedent for any subsequent translation of the word. It seems incredible that a word occuring only twice in the Bible should in the first instance be translated "return" and in the next "depart," especially when the first translation is universally admitted to be correct*.

Let us ask "orthodoxy" a question or two. We shall be pleased to have a reply.

How is it that we find no expressions in the epistles of Paul, such as are used today regarding the death of Christians? Many must have died during the lifetime of Paul, yet he never once speaks of them as though they were still living. No honest mind can read the fifteenth chapter of first Corinthians without coming to the conclusion that St. Paul labours to make it clear that resurrection is an absolute necessity ere an immortal or incorruptible life may be obtained. The word of God is so full of plain direct statements—statements which admit of no second meaning—regarding these important themes. It is indeed marvelous how any christian can (after having had attention called to them), year after year, profess to believe and teach that for which they can find no proof in God's word, but rather contradiction and condemnation. Marvelous it is, that it is not difficult to get them to admit that if Christ had not been raised from the dead, neither can we be; and when they are confronted with the indisputable fact that if God had not raised Christ from the dead, he would still have remained dead, they still cling to their cherished belief that man does not die at all! Again and again have they quoted to me John 11:26 in proof of their assertion that man does not die; wilfully and purposely overlooking the fact stated by Christ himself, in the sentence immediately preceding, that a christian may die. They deliberately refuse to accept what is self-evident, that in the verse which they quote Christ had reference to the life that succeeds resurrection, and is parallel to Luke 20:34, 35. Had our "orthodox" friends put the conumdrum of the seven husbands who "died" they would have asked

"whose wife is she now"? The Sadducees did not profess belief in the resurrection; they deny it; yet their question was, "whose wife shall she be at the resurrection?" and the reply of Christ was consistent therewith. Our friends find fault with the Sadducees, and profess belief in the resurrection; yet according to their teaching the woman and her seven husbands are still alive. If so, whose wife is she now? Here is a question indeed, for plainly the need for resurrection is abrogated, and practically our friends do not believe in it.

The Bible teems with proof that man is mortal, perishable, and corruptible; that he is as much the product of "seed" as the rest of the animal creation, and subject to exactly the same laws of accident, decay, and death. Yet in spite of this, in spite of the fact that they cannot find a single statement in the Bible which gives direct support to their belief, they persist in propagating a creed which in many respects flatly denies the most dogmatic statements of God's word. Not only so, they brand as a heretic any who are bold enough to point out these inconsistences, and do all in their power to prevent them doing any good they can, lest by any means something in their address should expose the error of their teaching and show its utter want of reason and compatibility with Bible truth. Surely it is a poor creed that must rely on such tactics rather than accept the plain literal teaching of the word of God. Will they not be held responsible for placing stumbling blocks in a brother's way?

CHRISTIAN EXAMPLE AND DUTY

Philippians 4:5: "Let your moderation be known unto all men."

This is Paul's advice. He was one of the most humble and faithful of the diciples of Jesus. It is quite safe to follow him in all things. He would not do anything that would bring reproach upon the gospel, or to the name of his master. 1 Cor. 11:1: "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ." 1 Cor. 10:31: "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God. Give none offence to the Jew, nor to the Gentile, nor to the Church of God: even as I please all men in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved." He did not think of his own glory or profit, but of Christ and the Church, and the salvation of all men that he could reach by preaching the gospel. 1 Cor. 8:12: 13. "But when ye sin so against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, ye sin against Christ. Wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend."

What about our duty at the present time? Do we go in the ways of the world and set bad examples for those who are weak? Some appear to think that they can take part in the pleasures of the world, and still pass for christians, and feel offenced if others find fault with them. But Paul would not do such things. Romans 14:21. "It is neither good to eat flesh or drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth or is offended, or is made weak." But some will say, "I am as good as Brother So-and-So: if he is right I do not need to worry." But each one should be sure that they are walking in the straight and narrow path, no matter what other people are doing. 2 Cor. 10: 12-18: For we dare not make of ourselves of the number, or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves: but they, measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise. For not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth" (is approved). Now what is our duty to ourselves? 1 Thess. 5:8,9: "But let us who are of the day be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for a helmet, the hope of salvation. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ." If we are guided by the example of Jesus all will be well. He would not go to the dance hall, or the movies, or any other place of questionable resort.

All who desire to be in the kingdom, should deny themselves the sins of the world, and endeavor to walk worthy of the high calling wherewith we are called in Christ Jesus.

Our time here on earth is short even if we live "three score years and ten." In comparison to eternity it is only like a moment. Even if we spent our lifetime here serving the Lord, that would be a very small time in comparison to the object to be gained: eternal life in the kingdom of our dear Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. 1 Cor. 2:9: "But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." No, it is too great, too vast for man to comprehend: eternal life and the glorious kingdom over which Jesus and the saints shall reign during eternity, when righteousness and peace shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. No pain or death shall ever come. One continuous day of glory shall be theirs forever. Surely this is well worth all that we can do in this life to obtain it. Many are called, but few chosen. Will we belong to the little flock?

J. E. Hogarth.

The happiness of God is in his infinite beneficence. When we give we share in this divine beneficence, we become in part like God, we find our greatest joy in being kind and merciful. To love, to bless, to benefit, is to be God-like; no other activity is so blessed or so divine.

You have been purchased with a price and belong to the Lord, therefore you should be careful how you spend your time.

Love delights to give to the object of its love. It is its nature to give; it cannot help it. No sacrifice or self-denial is too great where love controls. Real gifts are born of love and stand for love, in the minds of the recipients. Real gifts cost us thought, time and strength.

Editorial

It is with distinct pleasure that we are able to announce the return of Brother George Dawle, of Detroit, Michigan.

Brother H. C. Baker has gone to the State Sanitorium, Mt. Vernon, Ohio, in the hope of regaining his lost health. Sister Maud Darrah, in whose care Brother Baker made the trip, reports that he arrived at the hospital in a weak and exhausted condition but in good spirits. Brethren and sisters, let us not forget to mention to God, in all of our approaches to him, this zealous and faithful young Brother, that if it please God he may be restored speedily to health and usefulness.

Futurists, who found the man of sin in the Kaiser, and who also found Elijah incarnated in Dowie and Sanford, etc., should now keep still long enough to think a little. Their argument was that the pope could not be the man of sin, for he was to deny the Father and the Son, while the pope accepts both. The Anti-Christ was to be an atheist. But the Kaiser is not an atheist: he boasts of being actually in partnership with God, and he professes a belief in Christ, too. And as to Elijah: There lies on our study table today a book of 552 pages entitled "Sunspots, Auroras, and the Day of Fire," by George P. Pierce, of Linden Heights, Ohio. Mr. Pierce is Elijah, too, if you please. Really we think this Elijah business is being overworked.

A whiff of miraculous endowments has caused a few mistaken but zealous men to predict the restoration of the Roman Empire, the restoration of the pope to his former ascendency, and others like wonders of Futurism. The pope, it was predicted, would set at the peace table, and run things generally. Facts are relentless things. The pope has had no voice at the peace table; indeed he was not even asked to attend! Futurists prophets have been discredited again. Soon Christ will come, for whom they are confessedly not looking, and they will then be discredited forever.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM THE ONLY TRUE GOSPEL

IV. SUBJECT MATTER: OR THE THINGS CONPOSING THE GOSPEL

We must hear, believe, confess, and obey the gospel. Before we can discharge these duties we must know what the gospel is. To ascertain what the gospel is we must learn what its subject matter is; or in other words, the things which compose it. Now since the word gospel means "good news," what are the glad tidings about? We cannot go astray in answering this question if we look to the ministry of Christ, for he preached the truth (Rom. 15:8). Anointed to preach the gospel (Luke 4:18) he preached the kingdom of God (vs. 43). "Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God" (Mark 1:14). "He went throughout every city and village preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God" (Luke 8:1). He sent his twelve apostles to preach the kingdom of God (Luke 9:2). "They departed and went through the towns, preaching the gospel" (vs. 6). Whatever the kingdom of God is, it forms the subject matter of the gospel. The kingdom and the gospel are so interwoven that the one is the other. When the kingdom of God is preached the gospel is preached; and when the gospel is preached the kingdom of God is preached. There is no gospel apart from "this gospel of the kingdom" (Matt. 24:14). "This gospel" is not so much as mentioned in popular churches today, much less preached! They say the gospel consists exclusively of the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ. Now it is a fact that originally these truths about Christ formed no part of the gospel. The apostles "preached the gospel" (Luke 9:6) with the sacrificial import of Christ's death left out. They were not aware that Christ had to suffer. He told them of his approaching death and resurrection, but "they understood not this saying, and it was hid from them that they perceived it not" (Luke 9:22, 45; 18:32-34). They could not preach that of which they were ignorant. Since in this state of ignorance concerning the sufferings of Christ they "preached the gospel," it is positive proof that the gospel originally, and as preached by them, consisted exclusively of the kingdom of God.

Previous, then, to the death of Christ the crucifixion formed no part of the gospel. Subsequently, however, it came to be preached as a supplement to "the gospel of the kingdom." This distinction appears in the phrases by which the preaching of the apostles is designated at these two different periods. In the gospels, written before the death of Christ, the proclamation is described as simply "the gospel of the kingdom of God"; whereas, in the book of Acts, after his death, the phrase runs, "The things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12). There was no alteration; there was simply addition. "The things concerning the kingdom of God" were the gospel before Christ's death; they remained the gospel after his death and resurrection; the only difference being that the "things concerning the name of Jesus Christ" were added to the kingdom as a means of procuring it (Acts 4:12). The gospel of the kingdom, however, remained the gospel notwithstanding this addition, and has the precedence, being always put first and the things concerning Christ second, as the following texts will show, since they were all written after the death of Christ:

> "And when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women" (Acts 8:12).
> "He spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God" (Acts 19:8).
> "I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more" (Acts 20:25).
> "There came many unto his lodging, to whom he expounded and testified (1) the kingdom of God, persuading them (2) concerning Jesus" (Acts 28:23).
> "Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came unto him, preaching (1) the kingdom of God, and (2) teaching those things which concern Jesus Christ" (Acts 28:30,31).

V. THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM THE ONLY TRUE GOSPEL

From the evidence now before the reader it is plain that the gospel of the kingdom was preached by Christ and his apostles before his death and likewise after his resurrection; therefore "the gospel of the kingdom" continues to be the gospel to this day. Christ spent forty days with his disciples after his resurrection "speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God" (Acts 1:3). He then left them under a commandment to preach "the gospel of the kingdom in all the world" (Mark 16:15,16; Matt. 24:14). Thus before the cross the gospel was the kingdom; after the cross the kingdom is the gospel still. As summarized by Luke in Acts 8:12 and elsewhere the gospel is composed of two sets of "things" tied together by the cross and securely held fast by the conjunction "and" "the things concerning the kingdom of God, AND the name of Jesus Christ." "The things concerning the kingdom" are first; the things concerning the "name of Jesus Christ," second. To be ignorant of these "things" is to be ignorant of the gospel. As the Jews only accept "the things concerning the kingdom of God," and these only in a carnal and corrupt form, so the Gentiles only accept the things concerning "the name of Jesus Christ," and these they contemplate with perverted gaze. Both reject the gospel. There are many false gospels, but only one true one. Paul speaks of three gospels in Gal. 1:6-9:

1. Another gospel;
2. A perverted gospel; and
3. "The gospel of Christ";

but the first two are false. "The gospel of Christ" is a descriptive phrase which clearly identifies it with the gospel of the kingdom which he preached before and after the cross. "It is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth" (Rom. 1:16). Readers, preachers, even angels in heaven are warned not to pervert this gospel, nor preach another. To change "the gospel of Christ," or to substitute another for it, is a crime which will call down the curse of God upon the culprit.

> "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel: which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed" (Gal. 1:6-9).

Communications

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

Dear Editor and Readers of The Restitution:

We see your call, after Sister Flora Wood's article, for Communications. We humbly desire to give God thanks for you brethren. Number 2 of "The Gifts of The Holy Spirit" by Brother Crowe, rightly takes the lead. "The Judgment to Come," by Brother Geo. B. Alldridge, follows nicely. And Brother J. J. Heckman, to the writer, leaves little room to question who the beast and its rider are. We have seen some of the "wonders" performed by them, both in the city and in the church. But the most touching and telling article is "Be Kind to The Aged," by Brother S. H. Thomas. We are thankful to God for the weekly visits of The Restitution, and especially the copies dated Dec. 10 and 11th.

Remember us at the throne of grace.

R. A. Humphreys.

Dear Brother Huggins:

I wish to say through The Restitution that our boy, Orlando Robbins, is now at home, having been discharged March the 18th inst., for which we are thankful to God. We wish to say to all who wrote us in our sorrow that their kind words were appreciated, and we now ask them to rejoice with us. We can say with the Psalmist, "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness and for his wonderful works to the children of of men." Through the help of God and The Restitution brotherhood he was given non-combatant work.

Your Sister in love and hope,

Mrs. W. L. Robbins.

Obituaries

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Leona Evelyn Johnson, daughter of Gideon and Marth Heston-Logan, was born Dec. 8, 1881, and departed this life March 21, 1919.

In 1900 she was united in marriage to Arthur J. Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson, of Teegarden, Ind. To this union were born twin sons, Chester and Lester.

When a young woman she united with the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith and was bapized in that belief. Besides her family she leaves a sister, Mrs. Lottie Logan-Pickerl, of Bremen, Ind., and a brother, Ernest Logan, of Lakeville, Ind., besids a host of relatives and friends.

By Lottie Logan-Pickerl.

Funeral services were held from her late residence in South Bend, March 23, at 10 o'clock a. m., conducted by D. E. VanVactor. The house was filed to overflowing with her relatives and friends who showed their love and esteem by the gift of many flowers. We spoke words of comfort from 1 Cor. 15 and Heb. 2. Burial was made in Riverside Cemetary where Sister Johnson was laid to rest till the coming of the Lord.

D. E. VanVactor.

Dr. A. Wallace Mason was born at Cooper Fyfe, Scotland, Aug. 12, 1840, and fell asleep March 18, 1919, at Santa Ana, California.

He had been spending the winter at Brother and Sister Adamson's Pomona, and went for a few days visit to Brother Elliott's where he passed away at 7 a. m. after a brief illness of two hours, acute indigestion and heart failure being the cause.

He had been speaking for several evenings on the precious truths of God's word, to friends and neighbors invited in to hear the message, and retired saying he felt real well. He had no greater pleasure in life than to preach the glad news of the kingdom, being a deep student of the word, and all history relating to it. The Bible was his constant companion and guide.

He heard and accepted the truth in young manhood while working in London, England, and his own father and mother were his first converts.

Dr. Mason came to Toronto, Canada, in 1870, where he united with the Christadelphians, and took part in many park lectures and debates on the Scriptures. He was an earnest student of phrenology, graduating from Fowler and Wells Institute, New York. With this knowledge of character, he was the means of inspiring and helping many to better and higher things.

In 1890 he graduated from the Western Reserve Medical University of Cleveland, Ohio, where he and family located and united with the Church of The Blessed Hope under Brother Jobiin. Here he practiced his profession for six years, returning to Toronto on account of his wife's health.

In Toronto he specialized on chronic and nervous diseases until his health broke down when he retired from active practice, spending his summers on the farm with his son Charles.

Two winters he spent travelling in England and Scotland lecturing and preaching of the things of eternity and the coming kingdom.

Dr. Mason is survived by his wife, four sons and four daughters, also eighteen grandchildren. His surviving children are Andrew Mason, of Cleveland, at present in France; James Mason, M. A. of Toronto, Dr. Will Mason, of Toronto; Charles Mason, St. Catherines; Mrs. Jessie Fyfe, St. Andrews, Scotland; Mrs. Daisy Guest, Fredonia, N.Y; Mrs. Pansy Fear, Toronto; and Mrs Lillian Railton, Fonthill, Ont. One son, Alex of Cleveland, died in May, 1918.

The funeral was held from his home in Toronto, March 28, conducted by Brother Webster, of Toronto, and Brother Austin, of Fonthill. They spoke of the enemy death and the precious hope of the resurrection when Christ comes to awaken his sleeping ones and change the living.

The family were all there but Andrew and the house was crowded by old friends who loved father and came to pay a last tribute to his memory. He looked so beautiful as he lay at rest in his last long sleep, surrounded by a wealth of sweet flowers which he had loved so much in life.

We laid him away on the hillside in the cemetery in hope of the soon coming of our dear Lord and king. We shall miss our dear father in wise council and ever ready help; but we are glad he can suffer no more. Jesus says: "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet he shall live." This was father's hope, and we say with our whole hearts, "Come, Lord Jesus; Come quickly."

Lillian Ralston.

DANIEL'S IMAGE

Chapter 2

Volumes have been written upon this chapter, and it may seem presumptious for me to add to the interpretations already on record. Nevertheless, I feel impelled in the interests of truth to offer for the consideration of the Church an interpretation that materially differs from those that have gone before.

This chapter, and the image which it pictures, is in my judgment of vast interest to those who are looking for the coming of the Lord, and a correct understanding, of corresponding importance to Bible students. Although the significance of the image seems so very plain and easily applied, yet each interpretation has its difficulties. For example, if we agree that the image represents first, the Babylonian empire, second, the Medo-Persian empire, third, the Grecian empire, fourth, the Roman empire, and that the stone strikes the image on the feet, or during the supremacy of the two kingdoms, or the divided Roman empire: How can it crush and reduce to chaff "together" those proud kingdoms of gold, silver, and brass, which have long since passed into history?

In order to overcome this difficulty many good and earnest students argue that in order for the gold, the silver, brass, iron, and clay to be broken and reduced to chaff "together," they must in some sense exits when the stone descends. And as it is unthinkable that those ancient mighty nations will be actually restored to their former state, therefore it is argued, that they will be reproduced "representatively;" that is to say, certain modern kingdoms will, in these last days, develop characteristics similar to those ancient nations, and these will be reduced to chaff together with the two kingdoms of iron, and thus the gold, the silver, brass and iron will be broken together "representtatively;" and the word of God will be vindicated.

Now dear ones, I am so constituted that I rebel against any interpretation of Scripture that sounds strained, or far fetched. This word "representatively," so requently used by those who interpret as above, is not even remotely suggested in the prophecy. The word says plainly and distinctly that the gold, the silver, brass, and iron, will be broken in pieces "together," not representatively or by proxy. Therefore, it seems to me, that whatever it was that was represented by the image, still exists in its entirety, and since that time, has not ceased to exist. To my mind, it was the image itself, that was and still is representative. It was and is a pen picture of the 2520 years of the times of the Gentiles. A vivid picture of Gentile supremacy was shown the King, and he was told by Daniel that these times of the Gentiles began with his dominion, and would end in another of iron and miry clay. Nebuchadnezzar was the beginning, head, or first King of Gentile times prefigured by the image. The last form of Gentile supremacy or government, is the present one, of iron mixed with miry clay.

This image of Gentile supremacy exists today, as actually and literally as in the days of Nebuchadnezzar. It bears the same ear marks now as then; selfishness, and savage ferocity are still its most prominent characteristics. They still teach their children from the cradle that to be a great warrior is the noblest profession of man. Beautiful and accomplished young ladies, vie with each other for the privilege of kissing the hand that is most deeply stained with human blood, and feeble age raises its cracked voice to applaud him who has the greatest number of victims to his credit; while he whose savage and bloodthirsty brain can invent the most terrible engine of destruction and revolting cruelty, is lauded and praised as his countries greatest benefactor. The general, who by some master stroke of military wisdom and strategy, has accomplished the death and mutilation of tens of thousands of his fellow men, is bedecked with medals and high sounding titles, and orders of honor, and paraded from nation to nation as the most noble specimen of mankind.

Surely the image, "whose form was terrible," still retains its old time characteristics, and stands complete, ready for the stone to begin its work of destruction; and in view of above facts, it seems reasonable to conclude that the image was but a picture or shadow, representing the 2526 years of Gentile times; and as the substance of the shadow, or Gentile times exists today, not in part only, but complete, as in the days of Daniel, it would seem that the image now stands on its feet before us, ready for the fall of the stone.

If any further evidence were required to substantiate this interpretation, I would ask the question, What is the work that our Lord and his saints will undertake, when he comes? Is it not to break in pieces and consume all these nations, and declare the times of the Gentiles ended? Then, manifestly, existing Gentile nations, that are to be broken and destroyed, are the substance of the image shadow.

S. H. Thomas.

REPORT OF YOUNG PEOPLE'S MEETING

The Young People's Society of the Cleveland Church held the first meeting of the official year at the home of Brother and Sister Gazeley, Marshall Ave., Friday evening, April 4th, 1919.

The regular business meeting was conducted at which time five new members were enrolled and a letter from the retiring corresponding secretary read.

Sister Doris Meermans was the leader for the evening and took as her text Luke 18:16: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God." She developed the lesson along a figurative line to show that unless we become as little children in obedience and humility we cannot hope for eternity (Psa. 131:2; Matt. 18:3; Mark 10:15). It is as children that we become joint-heirs with Christ to the kingdom of God (Rom. 8:17).

A social hour featuring victrola selections and a delightful luncheon concluded the evening's program, and all present could not but have been benefited by this instructive evening.

Remarks

The work for February seemed more natural, as we were able to get in some work. Some people are very much interested from the gospel sermons they heard and no doubt but a little later we may be able to report some baptisms as a result of this month's work.

I was called to Palmer to preach Sister King's funeral sermon, but could hold no meetings on account of the extremely bad roads. I am now answering calls in the west, and have enough to keep busy the rest of the year. Pray, brethren, that the Father may call a few more through the efforts of his workers before it is too late.

MEMORY VERSES MICAH [illegible] TITUS 2:13,14

GOLDEN TEXT: Psalms 17:15

SWEETLY SING

George R. Kramer

Sweetly sing, ye winds, the brightness
That remaineth for the dead,
Who, in robes of stainless whiteness,
Soon shall leave the dusty bed.
Darkness reigns where they are lying,
But they only wait the day
When shall cease the mourner's sighing
As the death-gloom flees away.

Summer winds be softly singing
All around their blessed graves;
Flowers sweet, be fragrance flinging,
As the verdure o'er them waves.
Never more shall they know sorrow,
Nevermore shall sadly weep,
For there comes a glad to-morrow,
When they rise from sacred sleep.

They shall leave the dust, all beaming,
Like the plumage of the dove,
Gay with gold and silver gleaming,
As it sings its song of love.
Christ shall raise them in his glory,
They shall in his image shine,
And the blaze of song and story
Shall be dimmed by light divine.

Sweetly sing, ye birds, their brightness,
When, through all the summer day,
Ye may leap with wings of lightness,
When the frosts have passed away.
Even now the silver lining
Is around the gloom we dread,
Glowing with an endless shining,
Which shall robe the blessed dead.

Easter Day

This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it.

Let us go back to the day which the Psalmist styles "the day which the Lord hath made;" this beautiful "first day of the week" when "Mary Magdalene and the other Mary went to the sepulchre," and heard the angel say: "Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here, for he is risen, as he said, Come, see the place where the Lord lay."

The heavy stone, that had given such troubled thought to the disciples, had miraculously been rolled away. The sepulchre was empty, for the Lord had risen.

The same Lord that had entered the tomb, was the one that had come forth. The print of the nails still showed in his hands and his feet, as also did the wound in his side. He is not a spirit, still all the grossness and heaviness of matter have been thrown aside, and with the quickness of thought he passes from place to place, unimpeded, unchecked by any obstacle. His body, created for the purpose of suffering, no longer feels pain. The glory and the wonder and the mercy of it all! Our bodies are one day to be glorified; if now we suffer with him, we shall also be glorified with him; and according to the extent of our suffering, to the same extent shall our glory be. Here is a thought we do not dwell upon enough, which we do not permit to enter as prominently as we should into our view of life. We think too much of the misery that surrounds us. We often go through our various works from a sense of duty that is akin to fear. Our highest aim, sometimes, is simply to enter the kingdom, neglecting and forgetting the reward that is "exceeding great." We groan under our persecutions as if we would be better off without them. How all this would change were we to view earthly things in the light of the resurrection. How the rays that spring from Christ's empty tomb would illumine the dark hours of life, we would enhance in value all our present sufferings and trials, as Paul has said: "The sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us."

As Christ, therefore, has risen from the dead, because Christ has so risen, we too shall one day rise from the dust of the grave; this corruptible to put on incorruptibility, this mortal to put on immortality, with youth never to grow old, the purest love never to languish, "with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, we are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the spirit of the Lord."

Easter Morn

Rejoice! Rejoice!
So the angel said.
Christ has risen,
Risen from the dead.

Rejoice! Rejoice!
Christ can no more die;
He has gone to heaven,
His home in the sky.

Rejoice! Rejoice!
Christ will come again,
To establish his kingdom,
And forever reign.

Rejoice! Rejoice!
Sound the trumpet loud,
To every corner of the earth,
The sun, the moon, the cloud.

An Easter Prayer

"For when he shall appear we shall be like him; for we shall se him as he is." Like to him, Christ our Savior, in nature and body, like to him in heart and in mind, and this throughout the eternal ages. Come Lord Jesus, come quickly. We desire to see thee; we desire to be like unto thee. O God, grant unto us this our prayer.

Our Weekly Puzzle

I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures.

Who was the "I" who delivered this message?
From whom did the "I" receive the message?
Where in the Scriptures is this event prophesied?
Where in the New Testatment can we find a record of the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus?
What sigificance is there in the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ to us who believe?
Where can the above passage be found?
Five credits for each correct answer.
Answers must be mailed before April 25.
Answers will appear in issue of May 6.

Answers to puzzle in issue of April 1:

The words were spoken by Jesus Christ our Lord.

Those who came before Jesus, claiming to be the Christ were called "thieves and robbers," because they robbed the people of their salvation, and Jesus of praise, honor, and glory.

"The sheep" are those who, believing Jesus to be the Christ, the Son of God, accept him as their Savior and Redeemer, endeavoring to do his will.

The "door" is Jesus, and he is so called because to reach God we must enter through him.

The passage can be found in John 10:8, 9.

The Dawn

Out of the east comes up the mighty Sun
To tell us that a new day has begun,
That something must be either lost or won—
"The Dawn."

And later, when its beams are blazing bright,
And all God's world is bathed in brilliant light,
We have to do our bit or lose the fight—
"The Day."

And when the evening calls us to our rest,
When the great Sun rolls backward to the west,
They who have fought the fight alone are blest—
"The Night."

Yet when our day of earthly toil is done,
Our eyes will greet a yet more glorious Sun,
That of the spirit will have but begun—
"The Dawn."

An Universalist Sermon

Text.—Behold, I bring you tidings glad,
Which are to all both good and bad.

Enmity between editors and poets seems natural and mutual. It is an open secret that the Editor of The Restitution has an antipathy for poetry This may be a weakness for which we need commiseration However, when only a lad we did enjoy a poem called "An Universalist Sermon," but as the most of it had leaked out of our mind in the flight of years, we were only able to reproduce fragments of it from memory. It was our good fortune to find this poem a few days since in an old book; and we publish it now in the hope that our readers will appreciate and enjoy it as much as we do.—Editor

I'll bring some famous proofs that God will save
The whole, alike the saint and lying knave.
First, brother Moses tells a story
In which we wise ones well may glory,
About an universal slaughter
Which happened by a flood of water.
The Lord was angry with the wicked race
Which broke his righteous laws and scorned his grace.
And so the rascals he resolved to whip,
Except old Noah in his mighty ship.
He sees they are too bad to live, and so
Drowns them, and up to heaven they go.
My friends, you see that by this great disaster
The sinful world was only saved the faster.

I'll tell you next about a famous city
(Which, if there were a hell might raise your pity.)
The filthy Sodomites were almost fit
To go to heaven, on God's right hand to sit,
No race of sinners ever was so bad,
And never was there punishment more sad.
The world must ever wonder and admire
How such a race was purified by fire.
Yet God did send the blazing brimstone down
And raised to heaven at once the wicked town.
Lot might have shared their glorious fate,
But fled, and like old Noah, had to wait.

You've heard how chosen Israel was oppressed,
And how by Moses' hand the Lord distressed
With plagues the land of hardened Pharaoh,
Until at last he let the people go.
But hardly were the wanderers out of view,
When he commanded his army to pursue.
Six hundred chariots, fierce for fight,
Roll'd o'er the plain to intercept their flight.
On came the furious host with noise and clatter,
Full bent the timid fugitives to scatter.
Alas for human schemes! a cloud by day,
By night a frightful fire obstructs their way.
And now the sea's deep bed receives them all,
The waters foaming by their side, a wall.
An Eye looked forth from that mysterious cloud.
Beneath whose glance the proudest warrior bowed.
The chariot wheels come off; yet on they drive.
Resolved against the power of heaven to strive.
Now mark the scene where God displayed his grace;
Back rolled the raging waters to their place
As Moses stretched his hand, and in the deep
Proud Pharaoh's legions whelmed at one fell sweep.
Oh! what a sudden choking, strangling then,
Without a warning seized those wicked men!
A moment, and the pain of death is o'er
And up to heaven their souls together soar.

Thus many a tale like these the Scriptures tell,
Which plainly prove there's no such place as hell.
The rebel Korah and his band went down
Into a pit that opened in the ground.
The Canaanites, and other nations too,
Because too bad to live, God's people slew.
Remember how Philistia's hosts were driven
By thousands and by thousands into heaven,
When Samson swung the ass's bone on high,
And when beneath the house he sought to die.
And Baal's four hundred and fifty prophets, too,
(An impious host, whom good Elijah slew)
Were doubtless made a company right fit
(Too good to live) on God's right hand to sit.
Remember Ananias and his wife,
Who fell at Peter's word and yielded life.
How lucky that they told those wicked lies,
Since they were passports to yon happy skies.

Beware my friends of priestcraft, for the fact is
On your credulity they sadly practice
Who say things everlasting have no end:
I say they have; on me you may depend.
I've read the Greek and sure I best can tell
The meaning of those words translated "hell."
Is it not proved that hell is all a figure
Contrived to make a little thing look bigger?
A scarecrow for old women, which we wise
Do by our actions show that we despise;
True, if you can, of sin you'd best repent;
But if you don't you'll get no punishment,
Save what is incidental to your birth
Upon this cursed, sin-polluted earth.
We fear disease, and every form of death,
But when we breathe our last expiring breath
The scene is changed, our punishment is o'er,
And upward, free from guilt, we soar.
So banish fears, you'll go to heaven by flocks;
And if there be a hell, I hope 'tis for the Orthodox

The Dying Drummer Boy

Selected by Brother H. S. Lasher

Two or three times in my life God in his mercy touched my heart and twice before I learned the truth I was under deep conviction on account of sin.

During the American war I was surgeon in the United States Army and after the battle of Gettysburg there were many hundred wounded soldiers in my hospital, among whom were twenty-eight who had been wounded so severely that they required my services at once—some whose legs had to be amputated some lost an arm, and others both an arm and a leg. One of the latter was a boy who had been but three months in the service, and being too young for a soldier, had enlisted as a drummer boy. When my assistant surgeon and a steward wished to administer chloroform previous to the amputation, he turned his head aside and positively refused to receive it. When the steward told him it was the doctor's orders, he said, "Send the doctor to me."

When I came to his bedside I said, "Young man, why do you refuse chloroform? When I found you on the battlefield you were so far gone that I thought it hardly worth while to pick you up; but when you opened those large blue eyes I thought you had a mother somewhere who might at that moment be thinking of her boy. I did not want you to die on the field, so ordered you to be brought here; but you now have lost so much blood that you are too weak to endure an operation without chloroform, therefore you had better let me give you some."

He laid his hand on mine, and looking at me in the face, said, "Doctor, one Sunday afternoon, in the Sunday School, when I was nine and a half years old, I gave my heart to Christ. I learned to trust him then; I have been trusting him ever since, and I know I can trust him now. He is my strength and my stimulant; he will support me while you amputate my arm and leg."

I then asked him if he would allow me to give him a little brandy. Again he looked me in the face, saying, "Doctor, when I was about five years old my mother knelt by my side, and with her arm around my neck, said 'Charlie, I am now praying to Jesus that you may never know the taste of strong drink. Your papa died a drunkard and went down to a drunkard's grave, and I promised God, if it was his will that you should grow up, that you would warn young men against the bitter cup.' I am now seventeen years old, but I have never tasted anything stronger than tea or coffee; and am in all probability about to die; would you that I should die with brandy on my stomach?"

The look that boy gave me I shall never forget. At that time I hated Jesus, but I respected that boy's loyalty to his Savior; and when I saw how he loved and trusted him to the last, there was something that touched my heart, and I did for that boy what I had never done for any other soldier—I asked him if he wished to see his chaplain. "Oh, yes, sir," was the answer.

When Chaplain R—— came he at once knew the boy from having often met him at the tent pray-meetings, and taking his hand said, "Well, Charlie, I am sorry to see you in this sad condition."

"Oh, I am all right, sir," he answered. "The doctor offered me chloroform, but I declined it; then he wished to give me brandy, which I also declined; and now, if I die, I can die in my right mind."

"You may not die, Charlie," said the chaplain; "but if you should not recover, is there anything I can do for you after you are gone?"

"Chaplain, please put your hand under my pillow and take my little Bible; in it you will find my mother's address. Please send it to her, and write a letter and tell her that since the day I left home I have never let a day pass without reading a portion of God's Word, and daily praying that God would bless my dear mother."

"Is there anything else that I can do for you, my lad?" asked the chaplain.

"Yes; please write a letter to the superintendent of the Sands Street Sunday-school, Brooklyn, N. Y., and tell him that the kind words, many prayers, and good advice he gave me I have never forgotten; they have followed me through all the dangers of war, and now, in my dying hour, I ask my dear Savior to bless my dear old superintendent; that is all."

Turning towards me, he said, "Now doctor I am ready, and I promise you that I will not even groan while you take off my arm and my leg, if you will not offer me chloroform." I promised, but I had not the courage to take the knife in my hand to perform the operation without first going into the next room and taking a little stimulant to nerve myself to perform my duty.

While cutting through the flesh Charlie Coulson never groaned, but when I took the saw to separate the bone the lad took the corner of the pillow in his mouth, and all that I could hear him utter was, "O God, blessed God, stand by me now!" He kept his promise and never groaned.

That night I could not sleep, for which ever way I turned I saw those soft blue eyes and when I closed mine the words, "Blessed God, stand by me now," kept ringing in my ears. Between twelve and one o'clock I left my bed and visited the hospital, a thing I had never done before unless specially called, but such was my desire to see that boy. Upon my arrival there I was informed by the night steward that sixteen of the hopeless cases had died and been carried down to the dead house. "How is Charlie Coultson; is he among the dead?" I asked.

"No, sir," answered the steward, "he is sleeping as sweetly as a babe." When I came up to the bed where he lay, one of the nurses informed me that, about nine o'clock two members of the U. S. Christian Commission came through the hospital to read and sing a hymn. They were accompanied by Chaplain R——, who knelt by Charlie Coulson's bed and offered up a fervent and soul-stirring prayer, after which they sang, while still upon their knees, the sweetest of all hymns, "Jesus, Lover of my Soul," in which Charlie joined. I could not understand how that boy, who had undergone such excruciating pain, could sing.

Five days after I had amputated that dear boy's arm and leg he sent for me, and it was from him on that day I heard the first gospel sermon. "Doctor," he said, "my time has come; I do not expect to see another sun rise, but thank God, I am ready, and before I die I desire to thank you with all my heart for your kindness to me. Doctor, you are a Jew, you do not believe in Jesus; will you please stand here and see me die, trusting my Savior to the last moment of my life?" I tried to stay, but I could not, for I had not the courage to stand by and see a Christian boy die rejoicing in the love of that Jesus whom I had been taught to hate, so I hurriedly left the room. About twenty minutes later a steward, who found me sitting in my private office covering my face with my hands, said, "Doctor, Charlie Coulson wishes to see you."

"I have just seen him," I answered, "and I cannot see him again."

"But doctor, he says he must see you once more before he dies." I now made up my mind to see him, say an endearing word, and let him die, but I was determined that no word of his should influence me in the least so far as his Jesus was concerned. When I entered the hospital I saw he was sinking fast, so I sat down by his bed. Asking me to take his hand, he said, "Doctor, I love you because you are a Jew; the best friend I have found in this world was a Jew."

I asked him who that was. He answered, "Jesus Christ, to whom I want to introduce you before I die; and will you promise me, doctor, that what I am about to say to you your will never forget?"

I promised; and he said, "Five days ago, while you amputated my arm and leg, I prayed to God through Christ to convert you to the truth."

These words went deep into my heart. I could not understand how, when I was causing him the most intense pain, he could forget all about himself and think of nothing but his Savior and my unconverted self. All I could say to him was, "Well, my dear boy, you will soon be all right." With these words I left him, and twelve minutes later he fell asleep in the faith as it is in Jesus.

Hundreds of soldiers died in my hospital during the war, but I only followed one to the grave, and that one was Charlie Coulson, the drummer boy, and I rode three miles to see him buried. That dear boy's dying words made a deep impression on me. I was rich at that time, so far as money is concerned, but I would have given every penny I possessed if I could have felt towards Christ as Charlie did; but that feeling cannot be bought with money. Alas! I soon forgot all about my Christian soldier's little sermon, but I could not forget the boy himself. I now know that at that time I was under deep conviction of sin, but I fought against Christ with all the hatred of an orthodox Jew for nearly ten years until, finally, the dear boy's prayer was answered and God converted me.

About eighteen months after my conversion I attended a prayer meeting one evening in the city of Brooklyn. It was one of those meetings when Christians testify to the loving-kindness of their Savior. After several of them had spoken, an elderly lady arose, and said: "Dear friends this may be the last time that it is my privilege to testify for Christ. My family physician told me yesterday that my right lung is very nearly gone, and my left lung is very much affected, so at the best I have but a short time to be with you; but what is left of me belongs to Jesus. Oh! it is great joy to know that I shall meet my son in the kingdom of God. My son was a soldier for Christ. He was wounded at the battle of Gettysburg, and fell into the hands of a Jewish doctor, who amputated his arm and leg, but he died five days after the operation. The chaplain of the regiment wrote me a letter, and sent me my boy's Bible. In that letter I was informed that my Charlie in his dying hour sent for that Jewish doctor and said to him 'Doctor, before I die I wish to tell you that five days ago, while you amputated my arm and leg, I prayed to God to convert you.'"

When I heard this lady's testimony I could sit still no longer. I left my seat, crossed the room, and taking her by the hand, said, "God bless you, my dear sister, your boy's prayer has been heard and answered. I am the Jewish doctor for whom your Charlie prayer, and his Savior is now my Savior."

"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

"For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved" (Rom. 10:13).

"'Whosoever heareth,' shout, shout the sound
Send the blessed tidings all the world around:
Spread the joyful news wherever man is found,
'Whosoever will may come.'

"'Whosoever will, whosoever will,'
Send the proclamation over vale and hill;
'Tis a loving Father calls the wanderer home,
'Whosoever will may come.'

"'Whosoever cometh need not delay:
Now the door is open, enter while ye may:
Jesus is the true, the only Living Way;
'Whosoever will may come.'

"'Whosoever will;' the promise is secure;
'Whosover will,' for ever shall endure;
'Whosoever will,' 'tis life for evermore;
'Whosoever will may come.'"

The Most Unhappy Man

Pope's Position as a London Writer Sees It

"Probably the most unhappy man in the world today is the Pope." So a writer who signs himself "Torquemada" declares in the "New Europe" (London). The same writer continues: "His political universe is tottering. In this war between despotism and free peoples despotisms are cracking and dissolving; and, if the Allies realize their aims, despotisms will disappear."

It is the misfortune of the Pope, we read further, to have inherited a body of politicla teaching in virtue of which the Papacy is the most absolute and rigid of the medieval despotisms that still survive.

"At one time in its history it (the Papacy) almost succeeded in establishing itself as political overlord of the world. When its very existence was threatened by the Reformation it tempered some of its pretensions and became at once the partner and the tool of the secular despotisms that helped it in the counter-Reformation. The Papacy has lost its temporal possessions, but it has abrogated none of its claims. It is not only itself a medieval despotism, but it professes to teach authoritatively the principles that must govern the social structures of all States. Its theory of society, of the State, of the relation of States to the Papacy, has not changed in any essential particular since the Middle Ages.

"It still claims the right to depose kings and governments, to free peoples from their allegiance, to delimit the sphere of action of every secular government. It denies the right of civil States to legislate in certain questions of political and social policy. The Syllabus of Pius IX, which is part of the dogmatic teaching of the Church, anathematizes those principles of liberty and freedom on which every Allied State rests, and for the extension of which the Allies are fighting. According to the political teaching of the Pope the American Republic, the French Republic, and Modern Italy were conceived in sin, and are merely tolerated because the Papacy has not the political power to destroy them."

These claims may sound preposterous, but "they are the current teaching in every Catholic ecclesiastical seminary," the writer states: "and notwithstanding that they have long since been rejected or ignored by the majority of Catholic laymen in the Allied countries, they represent the convictions of the ecclesiastical organization and determined the papal attitude toward the war."

"The German, the Austrian, the Turk and the Bulgar, as they have shown themselves in this war, are not the natural allies of the head of a great spiritual Church. But they are the only possible allies of the political teaching of the Pope and his ecclesiastical organization. The Central Powers in political theory are acceptable to the Vatican, for the Central Powers fight for the continuance of despotism. The Vatican is opposed to the Allied Powers, since the Allied Powers fight for freedom and free institutions. Catholics who fight on the side of the Allies in this war are not political followers of the Pope, but are his political opponents. The turn of the tide has come."

When this war is over, concludes the writer, the Pope, unless he sets his house in order, will find himself the only despot remaining, faced by a democratic world that has come into being in spite of his laws, his intrigues and his anathemas, and springing largely from the blood of his spiritual children.

"He has had to face this issue before in the case of particular countries, but he then had his fellow despots to back him, and he came out at least undefeated, by branding as irreligious those who were prepared to lay down their lives for right and justice and freedom.

"Two courses are open to him in the future, either to run the risk of being a Pope without a flock or to become again the democratic head of a great spiritual church."—Selected by BROTHER TITMAN.

How Valuable is the Truth?

The truth is the most valuable of all things in the world. In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth (Gen. 1:1). Deut. 32:4 says he is the rock, his work is perfect: for all his ways are judgment. A God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he. Brothers and sisters, in the beginning we have God the Creator of all, a God of truth. God gave his only begotten Son which, of course, would be a Son of truth. Then said Jesus to those Jews that believed on him, "If ye continue in my word, then ye are my disciples indeed" (John 8:31). "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free" (John 8:32). Dear reader, if we never receive the truth, it will be impossible to receive eternal life, and without eternal life we shall be as though we had not been. The unrighteous shall be ashes under the feet of the righteous in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts (Mal. 4:3). "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15) "And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge, and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing" (1 Cor. 13:7). "And abideth faith, hope, charity, these three: but the greatest of these is charity" (1 Cor. 13:13).

We find also that charity rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth or with the truth (1 Cor. 13:6). "Jesus saith unto him (Thomas), I am the way, the truth, and the life" (John 14:6). When Christ was being scourged, Pilate said unto him, "Art thou a king then ? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Everyone that is of the truth heareth my voice. Pilate saith unto him. What is truth ? And when he had said this he went out again unto the Jews, and saith unto them, I find no fault at all" (John 18:38). "Howbeit when he, the spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth" (John 16:13). "Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him, let him know that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins" (James 5:19, 20).

"Buy the truth and sell it not, also wisdom, instruction and understanding" (Prov. 23:23). We can do nothing against the truth but for the truth (2 Cor. 13:8). The third chapter of second Timothy will give you a description of the enemies of the truth. Read the whole chapter.

"Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God ? This is he that cometh by water and blood, even Jesus Christ, not by water only, but by water and blood. And it is the spirit that beareth witness, because the spirit is truth" (1 John 5:5, 6). An exhortation to praise God for his mercy and truth follows: "O praise the Lord, all ye nations; praise him all ye people. For his merciful kindness is great toward us. And the truth of the Lord endureth for ever. Praise ye the Lord" (Psa. 117:1, 2). "Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle ? Who shall dwell in the holy hill ? He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart" (Psa. 15:1, 2). "The Lord, he shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wing shalt thou trust, his truth shall be thy shield and buckler" (Psa. 91:4). "Remove from me the way of lying, and grant me thy law graciously. For I have chosen the way of truth" (Psa. 119:29, 30).

"I have written unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one. I have not written unto you because ye know not the truth, but because ye know it, and no lie is of the truth" (1 John 2:14, 21). "These are the things ye shall do: speak ye every man the truth to his neighbor: execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates" (Zech. 8:16). "But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things which is the head even Christ" (Eph. 4:15). "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness" (Rom. 1:18). Dear brothers and sisters, as I have given sufficient Scripture to show the value of the truth therefore be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. May we be worthy of the saying, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Two Kinds of Love

Sister Martha says: "I certainly love Mrs. Jones: she is so good to me; she praises me and says such nice things about me, and gives me such nice presents, and in fact, seems to think more of me than any other of her numerous friends. Then, too, she is so jolly and full of fun. There is always something doing when she is around. I know she don't believe the Bible is really the word of God. She thinks it is just a good old fashioned book, out of date, consisting largely of old time fables and fish stories, and not to be taken seriously by modern enlightened people. She admits that she does not know much about God or his purpose, and thinks that the chief aim of this life is just to have a jolly good time, and not worry about the hereafter. She says that the great majority of mankind are after a good time and are content to let God run things as he pleases, just so he does not bother us; and she says she will take a chance with the crowd, and then whatever happens she will have lots of company, and she thinks she can stand it if the crowd can.

"Of course I cannot agree with her on these points, but I never knew anything very bad in her, and she is so good to me that I just can't help but love her more than other friends I have. Of course I am careful not to broach these unpleasant questions, and I always avoid argument, as I do not want to offend her. Some day, perhaps, I may have a Bible talk with her, but really there seems to be no suitable time for such dry subjects as God and his truth. There are always so many pleasant and more interesting things to talk about. I tell you it never gets dull when Mrs. Jones is about, and she always finds time to give some little attention to me, and seems to prefer me to any of her other friends. She is the very dearest friend I have and so jolly and full of fun—just keeps everybody laughing all the time."

This, dear ones, is worldly love. Its roots are planted deep in the flesh. Its foundation is selfishness and vanity. This kind of love is carnal, and belongs to sinful flesh. It comes not because the subject is noble or worthy, but because "she is so good to me," and because she is full of fun, and able to make people giggle and laugh.

Mary says: "I love Mrs. Berea. We have never been very intimate, but whenever in her presence, I cannot but admire her pure language and noble sentiment. She seems always to be on the side of right, and always proud to acknowledge in any company that she believes and reverences the Bible as the word of God. If this confession brings, as it usually does, ridicule from the giddy and foolish, she replies gently and kindly. I have been present on several such occasions, when she spoke of her belief in the soon coming of Christ, to raise the righteous dead incorruptible, and give to those who live a crown of endless life, to break in pieces and subdue all earthly rule and authority, and upon the ruins of man made kingdoms of fleshly greed, bloodshed, and injustice to set up a glorious and righteous government, which will fill the whole earth, and last throughout the countless years of eternity; and as she stood meekly and alone, yet so fearlessly before the scoffers, and so gently and bravely proclaimed these grand old Bible truths, so dear to God and our Lord Jesus Christ, I could not but admire and love her, not because, 'she was good to me,' but because she loved, honored, and publicly acknowledged the same God that I love and honor and the Bible as his word. Not because she is a good entertainer, and able to make the giddy and foolish worldling giggle and laugh, but because she ever stands ready with wise counsel and wholesome advice, to aid and strengthen the weak and wavering and with words of sympathy, faith, and hope comfort the sad and sorrowful." This is Christian love. Such an affection is pure, true, unselfish, and lasting, for the foundation rests with God.

In conclusion, dear ones, I would ask How do you love ? As Martha, or as Mary ? Are your dearest friends chosen as such because they are good to you, or because they are true to God, and the Bible as his word ? Your dearest friends are those whose company you most keenly enjoy, those whom you most delight to welcome to your home. Are they of the Martha, or Mary class ? Don't think this is a matter of little moment. The company we keep and the friends we choose, matter much to God, and seriously affect our chances of life in the ages to come.

NECESSARY DISCRIMINATION

The saints have the promise of immortality, the Father's nature. We find in Revelation 22.2 that after the thousand years reign there is to be no more death, but that the tree of life is restored for the healing of the nations. Why the need for the healing of the subjects if the nations are immortal beings? If God puts his law in their inward parts and gives them of his spirit, and they shall all know the Lord from the least unto the greatest, with the tree of life restored, and also other conditions which prevailed in the Garden of Eden, will not the possibility of death be removed?

Editor's Reply

We must not confuse the Scriptures that apply during the thousand years with those whose application belongs to the sinless and deathless eternity subsequent to it. Lesson VI of "Bible Lessons" will help to make the necessary discriminations.

"REST OF THE DEAD" NOT APOSTATES

If [illegible] of the [illegible] rejected [illegible], do the unjust meet the Lord in the air, too? If not, where and when do they go to be judged? Is it not true, rather, that the rest of the dead who lived not again until the thousand years were finished (Rev. 20) are apostates of all [illegible] with the close of the thousand year period, will come up in a judgment of condemnation after Christ's reign is completed?

Editor's Reply

The unjust do not "go to be judged." The angels are sent forth to sever them from the just where they are after which they are burned (Matt. 13:30). The "rest of the dead" mentioned in contrast with the living and reigning saints in Rev 20, refers to dead saints of that age rather then to apostates. "The first resurrection" is doubtless the resurrection of the first-fruits, "the first-fruits unto God and the Lamb." If this word "first" (protos) means first in rank, as all authorities admit, it points to another resurrection lower in rank. 'Resurrection of first-fruits' implies a resurrection of harvest. First in order necessitates another or others in order. Therefore no sublimation of John's words can dispense with the conclusion that he contemplates another resurrection besides the one represented in the enthroned multitude of glorified and reigning saints.

"The rest of the dead lived not again till the thousand years were finished." To assume that these words apply to the unjust is unwarranted. Such an assumption is clearly a mistake, because the vision of John in Rev. 20 comprehends only the resurrection of the just who "lived and reigned with Christ." All that can be claimed for the passage legitimately is that there will be no resurrection of dead people after Christ comes till the end of the millennium.

PREVAILING ETHICS ARE NOT CHRISTIANITY

In this issue there appears a beautiful and touching story which is selected by Brother Lasher. We are aware of the fact that rather "heavy" reading finds a prominent place in The Restitution; we are glad, therefore, to give our readers a lighter and more readable article this week as the leading article of our paper.

A little room for error must be allowed in every "story." Just now it is becoming quite the fashion to be "dry," to which custom we have no objection. In the case of individuals, as well as with nations, we concede the right of abstinence from intoxicating beverages, tobacco, luxuries, and pleasures of every kind. If the representation is made that we must refuse chloroform in surgical operations, refuse brandy in heart failure, eschew the use of tobacco as a sin; and do all these things on Bible grounds, the complexion of the proposition is entirely changed. The Drummer Boy story is calculated to insidiously impose upon the reader the idea that the indulgence of these things under the most desperate circumstances of life is wrong. To the idea that such requirements are Christian duties we object for scriptural reasons.

We say again we do not oppose either nations or individuals for their abstinence from these things; nor do we object to them using the best arguments and the most effective exhortations at their command to induce other nations and individuals to live as they do; but when this is done under the pretense that this must be done because God has commanded it, we must demand a "thus saith the Lord." We know of no subject on which the Scriptures have been so rudely handled as on the question of total abstinence from fermented liquors. The most irrevelant texts are quoted, passages are perverted, so as to appear to mean just the opposite of their real meaning, and Bible history is ludicrously travestied to find arguments for a law of total abstinence. Ignorance of the word of God is a conspicuous characteristic of a large part of the temperance literature of the day The result is, ministers galore and churches without number are found teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. It is an error rife in orthodox churches exactly like that which Protestants inveigh against the Roman church. It is human nature thinking it knows what is best, and so overriding Scripture and forcing it to say what it pleases. We must take humbly and heartily God's word just as it is, how ever much it contradicts our own philosophy. The Bible, both in the Old and New Testament, sanctions the use of wine as a beverage. The richest blessings of the gospel are compared to wine and are symbolized by it (Isa. 25:6, 7), and the Lord of truth has ordained it to be drunk by his people in remembrance of him in the sacred supper. But man says this will lead to drunkenness, and accordingly he sets himself to destroy the testimony of the inspired volume. Only blind fanaticism would have dared it. A reckless genius was invented which defied all laws to gain its ends. This was called the "two-wine theory." Its motto is: whenever wine is spoken of as dangerous in the Scripture it is fermented wine, and wherever it is praised it is unfermented! Logic extraordinary! See how lucidly it interprets Scripture. The wine that Noah drank was fermented, for it made him drunk (Gen. 9:21), but the wine (same word) that Melchizedek brought to Abraham (only five chapter after) was unfermented (Gen. 14:18). The wine that Nadab and Abihu drank was fermented (Lev. 10), but that which in the same book (Lev. 10), is ordered to be used in divine service was unfermented! Then in the New Testament, the wine which the Corinthian brethren became intoxicated with was fermented, but the wine that was used in Cana at the wedding was unfermented. What the wine was that the deacons (1 Tim. 3:8) and the aged woman (Titus 2:3) must not drink "much" of, they have not yet decided. If it was fermented they ought not to have touched it at all. If it was unfermented, what was the use of the command?

The gospel of the kingdom of God is not a simpering sentimentality. In many ways we admire "The Dying Drummer Boy"; but when he refuses to die "with brandy on his stomach," he poses in self-righteousness and rebukes the sinless Son of God, who began his ministry and miracles by making water into wine (John 2:1-11), and died upon the cross drinking vinegar (John 19:29, 30). Ever since Christ made water into wine an over righteous kind of people have been trying to make wine into water (Eccl 7.16).

Communication

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

Dear Brother Huggins:

I desire to let the beloved ones of the one faith know that I am back in my shanty in Council Bluffs, Iowa, which I had to desert when the war broke out. I thank some for remembering me. I am well except rheumatism, but must try to do what I can. I want to ask the Iowa Evangelists if they have given up Council Bluffs to false doctrines entirely. I know of no one in the faith in the city. I have good neighbors here who have never heard the gospel of the Savior. Well, I must close. I ask you to excuse pencil, as I cannot write with pen. You see old age in this even. I would be glad to hear from any of the church members as I am very lonely.

Your sister. LUCY A. McCHESNEY

The State of the Dead

The Catholic vs. the Bible View

I was told a few months ago by a friend that a local priest had said to his congregation, "Fool Protestants read the Bible; good Catholics read their prayer-books." I bought a prayer book sometime ago merely out of curiosity, and I will give several short sentences that I find therein:

"O Mother of God, intercede for me this night."

"O happy saint, whose name I bear, pray for me that I may serve God faithfully in this life, as thou has done, and glorify him eternally with thee in heaven."

"Grant that we may die with him to our sins, rise with him to new life, and ascend with him to glory."

"In those days the most valiant Judas having made a gathering, sent 12,000 drachms of silver to Jerusalem for sacrifice to be offered for sins of the dead, thinking well and religiously concerning the resurrection. (For if he had not hoped that they that were slain should rise again, it would have seemed superfluous and vain to pray for the dead). And because he considered that they who had fallen asleep with godliness, had great grace laid up for them, it is therefore a wholesome and holy thought to pray for the dead, that they may be loosed from sins" (2 Mac. 12). According to this, the dead are not dead, but are already raised from the dead.

"To Almighty God, O dear departed brethren, we [illegible] recommend you etc. May Jesus Christ appear to you with a mild and cheerful smile and give you a place in his [illegible] forever."

"To whom all [illegible] all, living or dead, Lord [illegible] to [illegible]."

Now, dear Catholics, Mary and the saints [illegible] pray in heaven, intercede for those [illegible] purgatory and for those still living on earth. [illegible] Job 14:12: "So man lieth down and riseth not, till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep." Job 14:14: "If a man die, shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come." Job 17:13: "If I wait, the grave is mine house."

Eccl. 9:5: "For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward, for the memory of them is forgotten."

Eccl. 9:10: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest."

[illegible] TENT [illegible]

AN HOUR WITH THEE

M[illegible] is [illegible]
[illegible] endless [illegible] the strife!
[illegible] day the restlessness
Of all this weary life;
[illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] now
That so oppresseth me,
And shut out all the world without,
To spend an hour with thee,
Dear Lord, to spend an hour with thee.

I would forget a little while
The bitterness of tears,
The anxious thoughts that crowd my life
The buried hopes of years;
Forget that mortal's weary toil
My patient care must be,
A tired child I come tonight
To spend an hour with thee,
Dear Lord, to spend an hour with thee.

A foolish wayward child I know—
So often wandering,
A weak complaining child—but O,
Forgive my murmuring,
And fold me to thy breast,
Thou who hast died for me,
And let me feel 'tis peace to rest
A little hour with thee,
Dear Lord, one little hour with thee.

Looking Backward and Forward

With this issue we end our second year as Editor of the Young People's Page. During these two years we have gained many new friends. Numerous letters have been received, not one of which has contained the slightest suggestion of ill will, all having been written in the fullest spirit of Christian love. Most have praised; none have adversely criticized. One dear soul sent me a sum of money. While fully appreciating the spirit of the gift, we were on conscientious grounds forced to return it, firmly believing that no one should accept financial reward for service done in the name of the Master.

At times a writer has stated that we are doing wonderful things. We do not feel that we are. True, we are doing our best, and at times against great odds, but our best is far below our ideal. We want the page to grow in love, in truth, in grace, in power. We want it to be an instrument in the hands of God to bring many into salvation. We no not want or expect praise; we feel undeserving. Still if, at any time, you feel that any portion of our work has been of benefit, we pray that you pass it to others: for if it helped you it may assist them. That will repay us. Our sole desire is to benefit our fellows, to the glory of God.

We do feel that there is one whose self denial must be acknowledged. We refer to Sister Donaldson. It generally is understood that a husband's leisure time belongs to his wife. Sister Donaldson is alone all the day. Being a sufferer from partial deafness she cannot go to certain places she would like: she cannot do certain things she otherwise would take pleasure in doing. She longs for our home-coming in the evening. Still since we have been conducting the Young People's Page she never has demanded her due. On the contrary she has been most lavish in encouragement, practising self-denial for the benefit of others. To Sister Donaldson belongs the credit for any good we may have accomplished.

Every letter received has been acknowledged; however, at this time, and in this public manner we wish to acknowledge every kindness, and thank all, who in any way have aided us. We are but human and it helps mightily to know that our efforts are appreciated. As before said, we want the page to be a power for good, and to this end we ask your co-operation, not merely by sending us matter for publication, but by sending letters of friendly criticism. You know a true friend will point out your faults, as well as extol your virtues. Praise is not wanted, but encouragement never is out of place. Criticism written in the spirit of love, is most benefical, and will be accepted with thanks.

Our great desire is to see the King come in majesty, with power and great glory, for we long to be with him throughout eternity. Should the Father delay this event, we pray we may be spared many years, in health and strength, to labor together to the glory of God.

ALEXANDER D. DONALDSON.

Our Weekly Puzzle

Brethren, ye have been called unto liberty, only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another. For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

Who are "the brethren"?
What is the meaning of "liberty"?
What does "fulfilled" mean?
Who is "our neighbor"?
Where can we find a passage wherein Jesus defines a neighbor?
Who wrote the above? To whom written? Where can it be found?
Five credits for each correct answer.
Answers must be mailed before May 7.
Answers will appear in issue of May 13.

Answer to puzzle in issue of April 8:

A gift is something given to another without expectation of reward, a bestowal.

The "Father of lights" is the Lord God Almighty.

"Variableness" means unsteady, subject to change; variable.

"First-fruits" were the first of anything that ripened, or came to completeness, and always were offered to God as a thanksgiving, hence we "should be a living sacrifice unto God, which is our reasonable service."

There are various passages in the Old Testament containing the word "first fruits," but one of the most notable is Leviticus 23:10, 11. Kindly read it.

The passage was written by James to the twelve tribes, and can be found in James 1:17, 18.

Thoughts on The Resurrection

The reappearance of Jesus after his crucifixion may be regarded as a formal sequence of his career.

The "Resurrection life" is a possible possession here and now. Hear the apostle: "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above."

Spring is here. The earth throbs beneath our feet. Soon the face of Nature will be changed. The life within which has been quickened by the life which transcends all limitation. This outward transformation is typical of soul transformation from bigotry to catholicity, from indifference to faith, from faith to knowledge through personal experience of the reality of the things of the spirit.

The Prince of Peace

Prince of Peace, thine angels still
Carol tidings of good will.
Far above the storm out-whirled
On the waters of the world,
We can hear the glorious song
And we listen and we long
For thy coming Prince of Peace!

Prince of Peace, thou art not far,
For we see thy fadeless star
Flashing thro' the sin-black night;
Rays of Love's eternal light—
Leading many hearts to pray,
With desire to haste the day
Of thy coming, Prince of Peace!

Prince of Peace, all living men
Shall proclaim thy name again,
King of kings and Lord of lords,
And forever sheathe their swords,
Know we, God can never fail—
And we herald thee and hail
Thine oncoming, Prince of Peace!

Regarding Temporal Things

A man should keep his friendship in constant repair(Samuel Johnson).

Learning by study must be won, 'Twas ne'er entailed from son to son (Gay).

Use the light that is within you to revert to your natural clearness of sight (Loo Tzu).

Men serve the wealth which they seem to command. There is no slave so helpless as the greedy man whom gold makes greedier still (W. H. Phelps).

Give To Christ The Glory

Give to Christ the glory,
All that is his due;
Tell the world the story
How he died for you.

Show that man is mortal,
Yet, though doomed to die,
Christ, our Lord, life's portal
Opens by and by.

Immortal none can be
Save through Christ alone!
If endless life you'd see,
Make his word your own.

Faith brings eternal life,
Precious gift of love,
Freedom from earthly strife
Peace from God above.

Christ is the only Giver
Of these blessings all;
Praise his name forever,
Children great and small.

A Reminder

What are you doing to increase the circulation of The Restitution? Surely there is someone to whom you can make known the existence of "our paper," to their profit as well as your own and the Publisher's.

Talk to that person today.

Indorsing A Suggestion

Some time since Auntie Wince suggested that the children write letters to The Restitution for publication. We think the idea good and heartily endorse it. But we trust that when she opens her department she will have more success than we have had. For to all the suggestions we have made to that effect not one letter has been received in reply -why?

Responsibility

Having shown by the immutable word of God, in former articles that all descending from Adam are mortal, and under sentence of death, and unable to deliver anyone himself, or give a ransom for his brother, and that God in his mercy has raised up for us a deliverer, his own begotten Son, and that by complying with the inspired word we are reconciled in Christ to God, and brought into a new relation to the second Adam, with promise of complete salvation at the end of the race, if we continue in it faithful to the end; it is now important that we know what responsibility is laid upon us as bond-servants of the Lord Jesus Christ.

As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord so walk ye in him (Col. 2:6). The 7th verse tells us how we do this: "Being rooted and built up in him and stablished in the faith, as we have been taught." The very first thing then for us to give heed to and the foundation of all also is to be "established in the faith" (doctrine, belief) as we have been taught. Paul expresses it thus, "Take heed to the doctrine" (1 Tim. 4:16). "Holding fast the faithful word as he hath been taught." Why? That he may be able "by sound doctrine both to exhort and convince the gainsayer" (Titus 1:9). In Acts 2:42 we are told that the disciples (converts) continued steadfastly in the apostle's doctrine. And John in his second letter to the elect, 9th verse, says "Who abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God." Thus we see that as doctrine heard and obeyed brought one into Christ as joint heir (in him) of God, so to attain the actual possession of the things promised we must continue in the doctrine as taught in the word and brought to our understanding by the servants of Christ. To one who wilfully and with open eyes leaves the doctrine of God and is carried away by a wind of doctrine, there is no promise of slvation. See 1 Tim. 4:16. Here God by his Holy Spirit says our salvation depends upon our continuing in the doctrine.

The Church of God is called "narrow, rooted to a creed basis," etc. etc. The one great accusation brought against her is that she will not fraternize with other self-styled churches which claim to be of God. Listen to God's command: "If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him Godspeed" (2 John 10). In view of the above quotation how can one obey God and be in fellowship with those who deny him, as all do who say the doctrine or belief of a person makes no difference if he is honest in his belief and lives morally. "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness" (Eph. 5:11). "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers" (2 Cor. 6:14). Avoid them who teach doctrine contrary to that which ye have received (Rom. 16:17). Withdraw thyself from those who teach contrary to the doctrine of Christ (1 Tim. 6:3-5). Narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it (Matt. 7:14).

These are not the words of finite man, but of God himself. Considering them, is not the Church of God, of necessity, narrow? How else can she walk in the narrow way? If we are burdened with the love of the things of the world; if we go after the fables of those who have turned from the true doctrine, we cannot find room in the strait and narrow way but must seek a broader path. If we bid false brethren who have departed from the truth God-speed in their damnable heresies (2 Pet. 2:1), though we may not belive them ourselves, yet are we equally guilty in the sight of God. "He that biddeth him God-speed is partaker of his evil deeds" (2 John 11). God is indeed very particular, and the path Jesus has marked out for us to walk in is narrow.

That all of the sects calling themselves Churches of God have departed from the faith once delivered to the saints the following words will show. "The soul that sinneth it shall die" (Ezek. 18:4 20). These are the words of God. "Fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body." Jesus in Matthew 10:28. I read not long since in a sectarian church paper the words of one of their most noted preachers "I say it reverently, God himself cannot destroy the soul." The wages of sin is death (Rom. 6:23). The wages of sin is everlasting life in torment, is the teaching of sectarianism. Our life is hid with Christ (Col. 3:3). I come to give every man according to his works. Jesus in Rev. 22:12. Sectarianism says man's immortal life is in himself. He enters upon joy in heaven or torment in hell when he dies. Surely these comparisons are enough to show who have turned to fables desiring to hear that which is pleasing to their itching ears (2 Tim. 4:3, 4). Those in the truth should rejoice that they are esteemed "narrow," "uncharitable," etc., and that they are accounted worthy to suffer contumely for Jesus' sake (Matt. 5:11, 12).

There is another great duty laid upon the Church of God. The Scriptures given above show beyond controversy that those walking in the "narrow way of life" are forbidden to have fellowship with those holding doctrine contrary to the truth revealed in the Scriptures of God, although those holding and teaching error may be patterns in morality. There are those who hold tenaciously to the true doctrine, speaking and contending for it by their words; but in conduct denying and dishonoring Christ. What is a saint's responsibility in this case? Let God answer: "If any man obey not our word, have no company with him only to admonish him" (2 Thess. 3:14). Avoid those causing divisions (Rom. 6:17). Put away wicked persons (1 Cor. 5:11-13).

In this article some things saints are not to do have been shown by the word of God. If God is willing we hope in another article to bring to our notice, from the Scriptures, some things which we must do if we would make our calling and election sure. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he reap" (Gal. 6:7). If we join ourselves to those who love fables more than truth we reap the reward of those who love a lie. If we receive into fellowship those who by their lives are denying the Lord we are partakers of their sins, and what is meted out to these will be our portion also. Truly the way of life is strait and narrow.

Christian Science
Versus Common Sense

He was a Christian Scientist with a mild, benignant air,
And for unwary victims he set a cunning snare.
From out the "rural districk" an old backwoodsman came,
His steps were slow and feeble, for he was old and lame;
He heard of Christian Science, and as he thought it o'er
He said, "I guess I'll get some, my jints is stiff and sore."
So, to the portly healer, who sat in self-content
With plump hands idly folded, the good old farmer went.
Said he, "This way of healin' is quare, I swan it is,
'N' I want a dose of science to cure my rheumatiz."
The great man eyed his caller, and sat in thought awhile,
Then leaned back in his arm-chair and said with placid smile:
"My friend, there is no suffering—to think so is to sin.
Remember you are God's child and let his presence in.
Since God is All, forever, what is there then to heal?
God surely cannot suffer, and matter cannot feel.
With truth and goodness present, how then can sickness stay?
For good is never evil, as night is never day.
So, when you think you're suffering (which really you are not),
The cure is very simple—just change your sinful thought.
And if you should be tempted to have a pain some day,
Let good o'er come the evil, and drive such thoughts away.
Now this belief of lameness, good thoughts will soon dispel,
And when friends ask 'How are you?' just answer, 'I am well.'
And mind shall conquer matter, and thought shall reign supreme,
These bodies are but shadows, this world is but a dream.
Then live in perfect harmony and discord quickly flees;
Consider yourself painless—five dollars if you please."
The farmer stared in silence and slowly scratched his head:
"So this is Christian Science! Wall, I'll be blest!" he said,
"Perhaps you call this healin', but I don't just the same;
My back is jes as cricky, my legs is jes as lame.
Your lingo may be Science, it kinder sounds that way,
But where the Christian part is I swow, it's hard to say.
It sorter riles my temper and makes my sperit rise
To hear you mixin' sermons with scientific lies.
It's lucky I ain't chipper, or you might have to hop,
I'd turn things topsy-turvy in this old science shop.
A sin to suffer is it? (Of all the cranky stuff)
Wall, then, you'd be a sinner if I was strong enough!
I'd give ye a temptation to ache in many a spot,
'N' then I'd sit and tell you to change your sinful thought.
You say that good ain't evil—wall, I don't say that it is,
'N' I don't say the Almighty has got my rheumatiz.
It is in my old body and gives me many a jar!
'N' [illegible] no make b'lieve matter, for what is that it's thar!
I never had much larnin', but still I got a brain,
'N' I calc'late I know enough to ache when I'm in pain.
It may not be an error; I guess we all have sin,
But I [illegible] at [illegible] and don't [illegible] your folk in [illegible] tell a feller his pain is in his mind,
'N' pocket [illegible] money for saying suthin' kind.
Now if my plaguey lameness should disappear some day,
Ef it was God as done it why should you want the pay?
'N' I should say five dollars was a little dear for sand, [illegible] to tell you, your little bill must stand.
'N' if your thought's a reality, just think you've got your pay.
I can't pay cash to shadders so I'll jes say good-day."

Bible Lessons On First Principles

Lesson IV

The Things Concerning the Kingdom of God

I What the Kingdom of God is

THE KINGDOM of God will be a divine political dominion established upon the earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14; Rev. 11:15; Isa. 32:1; 11:9,10; Hag. 2:22; Psa. 2:8,9).

II. When the Kingdom of God will be Set Up

At the close of the times of the Gentiles God will send Christ in person to the earth to "set up" the kingdom of God (Acts 3:20,21; Psa. 102:13,16,21, 2 Tim. 4:1; Luke 19:12-16; Acts 1:9,11; Dan. 7:13-27; Matt. 25:31,34).

III. Where the Kingdom of God will be Located

The kingdom of God will be established on earth in the land bequeathed to Abraham for an everlasting inheritance. It will be the kingdom of Israel restored

(Mic. 4:6-8; Amos 9:11,15; Ezek. 37:21,22; Jer. 23:3,8; Gen. 13:14-17; Heb. 11:8,9; Gal. 3:16; Lev. 26:42; Mic. 7:20)

IV. What Constitute the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God

"The things concerning the kingdom of God" are its component parts. Analytically collocated "the things" which compose the kingdom are:

(a) The King, Christ (Zech. 9:9, 14:9; John 19:19-22);

(b) The Associates of the King: the saints of all generations, developed and immortalized by resurrection, if dead; changed to immortality "in the twinkling of an eye," if living when Jesus comes—both constitute, with Christ their head, the collective "seed of Abraham," in whom all the families of the earth shall be blessed (Dan. 12:2; Luke 13:28; Rev. 11:18; 1 Thess. 4:15-17; John 5:28, 29; 6:39,40; Luke 14:14; 1 Cor. 15:50-58; Matt. 25:31-34);

(c) The Laws: such as Christ and his associate rulers (the saints) shall make, and by which they will govern the world in justice and love (Isa. 2:3; 42:4; Zech. 14:16-19);

(d) The Subjects: both Jews and Gentiles; the Jews and Israelites (the twelve tribes) being "the first dominion," and the Gentiles the second (Isa. 11:12; Jer. 31:10; Zech. 8:7,8; Mic. 4:6-8; Luke 1:31-33; Matt. 19:28; Zech. 2:11);

(e) The Capital City: "Jerusalem, the city of the Great King," and the metropolis of the whole earth (Matt. 5:34,35; Jer. 3:17; Micah 4:8; Joel 3:16,17; Isa. 24:23; Zech. 2:10,12; Psa. 48:1-8; 122:2-7; 132:11-18); and

(f) The Territory: Palestine primarily, and "the uttermost parts of the earth" finally (Matt. 6:10; Rev. 11:15; Psa. 2; Dan. 7:27).

Synthetic Remarks

I. WHAT THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS

A KINGDOM is "that over which a king bears rule; the territory or country subject to a king; the dominion of a monarch" (Webster). The kingdom of God is a government (Isa. 9:6) of the nations upon earth (Psa. 67:4). Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome were kingdoms (Dan. 2:39,40). They cannot be sublimated into mere spirituality, as many theologians do the kingdom of God. They were literal governments without even the semblance of spirituality. With an antithesis which none can mistake Dan. 2:44 reads: "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." In this passage "the God of heaven sets up a kingdom" which is inimical to, and destructive of, "all these kingdoms." When "set up" it first "breaks them in pieces," and then to complete their destruction, "consumes" them until there is "no place found for them" (Dan. 2:35). "I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen" (Hebrew, nations, Hag. 2:22). Here is plainly predicted the entire disruption of all human governments, the violent and complete suppression of "the powers that be." "All people, nations, and languages" are subjugated by the kingdom of God (Dan. 7:13,14,18,22,27). "Out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron" (Rev. 19:15). "Set up" on the territory occupied by earthly governments, which are substantial kingdoms, called "the kingdoms of this world," the kingdom of God expands under the heavens into dimensions that fill "the whole earth" (Dan. 2:35). "The kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ" (Rev. 11:15)." From this Scripture both the learned and unlearned reader will perceive intuitively that if "the kingdoms of this world," which are real, literal, political governments, "become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ," the kingdom of God when established will be a literal government occupying the same territory now occupied by "the kingdoms of this world."

II. WHEN THE KINGDOM OF GOD WILL BE SET UP

The Lord has "a set time" to establish his kingdom (Psa. 102:13), namely, "when he appears in his glory" (vs. 16). "The times of restitution" are when "he shall send Jesus Christ" from heaven where he now is (Acts 3:20,21). Therefore the restoration of Israel's kingdom cannot take place until Christ returns (Acts 1:6). He is coming back from heaven "in like manner" as he went (vss. 9, 11). As he went visibly and personally, so he will return visibly and personally, "the Lord himself" (1 Thess. 4:16). "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory" (Matt. 25:31). A king without a throne is not a king de facto. Since Christ "comes in his glory" before he sits upon his throne, he cannot be an officiating king until he returns. At his first coming his citizens hated him and said, "We will not have this man to reign over us" (Luke 19:14). They banished him, and he is now an exile in heaven whither he has gone to "receive for himself a kingdom, and to return" (Luke 19:12). As Herod and his successor, and as all governors of outlying provinces, went to Rome to receive official jurisdiction from the Emperor (see Josephus), so Christ, the Nobleman, by analogy, has gone to "the far country" of heaven to be invested with royalty, "receive for himself a kingdom, and to return" (Luke 19:11,12). "And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom," etc. (Luke 19:15). He did not "receive" the kingdom till he was "returned" rather. The [illegible] Son of Man comes with the [illegible] heaven" before there is "given to him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom" (Dan. 7:13,14). If the kingdom is "given" to him then, he did not possess it previous to his coming. "His appearing and kingdom" are joined together by God himself (2 Tim. 4:1); and "what God hath joined together, let not man put asunder" (Matt. 19:6).

III. WHERE THE KINGDOM OF GOD WILL BE LOCATED

The kingdom of Israel was divinely constituted under Moses, and is declared to have been the of God (1 Chron. 28:5; 29:23; 2 Chron. 9:8; 13:8). On account of iniquity it was overthrown and scattered to the winds "until he come, whose right it is, and I will give it to him" (Ezek. 21:25-27). Its temporary collapse, however, will be succeeded by its restoration through Christ (Luke 21:24; 1:32; Acts 1:6; Matt. 19:28). As the kingdom of God will be the kingdom of Israel restored (Oba. 17,20, 21; Micah 4:6-8), it will be located on the land bequeathed to Abraham and his seed. "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven" (Matt. 6:10). Where is the kingdom of God to "come"? Where is the will of God to be done as in heaven? In the sun, or the stars? In Mars, Venus, or Jupiter? We can offer no sublimer prayer, and none more consonant with the design of the Lord's coming than this "thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." We pray, not for our translation to the kingdom of heaven, but for the coming of the kingdom upon earth. Set up "on earth," the kingdom of God will ultimately become co-extensive with "the kingdom and the dominion, and the power over the kingdoms under the whole heaven" (Dan. 7:27, Leeser's translation).

Paul and the Old Testament

Under the type given in the law of Moses, the High Priest went into the Holy of Holies alone; and for the world to follow our Lord and great High Priest into heaven, the most Holy of all, would come far short of teaching the true idea of the antitype referred to in Lev. 16:17; Heb. 9:24-28.

We have been told that we are not to add or take away from God's word, and we have just proven that the dead do not go to heaven; then wherein does our hope lie? The prophets and patriarchs have taught of the kingdom and we will go to them now. Read Prov. 11:31; 10:30; Psa. 37:29; Isa. 40:10; Dan. 12:13; Isa. 11:9, 10; Zech. 14:9; Isa. 2:3; Zech. 2:10-12; Dan. 7:27.

[illegible] knew all these things which the prophets [illegible] taught. He was a pharisee of the pharisees; [illegible] brought up [illegible] his youth at Jerusalem [illegible] of Gamaliel [illegible] been taught according to the perfect manner of the fathers he lived after "the most straight sect" of the Jewish religion, while the other apostles had lived in fisher huts on the shores of the Sea of Galilee. Paul had lived in a [illegible] capital (Tarsus). The other apostles were unlearned and ignorant while Paul had sat as a "disciple of the wise" at the feet of the most eminent of rabbis, and had been selected as the inquisitorial agent of Priests and Sanhedrists because he passed his contemporaries in burning zeal for the traditions of the school. He had no time for the beauties of nature because his soul was so entirely absorbed in the mighty moral and spiritual truths which it was his mission to proclaim. His life was absorbedly, if not exclusively the spiritual life. Commencing at about the age of thirteen Paul was sent to be trained to use Aramiac as his native tongue and to read the Scriptures, an accomplishment not possessed by many learned Jews.

As Paul was so well versed in the Scriptures, he knew the promise made to Abraham, and he knew the expected Messiah would at some time come; but the pharisees had drifted away from the truth, and they did not recognize the Messiah in the lowly babe born in Bethlehem.

We know that it was through Paul's zeal that he persecuted the saints, and Christ knew the possibilities that were hidden within him if he could be made to see his error. While on the road to Damascus, with the intention of persecuting the Christians, a great light fell upon the way, blinding Paul, and he heard a strange voice saying, "Saul, Saul why persecuteth thou me?" When Paul said, "Who art thou Lord?" the voice replied, "I am Jesus of Nazareth whom thou persecutest." What remorse, what bitter anguish must have smitten his soul when he beheld the glorified Christ! Was this glorious being, surrounded with such a radiant light that it blinded him, the once hated, lowly Nazarene, who called himself the king of the Jews? Who knows the awful fear that passed through his mind during the three days that he lay at Damascus? In his zeal to serve his God, he had been persecuting the Messiah's saints. Would he ever be forgiven? But the scales were soon removed, not only from his eyes, but also from his heart. He received the Holy Spirit and was made to understand God's wonderful plan. Phariseeism held no more charms for him, and he would now work with far greater zeal and earnestness for Christ than he had ever before worked against him. Things which he had learned from the prophets concerning the kingdom now took on a new meaning, and the doctrine of "the bosom of Abraham" had now no place in his teachings. His hope now was "that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both the just and unjust" (Acts 24:15); the unjust to everlasting destruction, and the just to inherit the kingdom with Christ.

Future Probation
For the Dead

REFUTED BY REASON AND SCRIPTURE

By J. E. Hammond

> ". . . . My son, know thou the God of thy father; and serve him with a perfect heart and with a willing mind: for the Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts: if thou seek him, he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off forever" (1 Chron. 28:9).

I WANT to call the attention of Restitution readers to a subject which some of its most forceful writers often discuss, the real significance of which has not until the last few months taken a hold upon me that I cannot shake off or longer keep silent on. Heretofore I have looked upon it as a non-essential in the things concerning God's kingdom and the name of our Lord and Master. I refer to the doctrine taught by many that a majority of the human family that has gone down in death in ignorance, under neither the old law nor the new law of Christ, are to be raised from the dead at some future time in the mortal state to be given another chance at life, and that it is injustice on Gods part to judge anyone worthy of eternal death without first permitting them to be present where the gospel is preached, either verbally or written.

I want to say that I have never felt satisfied on the subject of the resurrection as some teach. When I began to realize the importance of this subject in connection with God's plan of salvation. I endeavored to approach it from a Bible standpoint without being influenced in any way by former ideas I had gathered or that my conclusions might please or displease any earthly teacher or preacher. It is not what I or you believe, but what is the truth? Space will permit me to refer here only to a few points that appeal to me in the hope that all who are thirsting for the unadulterated truth may not pass this subject by lightly.

GOD'S SOVEREIGNTY AND JUDGMENTS

It is not by chance or accident that the opportunity comes for anyone who has ears to hear and eyes that see to understand the gospel of God's eternal kingdom. In Acts 18:9, 10 we learn that the Lord encouraged Paul to remain at Corinth to preach the gospel boldly because God had much people there. Again in Acts 16 we find Paul and Timothy preparing to preach the gospel at Bithynia, but were led by the spirit in a vision to understand that the Lord was calling them into Macedonia instead. Let us look at such Scriptures as these squarely. At one place Paul is urged to stay and preach the word, for God had many people there; and he was directed not to go to other places for the obvious reason that God had no people there. Must we say, "Yes, God did have people there, too, but they must live their lives through to the end in unbelief and sin, to be evil-doers and sinners, and then, instead of being cut off, as the Psalmist says (Psa. 37:9), they are to appear again for a fresh start." My brother or sister, you should rejoice greatly with thanksgiving to God if you have come into a knowledge of the gospel of his eternal kingdom, for he has judged you worthy of it before you heard and obeyed it in baptism. You are now begotten sons of God, and he will hold you to strict account for your stewardship however great or small your talent (Matt. 25:14-30). Your account must show good works built on faith. All called through the gospel are given strength to overcome the world—if they make use of the strength given them; but here is where the rub comes. When we begin to justify sin, sanctification ends and God's mercy departs (1 John 1:9). Many others receive the word gladly at first, but when persecutions and fiery trials come they die in the embroyo state instead of making the good fight and attaining the stature of Christ and fitted for the new birth at the first resurrection. Yes, God calls through the gospel, but remember the injunction: "Many are called but few are chosen."

Dear reader, I am told also that the path is narrow and few there be that find it. Beware of the doctrine of the broad way. It is a delusion and leads to destruction. "God's eyes are upon the ways of man and he seeth all his goings" (Job 34:21). "The eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show himself strong in behalf of them whose hearts are perfect toward him" (2 Chron. 16:9). Can we judge God unjust when he knows the hearts of all men, as the above Scriptures teach, if he does not provide a chance for them all to be present where the gospel is preached simply to see whether or not they have ears to hear? What a lot of pearls to cast before swine, and reckless waste of time and energy! It invariably happens that many attend meetings where the gospel is preached where only a few of God's called are, and they cannot see because of the darkness of their own hearts and inward lusts. When the heart condition of millions of others is the same as these, why cry out unfair when a just and all wise God, and not lopsided man, sits in judgment? There will be no left overs of God's people to try once more when the door is closed by the Master builder.

TRUTH VERSUS DELUSION

The so-called religious world revels in a fool's paradise when they console bereaved mourners with pleasant words of death not being what it seems, but entrance into the holy of holies, or heaven itself, when we are told plainly that Christ goes there alone, and none but the High Priest dare enter. Can the Church of God teach that those who die without law are not perished but in a semi-purgatory condition? If so perhaps we can, after all, pray for the dead! We all have pious and otherwise relations, perhaps, who never heard the gospel, and others that we have told it to with all the earnestness of our being, but to no avail. Our hearts may bleed for them, but in God's sight they may be a deal like a great many other folk's relatives. We are prone to call to memory some one who has died out of Christ whom we feel was certainly very good. But we have some live ones of that kind left, too, perchance. Just try to tell them the straight gospel message and see what kind of ears they have! They are the very ones to make the loudest uproar. Why? Because God judges them unworthy to be even a candidate for his elect children. If God knew there would be so many good ones to hold over until some other age, why not have had the present dispensation much shorter, completing the body of Christ, and save a lot of mis-spent lives of those who eventually will be his people? For no other reason than from Adam's day only a few have been the Lord's.

But some one says, those to come up and be saved later were not good enough to be a part of the Bride, but merely fit to be subjects or servants in the kingdom. Remember that Jesus says that "those who exercise lordship and authority among the Gentiles are called benefactors: but ye shall not be so: but he that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger; and he that is chief as he that doth serve." The law of Christ teaches that he that serveth is greater than he that sitteth at meat (Luke 22:26, 27). It seems to me the part of wisdom to disdain all boasting. It is a whim of the flesh. When the kingdom is turned over to the Father, the glory will be shared equally whether you be a ruler or a humble servant, if you are doing faithfully God's will. Those who were placed in the vineyard in the eleventh hour received the same wages as those who had worked from the morning. A great many may be putting the reward above the godly qualifications which are necessary to attain it. It is the getting rid of sin and the getting of God's ways into our make-up that pleases him. He wants us to know what the reward is, but also that the way to it is through the fire. If I am good enough to be God's child he will provide the means of salvation now.

A DANGEROUS THEORY

But here is a point of danger that strikes hardest: We know that some learn the truth readily, often others are pulled out of the fire by the skin of the teeth, and walk very totteringly at first. In fact, it is not so very easy for any, for "if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the sinner and ungodly appear?" Dare we say that the lot of this better class is not so bad after all, but an era awaits them instead where God's purifying fire does not burn so intensely but all men will rush headlong to be saved? Not so from a Bible standpoint. The day of God's wrath is a day of intense burning. More will be expected of those who are born into the world in the thousand years reign of Christ. If the conditions are to be so easy in that day that almost universal salvation is assured, who are these, the number of whom is as the sands of the sea, that compass the camp of the saints and are destroyed by God's fire (Rev. 20:8, 9)? There are many things hard to understand and require zeal and steadfastness of purpose to conquer. Suppose our neighbors and our children find out that some of God's people now living are to be saved after death, when the tempter comes along it is easy to decide that perhaps they belong to the left overs, and fail through the teaching of this error to enter the kingdom of God. Rather let us keep before them that life or death is set before them now. We need not fret ourselves because of evil doers if we keep the cross of Christ before them. God's love and mercy is overflowing to the penitent sinner, but his face is against those who choose iniquity.

PREACHING THE GOSPEL TO A DYING WORLD

We cannot judge hearts as God can, so we must willingly endeavor to teach all that come unto us and warn all not only of God's love but also of his severity (John 3:16; Rom. 11:22). Sometimes a heart like an unpolished precious stone is covered by rags and awkward ways. Such do not escape the all-seeing eyes of God. And more often garments of silk, refinement and goodness after the fashions of this world cover up a heart governed by selfishness, deviltry, uncleanness, and unholiness, and with no desire to know the living and true God. This world is full of idol gods; yea, it is as it was in the days of Noah. We must be as lights set on a hill that cannot be moved to give light in a wicked and perverted generation, and neither we nor God desire that any should be lost, but his judgments are just. Dare we offer substitutes?

RIGHTS OF SINNERS

If one person can demand that he must have access to the gospel message to determine whether or not he will accept, does not every individual that has ever existed have the same right imbeciles, begotten children which perish before birth, lunatics, and all? If so, there will be need for asylums, incubators, and what not to make responsible beings of them before it can justly be determined whether or not they are God's children. To me such reasoning robs God of his omnipotence, his eternal wisdom, and suggests a lack of efficiency in permitting some who are ultimately to be his to live a life of sin, to be cut down as the grass of the field, evil doers which the Psalmist tells us not to fret about because they will be brought up again to be enlightened? No, no: for they shall be cut off. David said God knew him from his mother's womb. It is even so with all of God's people. We must not forget that man has no immortal soul, and that he is no part of God, but in death has no pre-eminence over the beast. Based upon faithfulness and virtue, many beasts deserve salvation or probation after death before many of the human family. The Adamic family includes the great majority of the human race who have their portion in this life. If they observe the laws of health they enjoy long life and many friends. They bow to the world which rewards them with position, honor, and glory. The Christ family are those who are willing to forsake parents, children, lands, and the kingdoms of this world to follow him. All such our heavenly Father knows, even before their birth. When we hear the gospel and obey it in baptism we are begotten of God to the new creation, whether we overcome or not. If faithful a resurrection with Christ's likeness awaits us; if we fail a resurrection of condemnation and second death is our doom. May we all come to realize what our duty is in proclaiming the whole counsel of God to a dying world.

Editorial

We are sorry to report the indisposition of Brother and Sister Alex. D. Donaldson.

We have lost one by the removal of Brother George Dowle, to Seattle, Washington.

April 20th the following friends, after an intelligent confession of faith, were baptized into Christ to become his brothers and sisters: Mr. Thos. Meldrum and his Wife, formerly Presbyterians; Miss Mina Watt and Mr. Lester Bliss, both of whom were formerly Presbyterians. As the body of Christ continues to grow we know the required number is not yet taken out and sealed; but no one knows when it will be completed, and the Head return to effect its redemption. We must continue to work and watch without abatement.

The article by Brother Hammond in this issue is a racy contribution upon a most important subject, and deserves serious study and consideration. The probation of people in another life casts a terrible stigma upon God. Get this poison into your system and creeping paralysis inevitably follows; for why should we teach people the gospel, if they are to be taught whether we teach them or not; and why should we strive to save them, if they are to be saved whether we strive or not? But the odium cast upon God's name consists chiefly in affirming that there are thousands of "left overs" who are good enough to be saved, and would be saved now if God only gave them a chance, and who will be saved in the future, when God does give them a chance. What dissatisfaction such an idea implies and expresses concerning the present judgment of God! To what a blank does it reduce the promise of the Almighty! He declares that he is not far from any of us, and that we shall find him if we but "feel after him" (Acts 17:26, 27): that he shows "himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him" (2 Chron. 16:9); that the Lord "searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts," which is more than Russellites know; and then subjoins this promise: "If thou seek him, he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off forever" (1 Chron. 28:9). To the man "good in his sight" he solemnly avows he will "give wisdom, and knowledge, and joy" (Eccl. 2:26). Now Larger Hope is the conflict of human judgment with divine wisdom, ruthlessly destroying these divine promises and assurances, and making them as devoid of value as the German "scrap of paper." If any one has not found God, it is because he has not so much as "felt after him." Such people are not "good in his sight" however amiable they be to you. To the perfect in heart he has not showed "himself strong," charges this theory, thus falsifying his word. To the good he has not "given wisdom, and knowledge and joy," as he has pledged to do! Presumptions indeed is the man who will thus dispute with God! Better lay aside the flesh, subordinate the will, and glorify God by saying, "The will of the Lord be done." Amen.

Unbroken Succession of Believers

Dear Brother Huggins:

Will you please give through The Restitution, a brief history of the Church of God after the "dark ages" up to 1850. Pastor Russell's followers seem to believe that he was the first to teach the mortality of man, return of the Jews to their own land, and a few other truths that they hold. Some that I have talked with never heard of these things until they read Pastor Russell's books, and they seem to think it was never preached before.

A Sister.

Editor's Reply

The Adventists, the Church of God and the Christadelphians were teaching the mortality of man and kindred truths while Russell was in the Presbyterian church. Instead of giving a history of the Church of God "after the 'dark ages' up to 1850," we prefer the briefer and more satisfactory plan of showing by the Scriptures that there has been an unbroken succession of believers in all time.

The word of God is very explicit in its teaching on this point. In the Old Testament we have assurances like these: "This is my covenant with them, saith the Lord: My spirit that is upon thee, and my words which I have put in my mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth and forever" (Isa. 59:21). B. C. 520 another wrote: "According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so my spirit remaineth among you: fear ye not" (Hag. 2:51). Here we have a "covenant" on God's part that neither his "words" nor "spirit" would ever "depart" from the earth—leaving no room for Joe Smith to appear and "restore the spirit."

The New Testament also speaks of the unbroken succession of believers. The following is a sample of the evidence: Matt. 18:16 affirms that the church shall not be prevailed against; Matt. 28:20 asserts that Christ would be with it "alway," while Eph. 3:21 says: "Unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end."

These simple declarations concerning the continuity of the church and the truth put a quietus upon the egotistic claims of John Thomas, Alex. Dowie, Joe Smith, L. T. Nichols, C. T. Russell and other religious bigots who claim to have "restored" the gospel in this generation. Few and feeble as the people of God are, they are "the salt of the earth" nevertheless; and but for this "remnant seed" the world would have long since sank like Sodom. The light of the gospel was not extinguish- in the "dark ages;" the light still shined "in a dark place." The papal power "wore out the saints," and "made war against them" during this terrible period (Dan. 7)—both impossible acts unless "saints" existed then. The seed of the wowan has existed continuously from the beginning like the seed of the serpent. Both have had an unbroken succession.

Funerals Incubators of Error

"The flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh." This statement by Paul finds numerous illustrations daily; but it seems to us that funerals afford the most tempting occasions to compromise the spirit to the flesh. During the past winter the flu epidemic slew its thousands; and we were called upon to officiate at funerals of all kinds of people. Add to the sadness which death brings into the home a ten dollar bill, and the minister, who is governed by his feelings, is sidetracked from truth to error. Every thing invites him to fabricate a lie instead of speaking according to the oracles of God. A minister who knows better will sometimes preach the deceased to heaven, just to say something of a comforting nature to the survivors. And when he is tinctured a little with "broader hope," the sadness of the occasion plus the ten dollars is more than he can stand—and he begins to talk about "the hope" of the deceased, when he has "no hope" (1 Thess. 4:13). He ignores the truth as a condition of salvation with all the conditions which the gospel imposes upon the living, and he promises salvation to the dead unconditionally; and the living conclude if salvation gets "broader" for the dead than for the living, they will wait till they are dead and get the full sweep of its broadness. Thus funerals come to be incubators of error, unprofitable for the dead and a curse to the living. To the last day of our life we shall remember the sustaining words of Sister Hudson, who lost a son by the flu plague last winter— a son who fell asleep out of Christ, and who therefore had not the slightest claim to everlasting life. Sister Hudson, knowing this, called us to officiate at the funeral. Faithful Sister Hudson—always faithful—dropped no hintlet for us to manufacture Scripture, or hold out hope for the hopeless. When asked if she had any request to make concerning the funeral she said—and these are the words we shall always remember: "Tell us the truth." These few words are worth all the ten dollar bills in the world. They come from a true heart; they show loyalty to God; they are free from that compromising, whining, simpering spirit that wants God to belie his word for the sake of saving some fleshly relative; and they will carry one into the kingdom of God even if father, mother, son or daughter is left in outer darkness. God give us such a love for the truth that we shall always be able to say, "Tell us the truth"!

Obituaries

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.—Psa. 116:15.

Brother Huggins:

I am writing to inform you of the death of my wife, Lenora M. Morse. She died on April 7th after an illness of about a year. She was 73 years old. We were married in 1863, thus spending a long and happy life together of 55 years. She leaves six sons and one daughter, nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild. She was immersed in 1867. It seems to me as if I had met with an irreparable loss. We were enabled to enjoy each other's society many years longer than the great majority of married persons, yet it seems as if I could not be reconciled to the fact that she is dead. If Jesus does not soon return, in all probability I shall be lying beside her in the cemetery awaiting the call to life when the Lord comes, for I was 78 years old last month.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

Charles Morse.

Dear Brother Huggins:

On the 28th day of March, at 11:30 P. M., death invaded our happy home and took from us our loved wife and mother. She had been an invalid for about six years, and with the exception of a few months during all that time she was up and around the house doing whatever she could for the comfort of others. She was always cheerful and hopeful, and many times she remarked, "The Lord will take care of me." She was always ready and willing to do anything for the honor and glory of God. She was baptized into the name of the Lord by the late Brother Skeels, at Scholes, Ore., in 1896, and held firmly to the hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

Her maiden name was Sarah A. Forrest, born in Chicago, May 10th, 1858. When she was about six years of age her parents removed to Greenlake County, Wis. On Oct. 22nd, 1879, she was married to the writer. We made our home at Neenah, Wis., until the year 1888 when we moved to the Pacific Coast, locating in the city of Tacoma, where she died. Besides her husband she is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Mabel Burk, and two grandchildren, a boy of three years and a girl of two months, also two sisters, both of Tacoma and one brother of Zillah, Wash. Elder Forester of the Advent Church of Seattle conducted the services. He also wrote me a letter with the outline of his remarks which I will enclose with this, thinking perhaps you will kindly publish part or all of the same. Our sorrow is well nigh unto death, but our hope is in the Lord.

Your brother in the faith,

L. G. Jaeger.

The Letter Referred to by Brother Jaeger

Dear Brother Jaeger:

I know by sad experience that this is a sad day to you, and as I had but little chance to speak with you yesterday, though very busy. I will drop you a hasty line that you may know that I feel more than a passing, professional interest in you in this hour of your supreme sorrow.

It has occurred to me that possibly you and your daughter would be pleased if I were to give you the texts I used yesterday, and a short outline of the remarks as they recur to me. The fine audience of intelligent looking people gave close attention and I hope were not unedified by the sermon.

The texts were Heb. 11:13, "These all died in the faith;" and Prov. 14:33, "The righteous hath hope in his death." I showed that "death" is the lot of mankind, and that it is as real as is birth. "Man dieth" (Job 14:10). "I know thou wilt bring me to death and to the house appointed for all living" (Job 30:23). "Set thine house in order, for thou shalt die and not live" (Isa. 38). "It is appointed unto men once to die" (Heb. 9:27).

But death ends! "The righteous hath hope in his death" (Prov. 14:32). "My flesh shall rest in hope" (Psa. 16:6). "I will ransom them from the power of the grave, I will redeem them from death" (Hos. 13:14). "God hath both raised up the Lord and will also raise up us by his own power" (1 Cor. 6:14; 1 Thess. 4:13-19).

"The hope of the righteous" referred to in my second text I showed to be the "hope of Israel" (Acts 28:20). This was made certain by tracing Paul's account through his trials (Acts 26:6; 24:14-21; 26:6-8; 28:20). It was the hope of a resurrection of the dead, not the hope that all men survive the stroke of "so called death." Revival and not survival is the promise of the word.

I also showed that hope in Christ and piety not only gives hope, but promotes all our temporal as well as our eternal interests. It injures no man. It does not destroy wealth, nor enfeeble the intellect; it does not disturb the conscience, nor pander to consuming passion, nor does it diminish the honor of a good name. It engenders no diseases; it produces no crimes; it saddens no death-beds. All agree that a true Christian life is the most happy and hopeful.

I exhort the family to cherish her memory, to emulate her virtues, and to trust in her God. Some beautiful sentiments in verse were quoted, some of which I will reproduce.

A precious one from us is gone,
  A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
  Which never can be filled.

Again:

Home is not home, for mother is not there,
Dark is her room and empty is her chair;
Now will she rest from her labor and care,
'Till that morning so fair.

Oft the dear eyes grew dim from sad tears;
Guiding our untried feet through the years,
Planning our future with hopes and with fears;
Drying our falling tears.

Sleep mother, sleep with your hands on your breast;
Poor weary hands they needed their rest;
Well have we loved you, but God loved you best;
'Tis thy God giveth rest.

I have no words that can heal the sad, sore heart, but I know by experience that human sympathy does soothe; for that reason I have penned these few lines to assure you that I desire to do more than merely to fulfill the functions of a clergyman. I wish to be a Christian brother; I wish to be of some real help to you. I would love to commend to you the follwing lines. They are part of a beautiful poem, written by one of our ministers. They would be wonderfully appropriate in connection with a sermon preached from the words of David that I used in preaching the serman at father Cropp's death: "As for me I shall behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." The title of the poem is:

"Satisfied"

Not in a land where beauty fades and flowers bloom to die,
Where friendship is not lasting, a place of severed ties;
Not where death, dark cruel death holds universal sway,
And visits every household and steals our loved away.

But in a land far brighter than any land on earth,
Where never comes a shadow, or frost, or blight, or dearth;
Where sickness nevermore is known, and death's forever gone,
Where we'll have the smile without the tear, the rose without the thorn.

There in the likeness of our Lord we shall in joy awake
And all the ills of mortal life forever we'll forsake;
When in the face of him who for our sins has died,
We gaze enraptured with delight we'll then be satisfied.

May "the Father of Mercies and God of All Comfort" sustain you, guide you, and guard you, is my prayer.

Hoping that these lines shall prove a blessing to you, I am yours in the bonds of Christian love and hope,

B. Forester.

MEMORY VERSES [illegible]

GOLDEN TEXT: Mark 10:29, 30

TO A CHILD EMBRACING HIS MOTHER

Love thy mother, little one!
  Kiss and clasp her neck again,
Hereafter she may have a son,
  Will kiss and clasp her neck in vain,
Love thy mother, little one!

Gaze upon her living eyes,
  And mirror back her love for thee,
Hereafter thou mayst shudder sighs
  To meet them when they cannot see,
Gaze upon her living eyes!

Press her lips the while they glow,
  With the love that they have often told;
Hereafter thou mayst press in woe,
  And kiss them till thine own are cold,
Press her lips the while they glow!

Oh, revere her raven hair!
  Although it be not silver gray,
Too early death, led on by care,
  May snatch save one dear lock away.
Oh, revere her raven hair!

Pray for her at eve and morn,
  That heaven may long the stroke defer;
For thou mayst live the hour forlorn,
  When thou wilt ask to die with her.
Pray for her at eve and morn! Thomas Hood.

Mother's Day

Sunday May 11th is "Mother's Day," a day specially set apart for the praise and honoring of mother, and what mother is there that does not deserve praise and honor? My mother—though lying in the cold and silent tomb—deserves all the praise I can bestow upon her because it was she who made me what I am. And your mother, to you, is the same as mine was to me. Is not her old-fashioned? Don't be ashamed of her; perhaps it was the time she spent in correcting your misdeeds, and in generally caring for you that made her unable to be more modern. Is mother wrinkled and care-worn? Do you not know that worry over you has placed many of those ugly wrinkles upon her face? Mother is mother: make much of her: be proud of her, for no other person on this earth will lavish the love, the care, the long-suffering upon you as will mother. No one else will be as lenient, as forgiving, as merciful as she. Mother has more faith in you than all the world beside. She will shield you; she will hide your faults; she will not believe evil things that others may say against you. Mother is the one being on this earth that would die for you. Therefore so live that the sacrifices she has made—and is ready to make again—for you shall not be in vain. Follow her as she follows God. You never will be ashamed to follow where mother leads.

In language, there is but one word that, in an earthly sense, signifies truth, hope, justice, faith, love, self-sacrifice and purity, and that word is

MOTHER

Concerning the Mother of Jesus

"Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleopas, and Mary Magdalene. When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by, whom he loved, he said unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son! Then said he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her into his own home" (John 19:25-27).

"Then came to Jesus his mother and his brethren, and could not come at him for the press, and it was told him by certain which said, Thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to see thee. And he answered and said unto them, My mother and my brethren are these which hear the word of God and do it" (Luke 8:19-21).

"And Elizabeth spake out with a loud voice, and said, Blessed art thou among women. And whence is this to me that the mother of my Lord should come unto me?" (Luke 1:42, 43).

"Being Dead, Yet Speaketh" (Heb. 11:4)

The following was written by our late beloved brother, William H. Wilson, as a birthday tribute to one who indeed was a mother in Israel.

Dear Sister in Christ:

How sweet is the reflection that while the declining sun of life shall still linger and gild the horizon of your declining years with golden memories of the past, as they have been seen and felt in the home, to realize that the hearts of your loved ones are still entwined about your own, like that of the blessed Christ and his redeemed church. Such love is like the perfume of the fragrant flower which is wafted by the passing breeze that it may delight the senses of those who pass. While your life may still linger, may such affection ever grace your brow like a crown of glory.

Your brother in Christ.

Our Weekly Puzzle

He said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business? And they understood not the saying which he spake unto them. And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them: but his mother kept all these sayings in her heart. And . . . increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man.

Who was it who spoke? And to whom did he speak? Who is the "Father" mentioned?

Where is Nazareth? Can you name the passage where Nazareth is first mentioned in the Bible?

Who was it who "increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man"?

Where had he been, and for what purpose, and why did he speak as above?

Where can the passage be found? Five credits for each correct answer.

Answers must be mailed before May 16.

Answers will appear in issue of May 20.

Answer to puzzle in issue of April 22.

The "brethren" are those who, through faith in Jesus as their Savior, have forsaken the world and become children of God.

"Liberty" means without restraint.

"Fulfilled" means the accomplishment of a purpose; a promise executed.

Our "neighbor" is anyone to whom we can show a kindness, or do good.

In the parable of the good Samaritan as recorded in Luke 10:25-37.

The passage was written by the apostle Paul "Unto the churches of Galatia," and can be found in Galatians 5:13, 14.

A Short But Great Sentence

The sweetest word in our language is love; the greatest word is God; the word expressing the shortest time is now. These three added together make in one sentence our greatest duty; our sweetest joy; the most beneficial thing we can do:

Love God Now

A Correction

In issue of April 8th, under "How to Use the Bible," the compositor has made us say "The ninth class say they will try to be saved. Use John 7:17." The correct reading is, "The ninth class say they can't believe. Use John 7:17." If you thought the article worth preserving kindly make the correction as noted. It is the tenth class who say "they will try to be saved."

CONDITIONAL IMMORTALITY

The word immortality occurs in the Bible but five times, all in the epistles of Paul.

First, it is said that God alone possesses it (1 Tim. 6:16). Second that Christ brought it to light by the gospel (1 Tim. 1:16). Third, that to obtain it we must earnestly seek for it (Rom. 2:7). Fourth, that this mortal must put it on at a future resurrection of the dead (1 Cor. 15:53, 54).

The Bible declares of man what not only the plainest testimony of our senses confirms but what the profound researches of science have demonstrated, "Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:19; Psa. 146:4). "The dead know not anything" (Eccl. 9:5). "The dead praise not the Lord" (Psa. 115:7). "In death there is no remembrance of God" (Psa. 6:5). That man and beast die alike, all have one breath, all go to the same place—all are of dust and all turn to dust again (Eccl. 3:19, 20). That there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither all go (Eccl. 9:10).

And finally that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust, without which even the righteous have perished (Acts 24:15).

Which will you believe, man's tradition or God's word?—Selected by Brother A. C. Boyer.

Let "Thy will be done" be our first thought.

The Restitution

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defense of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ.—Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 71 CLEVELAND, O. MAY 13th, 1919. NUMBER 18

Time

Time moves onward like the tide,
With constant ebb and flow,
Days still come and pass away
As they did long ago;

Days and weeks and months mark off
The years to us God-given,
The sun a dial for the earth,
Rolls high above in heaven.

Thus, year by year time slips away,
No stoppage can we know,
And New Year's Day checks off the year,
As on and on we go;

And mankind celebrate that day
As one of special note,
Meet their friends with much good cheer,
And happiness they vote.

The aged have their quiet day,
With memories of the past,
While youth o'erflows with merriment,
Too boisterous to last;

Thus time fleets on the way
'Mid sorrow, joy and mirth,
E'er since God created Adam,
And placed him on the earth;

And while this age of sorrow lasts,
It ever must be so,
Till Jesus comes to earth again
To banish sin and woe.

Building A Character

For The Young People's Society

By S. Roxana Wince

WE build a character that will be strong and firm enough to stand against all the specious pleadings of men, who, holding a code of integrity at variance with the word of God, would, if possible, lead us to "accept their arguments and adopt their methods," we must build according to God's plan. We must start right, we must not drift.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ." To build upon him is to build upon a rock. He is the foundation for the new man and also the model. To shape our lives by his is to build legally: to build a house that the Master-builder will not tear down when the day of testing comes. We can build no sham houses and have them pass the test. Men are not allowed to build flimsy structures in our cities that will topple over and crush down people to death. Every brick must be laid true to the line, or the whole structure is dangerous.

The professed Christian, who, being in a store, sees a customer drop a dime unnoticed, and sets his foot over it, and then, picking it up, carefully pockets it, has put in the crooked brick. The young man or woman who reads the impure story, and listens to and laughs at the sooty jest, are nailing gnarled and twisted timbers into their life-structures that will be hard to tear out. They will be like birds with a broken wing, they can never soar so high again. "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." A soiled life is a spoiled life.

The sixth chapter of Romans tells us how to build a new man. It is to "obey from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered unto us," and "being then made free from sin," to "become the servants of righteousness." The old man has to be crucified with Christ before the body of sin can be destroyed, and who does not know how hard a thing it is to kill self—to go down as it were, into what the world looks at as a shameful ignominious death in baptism, that we may, by that death, picture our faith in the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ, and in our own future resurrection, should we die before Jesus comes.

It is a crucifixion that the old man hates to face. If he could only be changed over into a new man without having to pass through that ordeal, he would not mind; or if he could only have "the body of sin destroyed," without "the washing of water by the word," he would obey at once. Why did not God make the way easier? Why did he make the death to sin such a conspicuous, public thing? If only it could be done privately and no one know! But there it is, "Whosoever shall confess me before men, him will I confess before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven." No getting around that public confession. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."

Oregon Bible College
Oregon, [illegible]

So the true start towards building a character that God will approve, is to keep God's commandments. He is a thief and a robber who climbs over the wall to get into the fold and thus secure its blessings and protection. There is but one door into the fold and that door is Christ taken as our Savior in the only legal way.

Jesus said, "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me and to finish his work." But having found Jesus as "the lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world," and having come into personal relation to God through a personal Savior, what is the next step toward erecting the stainless character? Honesty and integrity. Solomon says: "A false balance is abomination to the Lord: but a just weight is his delight." "The integrity of the upright shall guide them, but the perverseness of transgressors shall destroy them.".

Courage

Courage must be one of the elements in the building of the Christian's character, for it was a prominent feature in the character of Jesus. Cultivate courage, dear young people, if you want to be like Jesus. You will need it at many a point on your journey to Canaan.

Read the last chapters in the life of Jesus. Imagine that you see him standing before those old gray bearded priests Annas and Caiphas, they tearing their tunics for very rage, and others gnashing on him like wolves, and crying, "Death to him, death to him!" striking him with clenched fists and spiting in his face, and he, standing there in calm majesty, saying nothing save this, "They could have no power over me except it were given them of my Father."

The street full and the house tops covered, when he was taken from the High Priest's house to the house of Pilate, from thence to Herod and back again to Pilate, maintaining all the while that serene over-mastering courage, though jeered at, mocked and scourged by the soldiers until it is said "his flesh hung in ribbons and his blood flowed down to his feet." The rough purple robe was thrown around him; the crown woven of the little Syrian thorn-bush, was jammed upon his head, the reed-scepter put into his hands, and the mocking cry "Hail! King of the Jews!" shouted in his ears until even Pilate grew weary.

And then—the crucifixion. Sublime in his courage now, despite the torture of these cruel nails, he will not touch the proffered stupefying draught that would deaden his pain. "He must suffer, therefore he will." He suffers because he will, not because he must. Suffers that he may save, and all because he loves!

Think too of the courage of Jeremiah braving death to tell the people what was coming on their land and city; of Shadrach, Meshech and Abednego choosing to go into the fiery furnace, rather than worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar had set up, and of the millions of martyrs who have met shameful, terrible deaths rather than deny Christ and accept deliverance. It takes courage to stand up for truth when truth is assailed: to tell what we believe and why, when men talk of immortal souls; of going to heaven when they die, of the dead as hovering over and protecting them, of God as a triune being, without body or parts—a universe God, instead of the God of the universe, who created and upholds all things: of a pre-existent Christ, who though a part of the triune God, died on the cross: of sprinkling as if it were the symbol of the doctrine of the death, burial and resurrection of Christ. O but it takes courage' courage to combat these errors and to do it with the meekness that God enjoins.

Faithfulness

Faithfulness is another requisite of the Christian character. "It is required of a steward that he be found faithful." "He that is faithful in a little is faithful also in much, He that is unjust in a little is also unjust in much." The householder has committed to us his goods. We have his precious word in our keeping. We have his money, his time, his appointed opportunities, our hands, our tongues, our minds, all to be sacredly used for him, that his cause may be advanced and his name be glorified. Be faithful, dear young friends. Do not waste his goods nor misappropriate a thing. "Jesus was faithful to him that appointed him, as also was Moses faithful in all his house." "Abraham was faithful." "And we are made partakers with Christ if we hold fast the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end."

Purity

Purity, first of faith, then of life. The wisdom that is from above is first pure, not mixed with the doctrines and commandments of men—then peaceable. If possible we are to live in peace with all men. Gentle, not arrogant, nor self-assertive, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy. And the fruit of righteousness' is sown in peace of them that make peace.

Purity of Life

It goes without saying that the Christian character must be clean. The Christian dare not go where the world's people go; he dare not engage in any questionable amusements, take part in dishonest business affairs, or defile his garments by impure social companionship and actions. The Christian's virtue must be absolutely above suspicion: absolutely unassailable. "Keep thyself pure."

Truthfulness

Truthfulness is another essential beam in the building of character. God's men are truthful men, patterning themselves after a God of truth, they tell no lies to sell goods, or cattle or lands, They keep their promises fill their appointments, return all borrowed property, pay all their debts, tell no falsehood to cover up accidents or faults. We cannot think of Moses, of Isaiah, of Paul, as having ever told a lie.

But did you know dear young friends that when we have "bitter envy and strife in our hearts," we lie against the truth. They lie because where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work, instead of the sowing of the fruit of righteousness in peace of them that make peace. We are not the persons that God says the truth will make.

Knowledge

Knowledge must be another mark in our character-building. We must grow, not only in grace, but also in knowledge of the truth. We cannot learn everything before baptism, and how can we teach what we do not know, how let light shine that is not ours? Continuous study of the Bible is imperative if we would give good service to our Lord and Savior.

Temperance

"He that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things." "Whether you eat or drink do all things to the glory of God." remembering always that the glutton is classed with the wine-bibber, and can have no place in the kingdom of God. He who kills himself by over-eating is a self-murderer.

Patience

Patience! what beauty it adds to the character! How it tones down the rough places, smoothes out the frowns, banishes the worries, the care, the faithfulness, calms the angry one, unnerves our foes, and puts the weapons of the quarrelsome out of commission "Be patient! the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

Godliness

Godliness is defined as "piety," "reverence," and "piety in principle as a compound of veneration or reverence of the Supreme Being and love of his character; and piety in practice, as the exercise of their affections in obedience to his will and devotion to his service." "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." "God hath set apart him that is godly for himself." "Follow after godliness." Love and venerate God.

Brotherly-Kindness

"Love the brotherhood." "Let brotherly love continue." "This is my commandment that ye love one another, as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends," Jesus laid down his life for us. Even while we were yet his enemies he loved us, and gave himself for us. Ought we not to love him? Ought we not to prove our love in every possible way?

Charity

Charity is love, and love is the beginning and the cap-stone of the Christian character. On love of God and love of man hang all the law and the prophets. All that we believe, all that we do amounts to nothing if not seasoned with love. A gospel with love left out could have no conquering powers with men.

"Love your enemies, Bless them that curse you; do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you. That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh the sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust. For if ye love them which love you, what reward have you? Do not even the publicans the same? And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? Do not even the publicans so? Be ye therefore perfect even as your Father in heaven is perfect." Can you, dear young friends? Can you put this crowning capstone on your character? Can you love, bless, do good, and pray for those who curse, hate, and persecute you?

Try it. It is the only way to reach perfection, the only way to be really and truly Christ-like, and to turn his foes into friends. Above all things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. "Keep yourselves in the love of God looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ and eternal life."

THE RESTITUTION SUNDAY SCHOOL LEAF

JESUS OUR PRIEST

Lesson XXXIII

No. 2

Memory Text: For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did, by the which we draw nigh unto God (Heb. 7:19).

1. And it is far more evident, for that after the similitude of Melchizedek there ariseth another priest.

2 Who is made not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life.

3. For he testifieth thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek (Heb. 7:15-17).

4. And they truly had many priests, because they were not suffered to continue by reason of death.

5. But this man, because he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable priesthood.

6. Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them (Heb. 7:23-25).

7. And for this cause he is the mediator of the New Testament.

8. That by means of death for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance (Heb. 9:5).

9. Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus;

10. Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood.

11. To declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God;

12. To declare, I say, at this time his righteousness: that he might be just and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus (Rom. 3:24-26).

Practical Truths

The unchanging nature of the priesthood lays the foundation for a broad hope. If Jesus abides a priest continually and ever lives to make intercession for those who come to God through him, who may not be saved? His [illegible] our great High Priest, the time will come when he will be a priest upon his throne when his Kingdom is set up, and his royal body are priests also, and reign forever.

While the prospect of future glory is so bright, we ought not to forget the rock whence we are hewn, nor the hole of the pit whence we were digged. Redemption comes to us only through this High Priest. We were redeemed by the blood of the Lord Jesus and are saved by his life.

Notes on the Lesson

Law.—A general term here used, perhaps, to denote the system of sacrifices. Better Hope.—Better because it provides a system of justification which the law could not do. A broken law brought condemnation, but faith in Jesus brought justification.

1. Similitude.—Likeness. Another Priest.—From this expression it occurs to us that Melchizedek was a type and that Jesus was the antitype.

2. Who is Made, Not.—Who is made a priest, not, etc. The words "a priest" understood between "made" and "not."

3. Forever. For the age. Although this term is but for an age, the priesthood of Christ cannot be said to terminate with this age. The priesthood is unchangeable—continually unending.

6. Saved to the Uttermost. While this is a broad phrase, it only includes such as "come unto God by him." This makes the salvation spoken of conditional upon coming unto God.

7. New Testament. New covenant, or agreement. There were transgressions under the first testament, and for the redemption of those transgressions Jesus died; thus making it possible that the promise of eternal inheritance could be obtained through him or through his death (Heb. 9:5).

Justified.—Made or set right; that is, to set one's self right in the sight of others. And this was done by the redemption through Christ Jesus.

10. Propitiation. The act of rendering favorable that which was at variance. Jesus was the means of bringing our condition before God in a favorable light on account of our faith in Jesus, for the apostle here says that it is through faith in his blood (10), and also through the forbearance of God (11); and again he declares (12) we are justified through faith in Jesus.

Suggestive Topics and Questions

1. The Unchanging Priesthood.—What was a prominent feature of Melchizedek (Heb. 7:3) ? In what respect was he like the Son of God ? Ans.: He abideth a priest continually. If Melchizedek was a type, what might we expect ? (1.) How was he to be made a priest ? (2.) How long was he to remain a priest ? (3.) By whom was this language first used (Psa. 110:4) ? Why were not the priests permitted to remain in office forever under the law? (4.) Why does Jesus have an unchanging priesthood (Rev. 1:18) ? What has Jesus the ability to do ? (6.) What is meant by making intercession for those that come to God by him ?

2. The Redemption by Faith. What is the meaning of redemption ? How was the redemption brought about ? (8.) What are those who are called to receive ? Through what means are we justified ? (9.) Whom did God give to be a propitiation for our sins ? (9 and 10.) What is required on our part ? Ans.: Faith in his blood.

A Concluding Thought. How consoling to think that we have a faithful High Priest who will never die, and whom we can turn to by faith and feel that we may have redemption through his blood, and forgiveness of sins.

CHANGES IN THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE

Most of our readers probably are not aware of the great changes that have taken place in our language since its first formation. The following are specimens of the Lord's Prayer at different periods:

1300. Foder our in hevene, halewoyed be thi name, come thi kingdom. Thi will be as in hevene and in erthe. Our uche dayes bred give us to day. And forgive us our dettes, as we forgeven our dettours. An lede us not into temtatioun, Bote delivere us of yvel. Amen.

1371. Wickliffe's Bible. Our fadyr that art in heavenes, halloed be thy name. Let thy kingdom come to be, thy will done in erthe as in heavone; give us this day our bread over other sustanches; and forgif to us out dettes as we forgiven to our detors; and lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evel. Amen.

1526. Tindale's Testament. Our father whichh art in heven, hallowed be thy name. Let thy kingdom come. Thy will be fulfilled as well as in the erthe as hit ys in heven. Give us this daye our dayly breade. And forgive vs our trespasses, as we forgeve them which trespas us. Leede vs not into temptation but delyver vs from yvel. Amen.

1589. Coverdale's Bible. Our father which art in eaven, halowed be thf name. Thf kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as it is in heauven. Give us this day our daily breade. Obituaries

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Nathan Railsback died of paralysis at his home in Argos at 6 o'clock P. M., Thursday, May 1, 1919. He and his companion have been in poor health for some time and spent the winter with his brother, Richard, in South Bend, where they were well cared for, and they had just returned to their home a few weeks ago. He was 82 years, 5 months, and seven days old and his death had been expected. He was born Sept. 24, 1886, seven miles north west from Indianapolis. He was the fifth of a remarkable family of nine sons and two daughters, the children of Caleb and Nancy Railsback. His death leaves but three of these alive, Richard C. of South Bend, Hugh of St. Petersburg, Florida, and Franklin of Argos.

Brother Railsback came to Marshall county Nov. 10, 1846, with his parents who settled near Argos. He was married to Mary Whisman Dec. 4, 1862, and to them was born one son, Alvarado. They were engaged in farming and later entered merchandising in Argos where they conducted a successful business for many years. They then removed to Hot Springs, Arkansas and engaged in farming. While here their son died, June 28, 1903. Left alone they returned to Argos in 1913 to spend the remainder of their declining years near their relatives and old time friends.

He was converted and baptized by Elder Hugh Barnhill 65 years ago, and has been a member of the Church of God since. He was one of the charter members of the present church in Argos, and was a substantial supporter of it during his active life here. He has lived a true Christian life as nearly as it is within human possibility. His pathway was beset with many difficulties, but he has fought the good fight of faith, and we can feel assured that there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness which the righteous Judge will give him at his appearing.

His afflicted companion has the sympathy of his remaining brothers and many relatives and friends in this her sad bereavement.

Funeral services were held at the home Saturday, May 3, 1919 at 2 o'clock, and burial was made in Maple Grove Cemetery where Brother Railsback is at rest, after so long a life of usefulness, to wait for the coming of the King in his beauty and glory to call the sleeping saints to their reward.

Death has again visited us and taken away one of our esteemed citizens in the person of Asa O. Roose who died at Woodlawn Hospital, Rochester, Ind., at 12:30, Tuesday morning, April 29th, 1919. His untimely death was the result of an accident happening on his farm, Saturday, about 3 o'clock. Brother Roose and his foster son, Thurlow, were sinking a very large stone, and made an excavation nine feet deep. Thurlow had just left the pit and Brother Roose was ready to leave when the bank suddenly crumbled beneath the enormous weight of the stone and his feet were buried and his body crushed against the wall of the pit opposite the stone. Thurlow tried to extricate him but in vain. He then hailed a neighbor passing upon the highway nearby and they dug him out. Doctor Mc Cracken was immediately summoned and administered medicine to allay the awful pain he suffered. He was afterwards taken to the hospital and everything done that was possible but to no avail.

Brother Roose was born in Stark County Indiana, Sept. 11, 1862. He was the son of Samuel and Mary Ann Roose and one of a family of eleven children. When he was two years old his father was killed on the railroad where he was working as a brakeman. Left an orphan he grew to manhood with but little of the advantages of education and started life for himself with no material help, but with an indomitable will, great force of character and vigor of manhood. His physical strength was extraordinary and his endurance seldom equaled. He went forth with great initiative to make a home for his family and a place in the world for himself. When the children were yet small his companion was stricken with a physical breakdown and lay for years an invalid. But with his inexhaustible vitality he forged ahead, meeting every obstacle with patience and perseverance until success crowned his efforts and he owned one of the best improved farms in our county. This was only the basis of his higher achievement of rearing his family in respectibility and developing them to a high degree of moral worth.

He heard the gospel message and was baptized by A. H. Zilmer in the spring of 1905, and united with the Church of God at Argos. He rejoiced in seeing his entire family followers of Christ. He was one of the active members in the affairs of the church having served the local church in the capacity of Elder and Trustee, and was one of the Vice Presidents of the Indiana State Conference at the time of his death. He was a willing contributor of his means, time and services for the advance of the cause of the truth that he loved. He had so lived that he was prepared to die. He did not fear to enter the darkness for he trusted the Christ who has the keys to release him. In his last hours when he realized that the time of his departure was at hand, he expressed thankfulness that he had not been left alone in the field when the fatal accident occurred, but that he was permitted to see and know his family and to bid them farewell.

He leaves to mourn his lamentable death his beloved and close companion; his aged mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Neher, of Nappanee; his four daughters, Miss Leora, Mrs. Bertha Puterbaugh, Mrs. Rosa Wiseley, and Mrs. Fern Nellans; his foster son, Thurlow Richter; one brother, Ezra Roose; one sister, Mrs. Martha Deisch; four half-brothers, William, Henry, Irvin and Lawrence Neher; three half-sisters, Mrs. Rosa Phend, Mrs. Lizzie Stine, and Mrs. Clara George; six grand children and many other relatives. These are left to remember the life of good deeds and kindnesses of a loving husband and father and friend.

No business ever prevented the bestowal of his personal ministrations upon his family when needed. Was there sickness ? He could act as nurse with great tenderness. Was there house work to be done ? He could do it with speed and skill. There was no need in the affairs of his household he could not and did not answer. How sadly the home is bereft none can tell and its members only can realize.

Funeral services were held Thursday May 1. Short services were held at the house then he was taken to the church of the Brethren where Elder S. J. Lindsey, Editor of The Restitution Herald, of Oregon, Ill., delivered the funeral sermon. The capacious audience room was filled to overflowing with friends and brethren. Beautiful flowers graced the ceremonies. All the near relatives including his aged mother were present excepting Mrs. Phend and Mrs. George. Burial was made in the Brethren Cemetery nearby the church, beside the little son who was laid to rest many years ago. Here he rests awaiting his hope in the resurrection at the coming of Jesus, the Savior.

It is no shame to belong to the minority. Noah and his family were in the minority, while the vast majority were going to destruction pretty much as they are now.

4. An heart that deviseth wicked imagination.
5. Feet that be swife in running to mischief.
6. A false witness that speaketh lies.

May 4th the following, after giving evidence of their faith and change of mind, were baptized into Jehovah's name as manifested in his Son by the Holy Spirit: Mr. Larkin, formerly Episcopalian, the husband of Sister Larkin; Mr. Rocker, formerly neutral, the husband of Sister Rocker; Miss Mabel Jackson, formerly Seventh-day Adventist, the daughter of Sister Jackson; Miss Dorothy Neill, formerly neutral, the daughter of Sister Neill; Mr. Albert Weed, formerly neutral, the son of Sister Weed; Mr. Raymond Larkin, formerly neutral, the son of Brother and Sister Larkin; and Mrs. Austin Smith, formerly Seventh-day Adventist. We are all exceedingly gratified by the acquisition of these new friends, who obeyed the truth in "full assurance of faith"—obeyed it, as expressed in the juvenile style of Sister Mabel Jackson, "to become brothers and sisters of the kingdom of God. We thank God for the comradeship of fellow believers: which gives us a foretaste of "the general assembly and church of the first-born" in the coming state of glory.

IV. WHAT CONSTITUTE THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD

In the preceding lesson we demonstrated by the Scriptures that the gospel relates to the kingdom of God, and that an amplified definition of the gospel embraces "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12). Therefore to find out what these "things" are is to find out what the gospel is; to hear, believe, confess, and obey these "things" is to hear, believe, confess, and and obey the gospel. The analysis of these "things of the kingdom" is made necessary by the fact that the kingdom of God is truly and literally a kingdom, with constitution and statutes; with a personal head, and many subordinate ministries; comprehending all nations, and enduring forever. A kingdom is not an abstraction. It is not any single thing: it is an aggregation of elements or parts which go to make it up. A king is not, in himself, a kingdom; neither is a country, people, capital, nor laws, separately: all these combined are required to make a kingdom. As a kingdom is composed of a king, an aristocracy, a people, a territory, a capial, and laws, these "things of the kingdom" must be defined and understood separately and in detail before we can "receive the kingdom" with comprehension and understanding. As the reader's salvation depends upon his belief of these kingdom "things," we ardently hope that he will study the subjoined analysis of these things with the docility and simplicity of a little child; for "whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein" (Luke 18:17).

(a) The King: Christ

The word "Christ" comes from the Greek word Christos, which means anointed. This quotation from a scholar of eminence is worthy of mention here:

> "Christos, Christ, is the official appellation of the long promised and long expected Savior, denoting his kingly authority and mediatorial position as the 'Servant of the Lord.' Jesus was his common name during his lifetime, and he is generally so called in the Gospels, while 'the Christ' or 'Jesus Christ' is generally used in the Epistles" (Young's Concordance under "Christ").

The Bible discriminates between the words "Jesus" and "Christ," the former being used as a name and the latter as a title. Jesus is a name which means Savior (Matt. 1:21); Christ is a title, or as Young says, "an official appellation denoting kingly authority." Biblically the words "King" and "Christ" are convertable terms. "Where is he that is born King of the Jews?" in Matt. 2:2 is emended to read in the fourth verse, "Where Christ should be born." Here the words "King" and "Christ" are used as synonyms. Now if the reader asks, "What must I do to be saved?" the answer is, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ" (Acts 16:31). "Jesus Christ" is a name and a title combined. Since, then, "Christ" is a title referring to "kingly authority," and is synonymous with "King," to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ" is to believe that he is King as well as Savior. These two words are distinguishable and are distinguished; separable and are separated. John makes this distinction apparent when he says: "These are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing, ye might have life through his name" (John 20:31). It is possible, then, to believe in Jesus and at the same time reject Christ; to believe in him as Savior and at the same time reject him as King. Grammatically the definite article "the" cannot be used before a proper name; therefore when John says "Jesus the Christ" he is using a title equivalent to "Jesus the King." As "life through his name" comes to us by "believing" this, the reader must see that here is a matter demanding his serious consideration. The fact that the book of John was "written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ," shows the importance of the subject. "And Paul, as his manner was, went unto them, and three sabbath days reasoned with them out of the Scriptures, opening and alleging, that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that this Jesus whom I preach unto you is Christ" (Acts 17:2,3). Preaching that Jesus is Christ is explained as teaching "contrary to the decrees of Caesar, saying that there is another King, one Jesus" (vs. 7). Therefore when Paul preached that Jesus was Christ he taught that Jesus would be King "contrary" to Caesar—that he would be King in the literal sense in which Caesar was King. And to intimate when he would exercise this "kingly authority" he said, "He hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness" (vs. 31). He calls this "appointed day" the "appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Tim. 6:14). Referring to his appearing as "his times" he declares that he will "show (Caesar and all other rulers) who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords" (vs. 15). Ethereal conceptions of Jesus' kingship, while eulogized as "spiritual," are but mock-fires of the marsh "that lead to bewilder, and dazzle to blind." Why should there not be a personal manifestation and visible sovereignty of Christ on earth? Is this world, over whose birth the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy (Job 38:7); is this world to which angelic hosts have descended with embassies of heavenly love is this world to be blotted out of being, or doomed to eternal sterility? One of the fairest productions of the Creator, is the earth to be smitten from its place among the heavenly orbs by the hand that made it? A theology which requires such a frightful issue impugns the goodness and wisdom of God, and charges him with an abortive creation. That Christ is to "judge the world in righteousness," instead of degrading, glorifies him; and is one of the most gladsome truths of revelation. Reason and the word of God mutually embrace each other in saying that here on earth where Christ suffered is the place of his triumph, and that the objects of his redeeming love should be the subjects of his regal sway. Here on earth where Christ prayed, suffered, and died; where he was denied, derided, and killed is the place for his vindication. Where he has been denied he must be confessed; where he suffered he must triumph; where he was disgraced by humiliation is where he must be glorified and exalted; where he carried the cross he must wield the sceptre—here where he wore a crown of thorns is where he shall wear a crown of gold (Psa. 21).

(b) The Associates of the King: the Saints

The reward in store for the saints in the day of Christ's glory is a participation in "the glory, honor, and power" of the kingdom in the sense of being his associates and coadjutors (as kings and priests) in the work of governing the world righteously. When Christ returns in glory and sits upon his throne (Matt. 25:31), instead of being alone he has ten thousands of saints with him (Jude 14). They "inherit the kingdom" with him (Matt. 25:34). As "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God," the dead are raised incorruptible, and the living are "changed in a moment" from mortality to immortality (1 Cor. 15:51,52). The saints are thus regenerated (Matt. 19:28), made like Christ (1 John 3:2), and have "glorious" bodies of immortality (Phil 3:21). They are now "equal to the angels and cannot die any more" (Luke 20:36). Endowed with everlasting life they have no successors, thus the kingdom is never left "to other people" (Dan. 2:44). Glory, differing like the glory of the stars (1 Cor. 15:41), is now added to their salvation (2 Tim. 2:10), its "weight," order, and precedence corresponding with the decree of suffering and loss endured for Christ (2 Cor. 4:17,18). The apostolic band comes first (Matt. 19:28), next the martyr campany (Rev. 20:4), then the saints of all generations who are counted worthy of that age (Luke 20:35). These are all regenerated and given authority as judges in the kingdom of God (Matt. 19:28; Luke 19:17, 19). They sit with Christ in his throne as his glorified Bride, his Queen-consort enthroned with him (Rev. 3:21; 2 Tim. 2:12). They wield "power over the nations" (Rev. 2:26,27) as princes (Isa. 32:1), "take the kingdom," and possess its dominion and glory forever (Dan. 7:18,27). They execute the judgment written (Psa. 149:7-9), judge the world (1 Cor. 6:2,3), "sit down in the kingdom of God" with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob and other distinguished heroes of God in everlasting comradeship (Matt. 8:11; Luke 13:28, 29), and shall reign on the earth as kings and priests (Rev. 5:10).

Dear reader, do not reason, logic, and the fitness of things corroborate these declarations of the divine utterance? Heroic poetry, in its most presumptuous flights, has never conceived of such a vindication for defeated warriors as this—triumphing in a deathless and glorified body on the very field of battle where their leader was mutilated and entombed. It is certainly fitting that the place of Immanuel's sufferings should also be the place of his triumph. And it is most fitting that the saints should share the kingdom and the glory with Christ. Is it not according to logical thought and the fitness of things that those who have been partakers of his sufferings should be also partakers of his glory when it is revealed (1 Pet. 4:13); that those who have toiled in his service should enter into his rest (Heb. 4:11): that those who have fought under his banner should participate in the honors of his victory; that those who have borne the cross should be given the crown; that those who have bravely confessed him before men should be confessed of him before the holy angels—that those who have cheerfully submitted to the loss of all things for his sake and the gospel should be rewarded an hundredfold in the very world where, for his sake, they have been impoverished? O reader, is it not consistent and fitting, logical and scriptural, that the purchaser should come and claim what he has purchased, gather home his exiles, fold his scattered sheep upon Mount Zion, and fulfill his gracious promise to reward their faithfulness, and gratify their hope of eternal life? Does it not follow that here, where he redeemed them, he should dwell with them forever: that here where he has abolished "the last enemy," death, they should celebrate in his presence that glorious achievement of his power; that here where they are purified by his grace and disciplined by his providence, they should enjoy his eternal communion, and rejoice in his eternal beatitude; that here, where they sleep in the dust, and awake in immortality they should be permitted to remain in glorified bodies with him who is "the resurrection and the life," amid the ineffable beauties of regenerate nature and in the delectable joys of paradise restored?

(c) The Laws

"The world to come" will be subject to Christ and his immortalized saints (Heb. 2:8). Residents of Jerusalem, the headquarters and metropolis of the kingdom, they will enact and enforce holy and just laws, and exercise lordship over the earth to the utmost bounds of the globe. These laws, wisely and divinely administered, will work an intellectual, moral, social, and religious reformation among the subject people, as witness the following testimonies:

> "Many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations . . . . neither shall they learn war any more" (Isa. 2:3,4).
> "The isles shall wait for his law" (Isa. 42:4; see also Zech. 14:16-19).

(d) The Subjects: Israelites and Gentiles

The Jews, now scattered and afflicted, will be gathered from their dispersion and re-instated in Palestine as the subjects of the kingdom. However, the subjects include Gentiles also, with this difference: "The kingdom of God" is distinct from "all people, nations, and languages" which it rules (Dan. 7:14), just as the kingdom of Great Britain is distinct from its colonies. The Jews will be the highest subjects of the kingdom, just as Englishmen are in England; the Gentiles, like her colonial possessions, will form "the dominion" and constitute dependencies of the kingdom, like the "dominion of Canada," New Zealand, etc. Jews and Gentiles are both subjects, but the Jews are "the first dominion"—subjects in a proper and exclusive sense. These distinctions are made transparent in the following Scriptures:

> "His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him" (Dan. 7:27).
> "Many nations shall be joined to the Lord in that day, and shall be my people" (Zech. 2:11).
> "And thou, O tower of the flock, the strong hold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem" (Micah 4:8).

(e) The Capital: Jerusalem

As the gospel radiated from Jerusalem during this dispensation (Luke 24:47), so this city will be the center of activity in the kingdom age, being the resident city of the King and his Queen-consort. It has been selected as the capital city of the world because it is "beautiful for situation," as the following testimonies declare:

> "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the city of the Great King" (Psa. 48:2).
> "At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord" (Jer. 3:17).
> "Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion, for lo, I come, and I will dwell in the midst of thee, saith the Lord." "And the Lord shall inherit Judah his portion in the holy land, and shall choose Jerusalem again" (Zech. 2:10,12).

(f) The Territory: Palestine

Palestine, which God repeatedly calls "my land" (Ezek. 36:5; 38:16; Jer. 2:7; 16:18), and of which Moses says, "It is a land which the Lord thy God careth for: the eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year" (Deut. 11:12), will form the territory of the kingdom in a primary and exclusive sense. Finally, by subjugation and conquest, the "uttermost parts of the earth" are added to the dominion of "the King of kings, and Lord of lords." Such is the plain import of the Scriptures following:

> "I will remember the land" (Lev. 26:42).
> "Then will the Lord be jealous for his land, and pity his people" (Joel 2:18).
> "This land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden" (Ezek. 36:35).
> "I will give thee the heathen (Hebrew, nations) for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession" (Psa. 2:8).
> "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth" (Psa. 72:8).

Young People's Meeting

Brother and Sister [illegible] entertained a large attendance of the Young People's Society at their home on E. 82nd St., Friday, April 25th 1919. The evening opened with the regular business. Programs for the ensuing year were distributed and discussed. Anyone interested in the lessons may secure program from the corresponding secretary, Sister Ruth Pate, 2303 Bellfield Ave., City.

Brother Dowle of Michigan was with us and gave a sincere exhortation, that we remember the coming of the Lord approaches nearer every day, and we must not delay our preparation for him.

The lesson, "The Blessedness of Forgiveness," was conducted by Sister Heloise Crawford and was based on Psa. 32:1: "Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered. We are not only blessed in being forgiven but are doubly blessed in having the privilege of forgiving others. If it were not for this attribute of forgiveness our hope of eternity would be gone, for we are sinful mortals and it is only through Christ's intercession and God's merciful forgiveness of our sins that we have a hope of salvation

Brother E. R. Drabenstott, of Huntington, Ind., sent an interesting and instructive essay on the topic of the evening. The Society will be only too glad to receive more of such literature.

GOLDEN TEXT: Acts 10:34, 35

IF WE KNEW

Could we but draw back the curtains
  That surround each other's lives,
See the naked heart and spirit,
  Know what spur the action gives.
Often we would find it better,
  Purer than we judge we would;
We would love each other better,
  If we only understood.

Could we judge all deeds by motives,
  See the good and bad within,
Often we would love the sinner
  All the while we loathed the sin.
Could we know the powers working
  To o'erthrow integrity,
We would judge each others errors
  With more patient charity.

If we knew the cares and trials,
  Knew the efforts all in vain,
And the bitter disappointment
  Understood the loss and gain—

Would the grim external roughness
  Seem, I wonder, just the same,
Would we help where now we hinder,
  Would we pity where we blame?

Ah! we judge each other harshly,
  Knowing not life's hidden force;
Knowing not the fount of action
  Is less turbid at its source;
Seeing not amid the evil
  All the golden grains of good;
Oh! we'd love each other better
  If we only understood.

As A Light That Shineth in A Dark Place

In Scotland. what we here call the Church of God is known as the Church of Baptized Believers. In Edinburgh, which is the capital of Scotland, there are two large and flourishing churches, each owning their place of worship: one the "Hill Place" church publishes a monthly a four page paper in size 5¼ by 8½in called the "Evangel," which gives the church news, also little articles that would be of benefit to those who might be seeking the truth. We now have the issue for March before us. By it we see they have preaching twice each Sunday at 11 A. M. and 6:30 P. M.; Sunday School at 1 and again at 5:15 P. M.; on Mondays two meetings are held, and the same number on Tuesday, Thursday. and Friday, and one on Saturday. One of the Monday meetings is a "Senior Teacher's Training Class." A "Junior Teachers' Training Class" is held every Thursday, as also is a Primary Teacher's Training Class" as well as a "Beginners Teacher's Training Class" each Friday.

Under the special meetings, of which there are four during the month, we note that on March 27 will be held he "66th Annual Business Meeting," and on the 29th the "66th Church Anniversary Social," the business meeting to commence at 8 P. M. and the social at 4:30.

There is a "Baptismal Notice" in which is stated that "there will be a baptismal service in the church on Sunday evening, 9th March, when two young people will confess the Lord Jesus in his appointed way." Among other interesting matter is the following:

Manifesto

The church earnestly seeks to reproduce the faith and practice of the apostolic church as expressed, for example, in Acts 8:12: "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women," and in order to accomplish this object effectively and harmoniously, its membership is restricted to those who believe in our Lord Jesus as the Christ, the Son of God, who died for the sins of the world, and rose again for our justification, and through whom alone, we have hope of immortality at the resurrection of the just. Who also have been immersed in water in his name, and are waiting for his coming again from heaven, to sit upon the throne of his Father David. reign over restored Israel, and make the kingdoms of this world the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ.

We wonder if in the foregoing, there are hints or suggestions that would be of benefit to any of our congregations on this side of the Atlantic.

Christ For Us, To Us, And In Us

There are three ways in which we are benefited by Christ; three bonds between us and him:

1. He is for us. The Holy One bears the sins of the unholy; the Just One dies for the unjust. Thus the cross of Christ, or rather Christ upon the cross is our peace. His body was broken for us.

2. He is given to us. The Holy One bears the sins gives himself to us; and so he himself and all that he is and has become is ours. It is this gift of himself to us that we are reminded of in the supper: "He took bread, and gave it, saying, Take eat."

3. He dwells in us. He in us and we in him; he our temple, we his! "Christ in you the hope of glory." "We will come unto him and make our abode with him" (John 14:23).

A Forthcoming Treat

Some time since a brother who hails from that part of the country where they grow real men, men with great big hearts filled with love for boys and girls, sent us an interesting little story—in fable form—regarding a big and ugly monster that kept good men and women in a dark and damp dungeon, and how a good and loving king outwitted the monster, allowing the prisoners to escape. I feel sure you remember the story, also the sequel. The monster was death; the dungeon was the grave; and the king was Jesus our Lord, "who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."

Now the same brother, Brother S. H. Thomas who, when writing to children signs himself "Father Thomas" has sent us for your instruction and profit, an advertisement for a certain company in which he asks us to buy a policy. I was going to tell you more about this company, its agents and policies, but "Father Thomas has done this much better than I could. So I only add, watch out for the next issue, read carefully "A Chat With the Children." We know you will be pleased. If we do not get a host of letters telling us so we will be disappointed. In closing let us say that "Father Thomas," and we, as well as a host of others, now own policies in this company; and our only advice is follow our example and buy. You cannot lose.

Regarding Our Weekly Puzzles

In December last we made announcement that commencing with the first issue in January, we would give five credits for each correct answer to the questions comprising our weekly puzzle.

By this means we hoped to stimulate Bible study and research. We imagined the response would be so great that we would be compelled to call upon the brethren for contributions to establish a fund for the purpose of buying prizes. But we regret the necessity of recording our disappointment. We have received many replies, but with one exception, our correspondents have not been regular in sending answers. The exception is who not only has answered every puzzle but each question has been answered correctly. She having earned one hundred per cent, we take great pleasure in awarding her the only prize given, which we trust will be received in the same spirit of Christian love in which it is sent.

Miss Gladys Heckman,
Hobart, Oklahoma

With this issue we shall discontinue the credits. We wish to thank all our contributors and say that, gerenally speaking all answers were correct, letters neatly written, and care shown in study and research.

Our Weekly Puzzle

Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

Who spoke the above?
What is meant by "heavy laden" as here used?
What is a "yoke"?
Why is the word "yoke" here used?
Where can the above passage be found?
Answer next issue.

Answer to puzzle in issue of April 22:

The "brethren" are those who have forsaken the world, acknowledged Jesus to be the Christ, the Son of God, and accepted him as their wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption.

"Liberty" signifies "not being under the rule or control of others." As used in this passage it means "not being under the rule or dominion of sin" also "freed from the penalty of sin."

"Fulfilled" means "accomplished," "completed," "finished."

"Our neighbor" is anyone to whom it is possible for us to do a kind act or deed.

Jesus defines a neighbor in the parable as recorded in Luke 10:25-37.

The passage was written by Paul to the church of Galatia, and can be found in Galatians 5:13, 14.

Lines

Out of the twilight of the past,
  We move to a diviner light;
For nothing that is wrong can last,
  Nothing's immortal but the right.

"CHOSEN ONES"

"Ye are not of the world, for I have chosen you out of the world. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate . . . , and I will receive you." The above language is admitted by all believers of the Bible to be true. But just where the line of separation shall be when drawn is a thing of no little importance. I am aware that the line as drawn by Jesus shows a marked distinction between the Christian and the worldling. And Jesus has given us an infallible rule by which we may always know when we are on the right side of the line. Hear it: "But because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world; therefore the world hateth you."

Now, brethren, when we heard the timely warning, "Come out of her my people," how many of us responded to the call? If we have been chosen out of the world, how shall we prove that we have responded to the "call," except we refuse to act with the world? Shall we who are solemnly announcing to the world the downfall of all human governments preparatory to the coming reign of the "Prince of Peace," shall we rush to the polls and contradict all this? Shall we eat, drink, sleep, and fight with the world? If we do will not the world say, "they are of us"? Will not sober, candid men say, "Behold their hypocrisy?" We will fail to convince people of our sincerity, unless we we faithfully practice what we preach.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it be be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

BE THANKFUL EVERY DAY

The purely passive contemplation of all good ought to be granted to common days on which no more has occurred than the daily round of little pleasures and the absence of more than ordinary annoyances. With the evening offering a silent thanksgiving to God we take conscious possession of simple happiness and enjoy it once again, instead of slipping off past God's best gifts as men so often do. Thus thanksgiving involves the recognition: All this good is from God, and this recognition reacts on our own good, creating conscious joy and humble trust in the God who will continue to bless in things both great and small.

On the War

In 1854 the Bear
The Crescent shall assail,
But if the Bull and Cock unite
The Bear shall not prevail.

In three score years again I ween,
Let Islam know and fear;
The Cross shall wave, the Crescent wane
Dissolve and disappear.

Then will the Eagles fly
To enter in the strife,
Till he whose right it is will come
And with his saints will fight.

As prophets spoke of old,
All wars and death shall cease;
He whose right it is will reign,
Give to the world its peace.—Selected by Brother George Dowle.

Multum In Parvo

Article Two

A man is like the fish in the water. Take a fish out of the water and it will die. Put a man where there is no air and he will die. A man breathes about eighteen times a minute, inhaling a pint of air each breath, which makes two gallons and a half each minute, giving heart action which forces the life blood to all parts of the soul, and imparts spirit to the mind. Therefore the spirit of man is the candle of the Lord, searching all the inward parts of the belly (Prov. 20:27). The amount of air a man uses in ten years is nearly twelve million gallons. It returns to God each time we breathe. In God we live, move, and have our being.

A man when in sound sleep is as unconscious as a dead man because of the suspension of all his sense organs, except brain action, lives on vigorous, vital forces by an unconscious organ—the heart which gives the life blood and the process of digestion, and all other life giving functions to the unconscious soul. The air continues in his nostrils, yet all thinking powers are dormant in sleep. Therefore this much of a soul in sound sleep is without sense to think and act.

Notice when he wakes from sleep the lamp or candle of the Lord causes the spirit of mind to act either in a bad or good spirit. The spirit enters in (Ezek. 2:2). Some wake with an humble spirit (Isa. 57:15): some with vexation of spirit (Isa. 65:14): others with lying spirits (1 Kings 22:22). Also foolish spirits (Ezek. 13:3), and spirits of whoredoms (Hosea 5:4), treacherous spirits (Mal. 2:16). Many have haughty spirits (Prov. 16:18), and a few have the spirit of truth (John 14:17). "Hereby know we the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error" (1 John 4:6). "May the Lord Jesus Christ be with thy spirit" (Titus 4:22). Thus we have spirits of devils, spirits of robbers, spirits of war, spirits of Christ, and spirits of the wicked.

God has but one sentence or doom for the wages of sin, which is death (Rom. 6:23). God said to Adam "Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:19). He says the wicked shall be silent in darkness (1 Sam. 2:9). The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord (Heb. neshamah, breath). "The candle of the wicked shall be put out" (Prov. 24:20). The wicked shall perish (Psa. 37:20). They will perish (2 Pet. 2:12). The Lord will destroy them (Psa. 145:20). "For behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. For they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet, in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts" (Mal. 4:1-4). The same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed (Luke 17:29, 20). Thus in this manner the wicked shall be turned into hell (Heb. the unseen state, sheol: grave, the unseen world, hades), and all the nations that forget God (Psa. 9:17). Here we have death the wages of sin: a final state; God's sentence and doom, a finality; turned back to the earth, mortal, dust souls; the unseen state. The Heb. word sheol (hell) and the Greek word hades are synonymous words, rendered "hell" 41 times, and "grave" 32 times; and only implies the abode or unseen world of the dead, which is literally that which is in darkness, hidden, invisible or obscure. "Yet a little while and the wicked shall not be: yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be" (Psa. 37:10). "They shall be as though they had not been" (Obad. 16). There will be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust (Acts 17:15). Then comes the righteous judgment of God. He will render to every man according to deeds (Rom. 2:5, 6). The wages of sin, the second death, is due all sinners. John saw both small and great stand before God; and the books were opened, and all were judged every man according to his works. God's sentence will be the second death, the wages of sin (Rev. 20:12-15). But he that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death (Rev. 2:11).

Some say the destruction of the wicked is no punishment. In fact it involves the loss of everything gained by the righteous. If what the righteous secure is no reward to them; the loss to the wicked is no punishment. Is it a little matter to lose eternal life and all its billions of years of attendant glories, and pass under the dark wave of oblivion? The death of the wicked is only the last ingredient in his case. Indignation, wrath, tribulation, and anguish come first. One thing is only a component part of his chastisement, stripes, and gnashing of teeth await all the wicked according to deeds, and death will close their doom. The wages of sin is death (Rom. 6:23).

Notice carefully Christ's allusions to gehenna, hell: Greek Gehenna, fire. This is the hell that will destroy the wicked. The word occurs in Christ's words eleven times. Gehenna is the antitypical hell in Hinnon's valley a short distance south of Jerusalem, a place for the cremation of the filth of the city. Fire was the agent used to burn up the filth in Gehenna. Therefore the Greek word is the strongest term in the whole Greek language to express total annihilation.

Christ's first warning of the danger of hell fire is the unruled tongue (Matt. 5:22). His second warning is, "Be not afraid of those who kill the body, but cannot destroy the future life; but rather fear him who can utterly destroy both life and body in Gehenna" (Diaglott, Matt. 10:28). His next warning, "If thy hand or foot cause thee to offend, cut them off and throw them away: it is better for thee to enter life crippled or lame than having two hands or two feet to be cast into the aionian fire" (Diaglott, Matt. 18:8). If thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, it is better to enter into life with one eye than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire (Matt. 18:9). "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell" (Matt. 23:33)? If thy hand offend thee cut it off: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed than having two hands to go into hell" (Mark 9:43). It is better to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire (Mark 9:47).

The above warnings by Christ show he is very pitiful and of tender mercy. "As I live saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live; turn ye, turn ye, from your evil ways: for why will ye die? (Ezek. 33:11). Therefore be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good (Rom. 12:21). Be ye also ready for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh (Matt. 24:44). Man that is in honor, and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish (Psa. 49:20). The Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts. If thou seek him he will be found of thee, but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off forever (1 Chron. 28:9). To be carnally minded is death (Rom. 8:6). He that pursueth evil pursueth it to his own death (Psa. 11:19). The end thereof are the ways of death (Psa. 14:12). Therefore God's final ultimatum is that the wicked shall be turned into sheol, hell, the unseen state, grave, tomb or pit, and all the nations that forget God (Psa. 9:17); which is the wages of sin, death (Rom. 6:23). First and last God's sentence for sin is dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return (Gen. 3:19). He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death (James 5:20) The first man (Adam) is of the earth earthy (1 Cor. 15:47). Therefore he can only transmit to his children his earthly nature. All of Adam's descendants, therefore are only of earth earthy. Adam's formation was of the dust of the earth; and all his food came from the earth, therefore he was absolutely of the earth, earthy. Paul tells us the truth (1 Cor. 15:47). But many in their vain imaginations have studiously tried to find something about man that never had any existence. When men inject their theories into the word of God they make absolute foolishness. Did the devil tell the truth when he said, "ye shall not surely die?" It is appointed unto men once to die (Heb. 9:27). And if there is no resurrection, all are perished (1 Cor. 15:18). Has the righteous dead of the past ages received any of the Savior's promises? No. These all died in the faith, not having received the promise (Heb. 11:13). Where is the life of those dead saints? Hid with Christ in God (Col. 3:3). Verse 4: "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Christ says, "I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also" (John 14:3). Where will Christ find the good people when he comes again? "The hour is coming in the which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of ((Greek, zoe, eternal life) life" (John 5:28, 29). When this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory (1 Cor. 15:54) God is the source of all the good that man possesses. The only way God has devised to give eternal life to man is by the resurrection from the dead or translation. Jesus said, "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live" (John 11: 52). "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death" (Rev. 1:18). Christ has the only keys that can penetrate inanimate dead souls. Christ is the second Adam, a quickening spirit (1 Cor. 15:45). "He said, "Lazarus, come forth; and he that was dead came forth" (John 11:43, 44). Christ said to the widow's dead son, "Young man, I say unto thee arise. And he that was dead sat up and began to speak, and he delivered him to his mother" (Luke 12:14, 15). Therefore the only life of the first Adam's condemned posterity is hid with Christ in God (Col. 3:3). Our only hope of life is in Christ. For by grace ye are saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God (Eph. 2:8). Therefore no disembodied, mythical, invisible, imaginary, immortal souls are needed to put into the dead souls of men to give them life. Christ said, "I am the way, the truth and the life" (John 14:6). "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ" (Col. 2:8). Men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself (1 Tim. 6:15). In vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men (Mark 7:7). "Many deceivers are entered into the world" (2 John 1:7). Let no man deceive you with vain words: because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience (Eph. 5:7). Let no man deceive you by any means (2 Thess. 2:3). Jesus said unto them, Take heed that no man deceive you (Matt. 24:4). Be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive (Eph. 4:14). He feedeth on ashes: a deceived heart hath turned him aside, that he cannot deliver his soul nor say, Is there not a lie in my right hand? (Isa. 44:20). So is the man that deceiveth his neighbor and saith, Am not I a sport? (Prov. 26:19).

Wine and the Lord's Supper

To the Editor of The Restitution:

Dear Brother: I notice in your editorial comments on the story of the Drummer Boy in The Restitution of April 22, some statements that caused me some surprise and a sense of pain. One statement I wish to speak of it as follows: "And the Lord of truth has ordained it (wine) to be drunk by his people in remembrance of him in the sacred supper." Now I always enjoy your editorials, and if I differ with you in this particular view it may be that I misunderstand your meaning; and possibly a few words of explanation from you may help me out. I think that the subject may be of general interest to the brethren.

I will put the subject into question form: Did Christ give a command that requires all his followers to use fermented wine at the sacred supper?

I understand you give an affirmative answer; the general tone of your remarks seems to imply this. Your remark on the two wine theory would lead one to think that you recognized only one kind of wine, and that the fermented kind.

Your statement raised the question in my mind what is wine anyway, and for answer I looked in Young's Concordance. I find that he gives thirteen words and phrases that are rendered wine in the English Bible. The third means according to Young is by far the most frequent; it is "what is pressed out, grape juice," occurring about one hundred and seventy-seven times. The next most frequent in use is number thirteen, occuring about twenty-eight times in the New Testament, and is simply grape juice. Other meanings occur less frequently. Some of them are as follows:

Anything mixed.
Anything sucked up.
Anything pressed on.

The passage you quote, Isa. 25:6, is rendered "what is preserved, sediment."

There are other meanings, but I have given enough to show that fermented liquors have no monopoly of the word wine in the Bible. The nature of the wine must be judged by the context. the New Testament. We are told that it was the liquor used at the last supper, for the word wine does not occur in any of the four accounts given in the New Testament. We are told that is was the fruit of the vine, let us say grape juice.

Now there are two ways of keeping grape juice: one is to boil with a little sugar and seal up tight in bottles. This will keep for a long time, and will not ferment. It has no intoxicating qualities, but when mixed with water makes a pleasant and health giving drink. The other way is to mix with water and sugar and expose to the air until fermentation has set in. It thus becomes intoxicating. This is the wine that moveth itself aright, that giveth its color in the cup, and at last biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder.

Our question now assumes this form: How was the grape juice prepared? Was it by fermentation?

The thirteenth chapter of Exodus, at the seventh verse, reads as follows: "Unleaven bread shall be eaten seven days, and there shall be no leaven bread seen with thee, neither shall there be leaven seen with thee in all thy quarters." This was the law of the Passover feast at which the Lord's supper was instituted.

Turning to Young's Concordance we find that leaven means anything that is fermented; therefore fermented fruit of the vine was not used by our Lord and his disciples at the feast of the Passover.

To me it seems that to say that our Lord commanded the use of fermented wine at the supper is to charge him with a breach of the law. And for the followers of Christ to use fermented wine at the supper seems to me to destroy the beauty of the symbolism. Paul seems to allude to this in 1 Cor. 5:7: "Purge out, therefore, the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump: as ye are unleavened; for even Christ our passover is slain for us."

Missing

Last Sunday, some families from church.

I expect to pass through this world but once. Any good thing, therefore, that I can do or any kindness I can show to any fellow human being, let me do it now. Let me not defer nor neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again.

That Drive for Subscribers

By S. Roxana Winer

That drive for subscriptions—how is it coming out? I have heard from no one save Sister Robison and Sister Ettie Fry. The former has been quite successful in her efforts, the latter is going to try what she can do. I have just finished a little study on prayer, and it looks very much to me as if we cannot succeed in any work for God unless we first ask him to go with us and bless us. Jacob said: "If God will be with me and keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat and raiment to put on, so that I come again to my father's house in peace, then shall the Lord be my God. And this stone, which I have set up for a pillow, shall be God's house, and of all that thou shalt give me, I will surely give a tenth to thee." He knew that he was utterly dependent upon God, and that if God did not go with him and keep him, in safety and in life, he could not keep his vow.

Moses said while yet by the Mount of Horeb and about to start out again on the journey toward the land of promise: "If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence. For wherein shall it be known how that I and thy people have found grace in thy sight? Is it not in that thou goest with us? So shall we be separated, I and thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth." For God had said, "My presence shall go with thee and I will give thee rest."

The same promise holds good to us. Jesus says, "I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." But will he keep us company if we shun him? If we do not pray him to go with us in all our enterprises for him? Indeed not. "If you ask anything in my name it shall be granted."

Cannot God overcome even the unpopularity that seems to be so almost universally prevalent in regard to the doctrines we hold? And if he does not see fit to do this, cannot he make us brave enough to work for him in spite of all opposition? Shut in as I am I can do but little in the way of securing subscriptions, but I can do what the mothers and sisters of the soldiers in France have done: I can back you up. I am behind you, praying for the paper, for its manager, for its writers. Obstacles ought only to stimulate us to larger endeavor. The strongest Christians are those who have overcome the most. Overcoming is what gives us characters that are worth while.

Get to work. Don't pay any attention to the hills. It is good exercise to climb. Keep at it and play the game all the while you are at work. Rejoice that you are counted worthy to suffer. Believe in victory. Faith is every thing. You know you are going over the top, and I know you are. Pull all together. Double the subscription roll. Give of yourself, of your time for God. We must tithe our time, just as we do our money. I am doing it. Work presses, but I let it go that I may do something for you.

I am glad to do it if the doing of it will make you glad to work for God; and all the more so, that I see so clearly how imperative it is that we bear fruit by winning others to Christ. The time is so short, do not dally. Men are dying that you might save.

"Awake! ye awake! no time now for reposing:
"The Lord is near," breaks on the ear.
O come, come away."

A Timely Exhortation

Fear not little flock for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom (Luke 12:32).

This promise Jesus made to his disciples. All the flocks who are believers in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ; to them this promise will apply. However, to be a member of such a little flock is not a guarantee to each individual that they will inherit the kingdom. Gaining the kingdom is an individual matter.

In the little flock that Jesus addressed and made the promise under consideration, one was a Judas. Before we can get into the kingdom "We must all appear before the tribunal of the anointed so that each one may receive the things through the body, according to what was performed whether good or bad" (2 Cor. 5:10, Diaglott). He will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner, but he will burn the chaff with unquenchable fire (Matt. 3:12).

We are told in 2 Timothy 3rd chapter that the master may come at any moment and shut to the door. It is the duty of each to make his calling and election sure. Now is the accepted time, the day of salvation. The time will come when the harvest is past, the summer ended and we may not be saved. Therefore it behooves us to take these matters seriously, to conduct ourselves so that we will be approved of Jesus at his appearing.

We are told in 2 Timothy 3rd chapter that in the last days perilous times shall come. Among other failings men shall be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. At the National Convention of Presbyterians held in Philadelphia a few years ago the Rev. Dr. William Fulton reported that during the past five years a quarter of a million members of the church had been placed on the suspended roll, meaning that the member mentioned had been dropped out of the church. Dr. Fulton expressed it in not very elegant language by saying that they had been relegated to the ecclesiastical scrap heap.

He said this falling off in membership is due to the growing love of pleasure and the craze for amusement, and the modern view of life. No doubt many of the members saw no harm in indulgence in this pleasure, and going to that amusement, and staying away from services, with the result that they lost all interest in the church.

I have referred to his matter so that we might be warned. We must be careful that we do not lose our first love for the truth. By indulging in the frivolities of the world, our heart is divided; we become luke warm, indifferent, which is very objectionable to God. He says, "Give me thine heart." It is impossible to serve two masters. We will love the one and hate the other. We cannot love God and the world as it is at the present time, filled with iniquity and sin.

One of the most impressive passages in the Scriptures is the one of three words, "Remember Lot's wife." Being half-hearted, she looked back on the burning city when commanded not to, and was turned into a pillar of salt. Jesus said in Luke 9:62, "No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God."

Therefore while the little flock may not need to fear as far as the faith is concerned, individually each member should fear. Fear lest they fail of the grace of God by allowing the things of the world to take up all their attention and time to the neglect of the things of God. We must have the right spirit, the spirit of Christ. If we have the spirit of the world when Jesus comes, he will say, "Depart from me, ye accursed; I never knew you."

Remarks

During March the word still kept coming, "We are anxious to have you come, but you will have to wait a little longer for conditions to change. Sickness and bad roads are the two principal things."

There was a time when we could plan and it would work out fairly well, but that time seems to have passed. They told us the peace pact would be ready to sign by March 20th, but it was not and now they think April the 9th; but who can tell? One man who never goes to church and was working in the city, said he knew something was going to happen. So he went to the country to work. He wanted to get away from it. He reminded me very much of the old colored man who saw a group of men talking in the street, and he approach them to see what was the cause of their earnest conversation. He heard them saying the Lord was coming soon; and as he leisurely walked away, he remarked, "I don't care, I'm going out west in the spring anyway." So this poor deluded soul does not care to understand that it cannot be escaped. It will follow him to the country, and instead of running away, how much better if he would investigate, and find out what the means of escape really are. I hear many people say it looks like these are the times the Bible speaks of. When you tell them there is no doubt of it, they will assent, and walk off as though nothing had been said. Oh what an awakening the world is to have some of these days, and not far off either; and now that the world is in this lethargic state, what about the church? If I had the means I would rush from one to another of my brethren and cry aloud to wake up. Oh it seems to me that I have a message to take to the church, and if so, and the time has come to deliver it, God will provide the way.

Brethren, let us arouse ourselves and be at our posts of duty every day. At this writing I am at Palmer, Neb., and there seems to be a demand to hear the gospel in the town so the brethren are securing the Opera House, and the question presents itself, Is someone in Palmer whom God wants as a member of the Bride of Christ. The Father alone knows.

Extract from a Letter on Evolution

R. S. Weir

1. Is immortality of the soul still a Christian doctrine?

2. If not, when did it cease to be one?

3. If it be, is the soul evolvable or subject to the ordinary laws of generation?

4. Do monkeys have immortal souls?

5. If not, how does man have an immortal soul if he has been evolved from a monkey?

6. If monkeys have immortal souls what becomes of them after death?

7. If monkeys have not immortal souls, but men have, where did the latter get their immortal souls; is there any Scripture proof of the process by which they got them?

Knowledge, even of the gospel of the kingdom, is emptiness unless love, practically exercised toward God and man, accompanies it.

Brother H. C. Baker, who went to Mount Vernon, Ohio, a few weeks ago, has returned. His health is not yet regained, but we hope it is improving.

If the kingdom of God is the church, and if it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter therein (Matt. 19:24), then tell us what church excludes men from membership because they are rich.

Peter the Great, when at Saardam, wished to hear rather a famous preacher. The latter consented to preach before the Czar. Having ascended the pulpit he said with solemnity and dignity, "Think well, speak well, and act well. Amen."

Those who think it optional with them whether or not to consult spirits, witches, and fortune-tellers, and that however silly perhaps it may be, it can nevertheless be done without sin, are referred to 1 Chron. 10:13, 14: "And Saul died for his transgression which he committed against the Lord, even against the word of the Lord, which he kept not; and also for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, to enquire of it; and enquired not of the Lord: therefore he slew him, and turned the kingdom unto David." We are to have no fellowship or connection with such workers of iniquity, but keep aloof from their vanities, and reprove them. They are an offence and an abomination unto the Lord, and should be to us.

The First Trumpet

Editor's Sermon Notes on the Apocalypse

"The first angel sounded, and there followed hail and fire mingled with blood, and they were cast upon the earth; and the third part of the trees were burnt up, and all green grass was burnt up (Rev. 8:7).

I. Symbols Explained

1. Hail, Fire, and Blood Mingled

1. Judgments of the severest kinds. Illustrated

(a) Historically (Exod. 9:22-28; Joel 2:30; Isa. 28:2, 17; Ezek. 13:11).

(b) Prophetically. Drawn up by the sun's rays from the sea of humanity, the saints become congealed into "hail," and fall with destructive power upon sinners and the kingdoms of this world. After this destructive storm of judgment, they become "the clouds in the air," out of which descend "the rain upon the mown grass," "the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain" (Isa. 30:27-30; Rev. 17:15; Mal. 1:2; 1 Thess. 4:16, 17; Rev. 11:15, 18, 19; 16:15-21; Psa. 72:6-8, 2 Sam. 23:4; Deut. 32:2, 3).

2. "The Third of the Earth was Burnt up"

One third implies two thirds. The Western Third was "the third."

3. "The Third of the Trees was Burnt up"

1. Trees represent the great men among a people (Judges 9:8-15; Isa. 60:21; 61:3; 32:15-19; Matt. 3:10; 15:13, Isa. 2:12-17).

4. "All Green Grass was Burnt up"

As a symbol, "grass" is significant of the multitude. When said to be "green," a prosperous state is indicated; when "withered," a state of affliction and death (Isa. 40:6, 7, 24; Psa. 90:5, 6; 92:7; 37:1, 2, 35).

II. Historical Application. A. D. 395-400

1. Radagaisus, "King of the Goths" (Gib. 2:668, 669, 670).
2. Alaric besieged Rome three times and sacked it (Gib. 2:12, 14, 25, 36, 47, 48).
3. Footprints of Providence (Rev. 12:10).

Inconsistency of Puritans

Brother Parker gives us an interesting communication this week on wine. Many think there is a good and evil wine, whereas we think there is a good and evil use of wine. This distinction is worthy of notice. This proposition is so obvious and scriptural we do not stay to discuss it. The objection we have to the Drummer Boy is this: the hero of the story refused chloroform in a surgical operation, and died refusing brandy as a heart stimulant. Published without editorial dissent, The Restitution would have been committed to fanaticism. Loud sounding claims are nice while they are sounding, but after the noise has subsided, the world investigates to see if we are living up to our claims. We are weak, erring mortals, and should be careful not to claim too much. We do not want The Restitution to go on record against this or that, and then have the world investigate and find that the brethren and sisters are indulging in this and that. Claiming to be better than we are, claiming more than we do. This is sure to bring disgrace upon us. Those who prohibit the use of leaven, fermented liquors, tobacco, chloroform, etc. prohibit things which they know are almost universally used among the household of faith, and what is worse still they prohibit things which they do themselves. From the way they talk people are led to think there is something sinful about fermentation. The Hebrew word translated "leaven" is chametz and means "anything leavened or fermented." Therefore if things fermented are sinful and must not be used; and if [illegible] and tobacco must be rejected and on this ground we must, if we have any regard for consistency, refuse to use:

1. Drugs. Practically all of these are [illegible].
2. Butter and cheese. Both of these are products of fermentation.
3. Buttermilk. This is sweet milk fermented.
4. Vinegar. This is apple cider fermented.
5. Sauerkraut. This is cabbage fermented.

We might swell this list indefinitely. The reader can add to it at his leisure. We have indicated enough to show what an impossible task confronts the conscientious purist, and if he is to make even a showing of consistency, what a revolution he must make in food and drink. So long as he condemns leavened bread at church, and then goes home and eats it for dinner, as long as he condemns fermented wine at church, then goes home and eats and drinks all kinds of fermented things, as long as he does these contradictory and stultifying things, his inconsistency, if not his hypocrisy, will be apparent to the world and the church. God help us to avoid exaggeration as falsehood; and may he give us a quiet, sane, balanced mind, together with the spirit of moderation and consistency.

Communications

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Will you forgive me for not sending my renewal before it ran out as I was thinking that it was May and had been going to get a postal note but something has hindered me, one thing or another. We only get our mail once a week and it has been a long time since I went to the office. Some one else has brought it. Will try to get it this week and send in this letter. Now will you please put this in the paper.

I want to know if there is anyone in British Columbia that can baptize me. I have been baptized, but I feel as though I did not know and understand the Scriptures as I should and beside, I was baptized in the name of the Trinity.

Anyone who reads this who is [illegible] will come and baptize me [illegible] communicate with me at once.

Dear Editor Restitution, and all lovers of "the precious faith".

Please [illegible]. The [illegible] to build us up in "your most holy faith" (Jude 20) is, we hope and pray, "meat in due season" (Matt. 24:45, 46; Gal. 6:9, 10). We [illegible] account of our stewardship to God and pray that it may be with joy not with grief (Heb. 13:17-18).

The editorial Request for April 8th, 1919, "The Holy Spirit and its Gifts" were [illegible] "Miraculous Endowments" was so gentle and encouraging (2 Tim. 2:24; Titus 3:15). So may we encourage, as Moses requested, our brother (Deut. 3:24-28), and friends who are at the helm trying to make many rich. "Always rejoicing" for the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ (2 Cor. 10:8 9). Amen.

Under "Miraculous Endowments Compatible with Immorality" the web is broken (Isa. 59:5), the spider's web (Isa. 59:5), and the light of God's word shines in more clearly (2 Cor. 4:6).

The Restitution for 22nd of April gives us an excellent article twice, viz., "Two Kinds of Love" by Brother S. H. Thomas, so reminding me of Isa. 28:10-13, "Precept upon precept" etc. So now let Jesus help us decide which kind of conversation to follow (Matt. 11:29; Gal. 6:14; John 12:47, 48). Our conversation [illegible] makes to our thoughts, so let us cultivate [illegible] Peter says (1 Pet. 1:15-19) and see who the [illegible] represents in Isa. 57, and John 6. "The harvest" or "latter rain" will be after the [illegible] season (Acts 1:11; 2:23, 27; 3:19-21; 2 Pet. 1:16-21). Then he will deliver the kingdom to the Father (1 Cor. 15:24).

It is sad to see the words of those [illegible] by Paul and Peter (2 Cor. 11:13-15; 2 Pet. 2:1-3). So we think "the times of the Gentiles" are almost fulfilled (Luke 21:24). So help us Lord to remember your promise and keep your works faithful to the end (Rev. 2:11, 12,19 21). If you can be true to Christ, and live peaceable with all men, do so. So may we "keep the feast," as we have been instructed in 1 Cor. 5:8 11.2, 23; Rev. 3:9, 10, 8 and first Rom. (5:15).

Your brother in hope,

R. A. HUMPHREYS.

Who will Answer?

1st. Who were the just men whose spirits were made perfect (Heb. 12:23)?

2nd. What were the better things God provided for us? Why would the ancient worthies not be made perfect without us (Heb. 11:40)?

3rd. The Holy City New Jerusalem; is it a real city of walls and buildings (Rev. 21:2)?

4th. What were the cities of the nations that fell when the seventh vial was poured out (Rev. 16:19)?

5th. If John had not been in the spirit, as one born of the spirit, could he have seen what he did when on Patmos (Rev. 4:2)?

6th. Can we see spiritual bodies with the eyes that we have in the flesh?

7th. Who are the ones that are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb (Rev. 19:9)?

Brother Huggins, I send these questions hoping someone will answer through The Restitution. God bless you all. I am alone here; do not know any one near of the one faith and one hope. I am about 72 years old. The Bible and The Restitution are my preachers.

Your brother in Christ Jesus,

John Weeks.

Conference Notice

The Indiana State Conference will hold its usual meeting this year at the North Salem Church, six miles north of Plymouth, on July 4, 5, 6.

This date is much earlier in the summer than the Conference has been accustomed to convene, but the fact that it follows the Bible School, which will be held at the same place up to the date of the Conference assures us that the change in time will prove most profitable in every way to us all. Plan to attend both Bible School and Conference.

Lost

A lad, carefully reared, not long from home and for a time promising. Supposed to have gone with one or two older companions to Prodigal Town, Husk Lane. Any person assisting in the recovery of the above shall in no wise lose his reward.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Mrs. Mary Watkins died in Fort Wayne, Ind., and was brought to Plymouth for burial. Funeral services were held at the home of Brother and Sister Underwood, Monday May, 5th, and interment was made in Oakhill Cemetery.

Sister Watkins was above 82 years of age. She was one of the pioneers of the church in this county and a member of the Plymouth church at the time of her death. She had made her home of late years with her grand-daughter, Mrs. Grace Bates, at whose home she died. She fell asleep in Jesus full of hope and trust for his soon coming and the resurrection to immortality.

SLOGAN: WE STAND FOR UNITY, TRUTH AND RIGHTEOUSNESS

REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE BOARD MEETING

The Executive Board of the National Bereans met at the home of the President on April 26, 1919. There has been so much sickness during the year and reports have been coming in off and on that work had stopped temporally because of the epidemic, that there was a general impression that very little work had been accomplished. We were more than pleasantly surprised at the reports.

Sister Lydia Railsback conducted the devotional exercises after which the report of the various committees were read, and then the business of the coming Conference was discussed.

The report of the Organization Committee was splendid showing two points organized and two interested and near organization.

The Literary Committee showed a great gain over last year, more articles contributed and a better response. The Tract Committee has given out 2555 tracts to date, and distributed them in 13 different states.

Nearly 100 letters have been written to the shut-ins, lonesome, bereaved, sick, etc., by the Social Correspondence Committee, and more responses have been received than ever before.

The Sixth Annual Conference will be held at Dutton, Mich., about June 20th. We are planning a live meeting, and we are hoping that as many as possible will take their summer vacation at that time and attend the Bible School which follows.

The Book Committee report was in evidence in a set of outlines for the new books. After conducting the business connected with the printing of the books, the meeting adjourned.

Lottie Logan Pickerl, Rec. Sec.

Plan to Go

The Sixth Annual Conference of the National Berean Society will be held the third week in June at Dutton, Michigan. Bereans, plan your vacation to attend this conference and the Bible School which follows. Particulars later.

Evelyn K. Harsch, Cor. Sec.

We had the pleasure of visiting our beloved Berean worker, Anna E. Drew, a few weeks ago. She has been very sick this winter and is not very strong now. How many of you have enjoyed Anna's wonderful letters or one of her homelike visits? Suppose you turn around and send a letter to her telling her what her work and the Bereans have done for you, and you will give her more strength than any doctor can give her. A letter sent to 629 N. Galena Ave., Dixon, Ill., will find her without much trouble.

We noticed, in The Restitution, that Sister Woods spoke of the need for letter writing to the isolated, the shut-ins, etc. The Bereans have had a department for writing social letters to the isolated, new converts, the sick, and to any who wished to receive them, for three years. We have found that the letters have been greatly appreciated. Anyone who is not familiar with this line of work will receive a very enthusiastic report if you care to write to the chairman of that committee. Anna L. Adams, Mulberry, Florida.

Leila E. Whitehead.

Will You, In Love Share An Appeal?

We believe in "unity" - unity in harmony and in works. In "Searching the Scriptures" we are admonished to care for those of the household of faith.

Dear Bereans, don't you want to help to save the little home for one of our number, who will have to lose it in order to pay hospital bills?

Sister Jennie Cox, of Ripley, Ill., had a fall last summer and was so seriously injured that she had to be taken to the hospital at Quincy, Ill. She was there until the first of the year when she was taken to St. Louis so that Sister Logan, a nurse, and Sister Hanson, our editor, could give her personal care.

The local churches have helped and are helping to bear the burden, but she will not be able to work for a long time, and her expenses are so heavy that her tiny home must go to pay for them. It is not easy to start again when one is around the fifty mark.

The Ripley church has a plan by which a mortgage can be placed if the interest can be met.

Cannot we join, one and all, Bereans or not Bereans, and raise enough to pay this interest and give a living sum. No amount is too small to send. If everyone gave a dollar what a nice sum that would be!

Our Editor, Sister Leota Hanson (address above) will handle the money, so send it to her.

Then let us unite in a long pull and a strong pull, and let our brave Sister feel that the arms of "the household" are upholding her until she is able to take up her work again.

Leila E. Whitehead.

Notice

Because the same rumor has come to us so persistently and from so many sources, the Executive Board of the National Bereans issues the following statement:

No carfare has ever been paid, from the National treasury, for any officer of the National Bereans or for any member of the Executive Board to or from any conference.

The money is used to print the lesson books, to purchase tracts for free distribution, for postage, stationery, and printing (the postage of the social correspondence committee about twelve members --the organization commitee and the book committee being the heaviest items under postage). The following is a summary of the treasurer's report to date:

Money received from sale of books, State dues.
Individual dues		$ 95.48
Total disbursements:
Postage	$20.00
Tracts	19.00
Printing and stationery	14.50
		53.50
Total on hand		$41.98

This balance will be used towards the cost of printing the new books.

In August 1917 the Conference was held in Illinois. We did not print books that year and so had a little surplus in the treasury. The Executive Board thought that it would be only right to offer to pay the expenses, one way, for a delegate from each of three distant states. One state accepted the offer and the expenses of a delegate coming from that distant state were paid by the Board. This delegate was not a National officer nor a member of the Board.

THAT LITTLE WORD "IF"

If every little rain drop should say,
"I will not fall,
I will not be the first to drop," we'd have no rain at all.
And all the grass within the fields
would wither and would die,
If every little rain drop should stay up in the sky.

If all the pretty little flowers that spring up here and there
Should say, "I'll not go up alone, while all the ground is bare,
We'll wait till others have gone up,"
You see, there would not be
A single pretty blossom to bloom
For you and me.

If every little snow flake should say,
"I'll not go down,
I will not be the first to fall, while all the world is brown.
I'll wait until the earth is white and then I'll gently fall."
Oh, foolish snowflake, we'd have no snow at all.

If every little twinkling star refused to give its light,
And the big round moon refused to shine,
how dark would be the night!
Now, listen, little children, who read these lines today,
Come close and I will whisper, now
listen what I say:

If every little child should say,
through all the livelong day,
"I will not be the first to cry at lessons,
or at play.
But I'll try to be the first to smile," why darlings, can't you see,
If none would cry and all should smile,
what a happy day 'twould be.

A Chat With The Children

Dear Children:

You were not expecting me today were you? Well Father Thomas has a way of dropping in on his children once in a while, just to have a chat, and to see if they are still in the race for that crown of life, which Jesus is soon to bring to those who keep on running to the end, or until he comes. Yes, I know you get tired sometimes, but you must never mind that, but keep right on, and never, never think of giving up, when you come to a rough place in the road. It would be awful if Jesus should not know you when he comes, and perhaps give your beautiful crown to some one else.

Now children, seeing that we are all so comfy and cozy, suppose we have a little chat about insurance companies. I suppose, some day you will want to get insured; most everybody does. To carry a policy in some good and responsible company is considered by successful financiers to be good business policy; but the difficulty is to find a company that is absolutely safe and reliable, and who could not not under any circumstances, like extremely great or unexpected losses, for example, fail to meet its obligations to its policy holders.

I know of but one such company. It claims to be the oldest and wealthiest life insurance company in existence; and I know for a fact that the company controls the wealth of the world. Its agents are found in every civilized country, and although not generally very well liked, or popular with the world, yet they are always known to be the most strictly honest, and industrious people, to be found anywhere. In fact the company employs no others. The head office of this great firm is located in a foreign country, and was doing business long before America was discovered. It is strictly a life insurance, and has many features unlike any other life insurance company in existence.

For example all other so called life companies obligate, in the event of death, to pay a certain amount of money to some relative or friend, of the policy holder. But this company I have in mind, obligates and promises to restore the life that has been lost, to cause the individual to live again. There is but one company in existence able to do this. The main office is in the main courts of heaven, and the company's name is Jehovah and Son. The agents of this company are held in much esteem, by both the Father and the Son, and are privileged and invited to address the mighty Jehovah, as "Our Father," and the Son (who is our Lord Jesus Christ), as "our elder Brother." Thus you see, the agents of this great company have very close and tender relationship to its promoters.

Like other companies, this firm requires regular payments to keep its policies alive, and if these payments are not kept up according to agreement, this policy becomes null and void. With all other life companies, the payments must be made in cash which, because of sickness, or misfortune of some kind, the policy holder is sometimes unable to get, and so his policy is lost. But with this heavenly company it is quite different. The payments required by them consist of faith, and belief in them and their principles, and obedience to certain simple requirements, plainly specified in the policy, on first payment, followed at regular intervals by worship and giving of thanks. There are none so poor, feeble, or unfortunate, but that they can meet the payments in this company if they really want to.

In view of these, and many other features of superior excellence in favor of this great life company, is it not a strange fact that it now is and always has been, the most unpopular company in existence? But very few people can be persuaded to take out policies. The terms, conditions, and benefits, and also its vast superiority over all other life companies, are set forth and made plain in a book called the Bible, edited and circulated by the company; it is a fact that while most civilized people have a copy of this great book in their house, but very few have ever read it, and the great bulk of mankind know little or nothing of its contents, and so eventually go away in death to a perpetual sleep. What a pity, when they might so easily have held a policy that would have given them eternal life in the endless ages to come! My dear children, if you have not already done so, hasten and get your life insured in the great company of "Jehovah and Son."

Father Thomas.

Life

Man's life means tender 'teens, teachable twenties, tireless thirties, fiery forties, forcible fifties, serious sixties, sacred seventies, aching eighties, shortening breath—death—the sod– God.

Our Weekly Puzzle

The fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law. But they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. If we live in the spirit, let us also walk in the spirt. Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one anther, envying one another.

What is the significance of the word "fruit"?

Do you know the meaning of the word "temperance"?

What is to "crucify the flesh"?

Who wrote the above? To whom was it written? Where can the passage be found?

Answer next issue.

Answer to puzzle in last issue:

The words were spoken by Jesus our Lord.

"Heavy laden" as used in the passage means "weighed down with sin." Burdened with a weight of sin.

A "yoke" is a frame with attachments used for coupling draft animals, such as oxen.

The word "yoke" is used for the purpose of showing us the willingness of Jesus to be "yoked" with us in our trials, troubles, and tribulations. He died that he might "bear our sins," and he invites us to "cast all our burdens on him: for he careth for us."

The passage can be found in Matt. 11:28-30.

A Request

Today we have an exceedingly pretty little story, written by your friend, Brother S. H. Thomas "Father Thomas" entitled, "A Chat with the Children." We request that you read it with careful thought, and diligent attention. It was written for your benefit by one who loves you more than he loves himself. We want you to profit by it. We want you to take out a policy in this company, and having taken the policy, we want you to keep it by paying the price demanded. These premiums are not payable yearly, monthly, or weekly. There is a certain amount paid each day, each hour; something is due each minute. The terms are not easy if we rely on ourselves, but the junior member of the firm has promised to aid and assist us if we will permit him. Make up your mind what you intend to do, and write me telling me your decision, and we will print your name in an Honor Roll But that will be nothing to the great honor that will be conferred upon you by the Father when the Son comes to make up his jewels. Write me today while you are thinking about it. We thank you.

REVELATION 6:10, 11

Under the fifth seal we have this saying, "And they cried with a loud voice saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth. And white robes were given to every one of them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow servants also and their brethren that should be killed as they were should be fulfilled."

We would naturally suppose that the souls under the altar would cry for vengeance on them that dwelt on the earth at the end of the great tribulation. The church had passed through the 1260 years, which we know ended in 1870, when the church and pope declared for infallibility. See Rev. 18:7, 8, when she said, "I sit as a queen and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow. Therefore shall her plagues come in one day." In less than one day or a year the pope was taken prisoner and was kept a prisoner until he died.

Now let us stop and think where we are. Take 1260 from 1870 and we have 610 A. D. Now add 1335 to 610 A. D. and we have 1945. Next take the seven times of Moses, a day for a year and 365 days to the year and we have 2555. Now add 2555 years to 610 B. C., when Josiah was killed in battle (2 Kings 23:29) and we have 1945, when the great captivity should end. Now suppose we count 2400 days, which some versions are said to read, instead of 2300 days as given in Daniel 8:14 which was supposed to end in 1844 or 45 when the sanctuary was to be cleansed but was not. The extra 100 years brings us to 1945 A. D., when we hope the sanctuary will be cleansed, and Daniel will stand in his lot. Brethren, "the little season" the souls were to rest under the altar is almost ended and a time of trial is coming (Rev. 6:10); and when the League of Nations is signed, all is done for the peace of nations that man can do. Then there will be a cry of peace and safety such as was never heard before. Then sudden destruction comes upon them. The only hope is to be clothed with the righteousness of Christ.

Brethren, I give you these numbers for your consideration, as they all end at one date without contracting or stretching; and as some are to understand, and if we are in the last days, some of us ought to understand these things. As for me I do not claim any wisdom more than others, but came to this conclusion by reading the Bible.

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defense of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ.—Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 71 CLEVELAND, O. May 27th. 1919. ● NUMBER 20

A Stranger and Pilgrim

I live on earth a pilgrim strange;
Once its enchantments held me fast;
From broken snares and pits of danger
By heavenly hand I'm saved at last.

I've placed on coming glory;
And to my hopes my heart have bound;
Earth's pleasure—wealth—fame's lying story,
Are foam and dross and cymbal's sound.

My early years—life's sunny morning
Like childhood's dream has passed away,
Noon too is gone, and age is warning
Of setting sun and closing day.

A dreadful darkness hangs before me;
And while I list with bated breath,
A solemn stillness pressing o'er me
I hear the feet of coming death;

That darkness curtains day eternal,
From deaths' cold, wintry, dreary waste,
To Eden's groves, forever vernal,
And fadeless flowers, I soon shall haste.

A Holy One in death once slumbered;
But dying brought in endless life;
The days of the Pale King are numbered,
He lost his sceptre in the strife.

Divine the nature we inherit
From him who broke death's iron chains,
And by the earnest of his Spirit,
We triumph o'er the tomb's domains.

I hear the sweet prophetic story—
It echoes from the mystic past—
This earth shall all be filled with glory,
And God be all in all at last.

Rejoice in Hope of the Glory of God

THESE words are found in the second verse of the fifth chapter of Romans, where the apostle makes known to us the exalted position those occupy who have been justified by faith, and have peace with God through Jesus Christ. Before justification we were alienated from God, "the children of wrath" (Eph. 2:3), even as the old prophet wrote, "All we like sheep have gone astray." Again it is written, "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:23).

Such is the present state of all who have not been justified by faith. The faith which justifies is the faith of God (Mark 11:22, margin reading). It cometh by hearing the word of God (Rom. 10:17). If the promises contained in the word are believed they serve as a basis for faith. "Now, faith is confidence with respect to things hoped for, persuasion with respect to things not seen." With such a faith God is well pleased, for he justifies the believer on account of it.

But the justification is through Jesus Christ our Lord. He is the channel through which all the blessings from the Father come to us. Why is this? Because God is of purer eyes than to behold iniquity. He cannot look with pleasure upon us; we have wandered out of the way of understanding; we have all sinned: there is none righteous, no, not one; we are altogether unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no not one (Rom. 3:12).

Such is the history of the human race, excepting the Lord Jesus. How vast the contrast between him and all others! "In him was no sin"; "He was undefiled and separate from sinners"; "He knew no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth." He pleased not himself, therefore his Father (God) said to him, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." He was obedient to God in all that was commanded, even to his death upon the cross (Phil. 2:8). Because of his perfect obedience God could look upon him with favor and highly exalted him. Through the favor he found in the sight of God, we too, can approach unto God; for Jesus truly said, "No man cometh unto the Father but by me" (John 14:6). To those in him, he is made righteousness, wisdom, sanctification, and redemption (1 Cor. 1:30). They are "justified freely by God's favor through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus; whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness; that he might be just and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus" (Rom.

Ore

24 26). Now in Christ Jesus we who were afar off are made nigh by the blood of Christ, for he is our peace, having abolished in his flesh the enmity, that he might reconcile us unto God" (Eph. 2:13-16). So there is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus (Rom. 8:1).

After showing that our justification is by faith in Jesus Christ, the apostle continues: "By whom also we have access by faith into this favor wherein we stand and rejoice in hope of the glory of God." Great and exalted as the privilege is of present fellowship with the eternal God, there is still something far greater to be revealed to us – "the glory of God." Think it not strange that we are told to rejoice in hope of the glory of God. For is it not the natural and logical conclusion we should arrive at? Have we not enough set before us to cause us to rejoice?

> "What more can he say, than to you he hath said
> Who unto the Savior for refuge have fled."

Have we not been promised a share in the glorious redemption which Christ has purchased? Did he not say, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me upon my throne"? Have we not been called to God's kingdom and glory? Is not the promise ours: "The Lord taketh pleasure in his people: he will beautify the meek with salvation. Let the saints be joyful in glory; let them sing aloud upon their beds (though at times they may be beds of sickness and pain); let the high praises of God be in their mouth, and a two edged sword in their hand"? Has not God sworn by an oath that he will fill the earth with his glory as the waters cover the sea? Will not the angelic proclamation sung at our Savior's birth be fulfilled, "Glory to God in the highest; peace on earth, and good will to men"?

The contemplation of these things will cause us to rejoice in hope if our hearts are set upon them. When the Lord walked to Emmaus after his resurrection with some of his disciples, they, in relating the conversation to the others, said, "Did not our hearts burn within us, while he talked with us, and while he opened to us the Scriptures."

But there is more yet. Paul styles it the glory to be revealed in us (Rom. 8:18). It begins at the coming of the Lord when he shall be glorified in his saints, and admired by all them that believe. Our position then will be the reverse of what it is now. For the sorrowing ones there will be joy; for the redeemed of the Lord shall come to Zion with singing, everlasting joy shall be upon their heads. The hungerers and thirsters after righteousness shall be filled. Those who labor for God and truth shall have honor and glory, for they have been wise and shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, as the stars for ever and ever (Dan. 12:3). These earthly bodies, which are subject to so much weakness and death, will be fashioned like unto Christ's own glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself.

It was in view of these things that caused the glorious Lord when upon the earth to say, "Rejoice and be exceeding glad," even in tribulation. Peter and the other apostles rejoiced that they were accounted worthy to suffer shame for the name of Jesus. To rejoice in the Lord is not only a privilege, but a command as well. David says, "Rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous"; and Paul enjoins it in these words, "Rejoice in the Lord always; and again I say Rejoice." We ought to rejoice in hope, for it is only those who hold fast the beginning of their "confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end" that are to made partakers of Christ (Heb. 3:6).

Beloved in the Lord, are we living up to the standard by which we are to be judged? Shall we be satisfied with a reward that will be in proportion to our rejoicing in hope now? Jeremiah said in his day to his own people "The joy of the Lord is your strength." We need all the strength we can obtain in these last days when iniquity abounds and the love of some is growing cold. Let us see to it that rejoicing in hope comes first in our affections; then all will be well.

Responsibility

No. Two

Responsibility: Accountability for a trust. Responsible: Liable to account, answerable.

In taking upon ourselves the name of Christ by figuratively dying to all past relationship and being resurrected in a figure to a new relation, we voluntarily ally ourselves with Christ and acknowledge him as our law-giver. Here are some commands of our great King which we will be held to strict account if we wilfully disobey, and great reward will be ours at his coming when he shall take to him his great power to reign as King of kings if we are obedient to them. See Matthew 25 from 31st verse to end of chapter. His very first command is that we should love one another (1 John 3:11) As I have loved you, ye also love one another (John 13:34). Love your enemies. Do good to those those that hate you (Luke 6:27). See also 1 Cor. 13th chapter.

Thus we see that as true doctrine heard, received with joy and obeyed brought us into Christ, so love keeps us in him and perfects us in that obedience to his precepts which bring forth in us fruit unto perfection. It is love which causes us always to rejoice in the truth. It is love which prevents our even thinking evil of our brethren. If we have this love for one another that Christ had for us we will not go up and down the land as a talebearer against any member of Christ's body. Neither shall we speak evil of any one. Love suffereth long and is kind. Love endureth all things. We will not imagine evil against our neighbor, for love thinketh no evil. These things the servant of Christ will not do if he has the spirit (mind) of Christ. Love will lead him to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, minister to the sick, and visit those cast out (in prison) for the truth's sake. These things, he, truly belonging to the Lord, will do (Matthew 25:35-36). He will not seek the high places of honor and pass his poor brethren by on "the other side" (Jas. 2nd chapter). He will be courteous to all men striving to glorify his Master in every word and deed. If we have not this mind of Christ, doctrine alone, however fine, will only make our condemnation greater. Though we understand all mysteries, though we have all faith (doctrine), and have not the love, which will cause us to do all these things for Jesus' sake, we are nothing in the sight of God. The empty words of doctrine we speak are as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal (1 Cor. 13:1). All the law is fulfilled in this one thing. Love to God with all our heart; love for the brethren as Christ loved us; love for our neighbor as for oneself (Mark 12:30, 31; John 14:12).

Finally, he that loveth not knoweth not God (1 John 4:8). In this age of compulsory education when every man and woman must know how to read, and when a Bible may be had for the asking, will God excuse anyone who makes as a plea his ignorance of God's laws? Read carefully the first and second chapters of Romans. Now is the time when we are to make our calling and election sure. If now we shut up our hearts of compassion, if we close our ears to the cry of the needy, if we speak no word of sympathy to the broken hearted, if as the priest and Levite on the road leading down to Jericho, we pass by on the other side, leaving the wounded to die for want of care, be he wounded in heart or body—think you we will be accounted worthy in that "age to come" to be associated with Christ in blessing the nations? Be not deceived whatsoever a man soweth that shall he reap. Now is the sowing time. It is reaping time when Christ is revealed at his coming to give to every man as his work shall be (Rev. 22:12).

Addenda

The doctrine that we may reject the light and get excused with the plea that we did not understand and be given a "fairer chance" in another age is without scriptural foundation. "Larger Hope," "Fair Chance," etc. etc., look like a fair garden, but it is a mirage.

I read in a paper a few days ago this statement: "During this period (the thousand year reign of Christ) Christ will resurrect all the dead, instruct them in righteousness and destroy those who remain 'wilfully wicked.' All men as well as the angels that sinned, will be tried for their lives. All mankind who have died before the establishment of Christ's universal kingdom, will be resurrected." These passages of Scripture are cited as proof texts: Ezek. 37:1-14. In this verse God is speaking of Israel and their restoration, and of no other people. See 12, 13, and 14 verses. It has nothing in it of universal resurrection. The whole chapter is a prophecy of the restoration of both houses of Israel to their own land.

The next Scripture cited is Daniel 12:1 to 4. Here, instead of every man, it is "some," thus limiting the numbers. And God distinctly tells us the wicked are not resurrected to receive instruction in righteousness, but to receive what they sowed before death—"shame and everlasting contempt."

Matthew 25:31 to 46 needs no comment. Just as surely as the life of the righteous is everlasting, so is the punishment of the wicked everlasting. Second Peter 2:4, "Reserved unto judgment." The word says not instruction in righteousness.

Jude 1 to 6. Jude tells us that these cities are "examples" of those suffering the vengeance of eternal fire. If words mean anything this shows that God judged those cities, and the word says that judgment is eternal.

Isaiah 11 certainly refers to the reign of Christ, but nowhere in the chapter does God say that he will resurrect every soul whoever lived and instruct them in righteousness. Contrary to this theory of resurrection of all who have died since Adam or may die before Christ comes are many Scriptures which plainly say that God has already judged some and destroyed them. There is nothing so calculated to lull men to sleep as the siren song of a fair chance in a better age. Blood will be found in our skirts if we do not lift our voices and cry aloud against it that men may be warned while it is yet today. "Fair Chance," Larger Hope," leaving preaching to get ready to meet the Lord, celibacy, miraculous gifts, the future anti-Christ, etc., are only delusions and snares of the opposers of God to take our eyes off the near revelation of our Lord.

I have long wanted to write the series of articles that have appeared in The Restitution in the last few months. I have had some harsh words said of them, one telling me they were little short of blasphemy; others refusing to read them. Whether any seed has germinated and will bring forth fruit only the great day will tell. We, as ambassadors for Christ are not only commanded to hold forth the words of life that some may be saved, but we are also to proclaim the gospel as witnesses unto the nations and testimony against them (Ezek. 3:20). As the responsibility laid upon the prophet so is our accountability to God if we do not testify for him.

FLORA A. WOOD.

Sanctification

Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth (John 17:17).

BELOVED, I am deeply impressed with the prevailing thought that seems to be uppermost in the minds of the writers who contribute articles to the various journals, who are in sympathy with the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, to wit, the nearness of the return of our absent and longed for Lord. Apparently all the prophecies relating to the events prior to his return are fulfilled. Some suggest that the spring of 1923 will see the culmination—just four years more! However, as the day for this glorious and longed for event is known only to the Father, we will let this matter rest with him, and whatever we may say or write henceforth, will be exhorting the brethren to prepare themselves that they may be ready when the voice of the Bridegroom is heard.

Sanctification means simply separation, a setting apart. For what? We answer God's companions for all eternity. To be educated, refined and prepared for such an exalted station means that now we must know God and become like him. When Jesus was tempted he quoted from Deut. 8:

3: "Man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live." Job anticipated Moses in this, for he said before Moses was born: "Neither have I gone back from the commandments of his lips; I have esteemed the word of his mouth more than my necessary food" (Job 23:12). Jeremiah says: "Thy words were found and I did eat them: and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart" (Jer. 15:16). Jesus said, "The words that I speak unto you they are spirit and they are life."

It is said that Luther's eyes were opened to the false teachings of the papacy, by the words of Paul in Romans 1:17 "The just shall live by (his) faith" But another before Paul experienced this wonderful knowledge. Habakkuk standing upon his watch tower, to hear what God the Lord would speak, received this divine and sublime message. instantly wrote it upon a tablet, establishing it as the great gospel principle: "The just shall live by his faith" (Hab. 2:4). Commenting upon this a writer has said: "This mighty sentiment echoes through the New Testament as though some vast gallery, gaining always a purer resonance; during the dark ages it cheered the heart of the hidden flock" (one of the two witnesses during the 1260 years). Afterwards it kindled the dawn of the Reformation: today it inspires the faith and ardor of the saints, alive and unslumbering, quick and powerful, living and life making."

Our Lord came to the waters of the Jordan, saying, "It becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." He comprised all the law and the prophets (Luke 24:27). He confirmed the Scriptures as the word of God. In the "manifesto" of his kingdom spoken from the mount of Beatitudes, he reviewed the revelation committed to Israel and bound it anew on the hearts of men. "Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments and shall teach men so, shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them he shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven."

Beloved, his own teaching he trasmitted to his disciples registering it in heaven as of eternal validity: "The words which thou gaveth me, I have given unto them;" and "heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." Beloved, when sad and weary, do you ever open your Bible and read the wonderful vision revealed to Peter, James, and John on Mount Tabor? Have you ever closed your eyes and in fancy seen this wonderful scene as over Jesus' soiled and coarse garments there is spreading a strange light, steadily brightening into intenser beauty, till that form glows with such splendor that it seems to waver to and fro and dissolve in the still radiance? Beloved, he seems to dazzle my eyes like the sun in his midday splendor.

What a wonderful tableau, what a marvelous transformation scene! Oh how majestic, how glorious Jesus, Moses and Elias! well might Peter exclaim, "It is good to be here." But as the cloud settled down a voice is heard saying, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, hear ye him." Peter never forgot the lesson. Years after he wrote, "And this voice which came from heaven, we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount" (2 Pet. 1:18, 19).

Beloved, this same Jesus speaks to us today. Through his word his promise is fulfilled, "Lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the age." Why does the truth make such slow progress in our hearts? I do not know, perhaps it is because of the hardness, the density of our hearts. I suppose if I ask my readers, what is the heaviest metal, all would answer "Gold." Practically this is so. But do you know that Gold is one of slowest of metals to sink?

Farraday, the great English chemist, proved by experiment, that a precipitate of gold might take months to fall to the bottom of a glass five inches high. Beloved, the truths that we long to sink deep into our hearts are held in suspension. Jesus tells us why: "The cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful.."

Once to every man and nation
Comes the moment to decide,
For the strife of faith with falsehood,
For the good or evil side.

Beloved, whatever part we are to take in the kingdom must be rehearsed today. Yesterday is gone and the record stands for or against, tomorrow never comes. We live only today. Each day adds to my chances for good or evil. Either my life today is full of action in doing deeds of love and goodness, which God approves, or it is full of whining and cynicism, which things God hates, for these are roots of all bitterness. The exercise in our daily lives of love and good deeds, brings strength, happiness. To be everlastingly whining and cynical means weakness and misery. Sanctification means the separating ourselves from everything that is not God-like and cleaving to that which bears his likeness and approval.

Beloved, God demands that inwardly we must be as outwardly we may endeavor to make others believe we are. I have learned the bitter lesson that to receive the opinions of others only encumbers my mind. If I desire to please others, then my ears are awake to hear the praise of men. If I dread being blamed or censured the feeling of disapprobation discourages me. If through inexperience, a wrong construction is placed upon my actions, I become timid and feel that I am losing confidence and become timid. At times I must confront adverse winds. The hail stings me with its sharp shafts; I hear sarcasms, and a fear seizes upon me. I feel ashamed to betray my own feeling. I feel the dread of being seen just as I really am. But this is all of the flesh.

Last Sunday afternoon I learned a lesson I shall never forget. I called at the home of a brother and sister. Lying on a couch was their little daughter, unable to walk from her birth. She has just passed through a terrible operation. The joy of gladness was in her sparkling eyes as she confided to me this her secret she was going to walk like other girls. Beloved, as I left that little darling's presence, I felt that I had been in the presence of God. These words are burning in my heart today. Some day the secrets of all hearts shall be revealed: their sunshine and shadow, their struggles and strifes, sorrows and joys. What is crooked shall be straight; what is dark shall be light; what is black shall be white; for death reveals what life conceals. If we but knew the pain in another life, the secret of another's soul, the ache of the eyes that burn with unshed tears.

They are not so remote from us, these silent sufferers. They may be found in our own circle of friends, and perchance still closer. How different would be our attitude, how patient and kind we would be, how we would strive never to cause them another pang, if we but knew the blighted hopes of another's life! If we could only attain our illusion, how perfect our ideals. But oh the pain of finding them clay, of losing the esteem in which we held another, of having our faith shaken, our trust broken! It is through the ones we love best we suffer most. God sends us sufferings to draw our thoughts from things of this world and to find contentment in him alone. We complain of the weight of our cross; it should be sufficient to know it has been sent to us in love by the hand of one who has destined it from all eternity. He is an all wise judge and knows when to give and when to withhold his blessings. It is the manner in which our trials are borne that makes them our cross or our crown.

God's chosen ones are called upon to suffer most. To be asked to suffer is a mark of divine favor. God controls the good and the ill of life, but it lies in man's power to make use of both as tools to carve the future out of the present. We may not sit down with folded hands and pine for the "might have been." Our lives are only valued for what is done with them, not for what might have been. As gold is tried in the fire man is tried in adversity. Every obstacle overcome is but another stepping stone to higher things. Sorrow brings out the best in us. It is the foundation of character; it broadens and ennobles the mind. Until we have tasted the cup of sorrow our lives are incomplete; they are flat, out of tune, savorless.

Those who have known sorrow and pain can sympathize more readily with others; they are more lenient in their judgment. How can we judge the weight of another's cross? How can we tell the temptations and strife of another's life? Beloved, "For this is the will of God, even your sanctification" (1 Thess. 4:3). In conclusion let us give more earnest heed to the word of God.

Is It Worth While?

Is it worth while that we jostle a brother
Bearing his load on the rough road of life?
Is it worth while that we jeer at each other
In blackness of heart that we war to the knife?
God pity us all in our pitiful strife

God pity us all as we jostle each other:
God, pardon us all for triumph we feel
When a fellow goes down: poor, heart-broken brother.
Pierced to the heart; words are keener than steel,
And mightier, far, for woe and for weal.

Were it not well in this brief little journey
On over the isthmus, down into the tide,
We give him a fish instead of a serpent,
Ere folding the hands to be and abide
For ever and aye, in dust at his side?

Look at the roses saluting each other;
Look at the herds all at peace on the plain
Man, and man only, makes war on his brother,
And dotes in his heart on his peril and pain
Shamed by the brutes that go down on the plain.

GEO. B. ALLDRIDGE.

IF YOU WOULD HAVE FRIENDS BE ONE

It is difficult to imagine a person so entirely undeserving as not to have a single friend.

Yet there are many whom we can refer to in a general way as having few, or no friends.

Analysis will show that the fault is entirely their own.

The reason they never have any friends is because they never have been a friend to anyone.

As kids they insisted on being the teacher when they played school.

Through life they were always willing enough to accept, but disinclined to grant favors

"What is there in it for me?"

That is their mental ejaculation when an opportunity to serve a friend presents itself.

Their motto through life is:

"Look out for Number One."

And they find that they are never Number One or anywhere near it.

Unhappy?

Of course they are.

The greatest happiness in life consists in doing for one's friends and in thought of the friends one has.

JEWISH HEGIRA TO PALESTINE

News has filtered into Paris of a great Jewish migration across hundreds of miles of hostile country toward Palestine. A million and a half Jews, it is reported, are moving toward the Promised Land . . . Great caravans of men, women and children, carrying their belongings are trekking toward the sea. The migration it is said is being conducted in a manner similar to the exodus of the Jews from the land of Pharoah. News Item.

Editorial

Truths, like roses, have thorns about them.

Brother Donaldson's copy for the "Young People's Page" was not received this week in time for publication.

Calamities teach us many beautiful lessons, and reveal to us much that we should not have seen from the common level of life.

Adversity overcome is the brightest glory, and willingly undergone, the greatest virtue. Sufferings are but trials of valiant spirits.

Take the hand of the friendless. Smile on the sad and dejected. Strive everywhere to diffuse around you sunshine and joy. This do and you will be beloved.

Witty sayings are as easily lost as the pearls of a broken string; but a word of kindness is always held in sacred remembrance. It is a seed from which, even when dropped by chance, springs up a flower.

Brother J. E. Hammond's eight page tract entitled "Probation for the Dead," is original, and deals with a subject that agitates the heart of thousands. The Author shows rare ability in the discussion of the subject. It deserves a wide circulation. For the convenience of the reader he may order it direct from the Author, J. E. Hammond, R. F. D. 5, South Side Station, Omaha, Neb.; from the Editor, or from The Restitution Publishing Co.

Under "Communications" Brother Donaldson laments that there are a plurality of papers, and hopes the time may come when we can "pool" our time, energy, and money in but one paper. We heartily join with Brother Donaldson in his idea of concentration of effort; but the plurality of papers was a curse brought upon us by disgruntled men, and will doubtless be continued by them. For years The Restitution was our only paper, and its supporters have had no reason to multiply other sheets, and have not encouraged the injurious work. But ambitious and designing men have started other publications; and they are responsible for all the evils resulting therefrom. Appealing to The Restitution and its supporters to help remove an evil which they had no hand in creating is a manifest mistake. The appeal should be sent to those rival publications, asking them to desist from such an evil work.

Tracts, Tracts!

You cannot be engaged in much better business than circulating good tracts! They are silent but powerful preachers, doing a vast amount of good. Now, brethren, set these "preachers" to work in good earnest. They eat nothing, and cost but a mite to send any distance. They will not quarrel with an opponent, nor are they discouraged by continued opposition. Scatter the tracts by tens, by hundreds, by thousands, all over the land! Who will engage in this work? If you have not the time or inclination, or if the "soil" is not good for sowing the good seed in your immediate vicinity, send your mite to help pay for tracts which others will be glad to scatter. Scatter tracts. Many are led into the truth by them. Send out these preachers on their mission of salvation. Send them out!

An Admirable Reply

An admirable reply was once made by a careful reader of the Bible to an infidel who attacked with such expressions as these: "That the blood of Christ can wash away sin is foolishness; I don't understand or believe it."

The Bible student remarked, "You and Paul agree exactly."

The infidel replied with much surprise, "How is this, that Paul and I agree?"

Said the student "Turn to the first chapter of 1st Corinthians, and read at the 18th verse."

The infidel read "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish, foolishness, but unto us which are saved, it is the power of God."

The infidel hung his head, and ever after studied the Bible, believing it to be God's power unto salvation.

Doctrinal Sermons

It is unusual to hear people say, "I do not like doctrinal seronms." Why not? Have you read what Paul had to say on this subject? "But ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine" (Rom. 6:17). "Now I beseech you brethren, mark them that are causing the divisions and occasions of stumbling, contrary to the doctrine which ye learned" (Rom. 16:17). Paul taught the doctrine. Those who heard him learned the doctrine. Timothy was left at Ephesus, to indoctrinate the members. "As I exhorted thee to tarry at Ephesus, when I was going into Macedonia, that thou mightest charge certain men not to teach a different doctrine, neither to give heed to fables and endless genealogies, which minister questionings, rather than a dispensation of God which is in faith; so do I now" (1 Tim. 1:3, 4). "Till I come, give attendance to reading, to doctrine" (1 Tim. 4:15). "Take heed to thyself, and to the doctrine" (1 Tim. 4:16). "All Scripture is profitable for doctrine" (2 Tim. 3:16) "Rebuke, exhort, with all long suffering and doctrine" (2 Tim. 4:2). We are exhorted to abide in the doctrine of Christ. How can one abide in a doctrine he knows nothing about? How can we learn without a teacher? How can we hear without a preacher? We should not be surprised at some disliking doctrine the apostle has told us that the time will come when men shall not endure sound doctrine, but will heap to themselves teachers after their own lusts; and will turn away their ears from the truth, and turn aside unto fables (2 Tim. 4:3, 4) When a man gets so he does not like meat and strong diet, he is sick. He needs a physician. When a disciple gets so he does not like the doctrine, he needs the attention of the great Physician. W. H. Book, in "Christian Standard."

Explanations of Scriptures

"As an eagle stirreth up her nest," etc. (Deut. 32:11). A highly poetical image, and true to nature. The eagle's care for its offspring has often been observed, and among naturalists excited great admiration. "She builds her nest on high, among the crags of the rocks;" it is square in form, and perfectly level, consisting of twigs and branches firmly compacted. As soon as the eaglets are old enough to provide for themselves the parents exclude them from the nest, and use every artifice to induce them to fly. For this purpose they shake up or "stir" the nest; with their talons or wings they dash it from the rocky platform; they then "flutter over their young," and by successive circles or gyrations, gradually widening in circuit, encourage them to expand and exercise their newly fledged wings. If they shrink from trying themselves on the buoyant air, the old birds take them on their back, or stretch their strong pinions to bear them aloft till they get accustomed to the use of their untried powers. If the eaglet becomes tired of its flight, and begins to fall toward the earth, the eyes of the parent birds are following it, and ere it is dashed to the ground they dart after it, and fling out their strong pinions beneath it to break its fall, and bear it aloft again. Thus Jehovah says to the Israelites, "Ye see that I have borne you on eagle's wings."

"The stars in their courses fought against Sisera" (Judges 5:2). Mr Parkhurst, as a disciple of the Hutchinsonian philosophy, speaks of the supernatural influence exerted on that occasion by the stars and planets in causing abundance of rain, which swelled the river Kishon, at all times rapid, and swept away the hosts of Sisera as they tried to ford it. But may it not refer to the extreme brightness which the heavenly bodies might exhibit on that memorable night, which enabled the Israelites to follow the flying foe till "there was not a man left." The stars or celestial orbs might be said to "fight against" the Canaanites when the sun and moon stood still at the command of Joshua. A similar advantage was enjoyed by the British at the battle of Waterloo which took place when the days were the longest and the moon was at full — a circumstance which rendered escape or concealment through the night impossible. This does not at all clash with the idea that the river Kishon was also largely swollen by the waters which swept forth from the plains of Esdraelon after the most terrible drenching rains.

"The words of the wise are as goads," etc. (Eccles. 12:11). A large herd of cattle pass by. Twenty drivers, each furnished with a stick five or six feet long and pointed with an iron point or nail fastened to the smaller end. There is allusion to this in the words, "The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails fastened by the master of assemblies, which are given from one shepherd." Now there used to be a custom, and it is still observed to some extent, that the head herdsman alone was allowed to fix the points into the ends of the goads. For this purpose he keeps some simple tools; and he is careful to prevent any of the goads from having points too long or too sharp, else they might injure the cattle. He also sharpened those that were blunt through use. "The words of the wise are as goads," etc. They are not too sharp, and though sharp enough to arouse, they inflict no wound.

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

Dear Brother Huggins:

In renewing my subscription to The Restitution the thought has come to me, why have we so many papers representing our people? In secular things, consolidation is the order of the day, while we as a people, scatter our energies, our money and our time. The Master said: "The children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light." Would not this saying of our Lord be worth consideration in the contrast noted above?

Personally I would like to see two Church papers, and two only, both from the same publishing office: one an unedited paper for circulation among the brethren only; the other a carefully edited paper free from all controversy, contradictions, church reports, etc., for circulation among interested non-believers. I wonder if we will ever have the wisdom to "pool" our brains, our money, our energy and our time so that we may become a power for good in this world of darkness and sin.

What do the brethren think about it?

Yours in Christian love.

ALEXANDER D. DONALDSON.

To My Beloved Brothers and Sisters in the Lord:

I send you greetings in his name, hoping it may find you in good health and rejoicing in the hope of his soon return to set up his kingdom, and to establish his bride to help him to rule this beautiful earth in peace and love. Dear brother, I see by The Restitution that Brother Dowle has left for Seattle, and my prayer is that his last days may be his best days in the service of the Lord. I thank God for the message of salvation that he brought to me. May I be as faithful in teaching the word of God in truth as he was to me. I read the Bible now as I never did before, and my heart goes out to those who are being led by false doctrine, the serpent's lie. I see it takes an honest heart to accept the truth, and as Brother Dowle told me we will have enemies when we preach the truth. Poor creatures! they love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil. Once I was blind, but now I can see the light of the world is Jesus. When we invite them to the light, to the truth of God's word, they seem to shun us. The way is too narrow, they are not willing to make a complete surrender; they have other gods. I am waiting on the Lord that I might be led to those who have honest hearts, as I see only those are fit for associates with Christ in the kingdom. May God keep us faithful in his service, is my prayer.

Kindly send the twelve Bible Lessons to Mrs. Ellis Osborne, Cornwall, England; also send a set to Mr. J. Osborne, Camborne, England. Send remainder of order to me in tracts assorted.

I remain, your loving brother in Christ,

ELLIS OSBORNE.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Dear Sirs:

As you will see from the enclosed page, R. M. Briscoe passed away May 4th, 1919. And as both mother and father have taken The Restitution for many years, mother wishes the notice of his death published, so I am sending you what was read at the services by Rev. Medbury, of the University Place Christian Church, who father asked, before his death, to preach his funeral service.

Trusting this will meet with your approval, we are

Yours truly.

Mrs. R. M. BRISCOE and Family.

R. M. Briscoe was born April 2nd, 1830, in Monroe Co., near South Bend, Indiana. Married Catherine Noykoff, Sept. 5th, 1850. They lived near South Bend until the spring of 1865, when they came to Iowa and settled on a farm; which is now a part of the New Fort Des Moines, where he engaged in farming and stock raising until 1901 when he moved to Parsons, Kansas, where he remained till the spring of 1908 when, wishing to be near his family, and most of his children residing in and near Des Moines, he returned and made this present place his home until his death May 4th, 1919.

There were twelve children, two sons and ten daughters born to this couple. Two died in infancy. Mrs. C. W. Fancher, the eldest, died in 1881, leaving a family of five children. All the children were present at the funeral services with the exception of the youngst son, S. P. Brisco, of Weiser, Idaho, who found it impossible to be present. Martha E. Ridgway, Emma F. Jones, Mrs. S. A. Trowbridge, Mrs. W. T. Lowe, and Mabel Brisco, all of Des Moines; Chas. H. Brisco, of Parsons, Kansas; Mrs. G. M. Barrett, of South Bend, Ind.; and Mrs. T. A. Robertson, of Minneapolis, Minn.

About 1858 this couple united with the Church of God and, though isolated from any organized body, they have always remained faithful to this church.

Are the Dead Conscious?

I read some time ago a short article on the imprisonment of the pope in the vatican. It develops that this imprisonment is voluntary and has long been a cause of bitter resentment in the papal party in Italy, and the feeling between the papal party and the Quirnal has been so intense that the pope would not set step on Italian soil. Any one about to visit the pope, would not dare go direct from the Quirnal. Christ said "I am meek and lowly." What a contrast to the pope. One would think that a person representing Christ would act in all meekness and humility; but the person who should be the most holy of earth's pilgrims is arrayed in splendor and pompousness and cares very little for God's most sacred word.

Sometime ago there was a contest in The Press for articles on what should be done after the saloons are closed. A few suggested reading rooms, babies dispensaries, schools and churches, light lunch rooms, etc.; but the vast majority wanted places of amusement such as dance halls, ice cream cabarets, neighborhood clubs, swimming pools, etc. The attendance at orthodox churches prove that there are already too many churches for the small number that attned them. Catholics attend church regularly through fear of having to do heavy penance rather than from any love of going to church. I cannot recall having seen an article which called for Bible classes.

If people would get together to study the Bible and learn God's word, there would not exist the bitter feeling between the pope and the Quirnal; the churches would be filled; there would be no saloons, hence no need of asking what shall take their place and the world would live in righteousness and peace; but as long as there is such bitter feeling in the churches; as long as the world is engaged in one mad whirl of pleasure, and as long as women can wear $75,000 coats while millions of their race are starving to death, there will never be peace on earth, until some superhuman force reverses the wheels of destiny.

We may well ask "why do these conditions prevail"? Read Isa. 29:14-16; 2 Tim. 3:1-; 1 Cor. 2:14; Eph. 4:14; 2 Pet. 2:16; Prov. 20:17. Even while the apostles were still on earth, heresy entered into the churches. The early Christians, in their zeal to make converts, adopted many of the pagan fables and clothed them with Christian names and meanings. They somehow got the desire to go to heaven, so Catholicism originated purgatory with a future reward of heavenly bliss. The orthodox churches have followed the catholics in their doctrine, and, with them also expect to go to heaven, although they reject purgatory. Russell is reigning in a spiritual world, and, I have been told, that even the Jews now believe in going to heaven. They have forgotten the ancient "hope of Israel"; they have forgotten the promises made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and are now following in the steps of the apostasy which lead to certain destruction.

If we go to heaven at death, why did Hezekiah "weep sore" because God told him that he should die, and not live? Because of his prayers and tears, God granted him fifteen more years to live. Why did Job "want to take comfort a little before going to the land of darkness" (Job 11:20-23).

Are our relatives or friends, who have gone before us, now happy in heaven and watching over us? God has told us in 1 Thess 5:21, "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." Dan. 12:10; "Many shall be purified and made white and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly; and none of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand." How shall we prove all things, and from what shall we be made to understand? Read John 5:39; Acts 17:11; 2 Tim. 2:7; Acts 24:14; John 17:17; Luke 12:2-3; Phil. 1:27.

Now that we know that nothing is covered, and that God's word is truth, and if we search the Scriptures we shall find, let us see where God says the dead are, also how or when they shall be rewarded.

If God spoke in ancient days through the prophets, he would not change these teachings through Christ; and as the prophets taught that they "would wait the appointed time," Christ could not teach that we now go to heaven at death.

Read this summary of evidence:

Psa. 146:4: "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."

Psa. 6:5: "For in death there is no remembrance of thee, in the grave who shall give thee thanks."

Isa. 63:16: "Doubtless thou art our father, though Abraham be ignorant of us, and Israel acknowledge us not."

John 13:23: "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me; and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you."

John 3:13: "And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven."

Acts 2:29-34: "Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day. For David is not ascended into the heavens."

Psa. 115:16 17: "The heavens even the heavens are the Lord's; but the earth has he given to the children of men. The dead praise not the Lord neither any that go down into silence."

CLARA FREIDL.

The Pope and the War

Extracts from an address reported in the "English Churchman" of September 30th, 1915

And in her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth (Rev. 18:24).

The Church of Rome has shed more innocent blood than any other institution that has existed among men

ROME'S bid for temporal power has from the earliest time of her history involved nations in war. The Day of Judgment alone will reveal the dark, sinister plots planned with so much craft and cunning by popes, priests and members of Religious Orders dressed in the garb of sanctity, but steeped to their lips in treason against God and man.

The story of fallen empires, broken nations, lost provinces, bereaved homes, wandering fugitives, lonely women, and orphan children, is all a matter of history: sickness, disease, privation, poverty and death. Yes, all these things for Rome's ambition, to satisfy her lust for power.

The late Rev. Hugh Price Hughes reported an interview, in the "Methodist Times" for August 8, 1896, with the late Cardinal Manning, and said:

"I was simply horrified at the calmness with which he declared that he would be willing to deluge Europe in blood in order to destroy the unity of Italy and recover the temporal power of the pope."

"The ecclesiastico-political plans of the Jesuits had long been prepared, and the pope was more and more dominated by the Order. The 18th and 19th July, 1870, witnessed the realization of these plans. The proclamation of the new dogma (of papal infallibility) was to coincide with the victory of Roman Catholic France, in order to establish the papacy in the full possession of its new autocracy. The Jesuit keepers of the Empress's (Eugenie) conscience received their direction from the same Jesuit College at Rome in which the addresses in favor of the new dogma had been set up, and the further acts of the Council comedy had been prepared. As soon as the last difficulties which had stood in the way of the proclamation of papal absolutism had been set aside, Benedetti, the French Ambassador, received the order for the insulting demand upon the King of Prussia, which he made at Ems" (Pp. 16-24).

The pope claimed the right of being represented at The Hague Conference as a temporal sovereign—a claim that was rejected by the Great Powers; and the following incident, which happened after the Conference, and which is found in the Autobigrophy of Dr. White, is worth recording.

"The President of the American Delegation, Dr. Andrew Dickson White, at one time U. S. A. Ambassador to the Court of Berlin, was about to depart, when he found at the doors a leading Roman Catholic diplomat. He was in an impetuous temper. That he might unburden his mind, Dr. White invited this delegate with him, and while at dinner, he explained the cause of his great anger.

"What had aroused him, he stated, was a letter from the pope, which had been read at the Conference, containing the usual monstrous claims representing the pope as the world's peace-maker. He said: 'The Vatican has always been, and is today, a storm centre. The pope and his advisers have never hesitated to urge on war, no matter how bloody, when the slightest of their ordinary worldly purposes could be served by it.

"The great religious wars of Europe were entirely stirred up and egged on by them, and, as everybody knows, the pope did everything to prevent the signing of the Treaty of Munster, which put an end to the dreadful Thirty Year's War, even going so far as to declare the oaths taken by the plenipoentiaries at that Congress of no effect.

'All through the Middle Ages and at the Renaissance period, the popes kept Italy in turmoil and bloodshed for their own family and territorial advantages, and ehey have kept all Europe in turmoil for two centuries after the Reformation—in fact, just as long as they could—in the wars of religion.

'They did everything they could to stir up the war between Austria and Prussia in 1866, thinking that Austria, a Roman Catholic Power, was sure to win: and then everything possible to stir up the war of France against Prussia in 1870, in order to accomplish the same purpose of checking German Protestantism; and now they are doing all they can to arouse hatred, even to deluge Italy in blood, in the vain attempt to recover the temporal power.

'Their whole policy is based on stirring up hatred and promoting conflicts from which they hope to draw worldly advantage. In view of all this, one stands amazed at the cool statements of the Vatican letter.'"

A leading Roman Catholic paper, the "Western Watchman," published in St. Louis, and edited by Father Phelan, has said:

"August 27, 1914, From a Europena war, it has been said, Cardinal Rampolla expected the settlement of the Roman question. In the struggle against Napoleon in 1815 the Roman Pontiff got back his liberty and his temporal possessions. Why not, then, whenever nations fall foul of each other, and thus help honest men to come into their own?

"September 10, 1914, France has rescinded her decrees of banishment directed against the Religious Orders, and restored the Chaplains to her fleet. Next the law of separation will be repealed, and the French Embassy at the Vatican will be restored. All to culminate in the restoration of Rome to the popes."

Rome, in her bid for temporal power in modern times, has centered her hopes upon Germany. This once Lutheran but now rationalistic and Romanist country is fighting in a war which, if successful, will place the pope in the saddle again; because the defeat of the Allies would mean the defeat to Italy, and Italy if defeated, would be compelled by Germany to surrender the States of the Church. If the Germanic Powers are defeated, Italy must be punished later on by her former allies (Germany and Austria) for not supporting them. A sudden invasion of Italy by the Germanic Powers would speedily bring about her defeat, and then Italy would have to yield up the States of the Church.

The Central Party in the German Parliament is entirely Roman Catholic, and would only agree to vote the supplies necessary for Germany's military and naval aggrandizement on condition that the Kaiser allowed the Jesuits to return to Germany, and for other special favors to Roman Catholics. The Kaiser was obliged to agree to the terms in order to get the enormous military and naval forces necessary for the conquest of the world; thus the pope gained the prospect of his ambition by supporting the military schemes of the Kaiser and the war.

In the light of the foregoing, the craft and hypocrisy of the papacy—a system steeped in blood—is seen in the following prayer, which was read on Passion Sunday:

"Dismayed by the horrors of war which is bringing ruin to peoples and nations, we turn, O Jesus, to thy most loving heart as to our last hope. O God of mercy, with tears we invoke thee to end this fearful scourge; O King of Peace, we humbly implore the peace for which we long. From thy sacred heart thou didst shed forth over the world divine charity, so that discord might end and love alone might reign among men. During thy life on earth thy heart beat with tender compassion for the sorrows of men; in this hour made terrible with burning hate, with bloodshed and with slaughter, once more may thy divine heart be moved to pity. Pity the countless mothers in anguish for the fate of their sons; pity the numberless families now bereaved of their father; pity Europe, over which broods such havoc and disaster.

"Do thou inspire rulers and peoples with counsels of meekness, do thou heal the discords that tear the nations asunder: Thou who didst shed thy precious blood that they might live as brothers, bring men together once more in loving harmony. And as once before, to the cry of the apostle Peter: 'Save us Lord, we perish,' thou didst answer with words of mercy and didst still the raging waves, so now deign to hear our trustful prayer, and give back to the world peace and tranquility.

"And do thou, O most holy Virgin, as in other times of sore distress, be now our help, our protection, and our safeguard. Amen."

May God have mercy upon poor slumbering America, and cause his servants to lift up their voices against that wicked system which has blinded the eyes, deceived the hearts, and shed the blood of its victims. Selected by Brother A. C. Boyer

TWELVE REASONS WHY A CHRISTIAN IS HAPPY

1. BECAUSE he has a Father in heaven who loves him, cares for him, and has blessed him with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ Jesus (John 16:27; Luke 12:22-32; Eph. 1:3).
2. BECAUSE he has a Great High Priest [illegible] with him, [illegible] him, and to conduct him into heaven! [illegible] (Heb. 2:17, 18; 4:14-16; 8:1-6).
3. BECAUSE he has a Great and Good Shepherd to lead him and to feed him all the way home (Psa. 23; Heb. 13:20, 21).
4. BECAUSE he has an "advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous," who pleads his cause and always prevails (1 John 1:8 to 2:1).
5. BECAUSE he has a "Wonderful Counsellor" to go to for advice at all times (Isa. 9:6; Micah 4:9; middle of verse).
6. BECAUSE he has an abiding Comforter (the Holy Spirit) to guide him into all truth, to teach him all things, and to take all the things of Christ and show them unto him (John 14:16, 17; 16:13, 14).
7. BECAUSE he has a "throne of grace" to go to, where he can "obtain mercy and find grace to help in every need" (Heb. 4:16).
8. BECAUSE he has the Holy Scriptures to search and study, which testify of "the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow" (1 Pet. 1:11).
9. BECAUSE angels minister unto him, being an heir of salvation (Heb. 1:14).
10. BECAUSE he is an heir to an inheritance "which is incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven," and is kept by the power of God until he comes into possession (1 Pet. 1:3-5).
11. BECAUSE he has the interests of Christ to engage him "a little while," until the return of his Lord (Eph. 6:18, 19; "all saints," and 1 Tim. 2:1-3; "all men." Luke 19:12-19; 1 Cor. 11:23-26).
12. BECAUSE he has before him the bright and blessed hope of the Lord's appearing in glory, when all his saints will appear with him, and reign with him for ever and ever (Titus 2:13, 14; 1 John 3:2). The Bible Standard.

Libelli

By S. Roxana Wince

Libelli? What were they? Certificates of recantation from Christianity given to the superintendents of offerings and sacrifices in the first year of the reign of Decius, about 250 A. D.

Twenty eight of these libelli have been found, all coming from Theadelphia, except five. They were written on papyri.

It was required by the emperor that "a positive and public sacrifice be made to the gods of Rome." "The refusal of any Christian to worship any of these deities, assured his death."

Men think it a hard thing to confess Jesus in these [illegible] days, what would it be if the same state of things now existed that existed in the reign of Decius? What if no man could be a Christian unless he were brave enough to face certain death?

Now men and women shrink from being baptized into the name of Christ for very dread of what people will say. The fear of being laughed at for a brief period [illegible] than the blissful life of eternal years.

But what of a laugh? What of the biting words of scorn? Do they change the Christian into a thing of hate? "A Christian [illegible] the [illegible] the highest style of man." To be commissioned of Jesus to preach the gospel to those who have not heard or received it, is the highest [illegible] No [illegible] have a higher [illegible] than this, for "to fight the fight for souls," is to be a savior to men; and every follower of Jesus is called to be such a savior, is called to "go work in the vineyard of the Lord," if not in the pulpit in every other possible way.

His hands are pure, his heart is clean,
His lips still speak the things they mean;

VOLUME 71 CLEVELAND, O. JUNE 3rd, 1919. NUMBER 21

My Past Years

What of discipline thy love ordained
  Fell ever gently on this heart of mine;
Around its briers was my spirit trained,
  To bring forth fruits of righteousness divine;
Wisdom in every check, and love appears
In every stroke throughout these many years!

Lord, what I might have been my spirit knows—
  Rebellious, petulant, and apt to stray;
Lord, what I am, in spite of flesh and foes,
  I owe to grace that kept me in the way.
Thine be the glory! Merit disappears
As back I look upon these many years.

Thine be the glory! Thou shalt have the praise
  For all thy dealings, to my latest breath;
A daily Ebenezer will I raise,
  And sing salvation through the vale of death—
To where the palm, the golden harp appears,
There to rehearse thy love through endless years.

Baptism a Saving Ordinance

Letter to a Russellite on the Design of Baptism

Dear Friend:

I DIFFER with you on the design of baptism. I believe if it is preceded by a correct faith and repentance it will cancel one's past sins. As an introductory text let me call your attention to Acts 2:38: "Repent and be immersed every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Here we are told "immersion is for the remission of sins." If so then there can be no remission of sins till one is immersed. Hence immersion is a saving ordinance. You may say "for the remission of sins" means "because of the remission of sins." Well, let us try it and see: "Repent and be immersed because your sins are forgiven." Here you are told to do two things: "repent" and "be immersed." Whatever may be affirmed of one may be equally affirmed of the other, as the copulative conjunction "and" connects "repent" and "immerse." Hence we have "repent because your sins are forgiven, and be immersed because your sins are forgiven." Or "repent and be immersed because your sins are forgiven." This would prove, as far as the text is concerned, that baptism is not a saving ordinance, but it also proves that repentance is not a necessity. What proves too much proves nothing.

"This is the blood of the new covenant which is shed for the remission of your sins." Read "because of" here in place of "for" and see the results: "This is the blood of the new covenant which is shed because of the remission of your sins." So Christ was killed because God had forgiven you your sins! Here you will have to admit "for remission of your sins" means "in order to the remission of your sins." If it means it here, then it means it in Acts 2:38, for the expressions are the same in Greek as they are in English.

But it is said Acts 2:38 refers strictly to the Jews and has no reference to the Gentiles. Well let us see. Rom. 10:11-14: "For the Scripture saith whoso believeth on him shall not be ashamed; for there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek; for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." God says, "There is no difference between Jew and Greek" as far as he is concerned. For "whosover," be he "Jew" or "Greek," "shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." "For God hath concluded them all in unbelief that he might have mercy upon all." Hence all are sinners, whether Jew or Greek; and inasmuch as "there is no difference between Jew and Gentile." Acts 2:38 also applies to Gentiles. These same remarks hold good for Acts 22:16: "Be immersed and wash away thy sins." Not that "water" actually washes away sin in itself, but it is the obedience that counts. Naaman was told to dip himself seven times in the river Jordan to be cured of the leprosy. Now would the water in itself cure him? Would it? No. It was the obedience that counted. If God had told him to break a straw seven times the result would have been the same. So with Acts 22:16: water in itself will never wash away sins, but it is the act of obedience that counts. Whoever obeys God in the act of baptism will then secure remission of sins.

There is no other way. "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is no other name given under heaven whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12). Here we are told there is "salvation" in the "name of the Lord Jesus." Anything, whether it is faith, repentence or baptism separately, or all these combined that can put us "into" that "name" so that we may be "in" it, becomes to us a saving ordinance. Now what will do that? "They were immersed into the name of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 19:5). So the "immersion" is the thing that places us "in Christ," for can one be "in Christ" and yet not "in" his name? "In Christ" and not yet his name bearer? Impossible. So to be immersed into his name is to be immersed into Christ. Paul speaks of this in Rom. 6:3: "Or know ye not that we as many were immersed into Christ (Jesus) into his death were immersed" (Rotherham). "Immersed into Christ" transfers us from a place outside of him to a place "in" him; and "in him is our redemption, the forgiveness of sins" (Col. 1:14). Out of him there is no salvation: in him there is. Now inasmuch as immersion is the thing that transfers us from being without Christ to a state of being within him, it clearly follows that it is a saving ordinance. "The blood of Jesus Christ, his Son cleanseth us from all sins." How can we get into this blood so that it can "cleanse us from all sins"? "Immersed into his death"—blood. So it is through immersion that we get "into" his blood. Hence immersion is clearly a saving ordinance.

That remission of sins is to be through his name by everyone that believeth on him (Acts 10:43). Here we are told "remission of sins" is to be "through his name." What then will place us "into" that name so we may secure "remission of sins"? Acts 19:5 answers the question. It is immersion. So then we find that immersion is the thing that secures the "remission of sins"—a saving ordinance to us. Notice too, it is intended for "everyone that believeth on him," and is not limited to the Jew. Gal. 3:27: "For as many of you as have been immersed into Christ have put on Christ." Out of Christ there is no salvation; in Christ there is. Whatever transfers us from being outside of him to being within him becomes to us a saving agency. Paul here says it is "immersion"—"immersed into Christ." "Immersion" here, as well as in Rom. 6:13, means immersion in water, for this reason: Acts 19:5; 8:16 and others teach that the way we get "into" the "name of the Lord Jesus" is through immersion in water. Getting thus into his name we are "in the name wherein there is salvation." In as much as one can not be "in" the name of the Lord Jesus without being in his body, it necessarily follows that when one is "baptized into his name" one is baptized "into Christ." Hence Gal. 3:27 and Rom. 6:3 refers to water baptism.

Acts 10:48: "He commanded them in the name of Jesus Christ to be immersed." He "commanded" them. Think of it. Can one disobey the command? "Blessed are they who do his commandments that they may have right to the tree of life." 1 Pet. 3:21: "Which (water) in manner corresponding doth now save you also—even immersion—not a putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the request unto God for a good conscience" (Rotherham). Here we are told that "immersion," and that too of water, doth "now save us" also. The word "also" shows it "saves" us just as much as the "ark" saved Noah and his family. If "immersion doth now save us" is it not then a saving ordinace? It appears thus to me. If it "now saves us," then whoever "now" ignores it can not be saved.

Mark 16:16: "He that hath believed and been immersed shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned" (Rotherham). Here two conditions for salvation are laid down; "belief" and "immersion." They stand and fall together. Whoever does not "believe" cannot be saved though immersed. Whoever believeth though not immersed shall not be saved. But whoever complies with the conditions named—"belief and immersion"—shall be saved. Woe to that person who omits either!

John 3:5: "Except one be born of water and spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God." "Water" here means "water" as much as "spirit" means "spirit." If one is used in a figurative sense then so is the other. If one is literal, then so is the other. In as much as there is nothing in the text or context to cause one to think these words "water" and "spirit" are not used in their literal sense, it follows they must be accepted literally. "Born of water and spirit." Here is a birth produced by two things: "water" and "spirit." This birth is a new birth, and takes place at the resurrection but, as we have stated, is produced by two things—"water" and "spirit." "Water" gets in its work at "baptism" when we are "immersed" in water for the "remission of sins," and the process of begettal is completed. One, thus, by it becomes a begotten son or daughter of God. Being begotten he is, as it were, an embryo awaiting birth so as to have life within himself as God his Father has. The "birth" then is the next step for the embryo. That takes place at the resurrection when the embryo is "born of the spirit" and it then becomes a "spiritual body." Hence we can see there can be no completion of begettal without immersion in water; no birth of the spirit without a prior begettal. Therefore the "new birth" depends upon two things: "water" and the "spirit."

Titus 3:5: "He saved us by the washing of regeneration." Saved by what? "Washing." Naaman was told to "wash" himself seven times, and he went down and dipped himself seven times. Hence to have a "washing" means to have a "dipping" or "immersion." This text harmonizes nicely with Peter who said, "Baptism now saves us." Now if "he saved us by the washing," can we be saved without this "washing"? It is not possible. Then whoever has not received this "washing" can not be saved. "Washing of regeneration." Here this washing is said to belong to "regeneration" the new birth. Yes; without it the new birth is impossible, for this "washing" establishes the "begotten" state so that the "regeneration" can take place at the appointed time the resurrection. Hence the "washing of regeneration" is necessary unto salvation.

Respectfully your friend,

JOHN R. FISKE, Jr.

Strayed

Half a score of Lambs, believed to have gone in the direction of "No Sunday School."

A Bible Exposition

Revelation 13:11-18

And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon (vs 11).

THE Bible is noted for expressing much in few words, as here we have in this short verse four prominent points belonging to this power by which we may identify him:

1. He is "another beast,"
2. "Coming up out of the earth,"
3. He has "two horns like a lamb," and
4. "He spake as a dragon."

It is safe to say that these four points of identity will be found in no other power described in the Bible from Genesis to the Revelation. And right here so the reader may be better able to understand the force of the evidence given I will say that this beast is a symbol of the United States of America.

First. John says, "I beheld another beast." He is "another" from the leopard beast of this chapter, and another power as compared with the dragon of chapter 12. They both have 10 horns proving their identity with Daniel's fourth beast. This beast has only two horns, and therefore is another beast, separate and distinct from Rome, and in this respect the symbol fits the United States.

Second. "Comes up out of the earth." Our province now is to ascertain what the "earth" out of which he comes is a symbol of, and in that way find out where this power comes from. In Deut. 32:1 we read, "Give ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth." Here the heavens are the royalty, the rulers, and the earth the common people, the democracy. The prophet Hosea speaking of the Lord's goodness says, "And it shall come to pass in that day, I will hear, saith the Lord, I will hear the heavens, and they shall hear the earth" (Hosea 2:21). See also Revelation, chapter 12 where the dragon is cast out of the heaven into the earth, like the German Kaiser having lost his throne, he is now one of the people.

The earth as a symbol is seen in the clay of the image (Dan. 2). The clay in Russia has overturned the iron; the same is taking place in Germany and in Austria. The earth-clay origin corresponds to the earth out of which the United States of America came up. Again the symbol fits the United States exactly, as it did in it being "another" power: "And he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon." Here we have a paradox seemingly absurd yet true in fact. And herein we behold the wonderful power of the author of the prophecy to foretell exactly the disposition and acts of a certain power that are seemingly contrary to nature. "Two horns like a lamb." Most horned animals have two horns and thus the power referred to conforms to nature, the number of the horns having no prophetic significance. But the horns being lamb-like indicates that the power referred to will use its power not for aggression and conquest, but it will be inoffensive and lamblike; and at the same time it will be a strong power, because it speaks like a dragon—strong and powerful.

These lamblike horns are remarkable, reminding us of Christ, whose symbol is a lamb with seven horns (Rev. 5:6). The seven horns of Christ signify fulness and completeness of power. Our text symbol falls short in that respect, but the relationship of the two is evident to all lamblike disposition combined with power. The Bible student is acquainted with what is written concerning the nature of Christ's reign, when wars shall cease to the ends of the earth, and when peace, the fruits of righteousness, shall spring forth before all the nations. In no power but the United States of America do we find these four points of identity corresponding with the symbol, like a piece of granite broken off from the parent rock. No other piece of rock in all the world will fit into the projections and the indentations, but the one that is broken off; none but the United States meets the requirements of the prophecy.

This nation that freed Cuba from the tyrrany of Spain then retired from the island leaving the inhabitants in the full possession of their independence. Thus speaking like a dragon to Spain, but acting like a lamb to Cuba. In the present world war the United States patiently remonstrated with Germany against her ruthless submarine warfare; and finally drew the sword in the cause of oppressed humanity, with no selfish ends in view, but solely in the cause of humanity and liberty. And now who like Woodrow Wilson (the representative of the United States) is speaking like a dragon to the Kaiser, to Austria, and to the Turk. The speech of our president bears with it more weight than that of any other power in the world combined with humanity and justice. This prophecy combining in the symbol, lamblike humanity and meekness, with dragonic power, is one of the finest specimens of exact foreknowledge revealed in the Bible.

And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed (vs. 12).

This verse is mainly future indicating that the power of this symbol would be equal to that of the first beast; and that it would be exercised "before him" that is, before the first beast, or as the R. V. reads, "in his sight." Everything now that is done is in the sight of Rome the "first beast." See Dan. 7:20, "In that horn were eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking great things." The worship of the first beast has reference to the worship of the image of verse 15, which is yet future.

And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire to come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men (vs. 13).

The reader will notice here that there is nothing small about the nation that this symbol represents. "He exerciseth all the power of the first beast." And "he doeth great wonders." One of the great wonders is "making fire to come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men" (Franklin with his kite). In Job 1:16 we read, "The fire of God is fallen from heaven, and hath burnt up the sheep and the servants; and consumed them." In Job 38:35 we read. "Canst thou send lightenings, that they may go, and say unto thee. Here we are?" Electricity is the greatest wonder of the age. Great as à motive power, great as a new carrier, great as a light giver, turning night into day. How would we like to do without it now? The last clause of this verse reads, "in the sight of men." In all the cities, towns and villages of the world, who has not seen the operation of electricity, turning darkness into light, "in the sight of men."

An illustration of the wonders done by the United States corresponding to the symbol is found in the address of President Wilson to Congress before leaving for the Peace Congress, Dec. 2, 1918, entitled "How the army was sent."

"A year ago" he said, "we had sent 145,918 men over seas. Since then we have sent 1,950,513, an average of 162,542 each month . . . . No such movement of troops ever took place before, across three thousand miles of sea followed by adequate equipment and supplies, and carried safely through extraordinary dangers . . . . In all this movement only 758 men were lost." These men that never before had been in action, were victorious the first encounter with German picked troops, and finally turned the scales, and materially aided in bringing the world war to a victorious close.

> And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast which had the wound by a sword, and did live (vs. 14).

A failure to understand the nature of this deceiving of the dwellers on the earth, is responsible for the failure of so many to understand the two horned symbol. To understand this prophecy we must understand the vast difference that there is beween the lying wonders of the apostasy, and the real scientific wonders performed by this symbol. Paul says, concerning the apostasy, "Even him whose coming is after (or according to, R. V.) the working of satan with all power and signs and lying wonders" (2 Thess. 2:9). The reader will notice that in the case of this symbol whose power (horns) is lamblike as written, "He doth great wonders"; and again, "Which he had power to do in the sight of the beast." Now I affirm that this symbol's miracles are scientific and not intended to deceive any one; although they do deceive them that dwell on the earth.

The reader will remember that the earth is where this symbol came from; therefore his identity with the dwellers on the earth. The trouble here is that they are self deceived, no uncommon thing, but something that often happens especially with those that perform great wonders. It may be urged from the nature of this symbol—strong and powerful, speaking like a dragon, but whose horns (power) are lamblike it would naturally be inclined to deceive anyone; it would be out of harmony with the lamblike disposition. "Saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live."

Here we have evidence that this symbol represents a democratic nation because he appeals to the "dwellers on the earth" to make the image. The image is made by the two horned beast, and is a likeness of the first beast of verse one of this chapter. This beast is identical with the fourth beast of Dan. 7; we know him by his ten horns. He appears under different phases in this book. In chapter 12 he is a great red dragon, pagan in his religion; in this chapter he is like a leopard, but Christian in religion; in chapter 17 he is "a scarlet colored beast full of names of blasphemy," this is the papal phase. It is to this beast in his Christian phase that the two horned beast makes the image. He is identified in verse 3 as the one that had "one of his heads wounded by a sword." In chapter 12 as the pagan dragon (in the time of Constantine) he was put out of the heavens; and here in chapter 13 he has got into the heaven again professing to be a Christian.

It is that one of his heads is wounded by the northern invaders of the empire in the fifth century. The main point is that the image is made to the first beast in his Christian phase, as he was in the fifth century. It would be impossible for a Christian power to make an image to a pagan empire; and equally impossible for a Protestant nation to make an image to the papacy, except they make a pope to head the image. This image is something that but few people seem to know much about, although when understood it is quite simple, and easy to be understood, just history repeating itself. The two horned symbol, or rather the nation that it represents, enforces the worship of the image under severe penalty for disobedience; therefore the image is a religious image.

Now we enquire as to the religion of the Roman Empire in the fifth century, and especially about the time that Rome received the wound by the sword of the northern invaders. The change in the religion of the empire from paganism to Christianity was mainly under Constantine in the fourth century. And now as to the wounding of one of the heads (the imperial one) Gibbon places the sounding of first trumpet in A. D. 410 and the fourth trumpet at A. D. 476 when Odoacer became king of Italy, and the imperial head came to an end. And during this time the beast received the deadly wound by a sword, from which in time the beast (Roman Empire) recovered by the healing of the wound. Notice here verse 5 that the wound is healed, before the blasphemous mouth (the papacy) is given to the beast (Dan. 7:20) Therefore the image is not made to Rome papal, nor to Rome pagan, but to Rome Christian. The reader may be surprised to learn how little there is to be done to complete the image. The original to which the image is a likeness, was made in the early centuries of the Christian era.

A large gathering of the builders took place at the council of Nice A. D. 325 when Christ was declared to be consubstantial, or of the same essence with the Father (Mosheim p. 102). "The council assembled by Theodocius, in 381, at Constantinople of 150 bishops . . . . gave the finishing touch to what the council of Nice had left imperfect, and fixed in a full and determined manner, the doctrine of three persons in one God. This venerable assembly did not stop here; they branded with infamy all the errors, and set a mark of execration upon all the heresies hitherto known" (Mosheim p. 105). Thus the doctrine of the trinity is completed; to which our nation makes an image. The finishing touches to the original creed, to which the image is made; is found in the orthodox edicts of Theodocius, A. D. 380 (Gibbon).

In Rev. 19:20 this two horned symbol is called a false prophet; and as I have defended the humane lamblike disposition of this symbol I must here defend him from any intention to deceive, otherwise he loses his lamblike disposition. It was an American, Andrew Carnegie, who built the peace palace at The Hague. It was an American, Ford, the auto bulder of Detroit, that sailed away to Europe in his peace ship thinking he could put a stop to the war. And now, behold, Woodrow Wilson, President, and representative extraordinary of the United States, is in Europe, for the express purpose to put a stop to war for all time, by a peace league of the world. This work is laudable, and in harmony with the symbol; and with the orthodox faith of the millennium. And if I read aright, the peace league will be formed; and then we shall hear the "peace and safety" cry.

The dwellers on the earth will be deceived by their own great wonders performed. Then woe to the heretics. And then when the peace league fails; what about our lamblike symbol, after doing wonders great? Will he not be a self deceived, false prophet?

The formation of the image, or likeness to the original of the fourth century, has commenced in the union or federation of all orthodox churches. In their doctrine they have nothing to change. Roman Catholic, Protestant, Greek, and Armenian, all believe in the immortality of the soul; in going to heaven at death; and in hell-fire torment after death; they all believe in the doctrine of the trinity, three persons in one Godhead, the same as is taught in the orthodox edicts of Theodocius, and enforced by Roman law.

The trinity is the mark of orthodoxy in the edicts of Theodocius and will be in the image, they having already excluded from the federation all Unitarians. So all they have to do to finish the image is to enact into law their present faith under penalty. This they can do when they are all united, Catholic and Protestant.

Now in conclusion one question, Is it reasonable such a nation as the United States is not noticed in prophecy? And if not by this symbol where is it?

Paul's Hope

PAUL'S life was the most turbulent of any of the apostles; he bore the most trials and tribulations, and on him rested the care of all the churches. He had been beaten, ship wrecked, and imprisoned; and as he was growing old, this life held very little that was attractive. During his first imprisonment his friends were allowed to visit him freely, and he had full freedom to preach the gospel, but his life was a hard one. No wonder he "felt in a strait betwixt two, having desire to depart and to be with Christ." For to depart would be the end of his sorrow and suffering, but to stay would be more profitable to the churches, as they needed him. We can read between the lines in his last letter to Timothy what anguish of soul Paul must have endured. His second imprisonment, about three years after the first, was under far different conditions. The Christians were now bitterly persecuted by both the Romans and Jews. Paul had lost all freedom and was now in a Roman prison, hated and despised. His friends forsook him one by one; only two or three remained faithful. His one earthly longing to see Timothy before he died was perhaps never granted, and he was at the last exceeding lonely and broken in health. He was now ready to die for the Master whom he had so faithfuly served. "I am ready now to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing" (2 Tim. 3:7, 8).

Paul had seen Christ in all his glorious splendor (Acts 26:15, 16; 1 Cor. 9:15; 15:8). If he should depart, he knew it would be but a brief moment that he would wait in the grave until his change should come, and at the sound of the trumpet when Christ would return, he with all the saints would be raised to immortality, to be forever with the Lord. Not to dwell with him in heaven, as all the churches now teach, but to inherit with Christ in the kingdom which is now being reserved in heaven until he comes whose right it is. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things that God hath prepared for them that love him." Read Rev. 21: 1-4). May our Lord quickly come, then will Paul's desire and prayer be fulfilled.

Rome's Bloody Day

The dawn of St. Bartholomews Day, August 24, 1572, revealed the most horrid spectacle ever witnessed in Paris. The sounds of musketry and the screams and wails of the dying Protestants were heard on every hand. Men, women and children, wounded and bleeding, were fleeing in every direction, pursued with fiendish laughter by the crazed and gory Roman Catholic assassins. The victims in this city alone were estimated by different authorities at from 10,000 to 20,000, and throughout France at from 30,000 to 100,000. The messenger to Rome conveying the news of the massacre was awarded a thousand crowns, while pope Gregory XIII, caused a Te Deum to be sung in the Church of St. Mark in commemoration of the happy (?) destruction of the Protestants, and ordered a special medal to be struck, a specimen of which is now to be found in the British Museum.

Who, then is free? The wise man who can govern himself.

As a general thing, it may be expected that all Christians will find themselves able to bear the great crosses of life, because they come with observation; they attract notice by their very magnitude, and, by putting us on our guard, give us strength to meet them. But happy, thrice happy is he who can bear the little crosses which ever lie in wait, and which attack us secretly, and without giving warning, like a thief in the night.

It is no great thing to reject the popular falsehoods; little, perhaps not hard. But to receive the great sentiments and lofty truths of real religion, the Christianity of Christ--to love them, to live them in your business and your home, that is the greatest work of man. Thereby you partake of the nature and spirit of God; you achieve the true destiny for yourself; you help your brothers to do the same.

The beast spoken of in Rev. 13 chapter has caused many students of the Apocalypse to blunder. The matter, however, is very simple. That the "other beast" is just another form of the papal beast is certain from the statement, "He exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him." If you ask, "why should there be another form of the papal beast?" the answer is, because the recussitated papal power took a new phase. When the Constantinople ascendency failed, from the interior regions of Europe ("the earth" in contrast with Constantinople on the Mediterranean) there sprang up a new dominating power, gained ascendency in Europe, and incorporated the papacy in itself in the new order of things. The German Empire sprang out of the victories of Charlemagne. This empire, shifting from France to Germany and Austria had two horns the emperor and pope. It was a two horned beast, a dual empire.

The Second Trumpet

And the second angel sounded, and as it were a great mountain burning with fire was cast into the sea: and the third part of the sea became blood; and the third part of the creatures which were in the sea, and had life, (having souls (1)) died; and the third part of the ships were destroyed (Rev. 8:8, 9).

I. Symbols Explained

1. "A Great Mountain Burning with Fire."

1. Mountains in prophecy represent kingdoms (Isa. 2; Dan. 2; Psa. 72).
2. A mountain "burning with fire" is a kingdom active in destruction; "a burnt mountain" a power destroyed (vss. 8, 9; Jer. 51:25).

2. "Cast Into the Sea."

1. Politico-geographical arena of the second trumpet (Rev. 17:15; Dan. 7).

3. "The Third of the Sea Became Blood."

1. Sea clear and serene, denotes an orderly collection of men in a quiet and peaceful state; when troubled and tumultuous, a collection of men in motion and war (Isa. 57:20; Dan. 7; Jer. 51:41, 42; Isa. 8:7, 8; Luke 21:25).

4. "The Third Part of the Creatures .... and had Life" (Having Souls). (1)

1. The sea being symbolic of men organized into governments, the fish of the sea would be typical fish (Ezek. 29:1-6).

5. "The Third of the Ships were Destroyed."

1. Naval and commercial interests of "the third of the earth," "business in great waters" destroyed (Job 9:26; Psa. 107:23, 24).

II. Historical Application, A. D. 428-439.

1. "The terrible Genseric," king of the Vandals (Gib. 3:128, 129, 130).
2. Vandals became a naval power (Gib. 3:209, 210).
3. Pillage of Rome (Gib. 3:213).
4. Majorian's invasion of Africa (Gib. 3:230, 231).
5. Second invasion by Basiliscus under Leo (Gib. 3:242, 243, 244).

(1) Psuchas here is wrongly translated "life," for it is a plural noun. It is correctly rendered "lives" in Rev. 12:11. Psuche (singular) and psuchas (plural) is generally translated "soul" and "souls," but as Rev. 8:9 and 12:11 associate the soul with death, and as our translators believed in a soul that is incapable of death, they were forced to give a bungling translation of these two Scriptures.

Not failure, but low aim is crime.

Report of Joint Meeting

Perhaps it may be of interest to our brothers and sisters in the West to hear of the Union Meeting of the Churches of God in Newark, N. J. and Brooklyn, N. Y., which was held on Sunday, May 11, 1919, in Brooklyn. It has been our custom for a number of years to hold an annual "Get-together" Meeting in the autumn, but as both churches were rejoicing in the fact that several were to be added to our number by baptism, it was decided to join forces for the occasion.

Thanks to the kindness of our Adventist friends, we were granted the privilege of using their church and baptistry before their regular morning service, but a complete tie-up of the Newark trolley system prevented the folk from that city from arriving on time, and consequently, our baptismal services considerably overlapped theirs. They exhibited in these rather embarrasing circumstances the best of Christian spirit, and made us very welcome.

Brother Alex. Donaldson administered the ordinance, baptizing five from Newark and two from Brooklyn. Two sons, two daughters and one daughter-in-law of Brother Dietz composed the Newark candidates, their father having heeded the admonition to bring up his children in the fear of the Lord, while the Brooklyn candidates were a young couple who have come to a knowledge of our precious faith through the influence of Brother Lasher who, though young in the faith, is an earnest worker in the Lord's vineyard. It was very inspiring to see so many young people come out on the Lord's side.

As we had unavoidably interferred with the regular services of the Advent Church, we decided to remain for their service, and we had the pleasure of listening to a very fine sermon on "I am the ligth of the world."

After luncheon served in a neighboring restaurant and a short time for social intercourse, we met in our own room for the reception of candidates and our afternoon service. Brother Rothe conducted this portion of the service, extending the right hand of fellowship with a few well-chosen remarks to each, admonishing them to "walk worthy of the vocation wherewith they are called," taking Jesus as their example, and to continue steadfast in the faith, preparing themselves to take the place of the older brethren if our Lord should tarry.

The subject chosen was 1 John 2:17: "The world passeth away and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." Several short addresses were given by the various brethren, interspersed by suitable hymns, each adding a word of counsel and encouragement to the lambs of the flock. We felt at the close of the meeting that it had been indeed a "red letter day" in the history of these churches.

Rejoice with us that our light is not entirely extinguished, though it may burn very dim at times; and may the Lord find us ready and watching when he comes.

JESSIE N. DONALDSON, Secretry.

The Reign of Christ and the Saints

I HAVE been much interested in the arguments, both pro and con, as to whether Christ's reign with the saints is a thing of the past, or is yet future. If the thousand years mentioned in Rev. chapter twenty is past, then the living and reigning of the saints with him, it seems to me, must also be placed in the past.

The whole question to my mind is settled by the evident fact that Christ's kingdom is to be set up in the future. I once held that Christ is now reigning during the gospel dispensation, and then advocated the theory that the thousand years were either in the past or represented the whole of the Christian dispensation. The apostle Paul knocked the props from under this view with his statement: "Now ye are full, now ye are rich, ye have reigned as kings without us (apostles): and I would to God ye did reign, that we (apostles) also might reign with you" (1 Cor. 4:8).

Granting, as we believe all are compelled to do, that the first part of the verse is irony, rhetorically speaking, the fact is nevertheless clearly stated, that neither the apostles nor the early church were then actually reigning, but Paul was wishing they did, and thus giving evidence that the reign of himself and the Corinthian brethren was something desirable, and therefore not a future period of the darkest history of the church. Surely Paul did not wish for the persecutions that occurred from A. D. 800 to A. D. 1800. We are also told by our Lord himself, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne" (Rev. 3:21.

What is it to sit with Christ in his throne, if it is not to reign with him? But the promise is to overcomers, and not to those who had not overcome, as the case would be if it occurred during the period of probation. "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him: if we deny him, he also will deny us" (2 Tim. 2:12). This makes our suffering first and the reigning "with him" to follow; and the fact is evident throughout the Bible that the reign comes after the suffering has ended. Jesus places the entrance into the kingdom at the second advent (Matt. 25:31-46), and "added and spake a parable" to correct the mistake even his apostles had fallen into, believing his reign "was immediatly to appear" (Luke 19:11-27). It seems to the writer that some of our latter day disciples need to look over the same parable, and be instructed as were the disciples in Jesus' day.

If the kingdom of God is yet future, then Christ and his saints are not now reigning, and if thy are now rigning the kingdom of God is certainly now in existence, and we should cease praying, "Thy kingdom come." Christ is never promised two kingdoms, or two reigns, one now and another future, as we are abundantly able to prove if allowed the privilege; and if any of the brethren feel disposed to dispute this biblical fact we will produce the evidence to substantiate the same, either privately or publicly. In God's word it is always "the kingdom," and if we are now in it, are we to be cast out, and to enter again? And was the gospel dispensation "immediately to appear," be destroyed, and appear again at the second advent? Again, were the faithful to have kingly authority under the gospel to reign with Christ, have that authority taken from them and given them again, as per Luke 19:17-19? What "authority over" anybody did the saints possess during the interim from A. D. 800 to 1800? If such is th "reign of Christ" present, can we expect the future reign to be much better?

But, granting for argument's sake two reigns, the present being the darkest and most unenlightened period of the present earth's history, why should we expect the future reign to be glorious? And are such reigns with Christ much to be longed for? If Christ is now reigning, how do we know the present reign is not the reign he taught his disciples to pray for? Christ is to "judge the living and dead at his appearing and kingdom" or reign (2 Tim. 4:1). If it began at the first advent, or the beginning of the gospel dispensation, did not the judgment also begin then, and when we read, "Judgment was given unto them," to whom? They who "sat upon thrones," that John saw (Rev. 20:4), who are they? "And the souls of them that had been beheaded for the testimony of Jesus, and for the word of God, and such as worshipped not the beast, neither his image, received not the mark upon their forehead, and upon their hand; and they lived (how long did they live?) and reigned with Christ a thousand years."

I leave out the words "I saw" before the words "the souls," etc., because they are not in the original, and that makes the "they" who sat on thrones, have "judgment given them" with the souls, etc., mentioned, and also "live and reign with Christ" during the thousand years: and if they were Roman kings, then Roman kings were sharers with Christ in the thousand years' reign, which makes some who reign with Christ slayers of others, and the kingdom divided against itself, and no wonder it fell. The omitted words not being Scripture, cannot be relied upon as proof, and hence those who place the thousand years past must place Roman rulers in the reign with Christ.

Even Me Also

I AM taking today a long, long journey. It is backward over my past life; and as I journey along I am startled and horrified at mistakes, blunders, and sins of omission and commission scattered along my backward track. The evils and wrongs that I have done; the noble and righteous acts I might, and should have done, but did not; and as I pass them one by one, in remorseful review the list seems endless, and a terrible fear takes possession of me. Can it be possible that one so foul as I, may have a part in the glories of the ages to come? No words can express the horror of fear that overwhelms me as I realize that when God's people are taken, I may be left. O God in heaven, is there no hope? Unworthy though I am, I belong to Christ; he has paid the purchase price. Was it paid in full? Is the cloak of his righteousness big enough to cover me, even me also? If not, then indeed must I perish! There is no other hope.

Eagerly I turn to the word, and there I read, "There is one God, and one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus" (1 Tim. 2:5) Now Webster says that a mediator is an intercessor, advocate, propitiator. In Rom. 8:34 we read "It is Christ that died, yea, rather that is risen, who is ever at the right hand of God, and who maketh intercession for us." Oh thank God for that beam of hope! Surely, if he makes intercession, he is able to save even the most weak and unworthy of those whom he has purchased, and who belong to him.

I wonder if he is truly able to do this. Let God's word answer: "Wherefore, he is able also to save them to the uttermost, that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them" (Heb. 7:25). O God, I thank thee for this strong assurance. My burden of fear grows less as I find that the mantle of his righteousness does indeed cover me, even my sins completely. "God knoweth our frame." He knoweth that we are by nature weak and prone to err. He knew that even though washed and cleansed by the precious blood of Christ, yet would we stumble and sometimes fall; hence the necessity for an intercessor, a mediator who is strong enough to stand between a just and perfect God, and his weak and erring people; and we are assured that our mediator is strong enough to accomplish that which he has undertaken.

But dear ones, let us not forget that there are conditions required, if we would have intercession from our noble Advocate now with the Father. We must earnestly repent of our sins and weaknesses, and bravely resolve to commit them no more. When our dear Lord was seized, and so shamefully abused by his enemies, and so sadly in need of the sympathy, comfort, and support of his loved ones, they all deserted him. Even Peter publicly denied him three times in succession; and to make his denial appear more strong to those wicked and profane men and women, he cursed and swore. Surely Peter fell to the very lowest scale of human degradation, and as he realized the greatness of his fall, is it any wonder that he "went out and wept bitterly"? But his after life proved that his tears and repentance were sincere, and God forgave him, and afterwards used him to help give the gospel to the world.

David lusted after another man's wife, and caused her husband to be killed that he might have the woman. Even I am not guilty of a sin so great as this; but David repented in sackcloth and ashes and called on God for forgiveness; and he who can read the heart as an open book, saw that his repentance was sincere, and forgave him this monstrous sin, and permitted him to become the ancestor (according to the flesh) of his only begotten Son, the Lord Jesus Christ.

Therefore dear ones, let us not despair even though like Paul (Rom. 7) we find that we are weak and carnal, and sold under sin, for what we would do, that we do not, but what we hate, that we do, for we know that in us (that is, in our flesh) dwelleth no good thing; for to will is present with us, but how to perform that which is good we find not. For the good that we would, we do not, but the evil which we would not, that do we. O wretched beings that we are! Who shall deliver us from the body of this death? Like the great apostle, let us thank God that only through Jesus Christ our Lord, may we have hope of final deliverance, in the glorious ages to come.

God's Vineyard

In Isaiah 5 we read of a vineyard God planted, which, if we have been grafted into the true vine through faith in Christ, must include us who are called by his name; for God says his vineyard is the house of Israel. He tells of his wonderful care for it, and of his disappointment in the harvest time when he found that his labor had been in vain. Jesus said to his disciples: "I am the vine, ye are the branches, and my Father is the husbandman." Having been planted by our heavenly Father, may he not again ask, what more could I have done for my vineyard than I have done? Are we bearing the fruit to his glory? We all know what the fruit of the spirit is. The Holy Spirit lives in every Christian as the sap flows through every banch of the vine. There come times of special blessing probably to all of us, of feeling our cup running over with mercies; of faith to trust in his goodness for all our needs. We find ourselves rich in love for the dear, precious church and filled with prayerful god wishes for all God's suffering, sorrowing children. Rich in hope, in shelter, in all we need, and our needs are so many, and then comes the work of the day with its trials; for we must have trials if we are ever to be prepared for the Christian's inheritance. Does the memory of the joy and riches stay with us and help us through the rough places? Ah, no. Shame that it must be said. Too often the fretful words and frowns are on hand again in the same old way. It seems we might hear our Father's pleading voice saying, "what more could I have done to my vineyard that I have not done? Yet when I looked for grapes, I found wild grapes." Nay, the thought comes, not even those but more nearly thorns and thistles. Oh how short the time may be before he may come and choose whatever is fit to take and leave the rest to a different fate. What in this world can compare with the importance of being ready to meet our Lord; yet we see so many absorbed in everything except the one thing needful, and hear them saying, "I have no time for study or work other than what I am doing. Indeed I am just worn out with what I am doing now," and we know this is true and will keep on being true unless a change is made, and the questions of values and importance be readjusted. Suppose it is a hindrance to our daily labor, to be thinking of these things they are the true riches, and will stay with us when the other has gone. Dear ones all, let us awake and watch, and if he tarries let us be faithful. Nothing else can matter so much as this.

I need your prayers. Your sister still hoping, though not worthy of even present blessings, much less the future so bright for the saints of God.
ALICE ADAMS.

THE RESTITUTION SUNDAY SCHOOL LEAF

JESUS THE KING

Lesson XXXIV

Memory Text: And Pilate wrote a title and put it on the cross. And the writing was: JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS (John 19:19).

1. Behold a king shall reign in righteousness and princes rule in judgment (Isa. 32:1).
2. Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous branch.
3. And a king shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth.
4. In his day shall Judah be saved and Israel shall dwell safely.
5. And this is the name whereby he shall be called, The Lord our Righteousness (Jer. 23:5, 6).
6. He shall judge thy people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgment.
7. They shall fear thee as long as the sun and moon endure throughout all generation.
8. In his days shall the righteous flourish, and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth.
9. He shall have dominion also from sea to sea and from the river unto the ends of the earth.
10. They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him . . . . Yea, all kings shall fall down before him, all nations shall serve him (Psa. 72:2, 5, 7, 8, 9, 11).
11. And the Lord shall be king over all the earth: in that day shall there be one Lord and his name one (Zech. 14:9).
12. When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory (Matt. 25:31).

Practical Truths

The governments of earth are unstable because unrighteous. Jehovah has said that the nation and kingdom that will not serve the Lord shall perish—be utterly wasted. What the world needs is a righteous government. A righteous government will be a stabe government. A righteous government will be a stable govern- The world for a government and one government for the world. We never can have universal peace until the whole world is under one king, and that, too, a king such as Jesus will be when the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord and his anointed.

Notes on the Lesson

Pilate.—The Roman Governor at the time of Christ's crucifixion. Title.—Mark calls it a superscription of accusation, which indicates that he considered the writing to signify the supposed crime for which Jesus was crucified. He claimed to be a king, and declared he was born for that end and for that purpose came into the world. Upon the charge of being a king he was condemned and executed. The title shows this to have been the case.

2. A Righteous Branch.—Doubtless refers to Jesus (Luke 1:32, 33).

6. Judge.—To render decision, to rule.

8. In His Days.—When he shall reign. Flourish.—To prosper, to abound

9. From Sea to Sea.—A phrase denoting the universal sway of the scepter in the hand of Jesus.

12. Angels with Him.—When Jesus comes the angels will come with him to earth. Whether they will remain here or only come as an escort we are not told.

Suggestive Topics and Questions

1. A Reign of Righteousness.—Are all the governments of earth founded in righteousness? Does the Bible speak of a time when righteousness shall prevail? What form of government will then exist? Ans.: A kingdom. Who will be the king? (Dan. 7:13, 14). What will characterize his reign? Ans.: Righteousness. What will be the condition of the people under that righteous government? (8). Will the people be obedient? (7). What is meant by "they shall fear thee"? What will be the condition of Judah and Israel? (4). By what name will the ruler be known? (5).

2. King Over All the Earth.—What title did Pilate write for Jesus? Did Jesus ever reign over the Jews? Will he ever reign over them? Read Isa. 9:6, 7, and tell us whether it refers to Jesus? What will be the extent of his reign? (9). Will the whole earth be under one king? (10 and 11). When will he begin to reign? (12).

Closing Thought.—With a universal government of perfect righteousness and justice, and one king, even Jesus our Lord, how favored the people will be. Is not this the time spoken of when all the nations of the earth shall be blessed?

A LITTLE EXHORTATION

To our Subscribers and Readers:

Your directors at a recent meeting decided that there is too little mention made in The Restitution of the financial affairs of The Restitution Publishing Company.

The brethren scattered abroad and in Cleveland have given liberally of their means and labor, and we have a well equipped plant. Brother Griffiths operates the linograph and Brother Long is becoming proficient in running the press. Both brothers work for a pittance, and Brother Huggins receives no pay except his salary as pastor of Cleveland church.

We hope to obtain general printing at a profit, but the failure of subscribers to pay for the paper when subscriptions expire is a continual drag. We have all seen lately the Victory Loan slogan; "Honest Nations Pay Their Debts." Nations are made up of individuals: and while we are a "peculiar people," disregard of financial obligations and nonsupport of this straight and zealous advocate of the faith, is not a desirable "peculiarity" to foster.

Our subscription income is not more than half what it should be from present mailing list. The Restitution must continue to spread the truth. You enlisted to fight. Don't desert this leader. Please examine your address label and if in arrears, pay at once.

Yours fraternally,

B. H. Lang, President.

"I AM GOING TO TRY"

By Ettie Fry

A short time ago we as a people were in sore straits. Our little paper was in debt and we needed many, many things. The future did not look promising. But our faith did not falter; we trusted in God, and he raised up an helper for us. He did not fail. He did marvelous things. His right hand and his holy arm hath gotten him the victory. We did not perish, we have come up through great trials, keep us pure. Help, O help and strengthen us in thy great love.

We do not owe anything now, and our pressing needs have all been supplied through the pleadings sent out by thy chosen agent. We thank thee for the power and strength and love thou gavest her in this, thy work. Let us sing unto thee a new song. Let us make known thy salvation. Let us get new workers for thy cause: new, new hands to help in this great work, and when our hearts fail and we are ready to faint because of the opposition we meet, let us look to thee and pray for strength.

I am so anxious to get new subscribers but I am not strong, I have had so many hurts, so many bumps that the scars have been hard to heal. And my heart shrinks from the slighting, scornful words that will be hurled at me when I get the courage to ask some one to subscribe for The Restitution. It seems a hard task to get new subscribers, for we are a very unpopular people in Huntington, Ind.

But I am going to try. God knows what can be done. He will help. He will honor our faith. He will answer our prayers. He will not stop with what he has done. He has other blessings in store. Let us stick to our task, Jesus did not care for the bumps, he let people scoff. He knew his cause would triumph at last, and so do we. Now that we are at the top let us go over. I am going to do my bit, and "do it heartily as to the Lord." Trying in faith in ourselves and others, and in the Lord makes victory sure.

BAPTISMAL SERVICE

Sister Gladys Bogan was baptized at Frankfort by Elder Wm. Huffer, Sunday, May 8, at 2 o'clock. She was then received into the Frankfort Church of God at the close of our regular services there in the afternoon. The Frankfort church are alive to their spiritual interests and rejoice to have Sister Bogan cast her lot with them. May the blessings of the heavenly Father, in the name of Jesus, rest upon the church and its efforts to do good.

A PUBLIC MEETING

Owing to the illness of so many members and to the very disagreeable weather, the Young People's Society was unable to hold its meeting Friday evening May 16th, 1919.

The next meeting will be held on the regular date, June 6th, 1919, at the church. This will be an open meeting and a cordial invitation is extended to those outside of the society to attend.

CHOSEN

By S. Roxana Wince

God has exalted positions to be filled in his kingdom :rulership of cities, priesthoods of glory, as enduring as the ordinances that hold the sun and the moon in their place in the heavens. Who among all the unsaved readers of The Restitution, wants to fill one of these positions of honor and exalted fame for the ages of eternity?

God has already called you to become candidates, called you by the gospel. "Come unto me," says Jesus, "all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light." "Today if you will hear his voice, harden not your hearts."

Your labor for the evil one is very hard; its heavy burdens weigh you down to the very dust. You are wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked," and the worst of it is you can find no rest. You cannot escape from the burden of sin. You are a lost and hopeless wanderer with no goal before you but death, miserable joyless death; for that is the only wages that sin ever pays. Will you heed the call? or will you keep on hardening your hearts, refusing to obey, fearing what men will say more than you fear and love your God? "Your God," did I say? He is not your God until you make him your God by taking him as such in the only legal way by being adopted into his family by faith, repentance, and obedience in baptism. Then you become a candidate for the crown of glory and are running lawfully and are sure of the prize. Candidates for the honors of the present time are not sure of winning for though many may run only one can be chosen. It is not so in the Christian race, for in this race all who run may win.

So if you would have part in the kingdom of God you must choose him and walk in his ways, must learn all you can of his kingdom, and prepare yourself by a life of purity and of service here, for the duties that will devolve upon you over there. And to know what God requires of you must be found in the Bible. You must study it every day that you live, and having come to believe in the kingdom, must live for the kingdom. In so doing, "make your peace, calling, and election sure."

The Restitution

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defense of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ.—Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 71 CLEVELAND, O., June 10th, 1919. NUMBER 22

Jesus, Come and Reign

Come, Lord, and take to thee thy royal crown,
And rule the earth in peace and quietude:
And priestly work shall give thee much renown,
Mankind thy laws obey, and revel in the good.

The nations left by pestilence and sword,
Shall live in peace upon the new born earth;
Obedient to the laws commanded in thy word:
They serve thee there with holy praise and mirth.

Then all mankind one brotherhood shall be,
No discord there shall ever mar the scene:
When thou shalt rule o'er all, both land and sea:
All sorrow then forgotten that has been.

Pulpit Echoes

A Sermon by the Editor, Reported for The Restitution by Brother G. B. Alldridge.

Subject: The Two Witnesses

TEXT: REV. 11: 3--8.

Part One

SEVERAL brethren have requested the writer to give a brief synopsis of a series of discussions given by Brother Huggins upon this important subject. We feel that our limited space will only permit us to mention a few of the many interesting things our able brother pointed out.

It seems to me that many of the explications given by various writers upon this text are more or less conjectural. We must remember at all times, in reading and studying the book of Revelation, that it is prophecy. Hence the necessity of continually remembering Peter's rule that "knowing this first, no prophecy of the Scriptures is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man, but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit" (1 Pet. 1:20,21).

It has been suggested by the various schools of interpretation that these two witnesses are:

First. The Old and New Testaments;
Second. Enoch and Elijah;
Third. The history of Christianity from the reign of Constantine onward;
Fourth. The events immediately preceding the return of Christ, as expounded by the Futurists.

Identifications

The word "witness" implies personality. There is one exception to this in the case of Jacob's covenant with Laban, where a heap of stones is called a witness (Gen. 31;52); but here the word "witness" is feminine in the Hebrem, not masculine. The general tenor of the Scriptures in the use of this word is not connected with things inanimate, but otherwise. The fact that these two witnesses were to bear tesimony proves that thy possessed personality. Revelation 6:9 amply confirms this thought. Rev. 17:1 throws soem light on whom these witnesses are, for verse 6 reveals the power they are to witness against. Rev. 20:4 declares that these witnesses who sat upon the throne, witnessed for Jesus. This witnessing prevailed throughout the whole period of forty and two months or the 1260 days, a period lasting 1260 years.

It is absurd to confine the interpretation of this to comparatively little events or to some particular individual. In speaking of a government it does not necessarily mean only the person who happens to be its executive. The government of the United States involves all its various departments, legislative, executive, judicial. Each of these branches witness today to the constitution ratified by the original thirteen states; the first Delaware on Dec. 7, 1787, the last Rhode Island May 29, 1790. The people who constituted these states today are all dead, but their descendants, we who are living today are just as much a part of the government they established as they were themselves. For a period of 129 years the Constitution of the United States has had its witnesses in the persons of the citizens of this great republic; and while at times this government may be represented by its president, as it is today by President Wilson, nevertheless he is only speaking for the great masses of people owning allegiance to the United States.

Hence God's two witnesses are not two individuals, but a succession of men who, during the perior referred to bore testimony on the one hand to the truth and on the other hand protested against the false position of the papacy. Today these witnesses are represented by the Church of God witnessing to the gospel of Christ, and the other, headed up in the Bolshevik forces, protesting against the usurpation by the papacy and autocracy of the liberty of the masses. The one witness, the Church of God, pacific, non-combatant and conciliatory, regarding the kingdoms of this world, and the other, militant, combatant, and anarchistic, seeking to overthrow, destroy, and trample under foot all opposed to their will.

Notice the legality of the number of the witnesses, two. This is in harmony with God's own requirements (Deut. 17:6; John 8:17; Mark 6:7). In the type we see how God's witnesses were always presented in a two-fold character:— Moses and Aaron before Pharaoh; Elijah and Elisha protesting against idolatry; the disciples going out two and two, etc., so in these two witnesses the one witness or set of men bore witness or testimony, attesting by their lives and conversations to the truth of the gospel of Christ, and dying for this cause; the other witness protested against the anti-Christian perversions of it, such as modern socialism and Bolshevikism one class boldly professing their belief in Christ and dying for the gosepl; the other class likewise bold and zealous men were continually attempting a reformation, at last heading up in the French Revolution and the condition existing in Russia today.

The angel declared he would "give them power," or authority to prophesy during the assigned time, yet "in sackcloth," expressive of their afflicted persecuted state and of their deep concern and sorrow of heart on account of the abominations against which the witnesses bore protest. Brother Huggins confirmed this view by quoting from Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire":

"The visible assemblies of the Paulicians or Albigeois were extirpated by fire and sword; and the bleeding remnant escaped by flight, concealment, or catholic conformity. But the invisible spirit which they had kindled still lived and breathed in the western world. In the state, in the church, and even in the cloister, a latent succession was preserved of the disciples of St. Paul who protested against the tyrany of Rome, embraced the Bible as the rule of faith, and purified their creed from all the visions of the Gnostic theology. The struggles of Wycliffe in England, and of Huss in Bohemia, were premature and ineffectual: but the names of Zwinglins, Luther, and Calvin, are pronounced with gratitude as the delivers of the the nations."

Notice again: these two witnesses are symbolized by two olive trees and the two candlesticks standing before the God or Lord of the earth, John's vision is largely colored by the vision recorded in Zechariah 4:1-4. Here the candlesticks are united by a pipe symbolizing the Spirit of God; but in John's vision they are not joined together but are standing before the Lord of the earth; the one candlestick, representing the saints, is fed daily by the Spirit of God, through the word of God; the other derives its life from the earth or society, the elements of which it consists. Jesus said, "Ye are the light of the world." Paul says we are to shine as lights. Then the true church is always a light bearer.

The two olive trees represent the two great divisions of the human family, the Jews and the Gentiles. The tame olive tree represents Israel, of whom Abraham is the root. Paul makes this clear in Rom. 11:24, 25. God only knew Israel until they were cast off. The Church of God becomes the tame olive tree, rooted in Abraham, or rather the promise made to him. But there is also a wild olive tree. This represents the Gentiles. The two olive trees then represent two classss, the righteous and the wicked (Rom. 11).

Brother Huggins proved from the Scriptures that the pope is the God or Lord of the earth (2 Thess. 2:3, 4, 8; Dan. 7:25). The word "antichrist," as used in the Scriptures, does not mean, as generally understood, to counter, or against; but rather one who usurps the position vested in another. Hence the pope who claims to sit in the temple of God as his vicegerent, fills exactly the Scripture description as the position of Lord of the earth.

GEORGE B. ALLDRIDGE.

A Baptismal Touchstone; or The Detector

1. Question: What was Christ's blood shed for?

Answer: "For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins" (Matt. 26:28).

2. Question: What are repentance and baptism for?

Answer: "Repent and be baptized, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost" (Acts 2:38).

3. Question: Why does the man offer a greater insult to God, who promises the sinner remission without the blood of Christ, than he who promises him pardon without baptism; since God has declared them both "for remission of sins," in the same words?

We pause for the answer.In the meantime we will hear a modern apostle Adam Clarke: "To be a Christian, a man must be baptized in the Christian faith; these persons had not been baptized into that faith, and therefore were not Christians: they felt this, and were immediately baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus" (Note on Acts 19:5).

"Mere Mode." A Mere Trick

Sprinklers circulate tracts on "Mode of Baptism," to deceive the reader, and make him believe the controversy is about the mere mode; but there is, in truth, no dispute about mode; the controversy is about baptism itself, and not about the mode of it. Sprinkling is well known to be rantism (in Greek), and not baptism at all; and of course no mode of baptism. Various modes of scattering water are so many modes of sprinkling: but there are no modes of baptism, for to baptize never does mean to scatter. To baptize signifies to do some act; some one act; not three acts, nor forty acts, but one act.

Adam Clarke: "Buried with him in baptism." Alluding to the immersions practiced in the case of adults, wherein the person appeared to be buried under the water, as Christ was buried in the heart of the earth (Note on Col. 2:12).

John Wesley: "We are buried with him." Alluding to the ancient manner of baptizing by immersion (Note on Rom. 6:4).

These two witness are not alone in their testimony; but four out of five of the eminent men of all parties, have testified to the same thing.

From these premises, it irrisistibly follows, that immersion is the one only primitive apostolis baptism. Every passage quoted from the Bible to prove that sprinkling is baptism, when fairly translated and fairly interpreted, positively disproves this human dogma; every one of their own witnesses testifies against them; for instance let us examine their favorite text, Ezek. 36:25, "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean." This is just as strong a text as they ever did, or ever can quote from the Bible to prove that sprinkling is baptism, and yet the text itself proves it is not baptism. Now it is a universal rule, that "any two words which have the same meaning may be used interchangeably" one for the other, without destroying the sense. Now try the rule on this text, and it will read thus: "Then will I baptise clean water upon you." What writer would not be ashamed of such gibberish? "I will BAPTIZE WATER upon you." I have read of men and women being baptized, but whoever read in the Bible, of water being baptized? The text says, "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you." But whoever read in the Bible of anything being baptized on or upon a man? It is always the man himself that is baptized, and not something else that is baptized "on" him.

But let us try another proof text—Joel 2:28, "I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh." This text is brought to prove that the word "pour" means to baptize, therefore, we will read it baptize, thus: "I will baptize out my spirit upon all flesh." Whoever read in the Bible, of any person or thing being "baptized out"? If "pour" here means to baptize, then it was the spirit that was baptized, and not all flesh; for surely, no sane man would ever talk of "baptizing all flesh out"! Now, I repeat, that not only these two, but every other text, quoted from the Bible, to prove that sprinkling and pouring are baptism, proves they are not baptism.

The word baptize, in the Bible, will never suffer the words "water upon" to be connected with it: but on the contrary, the word sprinkle requires them. The authors of the Wesleyan Discipline, (p.112) give ample testimony to this distinction: "And then the minister shall sprinkle or pour water upon him (or if he shall desire it, shall immerse him in water), saying, I baptize thee in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."

Observe here, that while they use the word "immerse" exactly as they do baptize, they could not contrive to use the word sprinkle or pour, without connecting "water upon" with it; thus: "shall sprinkle or pour water upon him." A most unwitty compliment to immersion, but utterly fatal to sprinkling or pouring! To note the difference between the meaning of sprinkle and baptize, mark the order of the words in the three following lines:

1. John baptized Jesus in water.
2. John immersed Jesus in water.
3. John sprinkled "water upon" Jesus.

Here is a sentence of only five words; and while immerse makes good sense without changing a single word in the sentence, the use of the word sprinkle annihilates the word in, and takes the word upon in its stead, changes the locality of the nouns water and Jesus, and leaves John (only one word) unchanged!! The first and the second look as near alike as twins, while the third manifestly does not belong to the same family.

The man who is only baptized in water, does not have water sprinkeld upon him; and he who only has water sprinkled upon him, is certainly not baptized in water; and he who asserts them to be one and the same action, has no regard to the truth. A minister once asserted on the bank, that immersion was not baptism; and in five minutes after immersed a man in the river, saying, "I baptize thee." Now if he told the truth in the river, what did he tell while on the bank!!

Those who sprinkle, publish tracts to prove that sprinkling, pouring, and dipping, are all three baptism; others to prove that sprinkling is the only mode of baptism; and still others, to prove that pouring is the only mode; but they never publish any to prove that immersion is the only baptism; for full well do they know that the Bible proves that, without the aid of their tracts.

Baptism. In this age of deception, we not only have our counterfeiters in coin and bank notes, but we have also our counterfeiters in religion. To aid the honest enquirer, I will give a few rules, the truth of which no scholar dare deny; in the meantime, bear in mind that to baptize is an active verb—a word that signifies to do—it expresses an action.

Rule I.—The action expressed by the word "baptize," always falls on the person baptized and never on the water. Note—the action of sprinkle properly falls on the water, or on the substance scattered; that is, water is said to be sprinkled; blood is said to be sprinkled; but neither blood nor water is ever said to be baptized. The Holy Spirit is said to be poured, but the Holy Spirit is never said to be baptized.

Rule II. The verb "baptize" will never admit of its object (the person baptized) being governed by the preposition "on" or "upon." On the contrary, sprinkle will admit the preposition; as, "I will sprinkle clean water upon you."

Rule III.—The word "baptize" is never followed by the particle "out"; not so with pour; pour will take out with it: as, "I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh."

Dear reader, if, after this you suffer ignorant, crafty priests to cheat you with their spurious baptisms, you will be without excuse. These rules are so many Bible facts; try their "baptisms" by these rules, and you are thoroughly protected from imposture.

How to Detect Counterfeits

1. Baptized in the true Bill, may be followed by "in" or "into"; as, "baptized in Jordan baptized into Christ:" but "sprinkled in Jordan—sprinkled into Christ" would be ridiculous enough; therefore, sprinkle is counterfeit.

2. Baptize in the Bible is never followed by "on" or "upon," sprinkle is followed by "on" and "upon," and is therefore a counterfeit.

3. Baptize is never followed by "out;" pour is followed by "out," and is another sheer counterfeit.

4. Baptize is never followed by the word "on," "out," or "upon"; this is an infallible distinction which every child, that knows how to read, can see for himself. Any word that you can find anywhere in the Bible, immediately followed by the word on, upon or out, does not mean to baptize; for baptize is never so used in any writings, sacred or profane. We defy the whole army of counterfeiters to annihilate this distinction between baptize and sprinkle.—Banner of the Faith.

Article Three

Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise. For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God, for it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness. The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain (1 Cor. 3:18-20). This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. From such turn away. Ever learning and never able to come to a knowledge of the truth (2 Tim. 3:117).

Hundreds of organized bodies of men, proselyting and fighting each other, shown in their antagonistic literature of today, are perverting the devise of an all-wise unerring God. And because iniquity shall abound the love of many shall wax cold (Matt. 24:12).

We will now notice the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth (1 Tim. 3:15). The church, ecclesia, the called out. God said to Moses, "I have seen the afflictions of my people which is in Egypt, and now come, I will send thee into Egypt" (Acts 7:34). "For this cause I have raised thee up, for to show in thee my power: and that my name may be declared through all the earth" (Exod. 9:16). And the Lord said unto Moses, "See, I have made thee a god to Pharoah: and Aaron shall be thy prophet" (Exod. 7:1). And many miraculous things were performed in Egypt. The sojourning of the children of Israel in Egypt was 430 years, and the number that went from Egypt was six hundred thousand, beside the children (Exod. 7:37). And the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of cloud, to lead them in the way; and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light (Exod. 14:2). And Moses guided the children of Israel through the Red Sea on dry ground. And the Lord overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the sea: there remained not so much as one of them (Exod. [illegible]). Thus the Lord favors all that obey him. And they went on to Mount Sinai. And Moses said unto the children of Israel, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear. This is he that was in the church in the wilderness with the angel which spake to him in Mount Sinai, and with our fathers who received the lively oracles to give unto us (Acts 7:37, 38).

This church at Mount Sinai is the first place we find God's church. "And it shall come to pass that every soul which shall not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed" (Acts 3:23). This prophet is Jesus the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee (Matt. 21:11). The church at Sinai was God's church militant, and implies his church on earth engaged in keeping all enemies from invasion.. It is thus distinguished from God's church triumphant. Moses received the tables of stone and a law, and commandments which I have written that thou mayst teach them (Exod. 24:12). Moses largely obeyed God's commands; but failed to reach the promised land; and of those he brough from Egypt with him only two, Caleb and Joshua, reached the land of promise. The prophet tells us why so many fell in the wilderness: "When the righteous turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and doeth according to all the abomination that the wicked doeth, shall he live? all his righteousness that he hath done shall not be mentioned: in his trespass that he hath trespassed, and in his sin that he hath sinned, in them shall he die" (Ezek. 18:24). Jesus said, "No man having put his hand to the plow, and looking back is fit for the kingdom of God" (Luke 9:62). Thus the warning to all in God's church on earth: "Enter ye in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction and many there be which go in thereat: because strait is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it (Matt. 7:13, 14).

Therefore we see that God mercifully called out from bondage eight hundred thousand; and only two were chosen. Many are called but few chosen (Matt. 20:16). Notice why many that are called are not chosen: because many are only false pretenders, counterfeiting a religious character. They have no oil in their lamps. Those that have oil in their lamps went in and the door was shut; and the hypocrites came saying, "Lord, open to us. But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not" (Matt. 25:10:11, 12). Beware of false prophets which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves (Matt. 7:15). Therefore God will render to every man according to his deeds; to them who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, and honor, immortlaity; eternal life" (Rom. 2:6, 7). These are the only recipients that will be admitted into God's triumphant church and Christ's kingdom. All others, the wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God (Psa. 9:17). Then God and his Son will have a clean universe for the home of his triumphant church. Christ said, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth" (Matt. 5:5). Those that wait upon the Lord they shall inherit the earth. The meek shall inherit the earth and delight themselves in the abundance of peace. The Lord knoweth the days of the upright; and their inheritance shall be forever. For such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth. The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever. Wait on the Lord and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land (Psa. 37). Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth (Prov. 11:13). And the Lord shall be king over all the earth; in that day shall there be one Lord and his name one (Zech. 14:9). And the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea (Isa. 11:9). The Lord is the king of all the earth (Psa. 47:7). He shall have dominion from sea to sea, and from the rivers unto the uttermost ends of the earth (Psa. 72:8). The earth shall abide forever (Eccl. 1:4). For the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof (1 Cor. 10:26). Thus the triumphant church will reign on the earth (Rev. 5:10). God's covenants and promises to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, have not lapsed; they are confirmed. Jesus was a minister for the truth of God to confirm the promises made unto the fathers (Rom. 15:8). Paul says that the covenant that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul that it should make the promises of none effect. God gave it to Abraham by promise (Gal. 3:17, 18). And he said to him, "I am the Lord that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees to give thee this land to inherit it (Gen. 15:7). Christ said, I and my Father are one (John 10:30). Therefore the second Adam and the Father are co-workers to fulfill and complete all the promises made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations: and then shall the end come (Matt. 24:14). The harvest is at the end of the world, and the reapers are the angels. Therefore the tares and gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this (age) world The Son of Man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear let him hear (Matt. 13:39-43). This is the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him (James 2:5).

The Lord is not slack concerning his promises (2 Pet. 3:9). For unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulders; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this (Isa. 9:6, 7). And the Lord God shall give him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end (Luke 1:32, 33). All hail to the dawn of light and life! Clear the decks for action, for soon the kingdoms of this (age) world will become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ: and he shall reign forever and ever (Rev. 11:15).

God's triumphant church will live forever. For by grace are ye saved through faith: and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God (Eph. 2:8; Rom. 6:23). When Christ comes to give eternal life, in what place does he find the righteous? "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto te resurrection of (zoe) life: and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation" (John 5:28, 29). Thus we see that both the righteous and wicked are in their graves until the harvest comes. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive shall be caught up together with them in clouds to meet the Lord, and so shall we ever be with the Lord (1 Thess. 4:16, 17). This is the only way God has devised to give mortal man immortal life. Christ said many are called but few are chosen (Matt. 20:16). For I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance (Matt. 9:13). Therefore all of Christ's testimonies must be accepted by all who desire his favor, and are willing to face God's truth; even though the truth may reveal the iniquities of a system to which anyone is intensely devoted. For Christ says without me ye can do nothing (John 15:5). For there is not a just man upon the earth that doeth good and sinneth not (Eccl. 7:20). Therefore all are condemned, and without Christ's favors, all will perish. All must look to Christ for guidance or perish. All who build on false foundations will fail, and utterly perish in their own corruption (2 Pet. 2:12) in the lake of fire and brimstone, which is the second death (Rev. 21:8).

Editorial

"Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth; a stranger, and not thine own lips."

June 1st, Miss [illegible] C. Huntley, of Monroeville, Ohio, was baptized for the sake of the name. She was formerly Methodist, but now rejoices [illegible] the way of truth and life. She lives in the community of Brother and Sister E. F. Smith. The believers there now number five.

An old negro Christian, [illegible] living by hard work, was asked, "Suppose you should be sick or lose your employment?" She answered: "I never [illegible]. The Lord is my Shepherd and I shall not want. Better give up these s'poses and trust the Lord." Sel.

As truth is immortal, so a lie lasts not. The craftiest lie cannot stand before the truth; everything that is covered is soon uncovered; shadows pass away, and the native color of things remain. No man can live long under water; he must needs come forth and show the face which he concealed.

"People are easily offended because they set too much value and think too highly of themselves; a slight reflection can never be a great offence, but when it is offered to a great person: and if a man is such in his own opinion, he will measure an offence, as he measures himself far above its value."—Jones of Nayland.

We have no doubt but Jesus did really eat the passover with his disciples. This appears from his sending Peter and John, saying, "Go, and prepare us the passover, that we may eat." Afterwards, being seated at the table, he said, "I have heartily desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer: for I say unto you, I will not any more (that is, after this eating) eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God" (Herald of the Kingdom).

A believer recently asked an orthodox preacher "if Peter was to be understood as teaching the destruction of the physical heavens?" He replied, "no, he meant the atmospheric heavens." "Well," rejoined the querist, "if the rule be a sound one then he must also teach the destruction not of the physical earth, but the atmospreric earth." His brief reply was "Ahem!"

Universalism ignores faith in Christ in this life as necessary to future salvation. This is a practical indorsement of deism. "Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father" (1 John 2:23). "Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ?" (ver. 22). The faith [illegible] the Son, [illegible] of salvation? [illegible] practical Deism.

He that would be [illegible] God's book; and he that would be holy must [illegible] God's [illegible]. He that would be grateful, must remember God's mercies. He that would be contented, must trust God's providence. He that would be [illegible] must imitate his forbearance. He that would be merciful, must feel his love. He that would be happy, must enjoy his smiles. He that would be saved, must believe God's word and live to God's glory.

Warm weather, tardy in coming, is here at last. Already our copy file begins to look depleted. Just a word here. Hot weather stops us from writing, but the less you write the more we have to write. This hardship on us perhaps you had not thought of. But this is a small matter. It is important, however, that we keep The Restitution up to its high standard of excellence; and to do this, we need articles from every contributor and every reader. Through the summer we especially need your help. We shall anxiously expect next week to receive hundreds of contributions. Shall we be disappointed? And shall the disappointment be on account of you dear reader?

Universalism ignores faith in the existence of God in this life as not necessary to future salvation. Universalism, therefore, is practically atheism. It flatly contradicts Paul: "Without faith it is impossible to please him; for he he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and he is rewarder of those who diligently seek him." Universalism either says it is not impossible to please God without faith, or that God will save men who do not "please him"! Universalism says it is not necessary to believe that "God is," in order to future holiness and happiness; and that he will make them holy and happy whether they "diligently seek him" or not. Universalism, then, is certainly a system of practical atheism.

The Restitution is pledged to support "the sect everywhere spoken against" (Acts 28:22). Whatever sentiments the Bible reveal, we believe and teach. If our readers approve what we publish we are pleased and encouraged; but if they disapprove it, we do not change our course to secure their favor. When old and faithful friends forsake us, we are sorry that they have been caught in a snare of the adversary, and humbly pray that they may be saved from final ruin. On their account, however, we never leave the strait and narrow way (Matt. 7:13,14) of duty and truth to follow them: our eye is fixed on "the mark, the prize," and we cannot be diverted from it by any cause whatever. We love kind and faithful brethren, yet their friendship has no influence upon our sentiments. We regret we have enemies, but we refuse to allow them to hinder us in the discharge of our duty. "The truth" is that to which we are bound; and we kindly invite the co-operation and support of all who love the truth, and are willing to spend and be spent for it.

"EVERLASTING FATHER"

Isa. 9:6. What is meant by this declaration? Father is from the Hebrew word ab, and has seven uses, one of which is chief. A literal rendering from the LXX would read "And his name shall be called the great counselling messenger." But Griesbach has an entirely different reading, pater tou mellontos aionos, or the Father [illegible] age-lasting.

Observe, this text must harmonize with inspiration. This book says that the child of Isa. 9:6, the son of Mary, shall rule upon the throne of David, and that he shall execute judgment and justice in the earth, and that for 1000 years; but it nowhere says he is the eternal Jehovah. The Father acknowledges him to be his Son and he prays to the Father. They are two persons. See Heb. 1:1-3. The Son is "the express image of his (the Father's) person."

THE SCOFFER SILENCED

An infidel from Louisiana saw, in a steamboat in the South, a minister whom he heard deliver a discourse on infidelity. Gathering his associates at the table, he began to tell hard things about religion and religious people, the Bible and its ministers. The minister said nothing.

At length the infidel came up, and suddenly slapping him on the shoulder, said: "Old fellow, what do you think of these things?" "Do you see that beautiful landscape?" "Yes." "If you were to send out a dove he would pass over it, see and delight in all that is beautiful and lovely; but if you were to send out a buzzard, he would see nothing to fix his attention, unless he could find some rotten carcase, loathsome to all other animals; on it he would light, and gloat with exquisite pleasure."

"Do you mean to compare me to a buzzard?"

"I made no allusion to you."

The disciple of Tom Paine walked off in confusion, and was called buzzard the rest of the passage.—Sel.

The League of Nations a Farce

Attacking the Versailles treaty of peace for lacking "a promise of peace in it." Rabbi A. H. Silver told his auditors at The Temple, E 55th Street and Central Avenue S. E., yesterday morning that "Mr. Wilson, who for two years was the arbiter of the destinies of the world, is returning a disillusioned, a sadder and smaller man."

Rabbi Silver's topic was "Is the Peace Treaty a Treaty of Peace?"

"The treaty of peace cannot by any stretch of the imagination," he asserts, "be called a peace treaty. There is no promise of peace in it.

"The spirit of 'vae victis' is written large in it. One looks in vain for that gracious generosity, that spirit of forgiveness and reconciliation, that healing sympathy which we were led to anticipate from the [illegible] proclamations of our leaders.

"Perhaps we were too idealistic, too innocent of the wiles of European diplomacy. Perhaps we expected too much out of this war. But are we entirely to blame? Did not Mr. Wilson speak eloquently, [illegible] of these noble ideals? Did not his words imply that the allies were eager to accept them?

"Germany prevented by the treaty from rehabilitating herself economically, will become a greater menace to the peace of Europe, than was her militarism. She will become a plague spot of radicalism, a hotbed of revolution. Other nations will be infected.

"The treaty has solved few of the vital problems of the world, and has created many new and aggravating ones.

"It robs China of Shantung and subjects millions of Chinese to Japanese exploitation.

"In no instance does it apply the principle of self-determination to peoples now under the dominion of the victorious powers. What of Korea? What of Egypt? What of Ireland? What has the treaty to say as to Russia? Why has not the treaty proclaimed the principle of religious freedom?

"The proposed league of nations may rectify some of these errors and lapses. It is, however, doubtful. As the league stands today, it is clearly intended to protect the territorial integrity of four great powers."—The Plain Dealer.

Why I am a Christian

WHY am I a Christian, you enquire? The reasons why are so numerous that I feel tempted to reply with another question, Why are you a Christian?

You can't afford to be, you say. You can't pay the price of giving up what you term "fun."

Just so, I cannot afford to be anything but a Christian, because it is the only life that really pays, speaking commercially; or in other words, it is the only life worth living.

"Fun!" What is "fun?" Sensuous excitement, rollicking gaiety, today headaches, bodily weakness, mental depression and irritability tomorrow. Today's pleasure more than counterbalanced by tomorrow's sorrows; and an ever increasing list of entries on the debtor side of life's ledger against the account of the votary of worldly pleasures, ending in inevitable physical, mental, moral and spiritual bankruptcy. Truly, "what doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own life?"

As a Christian I can enjoy all God-given pleasures. The world of nature and art is mine; the rich fields of literature are open to me; the sweet companionships of the pure and the true are an [illegible] source of [illegible] terms [illegible] those in distress [illegible] at the [illegible] of the flesh, [illegible] lusts of the [illegible] of life, never dreamed of. [illegible] is the one possible key that [illegible] conscience [illegible] communion with God.

I am a Christian, [illegible] I receive an [illegible] in [illegible] I shall [illegible] the world [illegible] No horror fills my soul as I look [illegible] the dark valley of the shadow of death; [illegible] I can say with assurance, "Thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." The [illegible] the key that opens the [illegible] immortality, and has discovered the fountain of perpetual youth. It is his privilege to live for[illegible]. To him death is [illegible] joyous awakening in a [illegible] to enjoy the companionship of [illegible] blest throughout eternity. Why [illegible] to this life? Because life is dear to man. Then why not take another step and extend [illegible] to life everlasting?

You do not believe that Christians are [illegible] better than other people; you have known them to do mean acts, cheat and abuse their neighbors! Do not be deceived, my friend. These people are not Christians. They are only imitation Christians, making a pretence, but are only [illegible]. A real Christian is a follower of Christ, and you certainly cannot find any fault with his pure life. You must look to Christ if you would learn what constitutes a Christian. "By their fruits ye shall know them," is the rule that Jesus gives as a test of discipleship; and another is that beautiful rule, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one for another."

I am a Christian, because the Christian teaching of love to God and to your fellow man is the highest conception possible of the ideal society. You say you are willing to admit that, but you are disgusted with the other features of Christian doctrine that prevent you from loving God, because you cannot love a being who would create another being and then, because he is too weak to comply with his severe laws, would condemn him to an eternity of misery. Well my friend I honor you for the sentiment. I could not have respect for such a being, much less could I love him. But, let me tell you plainly, the God of the Bible is no such being, although the God of theology, as taught by some denominations, is. This is not a Christian conception of God, but a distorted view that has been borrowed from heathen religion, and engrafted on the Christian system. Neither the Bible nor Christianity is responsible for such a God. It is heathenism, pure and simple. The Christian's God is a God of Love. He is an Heavenly Father, and "like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him." "The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy."

I am a Christian, because in the teachings of Christ I find principles that, if applied to society, would bring a perfect heavenly condition on earth. I find many beautiful sentiments in the teachings of philosophers, such as Socrates, Confucius, Gautama, or Zoroaster; but they are mostly grounded in selfishness, looking to the personal benefit of the individual; but Jesus' philosophy teaches mankind to seek their greatest good in ministering good to others. Such teaching is God-like; and I joyfully revere, love and obey such a Leader, and [illegible] to take his name upon me.

I am a Christian, because I believe the Bible to be the inspired word of God: and among its many blessed lessons are these: that there is forgiveness of sins; [illegible] from above, that [illegible] heavenly, spiritual, and [illegible] communion with God in this life, and a share in his loving providence as a Father; resurrection from the dead to a glorious and immortal [illegible] eternity beyond. It also teaches me among other inspiring lessons that the Christ whose name I bear is coming again to this earth as the One of whom it was promised "In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." He is coming to pour out the divine blessings without measure, and to bring about an era of peace, prosperity, and happiness, such as the good and wise of all ages have longed to see, and labored to produce.

These are a few of the reasons why I am a Christian. Can you give any satisfactory reasons why you are not a Christian? And if not, is it not time that you turned your face toward him who will gladly receive you, and open for you his storehouse of blessings? He will give you joy, he will give you peace, he will give you love, he will mould your nature anew and in the end he will give you life everlasting. Selected by BRO. A. C. BOYER.

The Life to Come

For bodily exercise profiteth little: but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come (1 Tim. 4:8).

On the way to church, my route lay along the drive way of Cleveland's most beautiful park. A small plot forming a triangle, at the intersection where several roads cross, is a bed of flowers now in full bloom. The colors are yellow, blue, scarlet, and white. The poet who wrote these lines must have been inspired with such a scene as this:

The dark, dark year is gone;
The red blood of the spring
Will quicken nature's pulses soon,
So up my heart and sing!

God surely finds pleasure in making his creatures happy. To possess his spirit insures the same mind and disposition. Frequently I visit the grave of my lamented son: upon it I lay flowers. In life he loved three things: music, birds, and flowers. In the spring of the year he loved to wander in the parks. The birds trusted him, for in him they beheld a friend. Tomorrow is Easter.* Life all around in gladness is bursting forth. The birds are back singing their best; the trees are striving to look glad as their buds are breaking under the impulse of life. A short distance away, over the tomb of some one's loved one, stands in marble a veiled woman embracing a funeral urn holding ashes. I thing so many of us are embracing an urn holding the ashes of our departed.

Where are the birds of last year? Where are the flowers of a year ago, gone? Where is the maiden of cherry voice, and the youth of buoyant step? Many, like the dust in the urn, lie beneath my feet. Pope expresses my thought:

Like leaves on trees the race of man is found—
Now green in youth, now withering on the ground;
Another race the following spring supplies;
They fall successive and successive rise.

Soloman says: "One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh; but the earth abideth forever" (Eccl. 1:4). But Paul says it is possible in this life to have a little pleasure. But note the emphasis is on "the life to come." Whatever pleasure in this life I enjoy, results from the meditation upon the goodness of God revealed in his word and the works of his hands around and above me. God's ways are always the best. Bodily health can be preserved and maintained by exercise, the joy of living results thereby; but there is an experience also in the nature of exercise, which brings pleasure and gladness far superior to that confined only to this life, and that is the struggle to attain to "the life to come."

Among us we usually consider as the personification of wisdom the brother or sister whose character is moderate, deliberate, neither sad nor gay, neither hopeful nor depressed; one who ambles on never pausing, never galloping, afraid to express an opinion, neither cold nor hot—just going the way the majority seem to be leading. Their regrets or desires accomplish nothing. They just eat and drink, they know nothing of gladness for they have never known sorrow. They seem to submit to everything and resist nothing. Placidity is their idea of happiness.

But listen: let the inspiration of "the life to come" take hold of such a one—then what a change! With Paul he realizes that "what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in him; not having my own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith: that I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead" (Phil. 3: 7-11).

This, beloved, is what God has destined for me, consequently my soul aspires. It has the mighty impetus of the eagle sailing straightway toward the source of light. Yes, beloved, and at times through the cruel shafts of satire and reproach from those who oppose the truth, I feel fatigued and weary, like the eagle baffled by the distance and the tempest. But this experience brings joy and gladness, for at times though I feel defeated and distressed, like the exile, I still steadfastly look towards my native land, "choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." Beloved, we desire a better country, that is, an heavenly; wherefore God is not ashamed to be called our God for he hath prepared for us a city.

"The life to come." This life is full of joy and gladness, as we commune and fellowship with God. But now we only see through a glass darkly; but then face to face; now I know in part, but then shall I know even as I am known." "And every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself, even as he is pure." Beloved, have you ever ascended mount Nebo with Moses and viewed the glorious land (Deut. 34:1-4)? Observe it by faith stretching out and out beyond the sea, a vast eternal world—"the earth abideth forever."

No wonder, beloved, to us who possess this hope the world notes that our eyes deepen; there is a far away, longing look; our lips now find and sing the higher tones; a light transfigures our faces; the divine impress upon our hearts breaks forth. Paul's slogan is ours, "This one thing I do." This one thing takes hold upon our minds. As we suffer pain, we struggle against it, and we become what we all must to win the prize, "more than conquerors."

Beloved, how little it is that we really know with certainty apart from faith of the life that is to come. How crude, absurd, rediculous seems to us the teachings of the different churches. Our refuge is in the Scripture "for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and these are they which testify of me." In the Scriptures is our only comfort. "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience might have hope" (Rom. 15:4).

Sodom and Her Daughters

Thy sisters Sodom and Samaria and their daughters shall return to their former estate (Ezek. 16;55).

In this sixteenth chapter of Ezekiel the prophet shows Jerusalem her abominations, and (in verses 44 to 50) compares her with two neighboring cities, i. e., Sodom and Samaria— cities that had already been destroyed, and showing that she was worse than either of them, foretold that she like them, should be utterly ruined. And it is noteworthy that the same fate overtook these three, Sodom suffered "the vengeance of eternal fire" (Jude 7). Jerusalem was devoured by fire that "could not be quenched" (Jer. 17:27). Of Samaria it is written, "I have overthrown some of you, as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah, and ye were as a brand plucked out of the burning" (Amos 4:11). Needless to say that this eternal fire which destroyed Sodom nearly four thousand years ago has no reference whatsoever to "vngeance beyond the grave." But then follows a wondrous prophecy; "When I shall bring again the captivity of Sodom and Samaria, then will I bring again the captivity of thy captives (O Jerusalem) in the midst of them" (Ezek. 16:53). If words mean anything, this grand announcement makes known to us the Almighty purpose to restore to their former dignity and glory these two cities, and at the same time to restore Jerusalem, which was far more wicked than the elder sister Samaria, or the younger sister Sodom (verses 46 to 51).* The Universalist declares that this promise goes forward to the next world, and sets forth hope of salvation for Old Testament sinners in a life to follow this. Such a method of exposition is a tacit confession that the latest restoration theory is greatly in need of support.

This prophecy concerning the restoration of Sodom has puzzled the commentators. One says: "This is not a promise of restoration, but a denunciation of hopeless ruin. When Sodom shall be rebuilt and shall flourish (which shall never be): when Samaria shall be again a mighty people (what likelihood is there of that?). THEN, but not till then, shall Jerusalem be restored." Another writes: "Sodom and Samaria were never brought back and returned to their former estate, and therefore let not Jerusalem expect it. The only blessing that can come to any modern descendants of the ancient inhabitants of Sodom, Samaria, and Jerusalem is the spiritual privilege of being received to and incorporated with the Christian Church." But we cannot consent thus to emasculate and make void and of none effect the plain declarations of the Holy One of Israel.

There is no difficulty in understanding exactly what Ezekiel meant when he said that God would turn again the captivity of Sodom. We find a key to the phraseology in another inspiried book: "And the Lord turned the captivity of Job also the Lord gave Job twice as much as he before" (Job 42:10). To turn the captivity, and to bring again the captivity, are, it must be remembered, exchangeable modes of speech. Now, in Job's case, how was this captivity turned? On his being restored to health, riches, family; for disease had assailed his person, and ruin had swept over his household and possessions. In this case there was a merciful "restitution of all things." But the restoration was in kind or value, but not in respect to identy. He was resupplied with oxen, asses, etc., but the old animals never came back; he rejoiced once more over children born under his roof, but the beloved ten who had perished suddenly in their bloom and vigor never returned. In Biblical phraseology, therefore, a captivity is turned when what is lost happens to be restored, as Job's sons, and flocks, and herds, and camels; but no candid mind fails to understand in what sense the restitution takes place—successors take the place of predecessors—a following generation stand where the fathers stood.

Guided by what we find in Job, may we not therefore say, that turning the captivity of a ruined land would signify renewing its prosperity; turning the captivity of an overthrown city would mean having it rebuilt, though not with the old stones, and mortar, and iron and timbers; and having it repeopled, though not with the former citizens. And when God decrees that any land or city shall remain desolate perpetually, his purpose might be expressed by the formula, "their captivity is never to be turned," or by some such statement as this, "they are never to be restored to their former estate."

We find in Scripture examples of captivities that are to be turned, and cases in which it is clear captivities are never to be turned. These cases will help us to understand the language about Sodom.

The sun of Moab has not set for ever, for, in Jeremiah (48:47) we find these gracious words, "Yet will I bring again the captivity of Moab in the latter days saith the Lord." The land of Moab is still under the curse, for the "latter days" of God's exceeding mercy to that long polluted region have not yet arrived. But certainly will its ancient capital start up with beautiful streets, and towers, and squares, inhabited by God-fearing people who will take the place of the debased multitudes of old who perished in their sins. Of Ammon and of Elam also (Jer. 49:6, 30) it is written, "In the latter days will I bring again their captivity."

May we now turn to examples of certain places whose captivity is not to be turned, whom God will not again visit in mercy? Of Edom we read (Mal. 1:4). "Edom saith, We are impoverished, but we will return and build the desolate places." But the Lord hath said, "I have sworn all their cities shall be a perpetual waste ... no man shall dwell there" (Jer. 49:13). "There shall not be any remaining to the house of Esau" (Obadiah 18). Of Kedar we read, "It shall be a desolation for ever" (Jer. 49:33). And Tyre, a city which, by the ordination of the Eternal One, remains prostrate for all time. "Thou shalt be built no more: I the Lord have spoken it" (Ezek. 26:14).

Sodom was destroyed: another Sodom is to be constructed on the cite of the ancient city, and the neighboring towns of Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboiim, and Zoar, called "its daughters," shall also be rebuilt. A new race, in some way kindred to those consumed in the "eternal fire," will spread over the fair and fruitful plain of Siddim and reap its abundant harvests (Gen. 13:10; 14:1-8). The time cannot be very remote now when the long-obliterated city of Sodom shall rise from its ashes, and shall join her sister cities, Jerusalem and Samaria, in the glad song (Psa. 126:1-3), "The Lord hath turned again our captivity, and we are like unto them thad dream. The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad."—The Bible Standard.

If I knew a thought of mine
Were outside of love and untrue,
  That suffering and pain
  Would follow its train
I wouldn't think it would you?

If I knew that a word of mine
Hastily spoken, and not true,
  Would sadden one's life;
  Lead to malice or strife;
I wouldn't speak it would you?

If I knew that an act of mine
Were tinged with error's hue,
  That would cause a man
  To fall as he ran,
I wouldn't do it would you?

Subject: The Two Witnesses

TEXT: REV. 11: 3-8.

Part Two

TO SOME it may seem strange that we ascribe to the pope the position of "the god of the earth." The pronoun "god," does not in Scripture always refer to Jehovah. In Gen. 3:5, Adam and Eve are considered as such; Moses and Aaron before Pharoah. God made them such (Exo. 7:1, 2). In Psa. 82:1, 6 the church is likened to such. Jesus confirms this in John 10:34, 35. Paul in 2 Cor. 4:4 speaks of the "god of this world blinding the eyes of them which believe not." Jesus points out that the judgment of this world will occur when the prince of this world is cast out (John 12:31). In Eph. 2:2 we learn that it is the spirit of the prince of this power, or authority, that worketh in the children of disobedience.

The Greek word "ge" earth, in addition to meaning the land, also includes the occupants of a country or territory. Any student of history knows that the pope has not only filled this position "lord of the earth," but actually claims the right to be considered and treated as such. Standing before this power the two olive trees representing the church and the protestant element of society, also personified as lights represented by the two candlestick are persecuted by the ruling power, or the pope, the god of the earth. "From the mouth of the two witnessess fire proceedeth, and devoureth their enemies."

Fire is used in the Scriptures as a symbol of trouble (Zeph. 3:8, 9; 2 Pet. 3:7, 12; Luke 3:16; Zech. 13:9; Mal. 3:2; Isa. 48:10; Deut. 4:20). This trouble results from the effect which the word of God has upon those who hear it. There is nothing in the universe so powerful or mighty as the word of God (Heb. 4:12; Isa. 55:7-11; Psa. 119:89). God touched the mouth of Jeremiah and said, "I have put my word in thy mouth." The result being that all nations and kingdoms became subject to him (Jer. 1:9, 10). In Jer. 5:14 God declares because of his word spoken by the prophet, his word became fire and those opposing him wood, and hence destroyed.

Read Ezek. 43:1-10. This will suggest to the mind what the word of God spoken under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit will accomplish. Hosea 6:5 is in harmony with this thought. "Therefore have I hewed by the prophets. I have slain them by the words of my mouth: and thy judgments the light that goeth forth." Read also Zech. 1:6; 2:8. James tells us the power of words is able to "set on fire the course of nature" (James 3:6). Hence then the fire which proceedeth out of their mouths on the one hand, is the word of God, the gospel in its purity preached by the church; and by the other witness, the protest against the corruption and wickedness of the papal system. The experience throughout the valleys of Piedmont, where vast multitudes calling themselves Waldenses and Albigenses, the terrible sufferings and persecutions will verify this. Those therefore who sought to "hurt them" necessarily as all combatants on both sides do, suffered likewise many being killed.

"These have power to shut heaven; that it rain not in the days of their prophecy. "To rightly understand the Book of Revelation, and for that matter the whole Bible, it is absolutely necessary to understand its symbols.

Just now divisions of our troops are returning from France, upon the arm of each soldier is a symbol. That symbol denotes to the eye of the expert just to what division the wearer belongs. How many people not educated in army matters can tell at a glance to what division a soldier belongs by the symbol he is wearing upon his arm?

Just so, God has his symbols, only those who know and love him can understansd them (Amos 2:7; Dan. 28; Matt. 13:11; Eph. 3:5). To the carnal mind who naturally read our text literally would say, that if no rain fell for 1260 years the human race through famine would by this time cease to exist. The prophet declares: "Behold the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land; not a famine of bread nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the word of the Lord. And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east; they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord and shall not find it" (Amos 8:11, 12). Read carefully 2 Pet. 3:5-14 Peter speaks of three "worlds" and three "heavens."

1st. "The heavens were of old and the earth standing out of the water and in the water, whereby the world that then was perished." What perished? the literal earth and heavens? Certainly not, it was the people and those that ruled over them that perished.

2nd. "The heavens and the earth which are now." What are these? Peter tells us in the same breath, "ungodly men." What is to become of them? Destruction by fire.

3rd.—"A new heaven and a new earth." Well Peter what are these? Peter tells us, "the righteous." Simple is it not? What then constitutes "the earth"? The order of things, its social order. What constitutes "the heavens"? The governments who "derive their just powers from the consent of the governed."

These governing classes are ecclesiastical, political, commercial, and social. Go back to the dawn of history. You meet the patriarch and his tribe, the absolute monarch and his subjects, the baron and his feudal retainers, the constitutional, a limited monarchy, or as in our own land, democracy and its citizens. These on the one hand represent the "heavens" described as a scroll, and the other all the various religious bodies not of the church of the living God whose names are written in heaven. The type is very plain in 1 Kings 17. God withheld rain from Ahab and his people through the earnest prayers of Elijah (James 5:17) for 3½ years; Elijah representing the church was hid, supported with food provided by God. In the antitype God protected the woman (the church) by her fleeing into the wilderness. There she was sustained by the word (bread) of God. God's word was withdrawn (rain) from the ruling powers who sought to destroy the church class, as Ahab and Jezebel sought to slay Elijah.

"And have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will." As we have seen that the heavens represent the governments so the waters represent "peoples and multitudes, and nations and tongues" (Rev. 17:15).

Pharoah oppressed and kept in bondage God's Israel. Egypt existed upon the river Nile. This mighty river is the source, life and maintenance of Egypt. God's two witnesses in the type turned this river and all the water of Egypt into blood; it become bloody, repulsive, abhorrent. It was in this condition a symbol of death. The masses of the people under the influences of the two witnesses standing and protesting before the Lord of the earth became bloody, anarchistic. This ultimately brought on the French Revolution. Atheism, infidelity, and skepticism became rampant. This all resulted from the same cause that brought destruction to the Jewish nation in the year A. D. 70.

We read in Acts 4:12: "And as they spake unto the people the priests and the captains of the temple, and the sadducees came upon them, being grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead." Read on to verse 13. It has been the faithful witnessing to the truth expressed in these verses that has aroused the enmity of the powers that be, reflected in the uprising of the masses. The professed teachers of Christendom since Paul's day until now, do not want to be taught the truth themselves, nor do they want the people to be taught the truth. They have always bitterly opposed it, persecuting and speaking evil of all those who preach the true gospel: and those who antagonize their caricature of it as witnesssed in the worship and doctrines of the Catholic Church and her many daughters today.

"When they shall have finshed their testimony the beast that cometh out of the abyss shall make war with them, and overcome them, and kill them, and their dead bodies shall lie in the streets of the great city which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also their Lord was crucified."

The thought expressed by the word "finished" does not mean the end of that which is perfected. The thought is rather the delivering of a message or their testimony pertaining to some specific thing. The beast rising out of the bottomless pit is fully described in Rev. 13:1-7; 17:1-18.

Following the terrible massacre of St. Bartholomew Day, which was the beginning of that war which the beast was to war against them. Sodom was destroyed because of her lewdness, Egypt because of her cruelty to the people of God. The beast ruled over ten cities. Verse 13 mentions the revolution occurring in the tenth part, or a city representing a nation. France for 1260 years was the most loyal and faithful of the pope's daughters. Is there a city in Europe that meets the description of Sodom and Egypt like the city of Paris?

Jesus was crucified in the city of Jerusalem: the power to do this was issued from Rome, Judea being a province of the Roman Empire. We ask in what city was issued the authority for "crucifying our Lord afresh," the Mass? All will agree that it is Rome, the papal seat. Now notice it is not literal Jerusalem, but mystical Jerusalem. The true church is represented by the Holy City Jerusalem; the false church assumes this role: hence mystical Jerusalem

Article Four

Obey the Lord and receive his kingdom and life. Jesus went about all the cities teaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness among the people (Matt. 9:35). He cast out devils, raised the dead, gave the blind sight, and did many wonderful works. Faith comes by hearing and hearing by the word of God (Rom. 10:17). Hear ye therefore the parable of the sower: the field is the world; the seed is the word of God; Christ is the sower. And it came to pass as he sowed some fell by the way side; and the fowls came and devoured it up. Some fell on stony ground, and was scorched by the sun, and withered. Some fell among thorns and yielded no fruit. But he that receiveth seed into the good ground is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it; which also beareth fruit, same an hundredfold, some sixty thirty (Matt. 13:; Mark 4; Luke 8). Only one fourth of them that receive God's word are fruitful. Therefore beware of dry, thorny, rocky roads on the way to Christ's kingdom. The good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one: The enemy that sowed them is the devil (Matt. 18:38-39). Beware of the artful devil. Those by the wayside are they that hear; then cometh the devil and taketh away the word out of their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved. They on the rock are they which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation, fall away. And these are they which are sown among thorns; such as hear the word, and the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lust of other things entering in, choke the word and it becometh unfruitful (Luke 8:12-14). Therefore we have a multiplicity of divisions by the devil's critics, causing tribulations in all parts of the earth. "Yea, and all that will live gladly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution, evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived" (2 Tim. 3:12, 13). Jesus said, Take heed lest any man deceive you (Matt. 12:5). For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple (Rom. 16:18). Teaching for doctrines the commandments of men (Mark 7:7). Therefore these are only aliens. Jesus saith, I am the way, the truth and the life (John 14:6). Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved (Acts 4:12). Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way which leadeth utno life, and few there be that find it (Matt. 7:14). God resisteth the proud but giveth grace unto the humble (James 4:6). The Lord called the apostles to help him sow the gospel seed and build up God's church until the harvest and Christ opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles (Acts 11:27). To take out of them a people for his name (Acts 15:14). Therefore they are grafted into the Abrahamic faith (Rom. 11:17), through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus (Rom. 3:24). Christ said there shall be one fold and one shepherd. I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture. Verily, verily I say unto you, he that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber (John 10:1-16). Therefore the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth (1 Tim. 3:15). To be a recipient of God's truth and a member of God's church is the only way to eliminate the devil's influence. The spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils, speaking lies in hypocricy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron (1 Tim. 4:1, 2). Thus they are thieves and robbers (Mark 7:22). The devil as a roaring lion walketh about, seeking whom he may devour (2 Pet. 5:8). Watch ye therefore, and pray always that ye may be accouted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man (Luke 21:36). Take ye heed: behold, I have foretold you all things (Mark 13:23). Christ purchased the church of God with his own blood (Acts 20:28). Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life which the Lord hath promised to them that love him (James 1:12).

Fear not, little flock; it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom (Luke 12:32). Christ, the second Adam, has proved himself to be worthy of the utmost confidence of all. We should not trust in ourselves; but in God which raiseth the dead (2 Cor. 1:9). If there is no resurrection all are perished (1 Cor. 15:18). Paul through great tribulations was a faithful expounder of Christ's kingdom, and God's church at Corinth (1 Cor. 1:2). Thus the Gentiles have the Abrahamic promises of the land inheritance; for an everlasting home in Christ's kingdom. Christ is the head of the church, and he is the Savior of the body (Eph. 5:23). The church of God is the only name for the church revealed in God's word: all other names are fabulous, mythical. God's book reveals that only the pure in heart shall see God (Matt. 5:8). Today is the time to decide truth and falsehood (John 8:44). Christ will destroy him that had the power of death, that is the devil (Heb. 2:14). He will swallow up death in victory, and the Lord will wipe away tears from off all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth; for the Lord hath spoken it (Isa. 25:8). The triumphant church of God will be an everlasting victory over death. "Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel. And ye shall know that I am the Lord" (Ezek. 37:12, 13). And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord my God (Amos 9:15). They are then safe in Christ's kingdom, ransomed from the last enemy, death (Hosea 13:14). Repent ye therefore and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. For Moses truly said unto the fathers, a prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass that every soul which will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people. Yea, and all the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after, as many as have spokner as ye have seen him go into heaven" (Acts 1: 19-24). Sublime to contemplate: no more death, wars, pain, or sorrow! Bless the Lord.

"Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven (Acts 1: 11). When Christ comes his first restitution work will be to give to his triumphant church, immortal life both to the dead in Christ and to those that are living when he comes (1 Thess. 4:16,17). Thus shall a nation be born at once (Isa. 66:8). Christ is the only one that has the keys of the grave and death (Rev. 1:18). Zion shall be redeemed with judgmnet, and her converts with righteousness (Isa. 1:27). And the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day (Isa. 2:11). The work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever (Isa. 32. 17). They shall inherit the land forever (Isa. 60: 2). They shall build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations (Isa. 61:4). And mine elect shall enjoy the work of their hands. They shall not labor in vain nor bring forth for trouble: for they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord, and their offspring with them. The wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock, and dust shall be the serpent's meat (Isa. 65:22-25). Christ shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end, on the throne of his father David (Luke 1:22, 23). Thus the earth is the only home for the obedient children of the first Adam. The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof. Christ's mission is to get rid of sin and sinners. Then the whole universe will be clean and righteous.

The law of the land. And they shall say, This land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden (Isa. 36:35). Thus the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever (Rev. 11:15). For out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations, and rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more (Isa. 2:3, 4). Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world? (1 Cor. 6:2). When this age of the world comes, the devil will be chained in a pit for a thousand years; and a seal will be put upon him that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousad years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season. And shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog, and Magog, to gather them together to battle: the number of whom is as sand of the sea. And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints and the beloved city; and fire came down from heaven and devoured them. This is the second death (Rev. 20:11-14).

Then the restitution age will be in the past, and man's last enemy destroyed, which is death (1 Cor. 15:26). Therefore God and Christ are victorious over sin and death. Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions (Eccl. 7:29). Therefore the misery of man is great upon him (Eccl. 8:6). Yea, the monstrosity of inventing dumb idols, and a teacher of lies, that the maker of his work trusteth therein, to make dumb idols (Hab. 2:18). The idols of the heathen are the work of men's hands. They that make them are like unto them; so is every one that trusteth in them (Psa. 135:15-18). I am the Lord and there is none else; there is no God beside me (Isa. 45:5).

Paul's Prayer For the Epesians

By S. Roxana Winre

Men may be full of extortion, of ravening, of hate, of trouble, of labor, of heaviness, of sorrow, but Paul had his mind on a different kind of fulness. He prayed that the Ephesians "might be filled with the fulness of God," and not only with the fulness, but with "all the fulness." How can such a prayer as this be ansewered? Let us read the context and see if we can find out what this "fulness" means.

In Eph. 1:16-21 Paul says, "I cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers; that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him. the eyes of your understanding being opened; that ye may know what is the hope of his calling and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of his mighty power, which he wrought in Christ when he raised him from the dead, and set him on his own right hand in the heavenly places."

Then this "fulness" consists in having "knowledge of God." Knowledge of "the hope of his calling," knowledge of the promised inheritance, and of the power of God. It is to know that God has "predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself according to the good pleasure of his will," and that, though we be Gentiles, we can "be fellow-heirs and of the same body, and partakers of his promise by the gospel," having "redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace," and having "Christ dwell in our hearts by faith may be rooted and grounded in love," and may "know the love of Christ that passeth knowledge," and walking "worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love, endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace," may come in the unity of the faith, and the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." "Walking not as other Gentiles walk, putting off concerning the former conversation, the old man which is corrupt, according to the deceitful lusts, and being renewed in the spirit of your mind, and putting on the new man which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness, lying and stealing no more, sinning not in anger, and letting no corrupt communications proceed out of your mouth; being full of goodness, filled with knowledge and able to admonish one another" (Rom. 14:15). This it is, to be "filled with all the fulness of God."

And Paul's prayer for his Ephesian brethren is my preyer for the scattered household of faith in these last days. And that this blessedness may be ours, we must not forget that Christ must dwell in our hearts by faith. There must be no inviting of this blessed personage for a transitory stay, we may not call for his presence for an hour or a day, and then turn him out and bar the doors against him. He must have continuous place of abode with those who would "be filled with all the fulness of God"; and this dwelling of Christ within, remember, can only come by faith.

We first must be filled with the knowledge of his will. We can have no true conception of the love of Christ toward us, until we know what he has done, and what God still purposes to accomplish through him.

Having learned by whom we, being aliens, have been brought "night to God," and through whom it is that we can have boldness and confidence in coming to the Father, we begin to comprehend "the length and breadth, and depth and height, of his love and fastening every sense, every affection to him, become like the great tree firmly rooted in the rich soil, "rooted and grounded in love."

What a blessed feeling it is! "Filled with the knowledge of his will," filled with the fruits of righteousness, filled with comfort, filled with goodness, filled with mercy, filled with compassion, filled with all the fulness of God.

And this is just what our experience ought to be, must be, if we are to be of any use in the vineyard of the Lord. We cannot teach others what we do not know ourselves. When others come to us to talk of the hope and the work, and of our interest therein we must not be found "wanting." We must have the consciousness that the things we have heard are ours, and that the needful watchfulness and prayer are ours, or our words will have no power to bless and save.

I pray that you be always "filled," for it seems to me that if we are to be among the wise virgins our vessels must be full. The cares of this world must not keep us away from the living stream; must not hinder us from buying the oil of faith in the coming advent of the Bridegroom. "Save yourselves from this untoward generation."

We have already "received of his fulness." "In his presence we shall have fulness of joy."

The ideal life is in our blood and never will be still. We feel the thing we ought to be beating beneath the thing we are.

The Church of Rome

The Church of Rome was once in the right way, and celebrated for it through the whole world (Rom. 1:8). But how long did it continue in that way? I may very well answer. As long as it was built upon the rock Christ; but, when it began to build itself upon Peter, then, and thenceforward, did it forsake the right way. For certainly, he forsakes the right way that leads to build upon the sure foundation, Christ, and builds upon the sands, the person of a mere man. . . . That church hath forsaken the right way that goes clean contray to the right way. If the "right way" is to "search the Scriptures," (as John 5:39,) then they forsake the right way; for their way is to keep me from searching them. If the right way is to use a "known tongue" in public worship (as 1 Cor. 14), their way is to use a tongue not understood. If the right way is to administer the cup in the sacrament (as Luke 22:20), their way is to forbid its administration. If the right way is, "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve" (Luke 4:8), certainly they have forsaken the right way that worship angels and saints departed, that worship crucifixes and images, that worship and adore a piece of bread.—Dr. John Lightfoot.

Editorial

"A cripple in the right way will beat a racer in the wrong."—Bacon.

He who is not willing to fill a place he is fitted for, will find no place fitted for him.

Deliberate with caution, but act with decision; and yield with graciousness or oppose with firmness.—Colton.

The heart may be empty when the voice is loudest; and we are ready to value but slightly what costs nothing but words.

Study is a restraint, compelling us, if we would learn anything, to concentrate the forces of thought and to bridle the caprices of fancy.

Moderation is the great secret of government. To be always dissatisfied is the way to lose all authority and respect. The consequence of those people is most cheerfully acknowledged, who seem the least forward to assert it.

Human nature is prone to extremes in both vice and virtue. The teaching of orthodox churches is either so conservative that it is dead, or so radical that it misleads. The truth alone can give us balance and clothe us in right minds. Let us keep in the middle of the road.

Brother W. T. Earles, of Atterson, Ky., writes that he wishes to secure a preacher for a meeting in his town. Brother J. H. Anderson will be in Ohio the latter part of June, and we suggest that he correspond with Brother Earles. Brother Anderson has no hobby to ride except the truth, and it seems to us that while he is in Southern Ohio, he is the logical man to respond to this Macedonian cry. The brethren at Brumfield, Ky., probably would co-operate with Brother Earles by having a meeting also, if Brother Anderson should go into the State.

What a Sister Should be Alphabetically

A sister should be amiable, benevolent, charitable, domestic, economical, forgiving, generous, honest, industrious, judicious, kind, loving, modest, neat, obedient, pleasant, quiet, reflecting, sober, tender, urbane, virtuous, wise, exemplary, yielding, and zealous.

The Folly of Boasting

A goard wound itself round a lofty palm, and in a few weeks climbed to its very top. "How old mayst thou be?" asked the newcomer. "About a hundred years." "About a hundred years, and no taller? Only look: I have grown as tall as you in fewer days than you count years!" "I know that very well," replied the palm, "every summer of my life a gourd has climbed up around me, as proud as thou are, and as short lived as thou will be."

Moral Measurements

If a man should be pure, so that he would have an instinctive perception of purity in others; if he should be just, so that he would discern justice in others; if he should be true, so that untruth would be a pain to him —if, in short, he should be lofty in imagination, and high in spiritual aspirations, how, as he went about in society, would he raise up those whom everybody used as foot-rugs, and treated as objects of contempt, and how would he bring down the pride of men, viewing every thing above and below in the light of this new rule of judging.

Light in Darkness

Unto the upright there ariseth light in darkness" (Psa. 112:4).

The great lesson of this text is the connection which it obtains between integrity of purpose and clearness of discernment, inasmuch as dutious conformity to what is right, is generally followed by a ready and luminous discernment of what is true. It tells us that if we have but grace to do as we ought, or, in other words, if right morally, we are in the highway of becoming right intellectually.—Chalmers.

Befogging the Issue

Some time since a story appeared in The Restitution in which a Christian boy was eulogized for enduring a surgical operation without an anisthetic, and for dying without imbibing a heart stimulant. Although this was all done in disobedience to the orders of the attending physician, it was complimented as a Christian duty. Such ethics are fundamentally erroneous in principle. They head directly toward fanaticism, and seeing the dangerous upshot, we exposed the fallacy editorially.

A correspondent this week inquires "what good office it was expected to perform." And then to befog the issue he discusses the kind of wine Christ made at Cana and later used in instituting the Lord's supper, quotes a number of texts which condemn drunkenness; and then concludes that since drinking wine often leads to drunkenness, therefore "wine as a beverage" is utterly condemned! Here the proverbial "man of straw" is demolished by very bad logic. Look at the logic, please:

Drinking wine often leads to drunkenness;
Drunkeness is scripturally condemned;
Therefore to taste wine is a sin.

Now if this logic is true, then follow it to its conclusions in these instances:

Marriage often leads to divorce:
Divorce is scripturally condemned:
Therefore marriage is a sin.

Women often lead men into moral impurity;
Moral impurity is scripturally condemned;
Therefore we should have nothing to do with women.

Gas asphyxiates thousands of people annually:
Killing people is scripturally condemned;
Therefore the use of gas is a sin.

Water is deadly to human life;
Taking life is scripturally condemned:
Therefore we must not taste water!

Eating food often leads to gluttong:
Gluttony is scripturally condemned:
Therefore we must not eat food!

The idea that Christ made fermented wine at Cana is rejected under the plea that he had power "to produce a wine containing no poison whatever." Another puritanical sentiment. Just as long as the mind assumes that poisonous things are sinful, so long are we under a delusion. Whether Christ used fermented wine at Cana and in the Lord's supper, are distinct questions, and we stand ready to discuss them on their merits; but the point about which we are now anxious is the principle in the issue. If God did not make the poisons in the earth, who made them? "Lord thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea and all that in them is" (Acts 4:24). Do not the words, "all that in them is," include wine, women, gas, hydrocyanic acid, water, food, and everything else that "is"? Prussic acid, the most deadly poison known, is obtained from the kernels of peach stones. Must we give up eating peaches? Eggs "poison" many people, among them some of our acquaintance. Must we then put a ban on eggs? Do we lay down seriously as part of our code of ethics, that poisonous things, in either food or drink, must not be used? Must we have our teeth extracted without gas or cocaine, our appendix removed without ether, and our legs sawed off without chloroform? Please do not befog the issue by raising questions about something else; we want to know what our duty is in these things. Nor will abusing poisons answer our purpose. Even the Almighty could not, or at least did not, make the digestive apparatus in man without a "greenish-yellow fluid secreted from the liver" which is known as "gall," and this fluid is so poisonous that Webster gives it as a synonym for "bitterness, malignity." Let us beware how we abuse poisons lest we abuse the Almighty who made them. For to abuse the work of God is tantamount to abusing God himself. Rather let us say with David, "The works of the Lord are great, sought out of all them that have pleasure therein. His work is honorable and glorious: and his righteousness endureth forever" (Psa. 111:2, 3).

A Christian's Duty Concerning Strong Drink

Dangerous consequences may logically be expected to result from Brother Huggins' editorial in The Restitution of April 22nd, entitled, "Prevailing Ethics are Not Christianity." I rarely presume to criticize the work of those standing so far above me in knowledge, upon questions of truth and Christian practice; and I trust that Brother Huggins will consider the words of an old man patiently, and not be too deeply wounded by what in this case I feel it my duty to say.

While reading the article under review, I found myself wondering what good office it was expected to perform. Was it calculated to uplift the fallen, or strengthen the weak or wavering among the brethren? Some of them I happen to know who are held under the curse of the demon of strong drink. Will a reminder that Noah got drunk, and that the Corinthian brethren were often intoxicated, and that both Old and New Testaments sanction the use of strong wine as a beverage—will these reminders strengthen and help them to withstand temptation; or will they make good our oft expressed claims before the world, that we are a peculiar people, zealous of good works, a people whose motto is to avoid the very appearance of evil?

Brother Huggins contends that both Old and New Testaments sanction the use of strong wine, as beverage. Dear Brother, would it not be more correct to say that the Old and New Testaments record the use of strong wine as a beverage? The Bible is made up largely of records, both of nations and individuals. Thus Gen. 9:21 records the weakness of Noah, and the shameful conduct of his daughters; but does it sanction those sins? In 2nd Samuel [illegible] we have a record of David's sin with Bath-Sheba. But we look in vain for evidence that these, and a multitude of other sins found on record in the Bible, are sanctioned by the book or its Great Author.

Brother Huggins ridicules the idea that the ancients had strong wines and soft wines and different liquors and beverages of different degrees of strength, and contends that the Bible wine is invariably intoxicating. But we read of old wine, and new wine, of spiced wines, made from the juice of pomegranates, of red wine, which biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder; also of mixed wines, a brand that brought sorrow, contentions, babbling, redness of eyes, and wounds without cause. Can we wonder that the prophet concluded that, "wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."

Isaiah also adds his testimony as to its danger: "Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink, that continue until night till wine inflame them" (Isa.5:11). I must confess that I fail to find any sanction in these and numerous Old Testament Scriptures for the use of intoxicating beverages; and as for the New Testament, the conclusion is the same. God has not drawn up a temperance pledge for his people to sign, but I know of no instance where God's chosen people are advised to use as a beverage, intoxicating wines or liquors. On the contrary, they are cautioned against their use, and warned of the evil consequences of indulgence (Eph. 5:18).

To be a lover of wine unfitted and disqualified a candidate for office in the church (Titus 1:7). Condemnation is pronounced on him who giveth his neighbor drink and maketh him drunken (Hab. 2:15). And the brethren are solemnly warned that no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of heaven (1 Cor. 6:10; Gal. 5:21). Surely these texts are sufficient to correct the statement that both the Old and New Testaments sanction the use of wines and beverages that intoxicate.

"But," says the objector, "how about the marriage feast at Cana, and the changing of water to wine, which was pronounced by all to be better than that served during the first part of the feast? It can hardly be denied, that the wine provided for a company of merry makers, at a marriage feast would not be intoxicating. If Jesus make for their use, from water, a better wine than that they had just been using, then surely he sanctioned the use of intoxicating wines, or strong drink." I answer: Dear brother, ask me not to believe that Jesus, who taught his disciples to teach that no drunkard shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; that this same Jesus, who taught them to pronoun a curse of woe upon him gives strong drink to his neighbor to make him drunk, did himself make from water a stronger and more merry wine than that made of grapes, and delivered the same to a large company of relatives (his mother was among them), friends and neighbors, and leave them to gorge themselves with it, thus breaking his own law and shutting the door of the kingdom to them through drunkenness. No dear ones, the Jesus that I learned to love, so many years ago, could not possibly do that. It is unthinkable. Rather let me continue to believe, that the power which he possessed, was great enough to produce a wine containing no poison whatever, but possessing a flavor so exquisite and satisfying, that all pronounced it vastly better than the man made brand first used.

While at work on above article a copy of The Restitution of May 20th containing Brother John Parker's excellent and timely article entitled, "Wine and the Lord's Supper," was laid on my desk. I rested from my work, and read it with pleasure and prfit; and I venture the assertion that many others have done the same. The language and spirit is modest, kind, and considerate, yet plain and to the point. His reference to the law prohibiting the use of leaven in bread or wine, or in any other way during the passover feast (Exod. 13:7), is positive and conclusive evidence which cannot be set aside, that our Lord did not use fermented wine at the institution of the Lord's supper; and the fact that the Corinthian brethren some years later, did so use it, and became drunken, proves nothing, except that a deplorable appetite called for something stronger than the "fruit of the vine" used by our Lord, and so they substituted strong wine, and drank it in sufficient quantity to cause intoxication, thus turning the Lord's supper into a shameful debauchery and calling down merited reproof from Paul.

Dear Brother Huggins:

My brother, Chas. Crowe, has on hand 60 or 70 of my books, "The Mormon Waterloo," well bound in stiff backs and cloth cover. They cost me 50 cents each, and I first sold them post paid for 75 cents, and later for 50 cents each. They are regarded by all our preachers who have read them as the most complete overthrow of Mormonism in print, and the work is classified nicely under headings, and is condensed and pointed. Order them for 40 cents from Chas. Crowe, St. Paul, Nebraska.

Dear Brother in the Blessed Hope:

Please find enclosed a dollar for which please send me a set of your Bible Lessons, and please send a set to each of the three addresses enclosed.

You will also please find enclosed an article on the great commandments of God which I have written for the dear Restitution. I would appreciate very much if you would publish it.

I received all the other sets of Bible Lessons, for which I thank you.

May we make good use of our talents, whether small or great, for the truth, and to the glory of God, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment, and receive the great reward.

Your brother in Christ,

EUGENE MILLER.

Dear Restitution:

We are indeed glad to see the article by Sister Flora Wood and also by Brother Hammond. We know your stand has always been the same, but we have only lately learned the truth in regard to the future probation of the dead and of its error and the great harm its teaching will do. We are glad to see other writers coming out on the subject, and we hope they will keep right after it and get people to see the truth. We are sure Christ's coming is close at hand. There is no time to delay. We must not allow error to be taught. We have been greatly helped by The Restitution. We hope and pray that Brother Huggins will remain faithful, and allow nothing but truth to get into the paper.

We are now breaking bread each first day of the week. There are only four or five of us, but we are trying hard to do right and keep his commandments. The disciples broke bread every first day: why should not we ?

SLOGAN. WE STAND FOR UNITY, TRUTH AND RIGHTEOUSNESS

THE COST OF COMPLAINING

By Edgar A. Guest

Taint in the way o' common sense
To growl at rain an' bring the sun;
A grumbler never built a fence
Or finished work that should be done.
I've never known the clouds to go
Becoz some feller sat an' whined;
When it's too wet to plow and hoe
Some other task to do I find

I've never known a kicker yet
To alter things past his control, nor met a man with power to fret
An easier journey to his goal.
Fond hopes go wrong an' plnas will stray
However much a man complains,
An' spite of all we have to say,
What is willed to rain, it rains.

The chap that gets the biggest crops
Is not the one that wears the frown;
When growlin' starts all progress stops
No man can climb by sittin' down.
Time spent in whimperin' is lost,
An' cursin' never changed the sky;
The grumbler pays a heavy cost
Fod every discontented sigh.

So when in mire my wagon's stuck
I do not idly stand about
An' start to rave an' curse my luck—
I go to work and dig it out.
An' when I've wanted weather fair,
But skies are gray instead o' blue,
I shanged my plans then and there
An' find some other work to do.—Selected by J. E. Miller, Jr.

Opportunity

Lack of opportunity is the lack that people most frequently bewail. The man who is less successful than his neighbor usually believes that his neighbor has had better opportunities than he. The woman who is discontented with her life, because it seems to consist mainly of household drudgery, sighs for the opportunities of those who have more freedom from domestic cares. Men and women alike who are always finding it hard to make ends meet envy the prosperous their opportunities as much as their possessions.

Yet those at whose door opportunity seldom knocks and on whom it bestows only the most grudging gifts may still cherish some consolatory reflections. Opportunity never presents itself to anyone as a wholly munificent fairy; it always manages to exact some sacrifice for the benefits or advantages that it promises to confer. And usually the sacrifice is more or less commensurate with the opportunity. The man who laments the rut in which he must travel finds when the opportunity to struggle out of it occurs that disturbing consequences follow; breaking of ties that on being threatened take on a sudden new value; acceptance of responsibilities that on being offered take on a sudden new formidableness. Opportunity does not say in so many words, "Accept me, and root up the old affections"; its menace to the old affection is insidious. The step upwards means nearly always a step away from the old associates and the old associations. The man who ascends may do his best to hold fast to those whom he leaves behind; but he cannot take them all with him, and his ascent exposes him to the criticism, censure or suspicion of former friends. So many deterrant considerations are suggested in the advances that opportunity makes that everyone can well appreciate the remark of a successful man: "I believe that some of my unhappiest times were those when I was given a chance to get ahead."

What is Antichrist ?

2 Thess. 2:3, 4 says: "Let no man deceive you by any means, for that day shall not come except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition, who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called god, or that is worshipped, so that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." Who are sitting in judgment of the world today ? Soon the cry will be heard, "peace, peace." Then we are told sudden destruction will come. Oh that we may be clothed in our wedding garments.

Items From St. Louis

Mrs. Orpha Sanford, one of the Aurora, Ill. Bereans, was in our city and attended our Bible Class. We hope anyone coming through St. Louis will make an effort to be here on Thursday night.

Brother and Sister S. I. Lindsay gave us a short visit. They stopped two nights with us on their way to Blush, Mo. Brother L. conducted the Bible Class, and on Friday evening gave us a discourse on types and shadows. We were so glad to have them and hope to be able to have preaching and Bible Classes often.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Morron and their son were here a few days. Brother and Sister Morron have taken a course in Davenport, and are now full fledged Chiropractors. They expect to locate in Salem Ohio.

Mrs. Ellen Morse of Valles Mines, Mo., has been sick most of the winter and is not able to be out. Sister Morse is one of our isolated members, and we hope our members will write her a cheery letter occasionally.

Remarks

During the month of April, the work became more active, difficulties cleared away to some extent, and the prospects for once more getting the good news to a dying world seemed more certain.

We made the brethren at Palmer a visit, and all were pleased to see some activity once more. We had just started when a blizzard came up, and greatly hindered the meeting, yet our attendance was good considering the bad roads. Some outside interest developed, which we hope may become permanent. Before leaving for the west we got the church together in Omaha, and organized a Sunday School. Besides the children of the brethren a number without have promised to attend. Brother Sorrenson was chosen to teach the Bible Class. All who know Brother Sorrenson will know it will be well done. Sister Virginia Cronk has a class of boys and girls, which she says she wants to have ready for baptism when I get back again. Such earnestness touches the heart, and I know her part will be well done. Sister Myrtle Adams has a class of little folks. Myrtle is a live wire and will interest them, so they may be heard from later. Sister Mynehildt Sorrenson has another class of little ones, and in two Sundays had them greatly interested. Although young herself, she is showing splendid teaching ability. Pray the Lord to help them all in their labor of love.

In our next, we will tell you of some baptisms. At this writing I am at Laird, Colo., where two years ago we built up a nice congregation, which belongs to the Nebraska conference. A debate is now in prospect. Will tell about it in our next. From here we go to Brush and Pueblo, Colo., and then several places in Nebraska are calling. The King's business requires haste. Pray for the work.

Golden Text 1 John 1:9

KEEP STEP WITH THE MASTER

Keep step with the Master whatever betide;
Tho' dark be the pathway, keep close to your Guide.
While foes are alluring, and danger is near,
When walking with Jesus you've nothing to fear.

Chorus

Keeping step, go bravely forward,
And thy courage still renew,
Daily walk with Christ your Savior,
He will lead you the journey through.

Keep step with the Master, wherever you go;
Through darkness and shadow, the way he will show
The light of his presence your faith will illume,
And make all the desert a garden of bloom.

Keep step with the Master, nor halt by the way;
Whate'er he commands you, oh, haste to obey!
Arise at his bidding, press on in his might;
While walking with Jesus you're sure to be right.

Give me a calm, a thankful heart,
From every murmer free,
The blessings of thy grace impart,
And make me live to thee.

Did You Miss the Page?

Have you missed the page the past few weeks? We have, and really were sorry at our inability to furnish copy. Still something had to stop, as the machine had of late being running with too heavy a load, and to prevent a breakdown the burden must be lightened. Our daily business had to be attended to, for it is from that we earn our daily bread. Our church duties have somewhat been neglected. Not that we have missed any of the services, but at times we have been late, and we could not give the time nor thought to the study of the lesson that we should. And we have not done any talking. For three weeks we have not had a Young People's Page, but it is about eight weeks that we have not done any writing, it being necessary always to keep copy ahead. Even our personal correspondence is behind to that extent, and it is source of grief to realize that some of our friends have been a little neglected during this period, but, perhaps they too have not been well. We want to be charitable, but when a person is not at their best, they notice little things that at other times would never be thought of. The conducting of the page is a labor of love from which we derive much benefit, still it takes much time and a deal of labor. Pray for us that we will be kept fit and that our efforts will bring forth fruits meet for the Master's service to the glory of God.

Morbus Sabbaticus

(Sunday Sickness)

Morbus Sabbaticus is a disease peculiar to church members. The symptoms never interfere with appetite. The disease never lasts more than twenty-four hours. No physician ever is called. It always proves fatal in the end to the soul. It is becoming fearfully prevalent, is dangerously contagious, and is destroying thousands every year. The attack comes on suddenly every Sunday No symptoms are noticed on Saturday night. The patient sleeps sound and awakes feeling well. He eats a hearty breakfast. About church time the attack comes on and continues until the services are over for the morning. Then the patient feels easier and eats a substantial dinner. In the afternoon he feels much better. So much so that he finishes reading the Sunday newspapers before taking a walk or going motoring. In the evening he eats a fairly good supper and feels quite chipper until near church time, when he has another bad attack and remains at home. On Monday morning he awakes, feeling thoroughly refreshed and showing no trace of the disease. He is able to go to business and attend to all social and political affairs. No further symptoms are observable until the following Sunday, when it is the same thing over again. -Sel. by M. L. H.

Our Weekly Puzzle

Behold, I lay in Sion a chief corner stone, elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded. Unto you therefore which believe he is precious: but unto them which be disobedient, the stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner, and a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence, even to them which stumble at the word, being disobedient: whereunto they also were appointed.

What is Sion?

Where in the Old Testament can a companion verse be found?

What, or who is this stone?

Our today's lesson makes a distinction between two classes of people those who believe and the disobedient. What is the difference?

What is the meaning of "whereunto also they were appointed," and where can we find a passage giving further information concerning this?

Where can our today's lesson be found?

Answer next issue.

Answer to puzzle in issue of May 20:

"Fruit" is the growth, or outcome of our efforts. In this case if we actually possess the spirit of Christ, the outcome will be the growth of the "fruit" of love, joy and so forth, as mentioned in the lesson.

"Temperance" means moderation, not too much, nor too little, as one man put it; neither walking to the right nor to the left, but keeping in the middle of the road.

To "crucify the flesh" means to kill off all things that are purely of a fleshly, or earthly nature (such things that would take us from God) and entirely live in, and for God, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

The passage was written by the apostle Paul, to the churches of Galatia, and can be found in Galatians 5:22-26.

June

June, the sixth month of our present calendar, contains thirty days. The origin of the name is in dispute. At one time June had but twenty-nine days, and was the fourth month; but Caesar added the extra day which it still retains. It is in this month that the summer solstice occurs. To those who have not already given their heart to God this is a good time to do so, for "the present moment is our own but we do not know what a day may bring forth."

A Sign

Recently, while in the upper portion of New York City, on a street crowded with pleasure automobiles, we passed a large, and in every way prosperous looking church building, upon which was conspicuously displayed a sign reading:

THIS IS A CHURCH OF THE LIVING GOD

"Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by?"

Since then we often have thought of this church and its sign. We wonder how many of our younger readers ever have read the above quotation, and if they know its author, under what circumstances it was written, and where it can be found.

Multum In Parvo

THE Shinar incident shows what men immagined to do by building a tower whose top may reach into heaven and invade God's throne. So the Lord scattered them abroad from thence, and the building stopped (Gen. 11:1-8. The lips of a fool will swallow up himself (Eccl. 10:12). Haters of God, dispiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things (Rom. 1:30). Men have in their immaginations invented a superior immaterial, superman; they call it an immortal soul, and give its nature and essence. A more compete definition of nothing could not be given.

Its nature and essence. It is a simple, spiritual essence, immortal, immaterial, intangible, indissoluble, having no exterior surface, cannot be extended. It is analagous to God—cannot combine with matter, and does not occupy space, and does not weigh anything. A wonderful superman invention. And the supposition is that ten thousand of them can rest on the point of a cambric needle. The serpent (devil) said to the woman, "Ye shall not surely die" (Gen. 3:4). Thus the utterance of a lie is the only Bible utterance that men have to invent their imaginary, immaterial, immortal soul. Therefore all their speculation is without one Biblical fact to demonstrate it. It is only assumption, opposed to God's word and common sense. Our brain is the only organ of mind, and when it ceases to act at death we are absolutely unconscious and will remain dead, waiting the gift of divine hands for life. At death our thoughts perish (Psa. 146:4). Therefore it is impossible to go to heaven when we die. It is a well known fact that size and quality of brain are definite means by which to determine the intellectual ability of men; and if you stop his breath, all thought and action stop; he is dead, and his life is hid with Christ in God (Col. 3:3). When the reasoning faculties of men are deficient, as in the idiot, the man does not posses as much intelligence as a horse, dog, or elephant. Why is this if the brain is not the organ of thought? Is it because an inferior soul lives in his body? or is it because he has an inferior brain? "Oh," says one, "this disordered mental phenomenon occurs because the brain is out of order." Answer: Then how could the soul think when the brain is dead? If an imperfect living brain produces imperfect thought, a deranged brain, deranged thought, an infant or an idiotic brain, little or no thought; is it reasonable to suppose that a man can do his best and most real thinking when his brain is lifeless, and buried? No wonder the wise man said: "The dead known not anything" (Eccl. 9:5). When a man can breathe without lungs, talk without organs of speech, see without eyes, hear without ears, and feel without nerves, then you might assume that he can think without a brain. Therefore all attempts to prove that there is an immortal soul in every man, living distinct from the physical organization, that does all the thinking, must be considered unphilosophical, unreasonable, and opposed to facts, commonsense and the Bible. God's word, neither literal, descriptive, nor figurative teaches that the first Adam's descendants have one tiny spark of immortality in them. Grace of the second Adam is the only hope of eternal life, a gift of God. In death man has no pre-eminence over a beast (Eccl. 3:19, 20). Therefore man's erroneous inventions of immortal souls, dumb gods, the Shinar tower, and a multiplicity of mythic names for God's church, none of which are found in God's book.

We must not give heed to Jewish fables and commandments of men that turn from the truth (Titus 1:14). Christ says: "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled" (Matt. 5:6).

In a few days I will be 84 years old. During life I have conversed with honest, sincere men and women that cherished an idea that all persons have immortal souls. Many of these honestly believe the Bible teaches their erroneous belief. All of God's punishments for iniquities have been, and will be, only on the earth. For example the flood of water. All died that were not in the ark (Gen. 7:21; Isa. 24:2). Pharoah and his host were drowned in the Red Sea (Exo. 14:27), and the walls of Jericho fell (Josh. 6:20). The same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all. Thus shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed (Luke 17:29, 30; Rev 20:9). Therefore God has his place and manner to punish souls that sin. But man has an imaginary unknown place to punish their immaterial, deathless invented souls, they call it "hell," "purgatory," etc. God said by the sweat of face shalt thou eat bread (Gen. 3:19). Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things? (Psa. 2:1). The adversary of both God and man, begun his deception and false teaching in the garden of Eden, saying, "Ye shall not surely die," contradicting the God of truth. We have carefully traced the devil's falsehood through the eventful history of Adam and his descendants, and we find many of the inhabitants of the earth substantially believing satan's falsehood that man does not surely die. "Ye shall not surely die." These five words, the devil's lie, is the only basis for the doctrine of man's immortality found in the Bible. We find the devil's lie is the stronghold and basis of many congregations called "churches," and also of the organized bodies of the world. We do not wonder that Christ said when I come again shall I find faith on the earth? (Matt. 18:8). Who will be saved? Those that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus (Rev. 14:12). Death robs man of all life. Take heed therefore that the light that is in thee be not darkness (Luke 11:35).

Parables are only similitudes or comparisons of a reality. Many persons think the parable of the rich man and Lazarus (Luke 16) teaches that man is immortal. The rich man died and was buried in Hades, only a cold grave. Notice the Bible is divided against itself if the parable of Luke 16 teaches a historic, literal fact. The dead know not anything. There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave (Eccl. 9:5-10). Therefore God's word is truth and "ye shall not surely die" is the devil's lie (Gen. 3:4).

Some people think Christ's answer to the thief on the cross teaches that man is immortal. The thief's request clearly shows that he had no idea of going at death with the Savior to a kingdom. The thief's request was, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom," which is still in the future. Matt 25:31 to 35 shows clearly when the thief will be rewarded for his faith and humility. What Christ said to the thief is only the equivalent of what he said to others who humbled themselves in his presence, "Thy faith hath saved thee."

Others think that Christ's transfiguration teaches that man is a dual being. Christ said, "Tell the vision to no man" (Matt. 17:9). Vision, an imaginary sight (Webster). No proof here that dead men are alive.

I find persons who think 1 Thess. 5:23 teaches that man has more than one personality: "I pray your whole spirit, and soul, and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ" "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength, and with the understanding" (Mark 12:31-33). Therefore marvelous that any one would claim two distinct personalities, and reject the other five named above as nonentities. When a man dies his thoughts perish; and the whole man, soul, heart, body, mind, strength, and understanding are lifeless—dead (Psa. 146:4). Paul's and Mark's obvious teachings are only that all of our mental, physical, and spiritual powers should be devoted to Christ. The soul God formed dies completely (Ezek. 18:4). Man's intense desire for immortal life proves he is destitute of it.

I have known persons who erroneously thought that Paul teaches that there is an immortal man inside of all men. 2 Cor 4:16: "Though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day." Paul did not use the word "man." therefore the italicized "man" clashes with Paul's teaching that men must renew their knowledge of Christ every day, by patient continuance in well doing, seeking for glory, and honor, and immortality, eternal life (Rom. 2:7). Therefore Paul had no knowledge of an immortal man that could not die, but said be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind; that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God (Rom. 12:2). These are the things Paul earnestly desired renewed in his Corinthian brethren, and he told them we should not trust in ourselves, but in God who raiseth the dead (2 Cor. 1:9). God is not the author of confusion (1 Cor. 14:33). But man's interpolations are spurious and dangerous.

Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap (Gal. 6:7). Paul says, "With the mind I myself serve the law of God (Rom. 7:25). To be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace (Rom. 8:6). When we die our thoughts perish (Psa. 146:4). The dead know not anything (Eccl. 9:5). Only one way is taught in God's word that dead souls can live again, which is by the resurrection from the dead. Bible testimony in relation to the nature of man is so plain, so often repeated, and harmonious, agreeing perfectly with common sense that no other reasonable conclusion can be made but that man is in all of his attributes mortal, of the earth, earthy, and absolutely dependent on Christ to bestow immortal life upon him. "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."

The gift of the life to be,
We weave with colors all our own.
And in the field of distiny,
We reap as we have sown.

Fear God and Keep His Commandmeuts

A PLEA FOR WEEKLY COMMUNION

IT is a most lamentable fact that both these injunctions are apparently being overlooked by a very large percentage of the believers. Many seem to think because the commandment to keep the Mosaic law was done away in Christ that the Church now has no ordinances or commandments to observe. Now the commandments that Christ gave and those given by the apostles are equally binding on believers, and a critical reading of the oracles of God given through these, his faithful servants, will bring to view a long list of positive commands which, if we wilfully neglect, greatly compromises our acceptance with God, and evidently will bring on a spiritual deadness which leads into further error of doctrine. God is long suffering and kind toward his children, but can we expect to be the objects of his mercy and love if we refuse to repent of an evil, through action, seek to make amends? Better get a little fear of God in our hearts because of his righteous judgments and our own frailties and weakness of the flesh, for fear of him, because these conditions are the beginning of wisdom. With manifest truth and wholesome candor, one has written, "The wrath of God against sin was incarnate in Christ. It was he who denounced the hypocrisies of the Pharisee, laid bare the sins of society, stripped men of falsities, and pronounced woes on the heads of evil-doers. It was he who overthrew the tables of the extortionate money changers, he who made a whip of small cords and drove them as thieves out of the temple. Any spirit which exalts love and forbearance out of their relation to justice and hatred of sin, is not the spirit of Christ. It is a weak and flabby sentimentalism without body and without a soul."

Christ says: "If ye love me keep my commandments." The "if" here has the same force as the "if" in "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed," etc. If not in Christ, not Abraham's seed. Can we truly say then that we love Christ if we do not keep his commandments? Did not our Lord on the same night in which he was betrayed call his twelve apostles apart from the world and give them a commandment to do in remembrance of him? Is it not passing strange that the apostolic church met on the first day of the week for prayers and supplications, to lay by material things as the Lord had prospered them, and actually to do an act which would keep afresh in their memory the offering up of the Lamb of God which taketh away sin to all who will look and live? Is it possible that nearly 1900 years later that the church has got so strong and holy that the coming together of believers oftener than once or twice a year, or not at all, unless an addition is made to the church body, is unreasonable and unnecessary? Was the early church under the direction of the apostles, too zealous in these things? They did not seem to think that the keeping of the weekly festival would drift into a dry formality. Could there have been anything more beautiful and fittingly instituted than an ordinance providing for the coming together weekly of those in Christ to give the first of their time, the setting aside the first of material blessings for God's service, to exhort one another, and to render thanks for both spiritual and material blessings, and to commemorate the true passover Lamb as Israel was commanded to do in all generations? Art thou not called fellow-heirs with Israel, O church and house of God? In fact are you not the seed of Abraham through Christ that to whom the covenants of promise pertain? Behold the passover Lamb in Gethsemene! He goeth to the cross knowing that no ram shall be provided in his stead as with faithful Abraham and Isaac. Heareth not thou the voice of thy Redeemer on bended knees, grief stricken, his own disciples becoming offended and deserting him, yet true to them and to you and to me, praying to the Father that if no other way would do to redeem the people of God from the curse of death, he was willing that his Father's will be done. Nothing in all the world can be more pathetic and filled with unselfish love as this.

OPEN COMMUNION A SERIOUS OFFENCE

Another grievous error is sanctioned when strangers to the covenants of promise, those of the world without God and without hope, are invited to sit at the Lord's table for various reasons, but often to escape giving offence to some very good worldly friends, forgetting that giving offence to the church of God is much the graver offence. When offenses come because of the truth and Christ's commandments are unqualifiedly preached and adhered to, the kingdom of God cometh nigh, and from which thou art not far. Baptism following a belief in the gospel and the keeping of the commandments justy admits to the Lord's table. Read the entire chapter of Exodus 12 and you cannot be mistaken about what strangers should expect if the typical ordinances given Israel mean anything. Teachers in Israel, whom the Lord has commanded to feed the church of God, whom he purchased with his own blood, do ye not know that the ordinances and doctrines of the house of God he has committed to you as unto faithful men? Should he come and find you slack in these, what of thy candlestick and thy nakedness? Surely the Lord is coming soon. May he find us walking in his commandments and believing his truth.

The Gospel of the Hereafter

THE NATURE OF MAN

"Lord, what is man, that thou takest knowledge of him! man is like to vanity; his days are as a shadow that passeth away" (Psa. 144:3, 4).

A CONSIDERATION of the nature of man is fundamental. It is the beginning of our investigation and the basis of our belief. Here, all conceptions meet and diverge. According to our understanding of the essential properties of man's being will our estimate be of the possibilities of the future and of his need of deliverance. Physical unity, fortunately, is beyond all controversy. So the dictum "man, know thyself," has both an absolute and a relative significance; and the imperativeness of the consideration is universally admitted.

If the decision rested on a numerical basis the problem would be easily solved. For the idea that man is a spiritual being incapable of death and decay a majority could easily be found. The general agreement on this point is surprising in view of the fact that it apparently runs counter to the testimony of experience. That man is subject to death, and in death disappears like every other form of life, are the sad facts of personal knowledge, but the idea has long been held and widely entertained that the power of death only affects man's body, and that the real self survives. "The soul, secure in its own existence, laughs at the dagger's point." It cannot be destroyed. It is immortal. Therefore man in death is not dead, but, like the butterfly emerging from the chrysalis blossoms out into a more abundant if unseen life.

This conception, if true, guarantees a future life for all irrespective of race or character. It is a gift of nature, a congenital inheritance that comes to all as an inalienable possession. But is it true? Where is the proof? Widespread belief is no evidence; general acceptance is no criterion of truth.

The fact that it is common to most races and to most religions may be no more than a general misconception that has its origin and strength in the pleasing nature of the belief. Some see in "the fond desire and fervent longing after immortality," a proof of its reality, as if it were an intuitive perception that shone with inward light, independent of external corroboration. Instinct is an unreliable guide. Reason can not be satisfied with an inference. No one can build securely on a basis of surmise. If God has revealed man's indestructibility then we can rejoice in our eternal inheritance, that is, if founded on the rock of truth—our true source of knowledge; but if not, and in spite of reliable witness we still maintain it, we build the temple of life on sand.

What has the Bible to say regarding the nature of man? Is he a spiritual being, a child of eternity, an immortal entity tabernacling in flesh? No. The Bible has much to say regarding the soul and much to say regarding eternal life, but the former is never associated with immortality, while the latter is never spoken of as an inherent quality. The terms "indestructible," "never-dying," "immortal" are never once applied to the soul by any of the writers in Scripture. On the contrary, they frequently speak of the soul being capable of death, of being "delivered from death," of being "cut off," in short, of every quality save that of preservation or continuance. Moreover, it is testified that God "only hath immrotality" (1 Tim. 6: 16), that he alone "can lift his hand to heaven and say, I live forever" (Deut. 32:40); and surely if immortality—deathlessness—and endless years are the exclusive prerogative of the Most High it is presumptive madness for man to claim to similar powers. Man's place in the economy of creation is "a little lower than the angels" (Psa. 8:5). The angels are God's messengers, standing in his presence, and executing the word of his command; and Jesus assures us that they neither marry nor are given in marriage nor are they subject to death (Luke 20:35, 36). In the age to come man is to be equal unto the angels, and the promise would be meaningless if he had the same properties of being now. The various orders of created intelligence are clearly defined, and man has not yet reached the highest stage of possible development. Meantime he is on the mortal plane, and while he is the head of the animal creation, and has received dominion over terrestrial things, yet in his physical nature he has linked interests with the lower orders of life. "That which befalleth the son of man befalleth beasts: as the one dieth so dieth the other: yea they have all one breath; so that a man has no pre-eminence above a beast" (Eccl. 3:19). These attributes of physical existence the facts of life confirm, and though we may wish it otherwise it is folly to shut our eyes to the testimony of experience and revelation. "Lord, what is man that thou art mindful of him? He is like to vanity; his days are as a shadow that passeth away."

This teaching is in strict conformity with the testimony regarding man's creation. "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul" (Gen. 2:7). Strange as it may seem this verse is taken as a proof of the natural immortality of the soul; and one writer goes so far as to affirm that "it is impossible to doubt but that the writer of the record held that faith." True, he admits that there may be nothing more in the words than an affirmation of the spiritual capacity of man. We beg to say that he is wrong in both conclusions. That man has capacity for spiritual growth and development is beyond question, but the terms descriptive of his creation do not declare it. They merely describe his physical existence, that he was a dust formed creature endowed with life, for the same words are used to describe the lower orders of creation. Thus: "To every beast of the earth, and every fowl of the air, and to everything that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life (margin, "a living soul") I have given every green herb for meat" (Gen. 1:30). Properly speaking man is a soul—a soul that lives by breathing the God given breath or spirit of life, and when God withdraws what he has given then all flesh, and man with it, returns to dust (Job. 34: 15). This is the physiological law of man's being: the soul is the animating principle that brings to fruition all life's possibilities, but it neither has nor confers the attributes of indestructibility or of never ending years.

Some would fain negative these conclusions by maintaining that the real self must have an independent existence since the body in life undergoes ceaseless change while personality persists. Is not the body of mature years, it is asked, totally different from that of the child? Yet there is no break in the chain of conscious life. When the "Ego or I" survives bodily change may it not also survive the stroke of death? That cannot be because the principle of growth preserves organic unity, while death disintergrates, and there is no evidence of the existence of the mind apart from the functioning of the brain. Moreover, it proves too much: it ignores the fact that atomic renewal is an organic law inseparable from growth, and is true of universal life. Conscious existence is highest developed in man, but the changes in physical being during the years are as continuous in the animal frame, while, according to its limited capacity, it is still able to preserve its personal identity. There is nothing in nature, in experience, in reason to suggest that the soul is an immaterial essence superior to all physical law, "the permanent being behind all change."

"Thou wilt not leave us in the dust,
Thou hast made man he knows not why,
He thinks he was not made to die;
And thou hast made him: thou art just.

Thus affirms Tennyson, but an inference, a surmise, an inward protest, is no argument in favor of continuity of life. Had God left men alone without light, or knowledge, or hope, or the offer of salvation, the remonstrance might have been justified, though the present gift of life is blessing enough to vindicate the goodness of God. But God has revealed himself in Jesus Christ; and not only is Christ the living pledge of immortality, but relationship to him is the only way to its attainment.

Herein lies "the gospel of the hereafter." The blessings Christ bestows come not by nature but by faith, by grace; and the bestowment of immortality is always conditional. It has to be sought for by patient continuance in well doing (Rom. 2: 7); and the character of the gift and the love of the giver cannot be apprehended aright so long as we harbor false notions of inherent life. One that is deathless needs no Savior; to one that is perishing the hope of salvation is priceless beyond words. If we would see Christ in his true character as the Savior of the world, we must see man as he is on the mortal plane, and see Christ's work in the light of human need. "God so loved the world that he gave his only beogtten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life". (John 3:16). Then let us "cease from man, whose breath is in his nostrils; for wherein is he to be accounted of?" (Isa. 2:22).

Signs of the Times

THE night cometh, nor does it seem afar off. It never appeared so nigh. The shadows are lengthening out, and falling with ominous gloom upon the valleys of earth. The dimness of twilight is beginning to make itself felt. It is settling down drearily upon our cities, and our solitudes; upon the power of our strength, and the palaces of our pomp, nor can the noisy rush of eager multitudes, hurrying to and fro for gain or pleasure, wholly still the utterance of fear and awe. Men cannot help forboding evil, for who can tell them what can be in the womb of darkness? Yet it is written also, "The day is at hand." The night though dark, well be brief and will be soon succeeded by a glorious day. But still of that day the night will be the forerunner. And this world's night is surely near. Matt. 24:16 says, "Let those which be in Judea flee into the mountain." It also speaks of wars and rumors of wars in this chapter.

For a while it seemed almost as if the world were at rest, as if its storms had spent themselves. But now all seems changed. Every day brings new indications of disquietude and convulsion. Few nations seem willing to draw the sword, yet every nation has her hand upon the hilt. Over the whole earth is heard the distant murmur of dread sound. And is this not the prelude to the last universal war (Ezek. 38; Zech. 14; Dan. 11:40-45; 12:1; Rev. 13: 7; 17:12, 16)? Is it not a near approach of him who, when earth's madness and ambition are at their height, when the summoned nations are gathered at Armageddon, girt for battle and slaughter, himself appears for their discomfiture and ruin? The state of the world is at present very ominous. Distress of nations with perplexity. Men are wondering what is coming on the earth.

Read Luke 21:25-27. This is God's picture of the state of men as the final crisis draws near. These things are attracting the attention of all serious thinkers. There is something in the state of the world so unsettled and pregnant with uncertain evil that every eye is moving in expectation of strange issues, and as if to catch the first sign of their approach. It is the night which shall precede the looked for day, when not only Israel but the whole earth shall arise and put on the garment of beauty to meet the presence of their King. It is no marvel that the world should deny that event. Peter speaks of the world's mocking. "There shall come in the last days scoffers saying, Where is the promise of his coming?" The church also says the Lord delayeth his coming. She slumbers and sleeps. But it is just at this time, in an hour when she thinks not, he arrives. It is often said, "Surely if the time were just at hand more of the people of God would believe it." But it is at the time they are counting on delay that the Bridegroom cometh. This passage ought ever to be in our minds so that none of us may be taken unawares, but be prepared. Then we have nothing to worry about. Let us walk in patient continuance in well doing (Rom. 2:6). If such is our position then the day of Christ will bring us glory, honor, immortality, and joy unspeakable for ever.

The classes who will receive the most attention from King Jesus, are the poor, needy, and destitute. He will redeem them from deceit and violence, and precious shall their blood be in his sight. The labor problem which baffles men today, will be solved by him. Instead of hundreds of thousands of anxious faces and hearts in wonderment as to when work is to be had, or how food is to be procured, the wonderful management of the great King will provide employment, food, home, and education.

The streets of the cities of the nations will be changed. A firm hand will be laid upon the gilt and glitter with which she is disguised. No longer will temptation to sin waylay the young man and maiden as they pass from toil to their homes; songs of drunken revelry will not fill the night air. And for a thousand years his reign shall last, purifying the earth, blessing all mankind with joy, and making this world a veritable paradise of God. At the end, when sin shall have had its history, the last evemy, death shall be destroyed.

Can we picture the scene? All we see are God's redeemed ones, to whom pain or sorrow or death can never come. And as the gaze wanders from mountain to vale, all nature seems to ring with a strange new harmony, and to shine with splendor. It is because God is with men and will be their God. Every creature is saying, "Blessing, honor, glory, and power unto him that sitteth upon the throne." We will see this in reality if we are faithful until the end. Our faith in him, baptism, and a walk through life in his companionship will be the means of giving us each a place in the kingdom of God.

SISTER MEERMANS.

THANK YOU!

Many thanks to the Young People of the Cleveland Church, for the beautiful flowers sent during my recent affliction.

Flowers are the emblem of good cheer,
The crowning glory of the year;
A foretaste of our Eden home,
That Christ will bring when he shall come.

May each, and all of you so live,
Pure as the flowers that you did give;
Then peace shall grace each happy hearth,
And sighs give place to joy and mirth.

Editorial

As surely as the shadow follows the light, so surely the act follows the will.

June 12th, at the home of the bride's parents, Brother Newton Smith and Sister Marie S. Huntley, were united in marriage. Brother and Sister Smith enter upon married life "heirs of the grace of life, that their prayers may not be hindered." They have the best wishes of friends and the prayers and congratulations of all the brethren and sisters for a happy and useful married life.

Universalism ignores faith in the Holy Scriptures in this life as necessary to future salvation, and thus practically is infidelity. Paul says: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Tim. 3:16, 17). John says: "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples which are not written in this book; but these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name" (John 20:30, 31). Universalism tells the infidel that a belief in the Scriptures is not necessary to salvation; that he will have life, holiness, and happiness in the world to come though he believes not one word of the Bible, and though he may never in this life, "believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God."

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

Dear Mr. Huggins:

Enclosed find check for which please send me your twelve lessons, "Bible Lessons on First Principles," and two copies of "The Faith Epitomized."

I take great pleasure in reading The Restitution and your editorials and replies on other articles therein.

If I had any criticism to make if would be that too much valuable room is wasted by writers in articles on non-essentials instead of at this time giving us strong meat, and what to look for in our present position in the next few years before us. History and prophecy are making fast, and the stars of the heavens are falling. Is it not wonderful to see things unfold ?

I wish you health and strength to carry on your glorious work, your noble work, for in all the world there is no greater; and I only envy you in that I have not the ability to do likewise.

Sincerely, H. W. RUSSELL.

Restitution readers who fail to avail themselves of the opportunity to study critically the entire series of Bible Lessons on First Principles by Brother Huggins are, to my mind, overlooking one of the most timely and also scripturally sound works to be found. There is a ring of truth in them throughout, which must appeal strongly to the unprejudiced student who is earnestly seeking the will and knowledge of God. In this connection it must be borne well in mind that God's ways are not man's and his judgments invariably contrary to human wisdom and fancy. Aside from being of great value to the church body, some of whom apparently have wandered away from doctrines and commandment taught and observed by the apostolic church, any one of the lessons would be a peaceable evangelist to put into the hands of your neighbor. Though we had millions to bestow in gifts to loved relatives and friends, they are nothing compared with the means of salvation. The cost of these lessons is certainly small, and if you cannot preach the gospel you can send these out through the mail into a perishing world to those you cannot otherwise reach. Let us work in every avenue possible while it is day, for the shadows of a dark night of destruction rapidly hastens on.

Kept by the Power of God

By S. Roxana Wince

How many pray to be "kept of God." and yet do not use the means that God has provided for that purpose. It is the gospel that is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth," and it is by this gospel that we are kept. It is to be a restraining hand, to hold us back from the committal of sin, and an impelling force to draw us on and ever on in the path of right. The Bible is God's guide-book to man. By it he shows us light, teaches us to go in the path of his commandments, his precepts, his statutes, to choose the way of truth, to lay before us his judgments, to stick to his testimonies; to observe his law with our whole hearts, to be devoted in his fear, and to have wherewith to answer him that reproacheth us.

By it he removes us from the path of lying; turns away our eyes from beholding vanity, makes us walk at liberty, gives us courage to speak of his testimonies before kings, and not be ashamed, to not decline from his law when the proud have us in derision, and not to forget it when the hands of the wicked have robbed us, makes his statutes our songs, causes us to hope, comforts us in affliction, makes us wiser than our enemies, causes us to refrain our feet from evil ways, orders our steps, holds us up and keeps us safe, does not let any iniquity have dominion over us, gives us great peace, makes us long for his salvation.

But how is it to have power to do all this if we do not read it: do not make it "the man of our counsel" ? To make it "the man of our counsel" is to make God "the man of our counsel"; for it is through his word that he communicates with us in these days. And just as solemn and as obligatory are those words upon us as if he were speaking to us face to face. If we sleight them we do it at our peril. Would we, were we standing in his presence ? Would we prefer to read a lie to reading his book ? Would a made-up story have more charms than the truth ? I do not think so.

When I hide his words in my heart, there is a fragrance about them, a beauty in them that nothing in all the world is like. And what keeping power they have! How could I sin with those words, standing out before me ? Do you want to be in God's keeping, dear brother, dear sister ? Read the book of God. Never get too busy to read. If you have no time to read the Bible you have no time to be saved; for God guides and saves through his word.

True he wants us to pray, and hears and answers us when we pray; yet is not his word the inspiration of our every prayer ? Would we have ever prayed had it not been for the book ? Commit his words to memory, repeat them often, and find in them a panoply that satan cannot pierce.

Thr Commandments of God

My Beloved:

Do you fully realize how valuable love is, and how essential it is to salvation ? We read in the Scriptures about the great love of God: that we are to love one another, love our neighbors, our enemies, etc. But how many fully realize the value of this love, and obey these commandments ? Can you hate your brother or neighbor, and still love God and the truth ? Hereby know we the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error.

Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love. In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him.

Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another. Herein is love made perfect, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment. If a man say, I love God and hateth his brother, he is a liar, for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he has not seen ? And this commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God loveth his brother also (1 John 4:6-21). He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now (1 John 2:9).

The lawyer came unto Jesus saying, Master, which is the great commandment in the law ? Jesus said unto him: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets (Matt. 22:36-40).

Do the so called Christians, and so called Christian nations, who have been slaughtering each other by the thousands, love their neighbors as themselves ? Do they love their enemies, and bless them, and do good to them that hate them, and pray for them, as Jesus states in Matt. 6:44 ? For if ye love them which love you what reward have ye ? Do not even the publicans the same ? (Matt. 5:46).

My beloved: Suppose that those in the true faith would disobey the laws of God, and would do likewise: we would then not only being murdering our neighbors and enemies, but we would be murdering true followers of Jesus and brothers in the faith. He that taketh the life of his brother or neighbor, is not the only one that is classed as a murderer by the laws of God, "but whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him" (1 John 3:15). He is classed with those that will have part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death (Rev. 21:8).

But some will say: "Suppose all in America would object to killing? What would keep a foreign nation from conquering the U. S. and abusing the women and children ?" My beloved, are you of so little faith ? Which is more able to give the greater protection; men with their modern arms and ammunition or Almighty God who created mankind ? Is man greater than his Creator ? Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish. Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God: which made heaven the earth, the sea, and all that therein is (Psa. 146:3-7).

Therefore I say unto you, take no thought for your life. Behold the fowls of the air: your heavenly Father feedeth them and careth for them. Are ye not much better than they (Matt. 6:25, 26). He that divideth the sea and made the waters to stand as an heap, that the children of Israel may walk through on dry land; and led them with a cloud in the day time, and with a light of fire in the night, and brought streams also out of the rocks, and rained down manna upon them to eat, and gave them the corn of heaven, and rained flesh upon them as dust, and feathered fowls like as the sand of the sea (Psa. 78:13-27). And delivered Daniel from the lion's den. And the three Hebrew children from the fiery furnace (Dan. 6:22; 3:28). Cast out devils, healed the sick, raised the dead (John 11:43, 44). Is not this same God also able to protect those that trust in him during these perilous times? My beloved, are you of so little faith?

As long as the children of Israel obeyed the commandments of God he protected them, but as soon as they disobeyed his laws, he sent the heathen nations to remove them out of his sight. And the Lord sent against them the bands of the Chaldees, and the bands of Syrians, and the bands of the Moabites, and the bands of the children of Ammon, and sent them against Judah to destroy it according to the words of the Lord which was spoken by his servants the prophets. Surely at the commandment of the Lord came this upon Judah to remove them out of his sight, for the sins of Manasseh according to all that he did. And also for the innocent blood that he shed, for he filled Jerusalem with innocent blood which the Lord would not pardon (2 Kings 24:2-4). If all the U. S. would obey the commandments of God, he would protect them as he did the children of Israel. But by disobeying the commandments of God, and following false teachers who teach damnable heresies by reason of whom the way of truth is evil spoken of, they bring upon themselves swift destruction (2 Pet. 2:12).

My beloved, let your light so shine before men that they may see your goods works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven (Matt. 5:16). By this we know that we love the children of God when we love God and keep his commandments. For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments, and his commandments are not grievous (2 John 5:2, 3).

My beloved, have a smile and a kind word for everyone; be happy, cheerful and loving. Let your salutations, conversations, and discussions be filled with love, cheerfulness, and meekness. And sanctify the Lord God in your heart; and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear (1 Pet. 3:15). By so doing you show forth your love for God, the truth and your neighbor, whom your may convert from the error of his way, and shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins (James 5:20). By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another (John 13:35). Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. Amen (Eph. 6:23, 24).

May our Savior and King soon come and establish his peaceful kingdom on the earth, when all will have love one to another, and righteousness will cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

Your brother in the blessed hope,

EUGENE C. MILLER.

The Symbols of Rev. 13

Editor of The Restitution:

Having been requested by Brother J. J. Heckman to criticise his articles on those symbols, I will offer a few thoughts on the subject. Brother Heckman takes the position that the two horned symbol represents the papacy, and has met its counterpart in the history of the past. He claims the papacy is a two powered nation like the Medes and Persians symbolized by the ram with two horns of Daniel 8. Now if the papacy fills these specifications Brother Heckmna has scored a point.

Brother Heckman finds the papacy a two horned power after it received the states of the church, making it a civil and an ecclesiastical power, this answering to the two horns of the two horned beast. It seems to me that he has proved too much for on the same principle the Medes and Persians have four horns, being two powers united, each having civil and ecclesiastical power. As far as I know the papacy is represented as a triple power. The pope wears a triple crown, the tiara (Webster on the word "tiara") "Pope Celestin resigns the tiara" (History of the popes, by DeCormenin, vol. 2, p. 30).

It is generally supposed that that states of the church were originally three kingdoms. Again it is said that the triple crown represents the pope's reign in heaven, hell, and in purgatory. In the history of the popes mentioned there is a picture of pope Martin V at the council of Basle wearing a tall triple crown.

There are several marks of the papacy that will not fit to the two horned symbol of Rev. 13:11.

(1) The papacy is the eleventh horn on Daniel's fourth beast (Dan. 7:8). Therefore it is part of the beast from the sea; the two horned beast is from the earth (Rev. 13:11).

(2) The papal horn plucks up three horns by the roots (Dan. 7:8). These were the Heruli; the Ostrogoths, and the Lombards (Barne's on Dan. 8). Barnes says. "It is a remarkable fact that the popes to this day wear a triple crown a fact that exists in regard to no other monarch as if they had absorbed under themselves three separate and distinct sovereignties."

In the papal horn are eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking great things. The papal eyes are its priests, bishops, and cardinals in all the world. The eyes and mouth are symbols of the papacy. And when this mouth is given to the Leopard beast (ch. 13:5) it proves that the papacy is represented in the leopard beast after the beast receives the mouth; because it then opens its mouth in blasphemy against God and makes war with the saints 1260 years. Three prominent marks of the papacy. The truth here would be readier understood if we recognize the fact that the papacy is a phase of the fourth beast having the ten horns (ch. 17:3), and all that is left of the beast to go with the false prophet into the lake of fire (ch. 19:20).

(4) His look was more stout than his fellows (Dan. 7:20). In all the great cities the papacy gets more than its share of the political plums, because of its working together, and the fear of its boycotts if offended. It stoutly enforces its demands, its "stout look" is always in evidence.

(5) The papacy makes war with the saints, and prevails against them until the judgment (Dan. 7:21, 22).

(6) Speaks great words against the Most High (Dan. 7:25).

(7) The saints are in his hand until a time, times, and the dividing of time: 1260 years.

(8) Exalts himself above God (2 Thess. 2:4).

(9) Sits in the temple of God (2 Thess. 2:4).

(10) Wears a triple crown (Webster on the word "tiara").

Not one of these maks of the papacy are applicable to the two horned beast; the marks of the two horned beast are not applicable to the papacy.

(1) He came up out of the earth; the papacy, a horn on the fourth beast, came from the sea (another beast).

(2) Lamblike horns, indicating its power to be humane and lamblike: thereby opposite of papal self-exaltation and tyranny.

(3) "He does great wonders." Had power to do them, whereas the papacy did lying wonders quite a contrast between them (another beast).

(4) Has no crowns on his horns; is democratic: while Rome, pagan, Christian, and papal has crowns.

It has become a proverb that drowning men catch at straws. Brother Heckagan gives us what he calls a clincher; it is the following: "And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him." R. V.: "in his sight" (Rev. 13:2).

Now Brother Heckman, if I had your learning and ability I could make your position on this question look like you had not the little toe of one leg to stand upon. We are in the time when knowledge is increased; and the two horned symbol is doing great wonders. You know if you only consider that electricity has devoured time and space. Woodrow Wilson, while crossing the Atlantic, was by wireless in touch with Washington; and the eyes of the papacy are her priests, bishops, and cardinals. They are in our country and in all the world. Rome knows all that is being done here: in fact all the word acts in the sight of each other. It is a feature of prophecy to speak in the language of the times in which the prediction is being fulfilled. All men that consider these things know that there is no nation that literally works in the sight of another nation: it is a literal impossibility.

Now I will make a few remarks on Brother Heckman's last article, No. 6, which is forcible and eloquent, and only lacks one element which I will not mention. I wished when I read it that I could write in his style.

(1) He finds the number 666 in the Latin kingdom. To this I must object because the prophecy says, "it is the number of a man, and is the number of his name."

(2) Why look for the number in Greek numerals, when all the papal services are in Latin?

(3) Brother Heckman goes to Dan. 7 to prove that the horn is the papacy, and then proves a parallel between the acts of the horn and the leopard beast, showing that both symbols represent the papacy; which is true only after the beast receives the mouth (vs. 5), but not before that.

I am glad that Brother Heckman has grasped the fact that the papal horn is the same as the beast after he receives the mouth, that is, in its last phase. History will teach us if we consider that when pagan Rome in the fourth century professed Christianity under Constantine that at that time the bishop of Rome did not exercise authority so as to be symbolized by the leopard beast. The change in the religion of the empire necessitated the change in the symbol, from the pagan dragon to the leopard beast. The first act of the papal horn was to pluck up three of the first horns by the roots, which did not occur until well into the sixth century (Dan. 7). The papal rule of 1260 years is not reckoned to commence till 606-610, answering to its full temporal power in 1870 A. D. The wounding of one of the heads of the beast is before the rise of the papacy to power. The healing being done by the papacy, the Christian bishops acting as physicians to the sick empire, and for their pay for their services they took the estate of the seventh head. Then the papacy is not one of the seven heads, but an eighth, and of the seven (ch. 17). Why the beast in not represented with eight heads I cannot say nor understand.

(4) Brother Heckman says: "Thus we see that the leopard beast had power given unto him to make war with the saints." Then the question, "who gave him this power?" His answer is, "the two horned beast should cause some other one to do the killing." "Here one was to kill, the other cause to kill." Here he makes the papal horn and the leopard beast to be the papacy. He has the papacy causing the papacy to kill the saints. And the papacy to make an image to the papacy. Evidently he has too many symbols of the papacy.

A writer in" The Investigator" of Jan. 1895, says: "It is very confusing to be told that the second beast includes the papacy, and yet the image he causes to be made also represents the papacy. And then to make matters still worse, we are told by those holding those views that the false prophet means the popes too."

(5) Brother Heckman says: "And I saw the beast (leopard no doubt) and the kings of the earth, and their armies gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army And the beast was taken and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him." Now if the leopard beast is the papacy, and the two horned beast represents the papacy, who is it that goes with the papacy into the lake of fire? (Rev. 19:19, 20).

The pen is mightier than the sword. The pen of W. Wilson, the mouth of the U. S. with his fourteen points, has broken Germany and Austria into pieces, as a rod of iron breaks an earthen vessel. And wonder of wonders, they kiss the rod that smote them, claiming Wilson's fourteen points. They too shout for Wilson. Truly Wilson is a wonder, a wise man from the west. Truly the pen is mightier than the sword. And truly the two horned symbol "doeth great wonders."

VICTORY

On to the conflict, soldiers for the right,
Onward with the spirit's sword, and march to the fight;
Truth be your watchword, sound the ringing cry,
Victory! Victory! Victory!

Chorus

Ever this the war-cry, victory! victory!
Ever this the war-cry victory!
Write it on your banners, waft it on the breeze.
Victory! Victory! Victory!

Fiercely it rages, deadly is the strife,
But the prize you will win will be endless life;
Jesus will crown you, your reward will be
Victory! Victory! Victory!

Valiant and cheerful, marching right along,
Every foe shall quit the field, though haughty and strong;
Fear shall oppress them, truth shall make them flee;
Victory! Victory! Victory!

Soon shall the war-fare and the conflict cease,
Soon shall dawn the welcome day of resting in peace;
Foes are subdued, we'll raise to heaven the cry
Victory! Victory! Victory!

Freedom, Liberty, Victory.

July the fourth is known as Independence Day and is America's greatest holiday, because it symbolizes victory over a foe, a victory that brought forth political freedom and liberty to live under its own constitution and laws.

As a political institution, America is not perfect. Still, we who live within its borders feel that it is the greatest country, the grandest government, and the one nearest to perfection of all governments under the sun.

But there is another freedom, liberty and victory that we desire to call your attention to.

Man, being disobedient to God's commands is a slave to sin. He is not free, for he is under bondage to sin. Isaiah, referring to Christ, says: "The spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound."

In the 8th chapter of John, many words of Jesus are recorded in reference to which the 30th verse records: "As he spake there words, many believed on him. Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed. And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free. They answered him, We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man: how sayest thou, ye shall be made free? Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, whosoever committeth sin is a servant of sin. And the servant abideth not in the house forever: but the Son abideth ever. If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

By this we see that there is a freedom far more important than political freedom, and that is freedom from sin, through faith in Jesus as the Christ the Son of the living God, the reward of which is eternal life, while the wages of sin is death (Rom. 6:23).

Now if we are in this glorious state of freedom, then shall we also have liberty. Note what Paul in writing to the Romans says: "Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God." And again, in 2 Cor. 3:16, Paul, referring to Israel says: "Nevertheless when it shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away. Now the Lord is that spirit: and where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty, but we all with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory even as by the spirit of the Lord."

Now, to the freedom we receive through renouncing sin, and living according to the will of God in Christ Jesus, we must add liberty. This brings us to the place where we desire to show you the result of possessing these two great blessings, freedom and victory. Suppose we turn to first John and reading the first four verses of the fifth chapter we have these words:

"Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God; and every one that loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of him. By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments. For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not grievous. For whosoever is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

We now have that blessed trinity of freedom, liberty, and victory. Not the earthly kind, which of itself is great and not to be despised; but of a heavenly order, a freedom that liveth forever, a liberty that endureth for all time, and a victory that is everlasting all to be enjoyed here, all to be enjoyed throughout eternity. "Therefore come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." Freedom, Liberty, Victory!

Man and Freedom

Man was free to begin with as free as the beasts of the earth and the birds of the air. Who, then enslaved humanity? Man himself. So when the man seeks liberty, he seeks to free himself from conditions that he has imposed on his own kind - to free himself from "Man's inhumanity to Man." It is Desire selfish desire for conquest, possession and control that has enslaved mankind. The man that seeks liberty then, should have no place in his breast for selfish desire. If, underneath his feelings of revolt against the Tyrant and the Master, there burns in his own soul the flame of selfish desire, how can he condemn those that aspire to be masters of the world? How would he himself use supreme power if it were his? Would he dominate others with an iron hand, or would he lend his strength to the weak? When a man has answered that question to his own satisfaction, knowing in his soul that he has been truthful with himself, he may justly claim to be a lover of liberty.

Our Weekly Puzzle

"When this corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

What is the meaning of "corruptible"?
What does "immortality" signify?
Where, in the Old Testament, is written the passage from which part of this lesson is taken?
What is the meaning of the word "victory"?
Who wrote the above?
Where can the passage be found?
Answer in next issue.

Answer to puzzle in last issue:
"Sion" is the Greek form of Zion.

The Old Testament passage from which this is taken can be found in Isaiah 28:16.

The stone is Jesus Christ.

The difference between the two classes mentioned, is, that "you therefore which believe" are those who, having faith in Jesus as the Christ, the Son of the living God, know that he represents God in all of his plans and purposes, and that it is in, and through Jesus that God's blessings shall be dispensed to his people; while the "disobedient" are those who ignore God and his Christ and live selfish and worldly lives.

The passage can be found in 1 Peter 2:6-8.

Treatment of Morbus Sabbaticus

Last week we printed an article, contributed by Sister Marion L. Hawxhurst, entitled, "Morbus Sabbaticus." This same sister has also given us a remedy for this dread disease, of which if any of our readers are afflicted we trust they will follow the directions and become cured:

On Sunday mornings rise early and thank God that you have been permitted to see the light of another day. Use plenty of cold water on the face, and after acknowledging God as the source of all blessings, and thanking him for providing our daily food, raiment, and shelter, eat a plain but hearty breakfast. Then mix and take internally a goodly sized dose of the following: Will, Energy, Push, Determination, Self-respect, Respect for God's day, Love for God's book Desire to meet God's people in the house of God, Reverence to God, and a desire to be somebody. After stirring well add a little spirit of love for your fellows to insure sweetness. Repeat the dose every five minutes until church time unless relief comes sooner. The above with a short silent prayer every once in a while has been known to effect a permanent cure, even in some of the worst cases.

Whenever the weather is stormy an outward application of storm shoes, rubber coat, and umbrella will be most beneficial. This remedy is prescribed as a preventative as well as a cure. Suppose we all try it.

Achievement

Every man's soul is a gallery; he can hang it with works of art, he can fresco it with faithfulness and decorate it with beauty, or he can mar the walls with half done and botched work; he can hang it with daubs instead of beautiful pictures, he can blot and bespatter it, he can stain and spoil it. He cannot leave the walls blank, for if he is idle they will grow dingy and grimy, moldy and forbidding; idleness will smite, corrode and blast. Something he must do, and every touch of the brush is indelible. He cannot change or erase it, and begin again. Every indifferent or careless stroke will remain forever, to reproach him for his folly.

Christ and His Gifts

Is there aught of good that I withhold,
  Rich gifts of jewels, or grains of gold?
Far richer treasures I hold in store;
  Eternal life, I can die no more.
My best, my all I gave for thee;
  Wilt thou accept this gift from me?

'Twas I that was promised in days of old;
  Prophets and seers have oft foretold,
The days of my life, and of my death,
  From my cradle to my parting breath.
I gave my life, my all for thee;
  What hast thou given to man for me?

I trod o'er Canaan's hills and plains;
  I healed their sick, relieved their pains;
I fed the hungry, raised the dead;
  I had not where to lay my head;
I gave my life my best for thee;
  The fruit of my labor I shall see.

On Calvary's cross my blood was shed;
  I am risen, your triumphant head;
To heaven, I your high priest have gone;
  I am the first born, God's only Son.
My life, my all I gave for thee;
  Go preach my gospel o'er land and sea.

At the promised time I'll come again,
  On David's throne, a King to reign;
My kingdom spread o'er all the earth;
  All made immortal in the new birth.
Eternal life I'll give to thee,
  If thou in life hast followed me.

The harvest home, the angels bring,
  Jewels for God and Christ our King;
To heaven's high dome let praise ascend;
  Joy no more can have an end.
My best, my all I gave for thee;
  I claim thy all in return to me.

Heavenly Wisdom and Peace

The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated; full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy. And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace.

The Virgin's Son

An Antidote for Unitarianism

A Sermon by Robert G. Huggins

Text:

Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign: Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son and shall call his name Immanual. Butter and honey shall he eat, that he may know to refuse the evil, and choose the good. For before the child shall know to refuse the evil, and choose the good, the land that thou abhorrest shall be forsaken of both her kings.—Isaiah 7: 14-16

THERE HAVE been two interpretations of this prophecy for several years; and it has been conceded by the advocates of both views that this passage of Scripture, which we now propose to make extended remarks upon by way of elucidation, is difficult to satisfactorily explain. The first position, strenuously contended for by Jews, Deists, and Unitarians, is that the text only relates to Isaiah's son and has nothing to do with the Messiah; the second view, which we think is right, is that there are two prophecies, the first one relating to Christ (vs. 14), the second, to Isaiah's son (vs. 16).

THE SIGN

"The Lord himself shall give you a sign: Behold a virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." We are assured in Matt. 1:23 that our Lord was the Son spoken of here. But our friends who deny the Messianic character of the prophecy and therefore the divine paternity of Jesus, have a reputation for stigmatizing as spurious any text which does not jingle withe their belief. So it becomes necessary for us to examine the text deliberately and critically. Oth, the Hebrew word translated "sign" in the passage, is translated "miracle" in Deut. 11:3; Num. 14:22. Isa: 7:14, with oth translated as in these texts, would read: "The Lord himself shall give you a miracle: Behold a virgin shall conceive and bear a son," etc.

Oregon Bible College
Oregon, Illinois

Now here we have a miracle associated with a virgin, with the result that a son is developed. But, say our friends, "away with the miraculous Joseph was the father of Jesus. Isaiah's wife was to have a son; and that is what is meant." The best reply to our skeptical critics is found in the circumstances of the text. Consider, dear reader that the prophet solemnly addressed the house of David in the words, "Hear ye now, O house of David" (vs. 13), that he added an important and significant "behold" (vs. 14): that the "Lord himself" would do something out of the ordinary; that a sign or miracle was to be performed; that a son was to be born, not a son of man, as was usual, but a son of woman: that he was to be born of a "Virgin" (an unmarried female); that the child was to be called Immanuel (God with us) all this, and yet we are told that nothing more was meant than that Isaiah's wife, a married woman, was to have a son!

We have been asked if the miraculous birth of Christ were true, how could an event hundreds of years in the future be a sign at the time when the prophecy was delivered. Ahaz refused a miracle God offered to perform then, so God promised to the house of David a sign to be performed afterwards. Oth, a sign, means not only something done at the present to induce faith in something future, but also something done afterward, proclaimed previously in confirmation of something foretold. Let the reader mark this proposition with care, and let him note the following illustrations of its truth: When the Assyrians were marching against Jerusalem in the days of Hezekiah the king, Isaiah prophesied that the city should not be taken and said, "This shall be sign (oth) unto you," and then specified several particulars, all of them future (Isa. 37:30). Again: When Moses was commissioned to deliver the Israelites from Egypt, God assured him of success and told him: "This shall be a sign unto you: when thou hast brought forth the people ye shall serve God upon this mountain" (Ex. 3:12). Once more: in Matt. 12: 38-40 our Lord gave to unbelievers a "sign" which could not possibly have been understood by them at the time he gave it. These texts and others which might be quoted, show that a sign or miracle, may be in the future, hundreds of years for that matter, provided that the man or body of men, to whom the declaration of a sign was made, shall exist to see the thing accomplished. As the sign spoken of in our text was promised to the "house of David," it is hardly necessary to say that this house was in existence when our Savior was born and saw the fulfilment of the prophecy in the birth of the Lord Jesus.

THE VIRGIN

When the prophet said, "The Lord himself shall give you a sign," he elaborated his meaning in these subsequent remarks. "Behold a virgin shall conceive and bear a son," etc., intimating a relation between the sign and the virgin. The word virgin is from a root which means "to be hid." Young says almah, translated "virgin" in Isa. 7:14 means "concealment, unmarried female." Here we have a clear intimation that the "son" promised was to be conceived by an unmarried woman. Another bit of information worth pasting on the walls of your memory is, that the Hebrew and the Latin, also the Greek in Matt. 1:23 have the article "the virgin," referring to a particular one, "the woman" (Gen. 3:15). When we ask what particular virgin is meant, we are told that she was to be of the "house of David" (Isa. 7:13), that Mary is twice called a virgin in Luke 1:27; and that she was the one who was so "highly favored" (vs. 28) of God as to be selected by him for his handmaid (vs. 38) Since she was so much graced by the Lord in being honored by him as the one to fulfill his Messianic prophecies, she has been called "blessed among women" (vs. 42). Since the "tender mercy of our God" was manifested toward her in the motherhood of "the day spring from on high" (vs. 78), people in "all generations" (vs. 48) have called her blessed, except a few Deists and Unitarians.

Realize it thoroughly, reader: The Hebrew word almah translated "virgin" in Isa. 7:14 is a proper and distinct substantive for an "unmarried female" (Young). The rejectors of Christ's Sonship say the word only means a young woman If this were true, virginity would not be excluded But in point of fact this is not true. Almah occurs in the Hebrew Scripture six times: it is translated "virgin" four times (Gen. 24:43; Cant. 1:3; 6:8; Isa. 7:14) and maid twice (Ex. 2:8; Prov. 30:16). In every text where the word occurs it means an unmarried female. Even in Canticles where the word "virgin" is applied to the church it retains its primary sense; for all our readers know that the church is a "chaste virgin" (2 Cor. 11:2) to be married to the Lord at his coming (Rev. 19:7). And what we have said of Almah, the Hebrew for virgin, is also true of parthenos, the Greek for the same word. Parthenos is translated "virgin" thirteen times in the New Testament. That it means an unmarried female Paul is careful to explain in 1 Cor. 7:28, 34. Therefore when the prophet wrote, "The Lord himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son," he used words which cannot honestly be interpreted to mean anything else than that a miracle was to be performed upon a virgin which would cause her to conceive and bear a son without the intervention of man. The prophecy was literally fulfilled when the "power of the Highest" overshadowed the virgin Mary. The child begotten in her was of the Holy Spirit. The Greek says "begotten" instead of "conceived," as in our text. See the margin in Matt. 1:20. That the Holy Spirit, God's power in official manifestation, should concentrate itself upon Mary and induce her conception without the agency of man, literally and beautifully fulfilled the ancient prophecies generally, and accomplished Isaiah's "signs" particularly. There is great force and beauty sometimes in the word "therefore," and here is an instance of it: "The Holy Spirit shall come upon thee, the power of the highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God" (Luke 1:35).

IMMANUEL

Not only was the son spoken of in this passage of Scripture to be begotten by divine power and have a virgin for his mother, but he was to have a name suggestive of his divine origin. In the Hebrew Scriptures names are generally significant of some meaning. Now Immanuel means God with us. This little bit of truth gives the death blow to the claim that Mahershalalhashbaz (Isa. 8:1) was the child called Immanuel. Mahershalalhasbaz means, "In making haste to the spoil, he hasteneth the prey." Jesus is the Greek dressing for Yahhoshua, which means (Yah) God (shuah) shall save. Mahershalalhasbaz and Immanuel are as wide apart in meaning as the antipodes. But Jesus and Immanuel are identical in meaning. We have shown the doctrinal identity of Jesus and Immanuel. But those who believe in the human paternity of our Lord, cannot show the least affinity between Mahreshalalhasbaz and Jesus or Immanuel. They cannot reconcile Mahershalalhasbaz with the predicted name of Immanuel. Jesus alone of the human race can wear this great name. And the reason he could properly be called Immanuel was because God was manifested in the flesh (1 Tim. 3:16) in the person of his Son, hence he was Immanuel, God with us. Our Lord was both surprised and grieved at Philip, because he was slow to understand that "he that hath seen me hath seen the Father" (John 14:9). We are sure that Immanuel in Isa. 7:14 is Christ, for the reason that "to him gave all the prophets witness" (Acts 10: 43); and because the prophecy there culminates in these words: "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom . . . The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this" (Isa. 9:6, 7). The concluding words of this prophecy, "the zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this," tallies splendidly with our text, "The Lord himself shall give you a sign." Christ was made of a woman" (Gal. 4:4) like the rest of humanity; he was a "stone" (1 Pet. 2:8) from the same quarry; but he was dug out by the "Lord himself." Human agency is excluded when the "Lord himself" "performed this." So Jesus was brought into being "without hands" (Dan. 2:34), without human aid or interference.

The divine begettal of our Lord explains the names and titles which are given to him in the Holy Book. He wears names and titles which are too sacred for any mere man to claim. No mere mortal of the dust could claim to be Immanuel, God with us. What man of human origin could lawfully claim to be "the mighty God, the everlasting Father" (Isa. 9:7)? Upon the Unitarian and Jewish hypothesis that Jesus was merely a man among men, how can he wear the name of "the mighty God"? How can he be called "the everlasting Father?" Can he whom David "in spirit called Lord" (Matt 22:45), be nothing but a mere man? A father is always superior to his son. If Jesus was only David's son by natural generation I ask: Upon what principle agreeable to Jewish genealogy, does David call his son "Lord"? If he was only the natural offspring of David, and nothing more, how can he be David's "root" (Rev. 22:16)? He is called "the Lord of hosts, the King of glory" (Psa. 24:10), Elohim (45:3), and the "Lord our righteousness" (Jer. 23:5). Upon what principle of Unitarianism can the Messiah be styled "the Lord of hosts, Jehovah of armies, their God"? Can a mere man be Jehovah? Where in all the Book of God is a mere man called Elohim, or "the Lord our righteousness, Yahweh of Israel, our righteousness"? Where is the man that can say: "I am the Lord thy God, from the land of Egypt. Thou shalt know no other gods but me . . I will be your King" (Hos. 13:10)? Has there been, is there now, or will there ever be a mere man in all this wide world that can say: "I am the Lord thy God, from the land of Egypt"? In what sense can the uprise of a natural son of David fulfill the promises of God that He would be the Messiah, which as a matter of fact, is a perfect parallel to the memorial name of God assumed at the bush, "Jehovah I will be" (Ex. 3:14). "I will be thine Elohim, your Messiah." Such names and titles as these, and many others similar to them, are unintelligible on the supposition that Jesus was the son of Joseph.

BUTTER AND HONEY

Chemah, the Hebrew word translated "butter" in our text, means curdled milk, cream, cheese. This definition of the word enables us to understand why butter is sometimes spoken of as the cheese produced by churning milk (Prov. 30:33), and at other times as meaning the cream of milk, or simply milk. This is why it is distinguished from cheese (2 Sam. 17:29). Curdled milk makes a splendid drink; and as the acid in it is very cooling, it was highly prized by men who lived in the east (Job 20:17). God called the Land of Promise "a land flowing with milk and honey" (Ex. 3:8). This description of Palestine was not an exaggeration; it was literally true (Num. 13:27; 1 Sam. 14: 55). The bees were so numerous in the Holy Land that they made honey in the carcass of the lion slain by Samson (Judges 14:8). "Wild honey" was so abundant that John the Baptist lived on it and locusts (Matt. 3:4). The locust here mentioned was the large, leaping locust of the east, the food of the poor (Lev. 11:22).

Now, in the wonderful prophecy we are considering, the language reads, "Butter and honey shall he eat." The prophet had just said that a son was to be born of a virgin as the result of a "sign," and that he would be "Immanuel," or God with us. It seems that when he says "butter and honey shall he eat," he wants to impress upon us that while the child would be divinely begotten, and would be a manifestation of God, yet he would be born in poverty, and would eat the same kind of food customary for infants to eat. He would share the same nature of sin and death, and would eat the same food other children ate during his infantile state (Luke 2:52). His human nature in no way militates against his sonship relation. "God sent forth his Son made of a woman" (Gal. 4:4). The words here used, "sent" and "made of a woman" show that he was God's Son while he was in the human nature. In Matt. 21:33-39, we learn that God had sent various prophets as servants to preach the word; but the people misused them. Then it says, "He sent unto them his Son, saying, They will reverence my Son." But because he was the Son, he was also the "heir," and for this reason they killed him. When did God "send" his Son? Not after his resurrection, but before it.

Some try to tell us that Christ was not God's Son until after his resurrection. But the order of our Scripture here is first, God "sent" his Son, second the people said, "This is the heir; come let us kill him, and the inheritance shall be ours." Then Jesus was the Son and heir before they killed him, and, therefore, the Son of God in the days of his flesh. An adopted Son, did I hear you say? Why should he be called God's Son in contrast to the prophets who are called servants, if he was only an adopted son as they were? If he was only the son of Joseph, why should God expect the people to "reverence" Joseph's son more than anyone else?

But to return from this digression. We find that Isa. 7:14, 15 is a comprehensive prophecy of the Messiah, "the Word made flesh" (John 1:14). His divine begettal is indicated by the "sign"; his mother by the "virgin"; and his humanity by the food he eats: "Butter and honey shall he eat." Though identified with fallen man in his sinful nature, God, and not man, "prepared" the body of our Lord, as Paul shows by his quotation from the fortieth Psalm in Hebrews 10:7. The prophet Isaiah knew that his prophecy would be "too wonderful" for some people to believe, hence he puts this question to those who do not believe his writings: "Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?" (Isa. 53:1). This question shows that the prophet anticipated that some would not accept his "report" as true: it would be "too wonderful for them to believe." What is your report about, Isaiah, that you foresee some will not believe? "The arm of the Lord." When Jesus was born it was said, "He hath shown strength with his arm" (Luke 1:51). Of course he means Jesus: for after the prophet asked the question, he gave such a brilliant prophecy of the Messiah, that hundreds of years after it was written, Philip won a man to the belief and service of Christ by its use (Acts 8:23-36). Let us now go to the 53rd chapter of Isaiah, and see what "report" the prophet made about the "arm of the Lord"—the Christ: "He shall grow up as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground" (Isa. 53:2). How can a "tender plant" grow in "dry ground" without an exercise of divine power? Some of the strongest and hardiest of plants in the vegetable kingdom will grow in a bank of sand. But no "tender plant" will. Dear reader, accept the "report" of Isa. 11:14, 15, and then you can see how the divine energy of our Lord begot and caused to "grow up before him" the "tender plant" of the Lord Jesus, who, through his "root" was fed by the "dry ground" out of which frail human nature was made (Gen. 2:7), yet having an heavenly origin (John 3:13) and perfect character, he was well pleasing to the Father, who raised him from the dead and gave him glory. Believe the "report," make Jesus your Christ, Lord, Savior, and Friend; and when he comes in glory, he will exalt you to share with him the youth and vigor of immortality.

Another Prophecy

We have now explained in logical order the Messianic prophecy of Isa. 7:14, 15. Our concluding thought is this: We have in Isaiah 7:16 another prophecy independent and separate from the one we have expounded. That it is a distinct prophecy we affirm for the following reasons:

1. The Lord directed the prophet Isaiah to take his son, Shearjashub, when he went to meet Ahaz, no doubt with the design that the child's presence would serve some purpose; yet no use is made of his son unless it is made in the prophecy recorded in the 16th verse (vs 3).

2. The prophecy of the Messiah in the 14th and 15th verses was fulfilled seven hundred years after it was uttered; the prophecy in the 16th verse was to be accomplised before Shearjashub arrived at the years of discretion "before the child shall konw to refuse the evil" (vs. 16).

3. The first prophecy is plural, and addressed to the "house of David"; the second is singular, and addressed to Ahaz, for it tells of the destruction of "both kings" (vs. 16); and then continues in the following language which cannot be understood as addressed to anyone but Ahaz: "The Lord shall bring upon thee and upon thy people and upon thy father's house, days," etc. (vs. 17).

4. The same word that is translated "for" in the 16th verse is rendered "but" in verse 13: "Is it a small thing for you to weary men, but will you weary my God also?" Dr. Kennicott in a sermon on this text which he preached at the University of Oxford, May 19, 1765, said that the old English Bibles printed in 1535, 1537, 1538, 1549 and 1750, translated the 16th verse, "but before this child shall know to refuse the evil." "But" distinctly marks the transition from one prophecy to the other.

5. The word translated "the child" in the 16th verse should be rendered "this child." I make this affirmation not only upon the authority of the old English versions before referred to, but the Greek and other ancient translations confirm my statement; for in Gen. 48, when Jacob blessed the two sons of Joseph, he used the same word in the plural form which Isaiah uses in the singular number, "these children." Our translators of the Bible represent the ripest and best scholarship of the world, and they have often expressed the emphatic article by "this" and "that" in the singular number, and by "these in the plural form. To cite a few examples: "There is nothing before our eyes, but this manna" (Num. 11:6); "Make this fellow return" (1 Sam. 29:4); "I have not sent these prophets" (Jer. 23:21); "This year thou shalt die" (28:16) When we say that Isa. 7:16 should be rendered "this child," we are hiding behind the best scholarship in the world. The translation is fully vindicated.

6. Shearjahub was the child referred to (Isa. 7:3). His name means, "A remnant shall return." A powerful confederacy had formed against Ahaz, and as the enemy entered the land of Judah the heart of the king and his people was moved "as the trees of the wood are moved with the wind" (vs. 2). It was a time of fear and consternation The prophet first gives the "house of David" (vs. 13) a prophecy of the Messiah. "The Lord himself shall give you a sign" (vs. 14). Though this predicted event was a long distance in the future, it gave them present consolation, as it assured them of the preservation of the house of David. Then the prophet turned to Ahaz with Shearjashub in his arms a child about two years old, and said to him, "But before this child shall know to refuse the evil and choose the good, the land that thou abhorrest shall be forsaken by both her kings." This prophecy was soon after fulfilled. The words "this child," are words of action, like when our Lord said, "Destroy this temple," pointing to his body (John 2:18, 19).

The Destiny of Man

If a man die shall he live again? (Job 14.14).

Man's destiny or future after death is a question which engages the attention of every one at some time or another during his earthly career. The destiny of mankind is of grave concern and worthy of contemplation. Whether he will admit it or not, it occupies some thought in the mind of even the most disbelieving and godless. Man is not too busy or preoccupied but what he finds moments to allow himself to dwell upon this apparently obscure and perplexing problem. Many and numerous have been the writings by learned men on this subject, but for a knowledge that will throw a clear light upon the matter, we have but one resource, and that is to the inspired and infallible word of God. It is alone to revelation we must turn, as it is the only source from which we can obtain definite information. Let us see what it tells us regarding him.

Created by the hand of God, and pronounced perfect in the making, he was destined to enjoy life without cessation. What intervened to take from him this felicity and privilege? Sin, in the form of disobedience. "And the Lord God commanded him saying: Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat, but the tree of the knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat, for in the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die. Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made; and he said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden? And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden, but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die. And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that is was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat."

Men are always helped by knowing the truth. The serpent said, "Ye shall not surely die." God said, "Ye shall surely die." The world has [illegible] the serpent's word in preference to that of God's. To prefer a delusion [illegible] because it pleases, to a truth which makes sad, is the deepest and [illegible] of all [illegible]. "If believing what is not true makes the [illegible] better [illegible] then is the [illegible] and earth's base built on stubble." He makes a contribution to humanity who is [illegible] to love and follow at all cost the truth.

Man was formed of the dust of the ground, which material was used for the lower as well as higher forms of life. Yea, all have one breath, so that man hath no pre-eminence above a beast. All go into one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again. "Thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to dust, and in that very day their thoughts perish. If he set his heart upon man, and if he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath, all flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again unto dust" (Job 34:14, 15).

Whither are we going? Unnumbered millions have perished through war, pestilence and famine during the past four years. Death stalks freely through the earth and claims its victims on every side. Man's heritage is death, and death is the end of life. It is no respector of persons. "The wages of sin is death," and that applies to every mortal being. All sin there is none perfect but the Father.

But may we not present another aspect of the question for your consideration. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved" (John 3:16, 17) Job tells us of his hope and anticipation in the enjoyment of this deathless state and we will use his language: "For I know that my Redeemer liveth and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself and mine eyes shall behold and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." And again in Psalms 49:15, "But God will redeem my soul or being from the power of the grave: for he shall receive me." This is his promise to those who love him and keep his commandments.

Man's destiny is not to be an eternal sleep, [illegible] he is to enjoy life after this, a life in which there will be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, nor any more pain, but everlasting joy and gladness. It is for all believing and obedient [illegible] "Let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." There will be [illegible] victory, [illegible] and attainment in all that is good and desirable. We [illegible] ourselves that [illegible] if we [illegible] the [illegible] walk in the way and do the will of God [illegible] in this world, and that behind the [illegible] death there are things which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, and which have not entered into the heart of man [illegible] them that love him.

When [illegible] Chrysostom was [illegible] his [illegible] robes, holding a scepter [illegible] copy of the gospels, and [illegible] world [illegible] his own soul?" It is [illegible] one of the greatest [illegible] presented as contrasted [illegible] the insignificance of his [illegible] with the vast importance of his destiny.

Other Papers

Editorial Policy of The Restitution

Correspondents have broached the question of the wisdom or lack of wisdom of publishing a number of papers. We wish to discourage them by taking up this subject. Because we are too few in number to support one paper as it should be supported, makes the multiplication of periodicals a questionable enterprise; but whether it be wise or unwise, the individual right for doing such things [illegible] It [illegible] subject should not have commenced [illegible] place, and [illegible] dities. We [illegible] ference to [illegible] the future.

There is a reason for the publication of a few papers. The reason is more obvious when we state that the policy of The Restitution, since we have been Editor, has been to publish all MSS. which are received, if they are readable. It has frequently been that careless writers have sent us articles for publication written with a lead pencil, so [illegible] and scribbled that they were unreadable. These were tossed into the waste basket, not because they were "rejected," but because we would have to rewrite them before their use was possible. We have the reputation of being "narrow," which [illegible] we are glad to bear for Christ's sake (Matt. [illegible]), but the [illegible] is that we are so "broad minded" that, if a Catholic priest were to write us a good MSS. [illegible] say it fearlessly [illegible] proven, [illegible] the [illegible] "rejected" [illegible] MSS. [illegible] the Editor [illegible] United States. [illegible] other papers so that [illegible] the Faith [illegible] other papers are [illegible]. And [illegible] ing multiplied. Why? Not because [illegible] no room in The Restitution [illegible] for the defense of [illegible] our "open-mindedness" [illegible] publish [illegible] everything, there goes the "narrowness" of excluding every deviation from the gospel of Christ. We have no admiration for an Editor, the [illegible] creature of a party, who knows [illegible] he has hooked and pilfered from his party, and who sneakingly "rejects" every objectionable article by just silently ignoring it. Editors, generally, are only party echoes. They rarely have an idea in advance of the party in whose service they write. They are great in "rejecting" MSS., while we publish all, whether written by friends or foes, and whether they teach truth or error. And yet The Restitution notwithstanding all [illegible] has never allowed the chit-chat of heretics and twaddle of renegades to compromise the truth in any fundamental particular. For while anything sent us is [illegible] sure to appear, if it is not in harmony with the truth [illegible] editorial strictures are sure to appear also. The word of God is better than any editor's opinion, and we therefore are not afraid [illegible] "reject" no MSS. through fear. But this editorial policy makes many people afraid of The Restitution. [illegible] all of goats is not a pleasant sensation for the goats. Exposing error always makes its advocates feel uncomfortable. These are the people who get disgruntled at The Restitution, and who cry "narrowness" in the face of all our liberality and broadmindedness, and who, unwilling to dance to editorial music, prefer a paper in which they can give their [illegible]

Pre-existence of Jesus Christ

And now, O Father, glorify thou me [illegible] 17[illegible]

The advocates of the personal pre-existence of Christ quote this passage with great assurance, and it [illegible] but we are equally [illegible] posed to their theory on this subject. To understand it correctly, we must learn who offers this prayer. It is Jesus of Nazareth, for the chapter commences thus: "These words spake Jesus." Who is "Jesus"? It is that personage of flesh, blood and bones who was born of Mary. [illegible] understand correctly, [illegible] text [illegible] Jesus [illegible] the [illegible] Jesus who was [illegible] [illegible] say that Jesus is the first [illegible] not exist [illegible] glory before the world was, but that it was the Son of [illegible] the context, but the reverse, for it asserts that it was Jesus in the flesh who had this glory. We must [illegible] the Son of God, not Jesus of Nazareth, [illegible] are two distinct beings, and yet but one person? What better is this than the trinitarian hypothesis which makes three distinct persons but one God? It is only a [illegible] resort to mysterious principles; they must say it is a mystery, but we must believe it. There can be nothing more [illegible] than this, to talk about believing a mystery, is to talk nonsense; for a mystery is not to be understood, and no one can believe what he does not understand. We may and do believe there are [illegible] mysteries, but to tell how they exist is an impossibility, and we can therefore have no faith [illegible] the matter.

If the Bible revealed to us that Jesus of Nazareth was constituted of two persons, that the one was the Son of God who existed before the world was, and the other was the man Christ Jesus and was born of Mary, that the first was either made into the other, or entered and took the other up into him, or that the two were somehow, not explained, made into one person, we would believe it, and call the modus operandi a mystery, which we could not comprehend. But as the word gives no such thing but on the contrary minutely informs us how Jesus was conceived and born, we can have no faith in this two-nature, or two-persons-in-one scheme, but must give our hearty assent to the simple truth as revealed in the inspired word about the matter.

It was Jesus of Nazareth who had glory with the Father before the world was. But how did he have this glory? We understandingly and confidently answer, in the immutable purpose of God, and present the following evidence to prove the assertion: "Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am: that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me: for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world" (vs. 24).

This passage teaches that Jesus desired that his apostles might, as the text reads, be "where I am." Where was that? Where he will be, is evidently the meaning, for they were then where he then was. Where will he be in the future? On the throne of his glory, in his kingdom, and he desired that his apostles might be with him in that glorious reign, and in another place promises that they shall "when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel" (Matt. 19:28). "And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel" (Luke 22:30). Here is where Christ desired that his apostles might be with him and behold the fulness of his glory. Is it contended that he is now enjoying the glory for which he prayed at the right hand of God? then we ask, did Christ pray that his apostles might ascend to [illegible] so, and see his glory there? If so why did he tell them on the same occasion, that "whither I go ye cannot come"? (John 13:33), and, "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you to myself; that where I am (shall be) there ye may be also" (John 14:2, 3). The apostles are [illegible] Jesus [illegible] has not yet "come again," hence he has not yet received them to himself, consequently they have not yet seen the glory that [illegible] was given to Christ, and which he had with him before the world was. The conclusion is therefore inevitable that this glory is yet in the future not so in fact, but in the purpose of God, Christ existed and had glory before the world was. Hence this text does not favor the pre-existence theory.

Patriarchs, prophets and apostles [illegible] this glory, and rejoiced in hope of realizing it in the kingdom. This glory did not precede but it was to follow the sufferings of Christ (1 Pet. 1:11). The sufferings of Christ have not yet terminated, and will not, until his church, for whom he now suffers, shall be freed from suffering by the Lord at his coming in power and great glory. Then the glory given to Christ, which was to follow his sufferings, will be beheld and shared by the apostles and all the glorified saints. O, may this long-looked-for day of glory soon dawn! Only Two Papers

Brother Donaldson suggests that there should be but two papers published in the interests of the gospel, as set forth by the Church of God, both papers being printed and issued from the same office.

To my mind the situation suggests a great house on fire, and filled with helpless people who do not know the way out. A fireman arrives on the scene, and proceeds to rescue a few of the perishing occupants; soon other firemen arrive, but are told by the first not to interfere that this is his fire; he found it and was here first.

"But," said the other, "the case is urgent; you cannot save the half of these people, can you?"

"No; but I will save as many as I can, and I do not believe in a plurality of life savers and methods in disasters like this one; you gentlemen will please pass on and not interfere. This is my business."

There was no time for further argument, and as screams of fear and pain rang from the doomed building, they thrust the selfish one aside, and rushing to the rescue saved many who otherwise would have perished.

Dear ones, this old world is on fire; the teeming millions face eternal death. Let us all hasten to the rescue. If a brother thinks he can reach some with a printed sheet, ask him not if it be daily, weekly, monthly, or yearly; criticize only the message therein. If that be sound, grasp his hand and say, God bless and speed you my brother. Have I anything in the shop that will help you in the good work? If so, and I can spare it, it is yours. Let us not be afraid of too many papers, provided always they print the truth. Let us not be afraid of too many preachers, provided they preach the truth. Let the gospel message go broad cast, by pen or voice, and see to it that we hinder it not, but with a hearty God bless and speed you, brother, to cheer the bearer on his way. Let no selfish thought that some rival speaker or publisher may eclipse us place a thorn of jealousy in the heart, or a frown on the brow. Such thoughts are carnal, and have their root in the flesh. Even John was not proof against them, for we read: "John answered him saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followed not us, and we forbade him because he followed not us." Dear ones, please notice John's reason for attempting to suppress this rival, "Because he followed not us"—selfishness to the core. Jesus said, "Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is on our part" (Mark 9:38). Dear ones, note how Jesus in mild and gentle reply, rebuked John's selfish act. If Jesus were here with us today, and one of us should say to him, "Master, we saw one printing and circulating a church paper, and preaching in thy name, and he went his own way and followed not us, and we forbade him, because he followed not us." Would our Lord commend this brother, or would his reply rebuke him, as he rebuked John? Submitted in reply to Brother Donaldson's request, and in Christian love to all.

Remarks

On May 7th we boarded the train for McCook, where we stopped and had the pleasure of baptizing two, the twin son and daughter of Brother and Sister Larington. This makes six I have baptized in this family. When I come to think back I have not only baptized all of Sister Larington's family except one little boy, but her parents, and all of her sisters and brothers except one, all of her uncles and aunts, and her grand parents.

So her people have quite a record for the truth After making a short visit in McCook with Sister Hamilton, we took the train for Laird, Colo. Two years ago we built up a congregation at this place of 22 members. They were taken into the Nebraska Conference, and are entitled to a part of our time. The brethren hired a hall, and we put forth our first effort in town. The attendance was moderate from an outside view, but some were interested and we baptized three, and are hoping that others may hasten to the city of refuge. On Sunday we went out to the North Laird school house where they hold their Sunday school, and spoke twice. Here we had a splendid attendance and a wonderful interest. I cannot help but feel the Lord has some people at this point, and the brethren are insistent in giving it a trial. There are quite a few Latter Day Saints here, and they were going around (as usual) with a chip on their shoulder telling the people that no one dared knock it off. They asked me if we were of that number. I said, "No, we were not hunting debates, but stood ready to defend the truth and denounce error at all times."

So now they are doing every thing to get around the issue, and instead of their people seeing the facts of a real [illegible] they [illegible] think their excuses plausible. How easy the people are fooled!

I have been so busy, I just could not follow up my articles on the sure word of prophecy; but I promise you to resume soon with some things very needful and profitable. I am now holding a few meetings at Wray. The Seventh Day Adventists, allowed us to use this church, but not one has come to hear us. I believe they are about the most afraid of their position of any people in the land. Again we ask why is it people cannot see their own weakness? If I should refuse to go and hear because I was afraid I would hear something that would shatter my faith, I would know right at once that I was recognizing some weakness in my own position, and would see how impossible it was for that weak position to do me any good. Any position that has to be upheld by evasion, trickery, or assumption, should be abandoned at once. The County Treasurer and his wife are very much interested but when it comes to the test will they have the courage to turn their backs on worldly position and society to take a stand for the truth? How can people for any reason hesitate, and tamper with their eternal welfare?

Our next point is the city of Pueblo, then back to a number of Nebraska points. Brethren are you fully aware of what is transpiring, and what it all means? Let us be up and doing, and watchful. Very often things occur in our experience that are interesting to all if they knew it, and gratifying to those acquainted with the incident. The other day we met at the water's edge to baptize a daughter of Brother and Sister Dimmick, the sixth one in two years, of their family; also another girl who had made the good confession of faith. When I had planted these two young buds, whom we hope to see grow and bloom and become flowers in the kingdom of God, and were about to leave the water, the mother of the last mentioned girl, who stood on the bank and saw her daughter buried in Christ, said, "Wait, Mr. Adams; I am next."

What a hush passed over that little group of believers who stood witnessing the solemn scene, and what rejoicing in their hearts as she walked into the water! Here was the leading of the child which was most impressive.

Now Lela, never lose your lead. Their prayers are now for the father. These are some of the bright spots that smooth the pathway of the laborer in the Lord's vineyard.

During our stay we have enjoyed some pleasant hours with Brother and Sister Halley. How they do like to talk of the things nearest their hearts. Then we pass on to visit Brother and Sister Hammel, and another feast of good fellowship. They are living somewhat crowded up, preparing to build a new house, but what cared we for that? It was the talks concerning eternal things and the good cheer that is the all important matter. Before they get that new house done I hope they will be living in the mansions not made with hands. Then how kindly we were entertained at the home of Mr. Minton's, which now contains two obedient believers. Then we went to Brother Dimmick's, and no one could have the blues in this home with song and music and converse concerning the kingdom of God.

Then we visited Brother and Sister Leasure, and here we had anything but leisure. We had to talk to their neighbors at night, and to them through the day, of the coming of the Lord; and it was all profitable.

We are at Brother and Sister Minton's, and we counted up the other evening, and they have been under our instruction for 30 years, and have seen me baptize all their children but one, and nearly all their grandchildren. We have many pleasant things to talk over which has occurred during this span of years, and sad remembrances we find dotting the way. Then last but not least we visited Brother Dick and family and this visit is another oasis in the desert of our travel toward the kingdom. This congregation has twelve young people, and we are trying to interest them in the Berean work. They are bright and interesting young people, and there is no reason for not having a splendid class here. Sister Dimmick mostly presides at the piano, but if anything hinders her from being present, others can take her place. Pray for these, and their efforts. The editor of a paper in the town sixteen miles east, has been coming to our meetings. God knows whether it is interest or curiosity. May the Lord help them to see the necessity of prompt action, and may they soon be rejoicing in hope.

Lesson XXXV

THE SIGNS

Memory Text: When it is evening ye say, It will be fair weather for the sky is red. And in the morning, it will be foul weather today; for the sky is red and lowering. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times (Matt. 16:1-3).

1. And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring;

2. Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of the heaven shall be shaken (Luke 21:25, 26).

3. And as he sat upon the Mount of Olives over against the temple, Peter and James and John and Andrew asked him privately:

4. Tell us when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign when all these things shall be fulfilled?

5. And Jesus answering them began to say, Take heed lest any man deceive you:

6. For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.

7. And when ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars be ye not troubled: for such things must needs be; but the end shall not be yet.

8. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; and there shall be earthquakes in divers places, and there shall be famines and troubles: these are the beginnings of sorrows (Mark 13:3-8).

9. Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven (Matt. 24:29).

10. This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come.

11. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy.

12. Without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good,

13. Traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God;

14. Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away (2 Tim. 3:1-5).

15. And because iniquity shall abound the love of many shall wax cold (Matt. 24:12).

Practical Truths

All times are not alike. Changes are constantly occurring in the affairs of nations. These changes are anticipated by these who are familiar with the "signs," that indicate them. As "coming events cast their shadows before," so the "signs," when witnessed, foreshadow our proximity to the events foretold. The Savior, in our memory text, referred to the familiar signs that indicate the state of the weather, and which at that time were considered so reliable, to illustrate the fact that the "signs of the times" disclose our nearness to certain events foretold by the prophets.

He reproved those in his day who did not understand the signs of the times. This should be a lesson to us. The signs of our times indicate the soon coming of Jesus.

Notes on the Lesson

Signs.—A token, symbol, proof, wonder, constellation, to attach one's name to, mark. Sky.—The expanse above the earth. Discern. To see, to perceive, to distinguish.

1. Signs in the Sun, Moon and Stars. Are celestial signs. May 19, 1780, the sun was darkened, and the "moon became as blood," at a time when there was no eclipse of either. The darkness was so great during the day candles were used, cattle returned from the field, fowls and birds sought their resting places. Nov. 13, 1833, occurred the falling of the stars, (or meteors) which excited the wonder of thousands of people. The Sea and the Waves Roaring. Caused by immense tidal waves. In 1861 great waves dashed with a roar on the island of Sumatra, destroying many lives. Both the great oceans have roared to their full extent. Waves fifty to sixty feet high have swept over the islands of St. Thomas, Grenada, New Zealand, Juan Fernandes, at Japan, Sandwich Islands, New South Wales, along the whole coast of South America, Peru, Lower California, the shores of Texas and Hawaii, and in many other places in 1867 and 1868.

8. Nation Shall Rise Against Nation. This could not have been true then, for there was but one predominant kingdom (the Roman) in existence. It was divided into "nations" between A. D. 376 and 483. Earthquakes in Divers Places. These recorded before Christ, 58; to the end of 9th century, 197; to end of 15th century 732, to end of 18th century, 2804; to 1850, 2240; a toal of 6831, 216 of which have been very disastrous. Famines and Pestilences. History proves a fearful increase.

10. Perilous Times. Dangerous on account of the prevalence of crime. Statistics shows that crime increases faster than population.

Suggestive Topics and Questions

1. Celestial Signs.—What is a sign? What are the signs a token of? What is the difference between a prophecy and a sign? What "times" are referred to in the memory text? What "times" are spoken of in our lesson? What are celestial signs? Where were they to be seen? After what event were they to be witnessed? When was the sun and moon drakened? Was it occasioned by an eclipse? Why? At the time this event occurred was it regarded as a sign? Do you think that the darkening of sun and moon was a fulfilment of our Savior's prophecy? Did it occur just when the Savior said it would? What prophecies refer to the same event? (Joel 2:30, 31; Rev. 6:11, 12). Is there anything on record that fulfills this prediction prior to 1780? What other celestial sign appeared after this? When did it occur? How did they fall? Where is it described? (Rev. 6:13). Where was it witnessed? What effect did it have? Do you think these signs fulfill the prediction? Can you tell of any other remarkable sights that have appeared in the heavens? Can they be accounted for on natural or scientific principles?

2. Physical Signs.—What are the physical signs mentioned by the Savior? Has there been an increase in the number of tidal waves and earthquakes? How many earthquakes are recorded prior to the birth of Christ? How many since? How many from 1800 to 1850? What does the word "divers" mean? Did any of you ever experience an earthquake shock? What other signs are foretold? Have there been famines and pestilences in many places? Mention some that have occurred.

3. National Signs.—What great nation was in existence in the time of Christ? Was there any other? Could nation rise against nation then? When was the Roman kingdom divided? Has this prediction been fulfilled? How many divisions were made in the Roman kingdom? Can you give the names of these divisions? Ans. Huns. Visigoths. Franks, Vandals, Sueres, Burgundians, Heruli, Saxons, and Lombards. What other signs were foretold? What prophets refer to the same? Ans. Daniel and John. Do the prophecies and signs agree?

4. Moral Signs.—What moral signs does Christ refer to? Ans.: False Christs and abounding iniquity. Who foretold the signs referred to in the 10th verse? Where are they found? Where else does Paul refer to moral evidences of the coming of Christ? (2 Thess. 2:3-12 and 1 Tim. 4:1-3). Is there any evidence that they have been and are being fulfilled? Is the world growing better?

5. The Object, Design and Scope of the Signs.—What was the object of their being given? What do they remind us of? What design had the Savior in announcing them to the people then? What lesson should we derive from them? What is the last sign? How did it affect the world? (Rev. 2:7). How will it affect you and me?

Encouragement

By S. Roxana Wince

I will not say thee Nay (1 Kings 2:30).

Ask on, my child, ask on!
I will not say thee Nay;
Breathe out thy longings in the ear
Of thine own King today;
Faith cannot ask too much,
Love cannot be too free;
Draw near with humble confidence,
[illegible] out thy trust in me.

Ask on, my child, ask on!
I've blessings to bestow
Rich with my love that when received
Will make thy heart o'erflow:
Sweet flowers that n'er can die,
Rare gems of varied hue
And wondrous perfumes that my heart
Longs to disclose to you.

Ask on, my child, ask on!
Tho' thou art faint and weak
Thy King hath boundless stores of strength
To give to those who seek;
Give but an upward glance,
Lift but thy feeble cry
And swift as lightning's flash I'll send
A plentiful supply.

Ask on, my child, ask on!
E'en as the moments fly,
For time is passing quickly on
And years are rolling by.
And as thou journey'st home
Sing out upon the way,
The King himself hath promised me,
"I will not say the Nay."

The House of Many Mansions

In my Father's house are many mansions, if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also (John 14:2, 3).

AS WE all know, these words were spoken by Jesus to his disciples at the last passover. He had just been telling them of his near departure and, seeing that they were sad at heart, comforted them with these promises. Orthodox churches take these two verses as a basis of their belief that heaven is the reward of the righteous. Christ never had taught his disciples that they would go to heaven or that anyone had ever gone to heaven to receive their reward. Hence, he would not now contradict himself and the entire Scriptures by promising them a home in heaven at death.

The Father's House

If Christ did not mean heaven by "my Father's house," what did he mean? These two verses are based on the Hebrew style of language, therefore this fact must be considered in studying them. The Hebrew word translated "house" in this particular verse is used many times in the Scriptures to designate a family, a household, or a community of people. The family of Jacob, which went down into Egypt is called "the house of Jacob" in Gen. 46:27. The tribes that descended from Jacob's twelve sons are called by the same term. In Judges 1:35 we read of "the house of Joseph" prevailing over the Amorites, and in other places of "the house of Levi," etc.

As the whole Jewish nation descended from Jacob, the grandson of Abraham, who was the chosen of God, it constituted God's house. Because Jacob had two names, Jacob and Israel, the Jewish nation was sometimes spoken of as "the house of Jacob" and as sometimes "the house of Israel." Later on, when the nation was divided, the ten tribes were called "the house of Israel" and the two tribes "the house of Judah." The whole twelve tribes constituted God's house, and when "the household of Israel" or "Israel" is mentioned, the term generally includes all of them. Besides being God's house, the Israelites were told that they were also to be his kingdom (Exodus 6:3-8; (Ezek. 16:3).

God's Kingdom on Earth

Did God ever have a kingdom on the earth? We find that the kings of the Jews were divinely appointed (1 Sam. 8:22), and their throne is spoken of as "the throne of the Lord" (1 Chron. 29:23), and "the kingdom of the Lord" (2 Chron. 8:8). When Israel rebelled against God God said, "I have forsaken mine house" (Jer. 12:7). "I will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel" (Hosea 1:4). These prophecies have all been fulfilled; the fleshly house of Israel has fallen. God, however, did not entirely forsake his chosen race, for he sent his Son, as it says in Matt. 15:24, "unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel." Although the house of Israel did not receive Christ, we know that some day the message of the angel will be fulfilled (Luke 1:32, 33; Jer 31:31-33; 3:18).

The Church God's House

This is not the only house which God will have, however. In the meantime, God is taking out of the Gentiles a people for his name, a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people, to be rulers with Christ over his kingdom when it is re-organized. God having taken away from fleshly Israel the right to rule over his house, he intends to give it to this holy nation which he is now selecting (Eph. 2:19, 20). We see from this that the "Father's house" is the restored kingdom of Israel

"Mansions" Mean Dwellings, Abodes

Many mansions in other versions is translated "dwellings, abodes or abiding places." So this refers to the place occupied by the righteous who enter the kingdom. Where will these mansions be (Rev. 5:9, 10; Isa. 18:7; 2:2-4; Micah 4:6; Jer. 3:17, 18; 23:5)? Each one will be given a position in this kingdom which will be based on the amount of works he has done (Luke 17-19). So the righteous will live in the mansions of the Father's kingdom promised for them by Christ: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne" (Rev. 3:21).

Going to Heaven Impossible

Christ could not have meant that he was going to heaven to prepare a place there for his disciples, for in John 13:33 he had told them, "Whither I go ye cannot come." What work did Jesus have to do to prepare a place for his disciples in his kingdom? He began his work by his three yaer's of preaching. It was necessary for the prophecies to be fulfilled. Jerusalem must be destroyed, the Jews dispersed, Paganism overthrown, the Papacy must rise and fall, the Mohammedan power be established, the time of the Gentiles run out, and civilization advance. God is directing and controlling these things to bring about the conditions in which his kingdom will be established. The kingdom, while being prepared continuously, can never be completed until Christ returns and the promise to his disciples, "I will come again," is fulfilled.

The Importance of Christ's Coming

We notice in this verse that Jesus says, "I will come again" before his disciples would be "received unto himself;" therefore they did not go to him when they died. As it was necessary for him to come again before they could enter the house of many mansions, we know that none have entered into their eternal home. When Christ comes back to set up his kingdom, then he will receive his disciples, and "the righteous inherit the earth and dwell therein for ever" (Psa. 37:29). Then will the people, the Father's house and kingdom say, "Thou hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:9, 10).

The Text Paraphrased

In my Father's family and chosen dwelling place for them, there are many ever abiding places to be filled. I go to prepare a place for you. This work consists in preparing you for the place and the place for you. In preparing you to be ever abiding ones in the Father's house and kingdom. Your place, as I have told you, shall be to "sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel" (Matt. 19:27, 28). When the preparations are all made and the work completed, I will come again to dwell here for ever. I will then raise you from your graves, and receive you unto myself, that where I am ye may be also.

Russellism Refuted

Article One

RUSSELLISM is a human invention that has taken the place among believers in the mortality of man and the unconsciousness of the death state that Universalism holds among the so-called "orthodox" believers in the immortality of the soul and disembodied happiness and misery after death. Universalism was invented to flatter the fleshly mind with the conceit that, by the continuance of probation after death, the "immortal soul" would ultimately free itself from suffering and attain to its salvation.

Russellism, having rejected the theory of disembodied existence, confronted itself with the question, What is to become of fathers, mothers, children and friends, who have died "without a chance" of believing the gospel and obeying it? To answer this question by declaring to those bereft of loved ones that, while their dead are really dead, having died "without a chance," they will yet be raised to life again to have a "fair chance"—to this answer ignorant anxiety would certainly insure a world wide welcome that would make the invention as popular among "soul sleepers" as Universalism was among believers in the immortality of the soul.

Russellites condemn the popular sects for holding theories that depend for support upon parables and isolated passages of Scripture that are not clear in their meaning and that seem to the superficial to support theories opposed to the general teaching of the Scriptures. Yet this is what Russellism itself is quite guilty of. Its principle support for the theory of a post-resurrectional second chance is based almost entirely upon Ezek. 16.

Russellites object to the term "second chance" and prefer, instead, "fair chance." This implies that while God has given a "fair chance" to some in this life who respond and to some who do not, he has failed to do so beyond a comparatively few exceptions, and, to make amends for the delinquency, must raise all to whom he is by Russellism put under a debt that is unpaid, and that can only be paid by a "fair chance" in a second life time.

But in objecting to the term "second chance" and yet seeking to support the theory by Ezek. 16 there is a palpable inconsistency; for the very reason why Sodom was destroyed was because her people had been weighed in the balance and found wanting. One of the angels entertained by Abraham said: "I will go down now, and see whether they have done altogether according to the cry of it, which is come unto me; and if not I will know. And the men turned their faces from thence and went toward Sodom" (Gen. 18:21,22). Abraham pleaded for Sodom, and the angel agreed that if there were even ten righteous in the city he would not destroy it. But destroyed it was. Who will say that Abraham was mistaken when he said, "Shall not the judge of all the earth do right?" Who? I ask again. If God is indebted to these Sodomites and must raise them to give them a "fair chance," was the terrible punishment meted out to a people who deserved a "fair chance" of a second life time of probation. What an unjust Being Russellism makes God out to be in its desperation to find a passage to sustain a flesh-flattering notion whose presumption challenges the truth of that voice which said. "Cry, all flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of the Lord endureth for ever" (Isa. 40: 6-8).

Is the "fair chance" theory an accommodation to the just demands of such creatures as these Sodomites of whose deeds we cannot even read in secret without the blush of shame? Must a fleshly desire to give friends and relatives another life time in order that they may have a "fair chance" seek support in a passage which (to the superficial) seems to prove that God will raise to a future probation such "brute beasts" as those Sodomites, who were fit for nothing but "to be taken and destroyed"? Surely a theory that must go to such a Sodom for refuge feels itself in great straits when it is driven to such desperation as this. Such a thing is so contrary to the general teachings of the Scriptures, and so opposed to the justice of a just God that if the passage under consideration could never be explained, it would have to be left in the realms of mystery rather than view it as teaching that God is indebted in the sum of a second life time for a "fair" or a "second" chance to a people whose very name has been the shame, the horror, the moral stench of ages.

Be it remembered that Russellism will have nothing short of the restoration of the very identical persons who perished in Sodom. With it, it must be restoration in identity, not in kind. Is this due to affection for those wicked persons? It cannot be; for Russellites do not manifest any more affection for the wicked and depraved than do other moral people. Why, then, the eagerness, yea, the desperation to have the identical Sodomites who, because of their abominations, were, by Divine justice, reduced to ashes—why, I ask, the anxiety to have these restored? There is no answer, except that a thought was conceived of by a fleshly wish, and went hunting for a precedent; and the one that suited the purpose best could be found no where else but in Sodom. Rather than fail, it preferred to put God under a debt to the worst specimen of a depraved race to the extent that he must "redeem" them without their possesing an atom of fitness for "redemption," and in spite of their total moral depravity and degradation.

"Redemption," with Russellism, is a physical operation, without the least regard to mental and moral fitness; for their "redemption" is a change of nature to that condition of man which obtained before sin, and which is termed in Genesis "very good." So we are asked to believe that Sodomites, who were consumed by the vengeance of Divine justice, yet deserve and left behind them in the smoke of their own "eternal fire" of destruction a calm upon him who destroyed them, that he must physically restore their disgracefully self-corrupted bodies to the "very good" state that came from the hand of the Creator and that dwelt happily in Eden before sin cursed man and his habitation. In other words, that God is in duty bound to "redeem" them and give them a probation in "very good" bodies.

Now all this shocking inconsistency we must carry with us to Ezek. 16:53 in order to find support for Russelism in the passage. The simple consideration of these hideous facts is enough to convince a reasonable mind that whatever the passage means, or whether it can ever be explained at all or not, it is certain that it does not sustain Russellism, nor commit us to the rank injustice involved.

But, the devotee of this flesh-pleasing theory exclaims, The passage plainly says, "When I bring again their captivity, the captivity of Sodom and her daughters, and the captivity of Samaria and her daughters, then will I bring again the captivity of thy captives in the midst of them," etc. Is not that clear enough to show that God will bring again the captivity of Sodom? Do not be in a hurry. Reflect, reason. To the believer in the immortality of the soul, and the consciousness of the dead, the parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus seems just as clear as this does to you; but you find a way to explain the parable, and then, to reason, it seems entirely different.

Now let us make a comparison. There have been many other wicked people besides the Sodomites, but perhaps not so wicked. The clear declarations of the Scriptures as to their destiny might help us to decide what ought to be the destiny of the Sodomites, reasoning upon the sure basis that the ways of the Lord are equal. For instance, here are wicked rulers, or lords, who had usurped "dominion" over Israel; is there provision made for them to be resurrected to have a "second" or a "fair chance"? If there is plain language in the Scriptures upon any thing, this is unmistakably clear: "Lord, thou wilt ordain peace for us; for thou also hast wrought all our works in us. O Lord our God, other lords besides thee have had dominion over us; but by thee only will we make mention of thy name. They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise: therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish" (Isa. 26:13, 14).

Then of the wicked rulers of Babylon the prophet Jeremiah says: "And I will make drunk her princes, and her wise men, her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men; and they shall sleep a perpetual sleep, and not awake, saith the King, whose name is the Lord of hosts" (Jer. 51:39, 57, 58).

We could quote many other passages declaring the same thing, but these will be sufficient for the present as examples of clear declarations that the wicked spoken of are dead, and shall not live, that they are to sleep perpetually and not awake. If language is of any use to convey thoughts, then these are wicked people who will never live again and therefore never have a "second chance."

Now for the comparison. Were these "lords" and these "rulers" and "wise men" of Babylon any more wicked than the Sodomites? If there was any difference was it not in favor of these and against the Sodomites? Let us be fair in making this comparison—fair towards those compared and fair to truth and to ourselves as truthful men. But above all, let us take care that we do not set forth conclusions dishonorable to God, or that will imply that the ways of the Lord are not equal.

Now the question is. If these people spoken of so clearly by Isaiah and Jeremiah are gone forever, and are never to "live" nor to "awake," as "saith the Lord of hosts," upon what principle of justice and righteousness can the Sodomites be raised to a second life in a "very good" nature to be given a chance that these are positively denied? If we can not find (but we can) an explanation of the passage in Ezekiel 16 consistent with what is so clearly declared of the "lords" and "wise men" of Babylon, would we not better frankly confess ignorance of the meaning of Ezekiel's words than set up a theory that God is a respecter of persons to the extent of giving a "second chance" to the more wicked Sodomites and denying it to the Babylonians?

Now let us see what kind of people the Scriptures say the Sodomites were.

Gen. 13:13.—But the men of Sodom were wicked and sinners before the Lord exceedingly.

Gen. 19:24—The Lord rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven. Deut 32:32—For their vine is the vine of Sodom . . . their wine is the poison of dragons and the cruel venom of asps.

Isa. 1:9—Except the Lord of hosts had left unto us a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom, and we should have been like unto Gomorrah. Isa. 3:9—The show of their countenance doth witness against them; and they declare their sin as Sodom, they hide it not. Woe unto their soul! for they have rewarded evil unto themselves.

Jer. 23:14—I have seen also in the prophets of Jerusalem an horrible thing: they commit adultery, and walk in lies; they strengthen also the hands of evil doers, that none doth return from his wickedness: they are all of them unto me as Sodom, and the inhabitants thereof as Gomorrah.

2 Pet. 2:6.—And returning the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah into ashes condemn them with an overthrow, making them an example unto those that after should live ungodly; and delivered just Lot, vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked.

Jude 7—Even as Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire.

These testimonies show that whenever the Spirit in the inspired writers emphasized the sins of a people, they were compared to Sodom. Whenever they deserved an irrevocable condemnation and consignment to oblivion, Sodom's fearful fate was at hand as the most forcible example. Whenever God's justice in destroying the wicked was emphasized, his vengeance upon Sodom was used to illustrate.

Now if these very identical wicked Sodomites are the creatures that must be taken as examples to prove a "fair chance" in a second life time, where are there any who will be undeserving of the same "chance"? Would it be possible even to exclude those of whom Paul wrote as follows?—"For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries," etc. (Heb. 10:26-31).

Imagine God "raining brimstone and fire" to the utter destruction of a people whom he intends to restore to a future probation! a people whose "vine is the poison of dragons and the cruel venom of asps." Where would be the force of the words which acknowledge that, if it had not been for God's forbearance, Israel would have "been as Sodom" if the same people who constituted that "Sodom" are to come forth to be given another chance under far better circumstances than those in which they merited the fearful fate referred to? The Sodomites are declared to be "suffering the vengeance of eternal fire." Quenchless fire and eternal fire in the Scriptures mean the utter and hopeless destruction of the victims. The wicked Sodomites, like the Amorites, had developed their iniquity to the "full"; God condemned them justly and destroyed them justly. To say that he must restore them to life again and give them another and better chance in a vastly improved situation is to infer, if merit has anything at all to do with God's dealing with men, that vengeance was poured out upon a people who deserve blessings.

We realize fully and thankfully that God is long-suffering and of tender mercy, and we would not minimize this blessed fact, for a moment. But this bright star of God's goodness must not dazzle your eyes to the extent of darkening the justice of the God of mercy. I do not think that Russellism denies that God will ultimately destroy utterly and forever some sinners. They do not go to the full length of the Paton branch of second-life probationists, who advocate the final salvation of all. If, then, they admit, which of course they will, that God will, finally and for ever, destroy some sinners, who will never again be subjects of his mercy, will these sinners be worse than those Sodomites? Can they be? If God's mercy will not, in the future cases of sinners, resurrect or "redeem" the subjects from the oblivion to which his justice will have consigned them, upon what principle can it be claimed that he will do so in the case of sinners whom divine justice has blotted out of existence and held up before the world of ages as having reached the climax of abomination, and as having fully deserved their fate? Surely if Russellism is true, "the ways of the Lord are not equal." But the ways of Russellism are the ways that are not equal; and in an endeavor to establish a theory that will satisfy that which "seemeth right unto men" "seemeth" so because some of their loved ones appear to their limited vision to have been deprived of "a chance" they would have embraced— in this desperate endeavor they represent the mercy of God as in conflict with his justice.—Selected by Brother B F Smith.

Does God Know?

By S. Roxana Wince

He says: "I have declared the former things from the beginning; and they went forth out of my mouth, and I showed them; I did them suddenly and they came to pass . . . I have even from the beginning declared it to thee, before it came to pass I have showed it to thee: lest thou shouldst say, Mine idol hath done them, and my moulten image hath commanded them" (Isa. 48:3-5; 46:9, 10; 41:21:25).

"Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world" (Acts 15:18). "Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight, but all things are naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do" (Heb. 10:13). "Thou knowest the thoughts of the children of men (2 Chron. 6:30). "He knoweth the way that I take" (Job 23:10). "The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous" (Psa. 1:6). "The Lord knoweth the days of the upright" (Psa. 37:18).

"O Lord, thou hast searched me and known me. Thou knowest my down-sitting and my uprising; thou understandest my thoughts afar off. Thou compassest my path and my lying down, thou art acquainted with all my ways. For there is not a word in my tongue, but lo, O Lord, thou knowest it altogether. Thou hast beset me behind and before, and laid thy hand upon me. Such knowledge is to wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it. Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend into heaven, thou art there; if I make my bed in hell, behold thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall thy hand lead me. If I say, surely the darkness shall cover me, even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee, but the night shineth as the day. The darkness and the light are both alike to thee" (Psa. 139:1-13).

God does know. He knew that "Abraham would order his house aright;" knew what would happen to his seed in Egypt, and down, down the ages into the millennial years; knew what manner of people would spring from Jacob and Esau, even before their birth; knew that the Ishmaelites would be wild men; knew that "the yoke of iron" would be put upon the neck of Judah by that nation of fierce countenance, or Rome, and that by it they would be besieged and overthrown some 1500 years before it came to pass, and also what dreadful curses would come upon them; knew of Israel's captivity and of the final overthrow of all Gentile kingdoms.

We cannot explain it; we can only say as David did, "Such knowledge is to wonderful for me." But if God knows what some men and some nations are going to do far down in the future, does he not also know what all men and all nations will do? Did he know that even our first parents would fail to stand the test when it came? He knew that Jesus would stand the fiery trial that would come upon him; was it any harder to know that Adam and Eve would not? It does not seem to me. And if we deny God's power to look into the future in one case, how can we prove him able to lift the curtain in another case?

I want to lean upon a God who "knows the end from the beginning." I do not want to doubt his power in the least iota. I can trust an omnipotnet God whose "eyes are in every place, beholding the evil and the good."

I cannot tell how he does it, he can look at things as they are now, through his angelic agents, and by wireless telegraphy, but not so can be forecast coming events. Yet I know he can and does tell what will happen before it comes to pass, and that therefore, he is the living and the true God, and worthy of our confidence, our adoration, and our praise.

We must be careful what we think, what we say, and what we do, for "he knows us altogether."

A theoretical religion is not sufficient. One must unite a good practice with right theories to obtain salvation.

Our chain of life is forged with little rings; and little words and acts uplift the soul.

Editorial

It was necessary for Cornelius, "a devout man," whose prayers were accepted of God, not only to believe certain words, but to be baptized into the name of Jesus for salvation. For the proof of this affirmation, read the 10 and 11 chapters of Acts. What dispensation has since been proclaimed by God exempting "devout" people in this or any other age from following the same example?

Universalism ignores Christian knowledge in this life as necessary to future salvation. This is a practical endorsement of paganism. No faith in God, none in Christ, and none in Revelation being necessary to future salvation. All must see from this that Universalism is a practical endorsement of paganism; for if the whole world should relapse into idolatry, the final result would be the same!

Many superficial readers affirm on the ground of what Paul says in 1 Cor. 15:1-4, that the gospel is composed solely of the death burial, and resurrection of Christ. They omit from their creed the gospel of the kingdom, which we are commanded to believe (Mark 1:14, 15), because Paul says, as translated in the Common Version, "first of all." But is not "all" an indefinite adjective qualifying things understood? Can there be a "first" without a second? If the adjective "all" stands for what Paul preached in Corinth, by what rule of language can the "first" of all things be made to include "all" things of which it is the "first"?

"In the Day"

Gen. 2:17

In the "True Israelite," a periodical conducted by those interested in trying to lead the Jews to Christ, we find the following on the meaning of Gen. 2:17:

"The true meaning of the sentence, 'In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt die,' is this: As soon as thou eatest of the fruit of that tree which I forbid thee, thou art guilty of death. Now, Adam, thou knowest the command, and the penalty for its trasgression. Be on thy guard. Adam transgressed the command of God; his life was forfeited; but the Judge delayed the execution of the sentence more than nine hundred years. A similar passage we find in 1 Kings 2:37, when Solomon says to Shimei: 'And it shall be, in the day that thou goest out from Jerusalem and crosseth the streamlet Kedron, know that thou shalt die.' We know however, that Shimei left Jerusalem, and went to Achish, the king of Gath, from whom he recovered his fugitive slaves, and returned. Now this journey to and from Gath must have taken several days, so that Shimei did not actually die on that day, when he left Jerusalem, and crossed the Kedron; but as soon as he did that, he was under the sentence of death. In both cases Hebrew translators say, 'as soon as thou eatest'; 'As soon as thou goest out.'"

Feetwashing Not a Commandment

Many contend that Jesus commanded his people to attend to the washing of feet, in connection with the ordinance of the Lord's supper, as a part of the ordinance itself. It is not so! There is no command or precept about it. The Greek word for "command," or precept, as used by the Savior in this connection, is entolee: meaning "precept, command, law," etc. But the original word used by Christ in John 13:15, when he says, "I have given you an example," is hupodigma: "an example, proposed for imitation or admonition," etc. (Greenfield's Lexicon). And in this case we shall find that the "example" of Christ was for "admonition," for the disciples deserved it. The case was this: The disciples had first been engaged in a "strife" among themselves, to see "which of them should be accounted the greatest" (Luke 22:24), and the spirit of selfishness and rivalry was in direct violation of the true import of the "new commandment." Hence "their Lord and Master" just set them an "example" of humility and love toward each other; they must be servants to each other, and never strive to see "which of them should be accounted the greatest." Thus we see that "love one to another" is the "fulfilling" of Christ's new law or commandment; as we find in Rom. 13:8-10.

FROM A DELINQUENT

Dear Brother Huggins:

Some time ago I was a subscriber to The Restitution, and I just neglected renewing until I got to where I did not have money enough to renew. So, if you will look up my old account, I will pay up, and start again. Please write me at once.

BROTHER H. S. LASHER

Dear Brother Huggins:

I see by my label in my paper that my subscription expires this month. I enclose $5.00 for two years subscription for myself, and the rest is for the Helping Fund.

Just a few words in behalf of our dear little weekly visitor. I think it grows better with each succeeding issue. The many able writers we have contributing to it make the blessed sun shine where it goes. May the blessed Lord through the Holy Spirit give abundantly of his grace to each writer, that he in turn may be more able to feed the weaker ones in the truth. This is the prayer a brother wishes toward all the chosen ones.

Your brother in Christ.

FROM Mr. J. D. CURTIS

Editor of "The Restitution' Dear Sir:

I am deeply interested in the faith represented by your church. I am enclosing ten cents in stamps to pay postage, and if there shall be additional cost kindly let me know and I will return the price to you. I would like a full list of your tracts, also any publication you have that in a few words defines your faith in organization, origin and practice. I do not know whether you have what may be called a tract on "What we believe." If you have I will be very glad to have a copy of it, together with the other tracts named. Please send me sample copies of your paper. There is one question that often confronts me and I would be glad to have you pass upon it, and that is: Which of the following three does your church claim to be -Is your church in succession from the days of Christ and the apostles; or is it one that may be called of evolution; or is it one of complete restoration? I would be glad if you would help me to determine this as a part of your faith.

Trusting I may hear from you in a very short time, I am your sincerely.

$300 for Exemption in the Civil War

In "The Millennial Harbinger," kindly sent us by Sister Ettie Fry, we notice various allusions to the doings of the brotherhood during the Civil War. In the issue of Feb. 20, 1865, is found the following in reference to the military draft, which shows that our brethren have always, consistently with their belief in the coming kingdom of God, avoided active participation in war.

To those liable to draft who are poor, and of the "household of faith," we would say: Let us know as soon as the draft is over whether you are drawn or not—or as soon as your town or ward has filled its quota, write us to that effect, so that we may know what to do in apportioning the money received for the benefit of the poor drafted brethren.

We will send the "Exemption Blanks" to all our brethren who are liable and intend the pay the $300, if they request it. These "blanks" will be of material service to all who intend to take advantage of the law exempting non-combatants.

As we do not intend to take anything from the Fund to pay for the printing of these blanks, which will cost us some six or seven dollars, and the incidental expenses, postage, etc., connected with it, those who send for them are invited to help defray these expenses. This, all will see, is reasonable and just.

The False Vine and Its Fate

From the fact that the Scriptures speak of a true vine we know that there is a false one. This false vine has had root in the earth for many years, and has been gaining and flourishing; and now we see the fruit almost ripe and the vine ready for the harvest.

This false system has caused untold misery among earth's millions. Is there any remedy for this? No, not so long as the vine flourishes and lodges all kinds of filthy birds in her branches.

But socialists say: "Yes, we can do away with false systems. We will educate the people to socialism. Gradually they will come to where the classes will be on an equality with the masses. Yes, we can do this." So they put forth every effort to bring about the brotherhood of man. As a result we see their leaders killed, imprisoned and persecuted in many ways. Seeing they have not been able to improve conditions, now we see the Bolsheviki, the radical element of the socialists coming into prominence. They intend to bring about an equality by force. We now see them a quarter of a million strong. They see that people have been oppressed by the money grabbers so long that they think it is time to break the shackles and be free. We read the head lines in the newspapers: "Bolshevism Spreading Like Wildfire"; "Bolshevism Threatening the Nation," etc. The prophery is being fulfilled which says: "The sea and waves roaring, men's hearts failing them for fear of the things coming upon the earth. Surely they are causing the earth to tremble. This restless mass of humanity is as a surging sea; as a lion roars when he sees the prey, so the waves thereof are roaring because their prey is in sight. Yes the prey is in sight. The kings of the earth are fast losing their crowns, and the kingdoms are soon to crumble; but the prey will be the Lord's. It is under the mighty hand of God that the kingdoms of earth are tottering. He says he will roar from on high. He says he will rise up out of his place and punish the inhabitants of the earth because they have forgotten him. The poor and oppressed have long been crying and now it seems that the Scripture which says, "The cries of the laborer has entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth," is being fulfilled. God is the one who will wrest the kingdom from the oppressor and give it to the heir, Jesus Christ his Son, who is soon to be earth's righteous King. This false vine is soon to be gathered and cast into the winepress of the wrath of God, where its life will be entirely crushed out, and it will be supplanted by the true vine. In wresting this power from the oppressor there will be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation, and the Lord adds, "And never will be again." The Bible tells us that the heavens (ruling powers) shall pass away with a great noise and the elements shall melt with fervent heat. Do we hear any noise, and is there any heat? We think there is both noise and heat. The prophet when asked what he saw, said, "I see a seething pot." How applicable to this time. Who knows but that the Lord is using the Bolsheviki to overthrow autocracy? Men will soon come to know that "the Lord ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will."

Let us not be deceived by the cry of "Peace, Peace, when there is no peace." We will have no peace until Christ, the "Prince of Peace," comes. He alone can calm the troubled sea. May his glorious kingdom soon come.

HANNA M. BARBER.

Who Are Led By the Spirit of God?

For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God . . . And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together (Rom. 8:14, 17).

THIS LEADING is essential to salvation, for the heirship depends on being children of God, and being his children or sons depends on being led by the Spirit. The extraordinary leading of the Spirit were by immediate inspiration making men prophets and apostles, and were frequently evidenced by miracles. But the ordinary leadings are such as now occur in the enlightenment and conversion of men. On this great and important subject observe:

I. This leading is done by the instrumentality of the word of God; written by holy men of old "as they were moved by the Holy Spirit" (2 Pet. 1:21). If to hear the written word of Moses and the prophets is the same as to "hear them," surely to be led by the written word of the Spirit is the same as to be led by the Spirit (Luke 17:29). In converting and leading men the Spirit of God is ever present with his written word, the Holy Scriptures. "Where the word of a king is, there is power" (Eccl. 8:4).

The Spirit in the written word
Supplies us with a sure record,
To guide our erring steps aright,
And lead from darkness into light.

When a lawyer enquired, "Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" the Master did not answer, "What say thy feelings, and thy inward light?" but, "What is written in the law? how readest thou?" And when the lawyer quoted the summary of duty from Deut. 6:5, the Master added, "This do, and thou shalt live" (Luke 10:25, 28). Since then the New Testament Scriptures have been added to the Old, enabling us with still clearer light to read what we must do to inherit life. In proving to Sadducees a coming resurrection, our Lord said, "Have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob?" This quotation from Exodus 3:6, 15, was written about 1500 years before those Sadducees were born; and it shows the delightful truth that God speaks in the Bible and speaks "to you." How greatly this should endear the Bible to the hearts of every one of us, for

In that Book we can read and see,
God's words addressed to you and me.

Never could the Holy Spirit in any man's heart lead him to contradict the Holy Spirit in the Bible. Therefore when we hear a man claiming to be led by the Spirit, say things that in his own heart seems right, but are contrary to the written word, we know that however sincere, "a deceived heart hath turned him aside" (Isa. 44:20). "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death" (Prov. 14:12). A self-deceiver is a self-destroyer; and many such have gone out into the world professing to be led by the Spirit; and yet speaking perverse things contrary to the Bible and to one another. Therefore "try the spirits" by the law and the testimony of the written word (Acts 20:30; 1 John 4:1; Isa. 8:20). The "noble" Bereans believed Paul because they had tested even his preaching by "the Scriptures;" not by that inward light which Quakers vainly say every man is born with (Acts 17:11). The Spirit leads no one to neglect or pervert any doctrine or command of the written word.

II. The Scripture contains "that gospel which is the Power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth;" for Paul says, "the Scripture" preached the gospel to Abraham (Gal. 3:8; Rom. 1:16). Hence the Scripture is "able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus" (2 Tim. 3:15). And this faith cometh by hearing the word which God spoke through the ancient prophets and apostles. They are the true messengers, called and sent of God, and not of men (2 Pet. 3:2; Gal. 1:1; Rom. 10:15-17).

When we believe "through their word," as found in the Bible, we are led by the Spirit which inspired them (John 17:20).

If sinners can be converted and led to salvation without the Scriptures, why are not the heathen so converted and led? And why has no Christian Church ever been found where the teachings of the Bible have never been heard?

The word is the sword of the Spirit (Eph. 6:17). The brightest daylight shining on a printed page adds not a syllable to it, but rather enables us to see what is already there. And the Spirit, ordinarily, illuminates the written word, applying it to our hearts and understandings; not making us wise "above" what is written" (1 Cor. 4:6; Psa. 119; Eph. 1:17-19). As warmth and moisture have an active agency in germinating seed sown in the ground, so the Spirit has an active agency in germinating the written "word of the kingdom" sown in "an honest and good heart" (Matt. 13:19; Luke 8:15).

III.—Among other great truths taught by the Spirit are the following:

(1) That "the gospel of the kingdom" is the only gospel that God has commanded to be preached in all the world, and that "men and women" must believe that gospel in order to be saved (Matt. 9:35; 24:14; Mark 16:15, 16; Gal. 1:7-9).

(2) That the kingdom of which the gospel speaks will be established on the whole earth at the second coming of Christ, when he shall reign on the throne of David in Jerusalem; "and of his kingdom there shall be no end" (Matt. 25:31; Luke 1:32, 33; Isa. 9:6, 7; 26:23; Zech. 9:10). The kingdom is not the church, but the reward of the Church (Luke 12:32; James 2:5; 1:12). The inheritance of that kingdom with "glory, honor and immortality," is the salvation to which we are so so mercifully invited by the gospel (Matt. 5:5; 1 Thess. 2:12).

(3) That when Christ and his redeemed shall have reigned a thousand years blessing all nations, both sin and death will cease and "the everlasting kingdom" be delivered up to the Father, and God be all in all. Thenceforth his will shall "be done in earth, as it is in heaven," that is, perfectly and by every inhabitant (Gal. 3:8; Rev. 2:26, 27; 3:21; 20:6; Psa. 37:9, 10, 20; Mal. 4:1-3; Prov. 2:21, 22; 1 Cor. 15:26, 28; Rev. 21:4; Matt. 6:10).

(4) That immortality, or eternal life, will be given by Christ the Judge of quick and dead at the resurrection, to the righteous only; and therefore we are to "seek for" it by patient continuance in well doing (Rom. 6:23; 2:7; 1 Cor. 15:54; Ezek. 18:4, 20).

(5) That Christ died for our sins, was buried, and rose again the third day, so that "by means of" his death believers might be made righteous and worthy to partake of the eternal inheritance in "his kingdom and glory" at the resurrection (1 Cor. 15:3, 4; Heb. 9:15; 1 Thess. 2:12; 2 Pet. 1:5-11).

(6) That water baptism is immersion, and is only for "men and women" who affectionately, or "with the heart," believe the gospel of the kingdom, which gospel is also called "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; Rom 10:10; Col. 2:12; John 3:5).

(7) That it is our duty to avoid "the works of the flesh," and to show in our lives "the fruit of the Spirit, which is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance" (Gal. 5:18-23; Eph. 5:9).

These truths of the gospel are believed and obeyed by those who are led by the Spirit and are seeking to attain at last the shining rewards of a blissful immortality in "the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" (2 Pet. 1:11).

IV.—Scriptural examples and illustrations of being led by the Spirit in the process of conversion, are "written for our learning." On the day of Pentecost about three thousand souls heard the Apostolic word, and received it gladly, were baptized, and the same day were added to the church (Acts 2:38-42). When the Samaritans "believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women" (Acts 8:12). The Ethiopian treasurer hearing one discourse from Philip believed, was baptized, and went on his way rejoicing (Acts 8:35-39). At Philippi the jailor and all his house heard Paul and Silas at midnight, and were baptized straightway, and rejoiced, believing in God (Acts 16:31-34). At Corinth "many of the Corinthians hearing, believed, and were baptized" (Acts 18:8). Here we have three great acts in conversion, given in their exact order: (1) hearing, (2) believing, (3) baptism. These were true converts, having truly believed, repented, been baptized, and led by the Spirit that spoke to them in the Apostles, and also speaks to us in the Holy Scriptures (Matt. 10:20; John 17:20).

WISHING

Do you wish the world were better?
Let me tell you what to do—
Set a watch upon your actions;
Keep them always straight and true;
Rid your mind of selfish motives,
Let your thoughts be clean and high.
Of the sphere you occupy.

Do you wish the world were wise?
Well, suppose you make a start
By accumulating wisdom
In the scrapbook of your heart.

Do not waste one page in folly;
Live to learn and learn to live;
If you want to increase knowledge,
You must get ere you can give.

Do you wish the world were better?
Then remember day by day
Just to sow the seed of kindness
As you pass along the way.
For the pleasure of the many
May ofttimes be traced to one,
And the hand that plants the acorn
Shields the armies from the sun.

A Bed Time Fairy Story

"The Unruly Member"

When I was just a little chap, a little fellow in my frocks, one day when I had had a nap, I woke and found a little box. It was like ivory all inlaid with scarlet cushions soft as air, nothing in gold or silver made, can with it the least compare. Of course I quickly did begin losing what wrapped my box about, and just as I was peeping in, there was a fairy peeping out. The little chap as big as a mouse was chained within, for it appears the box was for his prison house and he had been in it for years.

It was not many inches wide, the roof was low and vaulted too. He just could turn upon his side and that was all he could do. So I took pity on his plight, it was so sad to see him there. I thought it would be only right to let him out to get the air. Oh it was fun to see him go; he was a cunning little elf and he could frisk and frolic so it would make you laugh to split your sides.

But soon found to my dismay that he delighted in a fuss and then with fire he loved to play and that you know is dangerous. Then he would tear and kick and bite as quick as light, as tough as wire. The little rascal loved to fight and never, never seemed to tire. On mischief bent with all his soul he got me into many a bout, and when I found I lost control, I rued the day I let him out. At last I made resolve outright to catch and hold with might and main, and tie the little fellow tight and lock him in his box again. Oh he was slippery as an eel, but though the fight was long and sore, I got the shackles on his heel and chained him firmly to his floor. There bound he lies all in the dark for fear he should more mischief brew. It seems unkindly sort of work, but it's the only thing to do. For since I keep him tied right down within his box and shut the lid, he's just the nicest fellow known and does whatever he is bid. Now all you children go to bed for there's my story through at last; but keep this fairy in your head, and learn betimes to hold him fast.

July

July is the seventh month in our present calendar, and consists of 31 days. It originally was the fifth month and as such was called by the Romans Quinctilis. The name July is from Julius, in honor of Julius Caesar—who was born in the month—and came into use at his death. At one time the Anglo-Saxons called July "mead month," from the meadows then being in bloom.

To those who previously have not done so, July is the best time in the year to come out on the Lord's side, do his will, and become a son or daughter of the living God. "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation."

Humility

When my soul from sin is purged,
When my evil spirit's scourged,

When my vanity is humbled,
When my wilful feet have stumbled;

When I see in flower's scent
Signs of the Omnipotent,

When in all sweet winds that blow
My Redeemer I shall know·

When I hear the birds rejoice,
Echoing thy melodious voice,

When I gaze on mountain grand,
And I see thy wondrous hand,

When with bowed head I confess,
When I see my worthlessness—

Then, Lord, shall I fully know,
Not 'till then, how much I owe.

The Old And The New

At times we read much, and hear more concerning the Old and the New Covenants; some going so far as to teach that today we are as much under the one as we are under the other. But Paul said, "The law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ." So the way we see it is about like this:

Old	New
Moses	Christ
Law	Faith
Election	Obedience
Works	Grace
Wages	Gift
Temporal life	Eternal life

The Beauty of a Holy Life

A holy life is made up of a number of small things: little words, not eloquent speeches or sermons; little deeds, not miracles or battles nor one great heroic act of mighty martyrdom, make up the true Christian life. The little constant sunbeam, not the lightning; the waters of Siloam that "go softly" in the meek mission of refreshment, not the "waters of the river, great and many," rushing down in noisy torrents, are the true symbols of a Christian life. The avoidance of little evils, little sins, little inconsistencies, little weaknesses, little foibles, little indulgences of the flesh, the avoidance of such little things as these go far to make up at least the negative beauty of a holy life.

"What Think Ye of Christ?"

Matthew 22:42

It was Jesus who asked the question: "What think ye of Christ? whose son is he?" That was about 1886 years ago. And now a New York Christian ? clergyman, together with his congregation also supposed Christians has attempted to answer the question by saying that "Jesus may be as good as any philosopher, but no better;" they therefore have formed a "community church" where all philosophers, poets and [illegible] statesmen will equally be studied. [illegible] they [illegible] have given our Lord a place. Surely we are living in the last days.

How many, think you, acknowledged the receipt of the [illegible] pictures of interesting places in New York we sent on request some time ago? Draw a perfect circle and you have the answer! the firm so strongly recommended by "Father" Thomas. Were we looking for praise, or did we expect thanks, we would be so discouraged we never would write another line. But we shall continue, for some of the fathers and mothers have written us exceedingly encouraging letters. And, yes, at times we receive one from one of the younger people, but they are not for publication, although once we did publish quite a few, and we now will print another, not for the praise it gives, but as an encouragement to others.

Larger Hope Antidote

I AM wondering what Noah would think of some of the up-to-the-minute theology preached in these last days. I wonder if he preached the great salvation to the wicked generation of his day and proceeded forthwith to provide a way of escape if they neglected it. I wonder if he thought the Creator was making a bad failure of things when only a very few, so far, had been counted worthy of salvation and such an overwhelming majority actually perished beneath the flood because of their wickedness which God declared was very great. I wonder if he reasoned as some do now, that surely this cannot be. If you teach that the destruction of the antideluvians, Sodom and Gomorrah, was only a temporary and final judgment, and say that these things happened as examples for those who should afterward live ungodly, you thereby destroy the force of the warning, for if these have the promise of a future chance, perhaps other sinners may likewise in some mysterious way escape also. Controverting this, God declares that if the wicked turn not he will whet his sword (Psa. 7:12). Larger Hope advocates may seek ameliorating discipline for the wicked after death, but it will be futile, for the good reason that he shall not be (Psa. 37). Destruction is a strange form of restorative discipline. Perhaps Lot's wife will need to be assiduously warned that she must not look back this time; that the other time it was only a sort of make-believe chance just merely as an example for a lot of ungodly folks that were to live after her; but this time there is no fooling about it because no provision seems to be in sight for a more "convenient season."

And, too, the code of morals of Sodomites and the giants of men who lived in that age will have to be so sharply revised that the discipline will need to be stringent, and will take a lot of patience to get them to walk the narrow way leading to life eternal. The preaching of some of our people sounds as if God has been paying but little attention to the common run of sinners in the past, and will not in the future until the thousand years reign of Christ or some other time. Whenever he needs one to use in his plans he takes one irrespective of heart condition or even a desire on the sinner's part to seek after him. A very different condition from this prevailed when we see the Ethiopian eunuch seated in a carriage utilizing his spare time endeavoring to seek out and understand the meaning of the Lamb led before the slaughter, as the dumb lamb before its shearers. God had Phillip in readiness to carry the message of salvation to him. Likewise God had seen the devoutness, the almsgiving, the godly fear, and heard the continued prayers of Cornelius (Acts 10:2-4). Peter was sent to tell him words whereby he and his house might be saved, which were gladly believed. I am inclined to believe that God recognized something golden about our beloved apostle Paul before the gospel light shone upon him.

It seems to be a difficult task for Larger Hope advocates to find a place for the proposed disciplinary work for the dead out of Christ (or in as they say) to be accomplished. Some say the millennium will be divided into ten periods and the dead raised in as many consignments to prevent too many appearing at one time. Considerable of God's word will have to be daubed spurious to substantiate this theory. Others argue that the work is to be done in some age beyond the reign of Christ in some dreamland of futurity. There does not seem to be any place entirely suited for a just and no-respecter-of-persons trial for this class. Perhaps it is after death and hell are destroyed so that they will just have to be saved whether they repent or not. Better leave this class where God puts them: They shall not rise (Isa. 26:13, 14). They shall sleep a perpetual sleep (Jer. 51:39, 57).

I am inclined to place future probation for the dead in the same catalogue with the perverted gospel of Christ having gone to heaven to repair and brush up quarters for the saints who move in at death. The janitor up there ought to be sharply rebuked for letting these abiding places all run down, as he has. Perhaps God, by an oversight, has neglected the upkeep of these structures as he has some very good sinners on earth who would have died in a saved condition if only they had been given even half a chance.

Let us see if more solid ground can be found upon which to stand. Christ was not an afterthought on the part of Jehovah to prevent total wreck of his plans. Christ was in the mind of the Father before man was created. If man had been obedient there would have been no need of a resurrection. It is the righteous judgment of God that the entire human family, because of Adam's transgression, came into the world under penalty of death. This would have been unfair if a way of lifting the penalty of death had not been provided, and amply so, from the beginning. For a time man's vanity caused him to argue that perhaps the serpent was right, but when death began to make serious inroads among them a few began to call upon the name of the Lord, and by their works proved they believed God in preference to the serpent. Very early in the race we find Abel choosing the good. Bible history reveals a few of this class in all ages. It has constituted a little flock of which the world has been unworthy, a seed and a salt in the earth, although few in number and at times almost extinct, but never completely exterminated. Had Noah and his house perished in the flood, this seed would have perished. A weak seed existed in Abraham's day. God has always desired and endeavored to teach man to choose righteousness and glory not in his own strength. System and precision is strongly manifest in all of God's works. The heavens declare it. Man's limited knowledge of the universe proclaims it with a thousand tongues. The laws of life and all nature bespeaks his loving but just solicitude in a most intimate way in the affairs of man whom he created in his likeness, and the earth his destined home. The Bible teaches nowhere that the earth has or ever will be replenished through the resurrection of dead sinners. A seed was preserved through Noah. With the call of Abraham from a world of idolatry, the nation of Israel was established, governed by laws and limitations.

Strangers who sought membership in the congregation of Israel were not barred out but admitted on well defined conditions. It so pleased God that the true seed of Israel of God is made up entirely of those who exercise faith in his promises of which Christ is the head. But Abraham's seed according to the flesh is not to be completely destroyed at the close of the present dispensation. Why not totally destroyed? A remnant seed will be needed to replenish the earth when Israel is established in their own land never again to be pulled up. after their repentance and acceptance. The period of destruction incident to the return of Christ also reduces the Gentile nations to a weak condition through war and pestilence, but not totally destroyed, why? A remnant seed, though weak, will be needed as a foundation for strong Gentile nations who will seek the Lord of hosts during the 1000 year reign of Christ. God's purpose in not making a full end of Israel and the Gentile nations at this time controverts the doctrine of a resurrected mortal seed to replenish the earth. If a complete end of nations were promised literal fire-world burners might flourish. But the word reveals no such plans. Many object that it would be impossible for this remnant seed to develop to proportions taught in the prophecies. Do you realize that it has been but 427 years since Columbus discovered America, and consider what has been accomplished during that time under the rule of man! What think you will happen when Christ takes charge of this world and the Father's will is done on earth as it is in heaven. Christ is the first fruit of the seed promised. The bride is a kind of first fruit. When the first order of resurrection is completed at the close of Christ's reign, when the main harvest is reaped, its subjects will be of the same nature as the first and the kind of first fruits.

How a Bible student can read the book of Psalms and get future probation for dead sinners is more than I can understand. Why should God be angry with the wicked every day and say he will whet his sword against him if he turns not, if the only alternative for him is to keep right on choosing to do wickedly. If life was prolonged a thousand years no one could do good works sufficient to earn eternal life. It pleases God to give it through works of faith. But does this signify that man's ability to choose good and evil is not taken into account at all? The human mind is perfectly capable of appreciating God even before the glorious light of the gospel takes hold of his heart, and provides for him a means of salvation. The God of heaven has zealously guarded in all ages the sanctity and holiness of the means of a life and immortality in Christ. The clouds began to gather in the west one afternoon last week. The earth's surface was dry and parched. A neighbor, a man of the world, was working with me, and as the refreshing rain came down I could not refrain from asking him who it was that so freely, so bountifully sends the rain, the sunshine, the wheat the corn, the innumerable blessings to all alike. The man, a kind and helpful neighbor, but whose goodness if sifted out is based upon selfish motives evidently had always looked upon the rain as a result of natural phenomenon, independent of the Architect of the universe. As an answer to my remark he simply cast a far off look and dropped his head in silence. Oh, that men and women would only recognize God's presence round about them, so near, so willing, so anxious, if they only would in the slightest way reach out after him, to let their lips speak his holy name in fear and reverance, with thanksgiving and praise instead of profane words and wicked deeds. When everything round about is so abundantly, richly, and overflowingly the open manifestations of God's goodness and mercy what shall we think of man who persists in worshipping these gifts more than the Giver?

What does "life in Christ" or "through Christ" signify in the Scriptures? If it is not synonomous with "eternal life," the power to have life in one's self, as the Father gave unto his Son to have life in himself, the written testimony is very ambiguous. Where do we find both conditional and unconditional life in Christ? If this position is not scriptural can we say, then, that all that die in Adam are to made alive (eternal life) in Christ? If so, universal salvation is positively assured. And universal salvation is an open alignment with the serpent's doctrine, "thou shalt not surely die," and makes the teachers of such the children of their father, the devil.

But if the "all" in Christ is a selected or elect seed or body taken from the "all in Adam," to me, harmonizes with the Scriptures throughout. Must we believe that the old Adam's seed which bears no fruit, and by God's judgment is worthy to be burned by fire; I say, can we say in the face of this fact that God is going to preserve this seed through Christ, dig it up by resurrection, transplant it in richer soil where the showers of heavenly blessings are so plentiful as to vouchsafe salvation to all? Not so, my beloved brethren. The seed to stand up again (resurrected) is the seed of Abraham through Christ; for if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. The restoration of dead sinners, who wandered out of the way of understanding, does not constitute an element of the things spoken of by the prophets since the world began to be accomplished during the benovelent and punitive reign of Christ. It is a gathering together of all things in Christ when the seed of the woman shall triumph gloriously and crush forever the head of the serpent. Life with possible elements of death is not the "life" the Savior talked about, neither do we find him subdividing the term into conditional and unconditional life. It is faith in the gospel that saves, but recognition and belief in God paves the way to it. "Without faith it is impossible to please God: for he that cometh to him must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Heb. 11:6). When Jesus performed miracles with sinners we hear him saying, "thy faith maketh thee whole"; and, "behold, greater faith than this cannot be found in Israel." Paul wrote words of wisdom and truth to the Ephesians, 4:17-19, when he said: "This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye hence forth walk not as other Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their minds, having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them because of the blindness of their hearts, who being past feeling, have given themselves over unto lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness." Beware how thou goeth, vain and boastful man, for "he that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead" (Prov. 21:16). How our "hearts burn within us" as we try to comprehend in mortal weakness the consummation of the kingdom of God, when sinners and all the unrighteous are rooted out of the earth and no mediator between God and his glorified children is needed, but they shall see him and talk face to face. If such promises as these, which we find in the Book of God, open to the world, fail to stir the inner-most depths of our being and inspire to nobler, godlike thoughts and deeds, how beastly indeed must be our nature! "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his wonderful goodness. Praise ye the Lord."

Russellism Refuted

Article Two

BUT THE challenge will come from Russellism, "What are you going to do with Ezek. 16:53-55?" I am bold to say that if my choice lay between the theory which Russellism bases upon the passage and the testimonies and facts we have already considered, I would cling to the latter, even if I had to confess that the passage in Ezekiel was too mysterious for me to offer any sort of explanation to it. I may be overwhelmed with sorrow by the loss of loved friends and relatives, and I may hope since they had died without "a chance," they may be raised to another life in which the probation they were deprived of in the first life may be vouchsafed to them, yet, with my utmost love for them all aflame and my hopes burdened with deepest anxiety in their behalf, I would positively revolt at the very thought of seeking solace and support in Sodom; I would be ashamed to try to base my hope for the future welfare of my loved ones upon a passage of Scripture which, apparently, (to the superficial view, however) teaches resurrection to "a second chance" of the abominable Sodomites.

Metaphorical Relationships

Now let us carefully examine the passage in Ezek. 16. In verses 2 and 3 of the chapter we read, "Son of man, cause Jerusalem to know her abominations, and say, Thus saith the Lord God unto Jerusalem, Thy birth and thy nativity is of the land of Canaan; thy father was an Amorite; and thy mother a Hittite.' Was this literally true or parabolically true? Literally, and in the racial sense, their father was Abraham, and their mother was Sarah, who were not Amorites nor Hittites. Why then did the prophet say that their father was an Amorite and their mother a Hittite? Clearly, it was to "cause Jerusalem to know her abominations," by comparing her wicked children of that generation with the nations of Canaan whose wickedness was the reason for which the ancestors of Israel were sent to exterminate them. Over four hundred years before Israel entered Canaan God said to Abraham, "The iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full" (Gen. 15:16), from which it is evident that their iniquity was full when the time came for their divinely commanded extermination. By the way, the Amorites had their "chance," and just vengeance waited over four hundred and seventy years for them to deserve their extermination. Will Russellism defy this stern fact and declare that they are to have "another chance?"

But to return to that proclaimed Amorite and Hittite relationship of the wicked generation of the Jews addressed by the prophet. God refuses to acknowledge their literal relation to Abraham and Sarah, and throws them into relationship with a wicked people whom they themselves traditionally abhorred.

This is repeated more pointedly in verse 45: "Thou art thy mother's daughter, that loathed her husband and her children; and thou art the sister of thy sisters; which loathed their husbands and their children; your mother was an Hittite and your father an Amorite." Why is Rome called "Sodom and Egypt" (Rev. 11.8)? Is it not because she is wicked like Sodom, and dark and mysterious like Egypt? Metaphorical relationships in the Scriptures are based upon similarity of characters good or bad. Two persons who are proud are brothers, or sisters, and both are children of pride. If we tell a man that he is a brother to Nero we class him with that wicked, heartless emperor; and so with cities and nations. Unless the characteristic of Scripture is recognized, the chapter under consideration cannot be understood; and it is with those who do not understand this that Russellism is able to succeed, by employing metaphorical language as if it were literal.

Adam Clarke on Ezekiel 16

A note from Dr. Adam Clarke's Commentary will be helpful here. On the words, "Thy birth and thy nativity is of the land of Canaan," he says: "It would disgrace Abraham to say that you sprung from him; ye are rather Canaanites than Israelites. The Canaanites were accursed; so are ye." Referring to the Amorite fatherhood and the Hittite motherhood he says:

"These tribes were the most famous, and probably the most corrupt, of all the Canaanites. So Isaiah calls the princes of Judah rulers of Sodom (chap. 1:10); and John the Baptist calls the Pharisees 'a genertion of vipers' (Matt. 3:7). There is a fine specimen of this kind of catachresis in Dido's invective against Aeneas:

> False as thou art, and more than false forsworn,
> Not sprung from noble blood, nor goddess born:
> But hewn from harden'd entralls of a rock,—
> And rough Hyrcanian tigers gave the suck. Dryden.

This is strong; but the invective of the prophets exceeds it far. It is an essence of degradation to its subjects; and shows the Jews to be as base and contemptible as they were abominable and disgusting.

This will show why "Samaria and her daughters" and "Sodom and her daughters" are called sisters of the generation of Jews (verse 46). These phrases mean the same as "Jerusalem and her children," that is, the people of Jerusalem, the people of Samaria, the people of Sodom. The reason why the term "daughters" is used is because the people are compared to lewd women "mothers and daughters" that "loathe their husbands and their (legitimate) children," and prostitute their virtue by adultery. Hence the metaphor is kept consistent without.

Forcing home the comparison involved in this moral relation of sisterhood to Samaria and Sodom, the prophet says, verse 51: "Neither hath Samaria committed half thy sins; but thou hast multiplied thine abominations more than they, and hast justified thy sisters in all thine abominations which thou hast done." Not that Samaria and Sodom were really "justified" in their abominations; but the comparison is made to sharpen the edge of the invective against the exceedingly wicked Jews.

Now we come to the real gist of the question. It was necessary to clear the way by reaching an understanding of the peculiar manner in which the prophet was "causing Jerusalem to know her abominations"" (verse 3). Sodom could not be a sister of Jerusalem geographically, nor historically. She went down in the days of Abraham and Lot, long before Jerusalem and the Jews became mutually identified. Sisters in abomination is the only sense that is reasonable and consistent with the fearful facts the prophet is disclosing to the shame and degradation of that generation of Jews.

Now what sort of a spectacle have we before us? Could a blacker people be painted? Are these the people that Russellism asks us to believe are destined to have a resurrection to a "chance"—call it a "second chance" or a "fair chance," as you please? Is it that the prophet has led us through the "inquity of the Amorites," the sins of Canaan, the idolatry of Samaria, the fearful crimes of Sodom, and the abominations of that generation of Jews to point us out a people who deserve, or are to have undeservedly, another life time of probation? In a chapter in which the wickedness of the people is so strongly thrown into metaphor, would it not be more consistent to regard verses 53-55 as irony? What! irony in the Word of God? some will exclaim. Yes, do not be alarmed. Let us examine a few cases.

Cases of Irony

1 Kings 18:27 And it came to pass at noon, that Elijah mocked them, and said, Cry aloud, for he is a god; either he is talking, or he is pursuing, or he is on a journey,' or peradventue he sleepeth, and must be awakened.

1 Kings 22:15 So he came to the king. And the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go against Ramoth-Gilead to battle, or shall we forbear? And he answered them, Go, and prosper for the Lord shall deliver it into the hand of the king. And the king said unto him, How many times shall I adjure thee that thou tell me nothing but that which is true in the name of the Lord? And he said, I saw all Israel scattered upon the hills, as sheep that have not a shepherd: and the Lord said, These have no master; let them return every man to his own house.

Job 12:2—No doubt but ye are the people, and wisdom shall die with you.

Eccl. 11:9—Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth; and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes: but know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment.

Matt. 25:26—His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reaped where I sowed not, and gather where I had not strawed.

1 Cor. 4:8—Now are ye full, now are ye rich, ye have reigned as kings without us: and I would to God ye did reign, that we also might reign with you.

Ironical Words Fit Aggravated Circumstances

Now in these testimonies the meaning is the opposite to what is said, which is a method of making the condemnation as caustic as the subject deserves. Ironical words are evoked by aggravated circumstances; and now we may ask, Is there a more aggravated circumstance to call forth withering irony than the one under consideration? Having gradually led up to the climax in showing wicked Jews what vile characters they had become, and since restoration from captivity was the hope of every Jew, with what searching fire the words of the prophet would burn when he declared that it was as possible for the abominable Sodomites, who suffered the "vengeance of eternal fire,"to be restored, as it would be to restore that fearfully wicked generation of Jews. So in words of biting irony he said, "When I shall bring again their captivity, the captivity of Sodom and her daughters (idolaters), then will I bring again the captivity of thy captives in the midst of them." How these last four words must have burned to the bones! "That thou mayest bear thine own shame, and mayest be confounded (not "redeemed") in all that thou hast done, in that thou art a comfort unto them. When thy sister Sodom and her daughters shall return to their former state (which would never be), and Samaria her daughters shall return to their former estate, then thou and thy daughters shall return to your former estate."

Then to more forcibly show that the one "return" was as impossible as the other, he adds, "For thy sister Sodom was not mentioned by thy mouth in the day of thy pride, before thy wickedness was discovered as at the time of thy reproach of the daughters of Syria and all that are round about her, the daughters of the Philistines, which despise thee round about. For thus saith the lord God, I will even deal with thee as thou hast done, which hast despised the oath in breaking the covenant."

To this verse the language, mixed as it is with a well-deserved irony, is consistent with and according to the whole tenor of Scriptures, that the destroyed Sodomites, the condemned idolatrous Samaritans, and that wicked generation of Jews were beyond redemption and their destruction would be irrevocable and eternal..

I am fully aware that opponents will refer to verses 60 to 63, and I will yet show that these are consistent with what I have set forth so far. But before I do so, let me examine another line of evidence to confirm the claim that the prophet spoke ironically.

Illustrative Comparisons

In contrasting the hopeless destiny of some men with the hopeful future that shone before the good old partiarch Job, he says, "So man lieth down, and riseth not till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep" (Job 14:12). What have we here but a declaration based upon the stability and perpetuity of "the heavens"? This is not a reference to political heavens: for the fact of their insecurity and instability would give no force to the comparison Job is making. His reference is to the "heavens that declare the glory of God," whose ordinances can no more fail than God's covenant be broken. Therefore of these heavens he says, "till these be no more, they shall not awake." To paraphrase the statement for comparison with the message in Ezekiel under consideration. When the heavens are no more, these men I am speaking of shall awake, etc. When will the heavens be no more? Never. Therefore these will never awake. When will Sodom be restored? Never. Therefore you wicked Jews whom I (Ezekiel) am addressing shall never be restored.

Another illustration may be found in Jer. 31:35: "Thus saith the Lord, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar: the Lord of hosts is his name: if those ordinances depart from before me, saith the Lord, then the seed (not every generation) of Israel shall cease from being a nation before me forever. Thus saith the Lord: If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel, for all that they have done, saith the Lord."

Now, throw these statements of comparison into the form of question and answer: When will "those ordinances depart"? Never. Therefore, Israel will not cease from being a nation for ever.

When will man be able to measure the heavens and search out the foundations of the earth? Never. Therefore God will never cast off the seed of Israel.

Now let us put these in a verbal form similar to the words of Ezekiel in question. When the ordinances of the heavens depart, then the seed of Israel shall cease forver. When will that be? Never. When I restore the wicked Sodomites, then I will restore you wicked Jews. When will that be? Never. Selected by Brother B. F. Smith.

Wine

When I read the article some time ago about the boy who refused the stimulant, I thought, "What a beautiful character!" It really had an uplifting influence over me to think that even though he were not in the truth, yet he had been trying to build a character during his life, We may call these things trivial, but it is the watching of our every act in small things that prepares us to overcome the greater things.

The Bible says, "If meat makes my brother to offend, I will eat no meat as long as the world standeth." Now dear brethren, if some think it wrong to drink strong drink, why try to make them believe it is right? We know there is no harm in not drinking it, and it is taking a chance to drink it. Our God knew the depraved appetite of man, and we read, "Woe to the man that giveth his neighbor strong drink." He does not say "that giveth him enough to make him drunk."

What the church needs in these last days is exhortation to godliness. I greatly feel the need of it. When I see an article in the paper along the line of exhortation I certainly appreciate it. It is good to mix with doctrine.

Let us walk in the Spirit and overcome the desires of the flesh.

Questions, but no Answers

The "Messenger" reports a discussion which was recently held between "Rev." Ira C. Moore, and John J. Mullens. Mr. Mullens, denying the doctrine of the endless torment of the wicked, asked the "Rev." Mr. Moore "many questions which to this day," says the report, "remain unanswered." Some of these "unanswered" queries we submit for the edification of our readers.

1. If "forever" means "eternal" in all cases you must resurrect "Jonah and the whale," and kindle a fire inside the whale and then make the whale immortal to keep him in. Can you do it?

2. If the spirit is the real man, why does the body have to die for what the spirit does; and why punish both the spirit and body when only one is responsible?

3. If Abraham's bosom is the home of the saved, what became of the righteous prior to the birth of Abraham?

4. How will you harmonize the doctrine of eternal torture and pain with Rev 21:4 which reads "Neither shall there be any more pain"?

5. As "the dead know nothing" (Eccl. 9:5), can there be punishment without knowledge?

6. Will you please tell to this intelligent audience when the spirit becomes a conscious thinking entity?

My opponent says Kolasin aionion and Basanos have the same meaning, which I deny. Kolasin is translated variously (Acts 4:21) Here punish is from Kolasin but does this convey the idea that these men thought to punish the disciples eternally? Again in 2 Pet. 2:9, "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." Is there anything here to indicate that the wicked will suffer eternal torment? No, but just to the contrary: they are reserved, are kept unto the day of judgment, to be punished. 1 John 4:18 "Fear hath torment," kolasin. Is there anything here to lead one to believe in eternal torment? "It is derived from kolazoo, which signifies to cut off—to cut off an individual from life.'

Thus he was whipped upon his own ground, for when we go to Matt. 24:46 we have kolasin, a cutting off from life. Then when he says kolasin means eternal, we say very well, eternally cut off from life.

The Third Trumpet

Editor's Sermon Notes on the Apocalypse

And the third angel sounded, and there fell a great star from heaven, burning as it were a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the rivers, and upon the fountains of waters; and the name of the star is called Wormwood: and the third part of the waters became wormwood; and many men died of the waters, because they were made bitter (Rev. 8:10, 11).

1. Symbols Explained

1. A Blazing Star (Shooting Star)

1. Stars represent ruling powers; light, their edicts, commandments, and laws (Gen. 1:14, 18; Num. 24:17; Luke 1:78, 79; Rev. 1; 22:16, Phil. 2:1g; Psa. 119:105; Hos. 6:5).

2. Sometimes a star denotes a destroying, inconstant, meteoric power (Dan. 8:9, 10, Num. 24:17-19; Jude13). Facts about shooting stars worthy of note:

- (a) They have no fixed place in heaven.
- (b) They shine by native light.
- (c) They are visible only while they fall.
- (d) Their motion is rapid.
- (e) Their duration brief.
- (d) Their brightness, while it lasts, intense.
- (g) Their extinction instantaneous.
- (h) When their light is extinguished, nothing remains; the bodies which emitted the light are no where to be found.

2. The Third Part of the Rivers and Fountains of Waters

1. Politico-geographical-topographical arena of the trumpet: blending of the literal symbolical (2 Kings 19:24. Rev. 16:1-7; 17:9, 10, 15).

3. The Name of the Star

1. Wormwood (Greek apsinthos), the name of a river in the Illyrian Third ruled by Attila. Rivers often designate countries.

- (a) Nile, Egypt (Ezek. 29:2-4).
- (b) Euparates, Turkey (Rev. 16:12).
- (c) Mississippi, United States.
- (d) Thames England.
- (e) Arsinthos, Illyrian Third of Roman Empire.

4. Bitter Waters Kill Many

1. Wormwood, God's judgments turned into gall (Jer. 8:14; 9:14-16; 23:14, 15; Amos 5:6, 7; 6:12).
2. Drinking poisoned waters refers to the bitter draught of death which was often caused by hemlock or other poison (Psa. 75:8; Matt. 16:28; Luke 22:42; Heb. 2:9; John 18:11).
3. "Drinking the cup," "tasting death," etc., are symbolic expressions for God's judgments (Job 21:20; Psa. 11:6; Isa. 51:17; Oba. 16; Jer. 25:15-38; Rev. 14:9, 10).

3. Historical Application A. D. 450

1. Attila king of the Huns, "the terror of the world" (Gib. 3:142).
2. He possessed the Sword of Mars; acquired the empire of Scythia and Germany (Gib. 3: 145, 146).
3. Battle of Chalon; 162,000 killed (Gib. 3:191. 194).
4. Attila fulfilled the third trumpet in his invasion of Italy, the Illyrian Third, the north of which is the "rivers and fountains of waters" (Gib. 3:195, 196, 197).

Trinitarian Confusion

Will some orthodox clergyman please explain the doctrine of "the trinity," and prove the existence of such a God as they require us to worship. Scripture testimony will be taken as evidence, or logical reasoning from nature. I have taken some pains to try to inform myself on this subject, but with no satisfactory results. I enquire of "Rev. Dr. A.," and am informed that God is not an organized located person. O no! God is not a person! Then Dr. "B." argues with neighbor Unitarian, that the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, are three distinct persons. Yes, God is a person, his Son is a person, the Holy Ghost is a person.

Again we hear "Rev. Mr. C.," preaching that the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, are all one person. Dr. A. says God has neither body, parts, or passion. "Rev. Mr. D." says, the soul is a part of God. A. says God is not a located being; he is everywhere in general, and in no place in particular. Then we hear D. speaking with great solemnity, of our deathless spirits being summoned to appear in the presence of God, and of wicked spirits being banished from his presence.

Now let us see what we have learned thus far:

1. A. says God is not a person.
2. B. says they are three persons.
3. C. says they are one person.
4. A. says God is without parts.
5. D. says the soul is a part of God.
6. A. says God is everywhere present.
7. D. speaks of being banished from his presence.

But what perplexes me most is this:
A. B. C. and D. all claim to agree,
That three are one, and one is three!
'Tis a puzzle to me, I can only see,
That one is one, and three ones are three.—L. Sheets in "Bible Expositor."

The Third Epistle of Peter

The authorship of this epistle is uncertain. That it was written by Walter Scott, a coadjutor of Alexander Campbell, is our surmise; but be the author who he may, his burlesque is both entertaining and instructive—Editor.

CHAPTER I

The Style and Manners of Living

NOW YE who are called and chosen to go forth to all nations and among all people, in time present and in time to come, to preach the Word, see that ye take unto yourselves marks, yea, many outward marks, whereby ye shall be know of men.

Be ye not called as men are called: but be ye called Pope, Archbishop, Archdeacon, or Divine, or Reverend, and Right Reverend, or some like holy name; so may ye show forth your honor and your calling.

And let your dwelling places be houses of splendor and edifices of cost; and let your doors be decked with plates of brass, and let your names, even your reverend titles, be graven thereon; so shall it be as a sign.

Let your garments in which you minister be garments not as the garments of men, neither let them be "seamless garments, woven throughout," but let them be robes of richest silk, and robes of fine linen of curious device and costly workmanship: and have ye robes of black and robes of white, that ye may change the one for the other; so shall ye show forth your wisdom and humility.

Let your fare be sumptuous, not plain and frugal as the fare of the husbandman who tilleth the ground; but live ye on the fat of the land, taking "good heed for the morrow and wherewithal ye shall be fed."

And drink ye of the wines of the vintage brought from afar, and wines of great price; then shall the light of your spirits be the light of your countenances, and your faces shall be bright, even as the morning sun shall your faces glow in brightness; thus shall ye show forth your moderation and your temperance in all things..

Let the houses in which you preach be called churches, and let them be built in manner of great ornament without, and adorned with much cost within; with rich pillars and paints, and with fine altars and pedestals, and urns of precious stones, and cloths and velvet of scarlet, and vessels of silver.

And let there be rooms for the changing of robes, and places for the precious metals and mitres.

And let the houses be divided into seats for the congregation, and let every man know his own seat; and let the first seats in the front of the altar be for the rich that pay by thousands; and the next for the poorer that pay by hundreds; and the last for those that pay by tens. And let the poor man sit behind the door.

And let the seats be garnished with cushions and crimson cloth, and with fine velvet; for if the houses of players and vain people who deal in idle sayings and shows of mockery, be rich and gorgeous, how much more so should be the houses that are dedicated to him "that is meek and lowly of spirit."

CHAPTER II

The Choosing of Ministers

When ye go out to choose holy ones to be of our brethren, and to minister at the altar, choose ye from among the youth, even those whose judgements are not yet ripe, and whose hearts know not yet whether they incline to God or Mammon.

But ye are wise, and ye shall know the inclinings of their future spirits and ye shall make them incline to the good things which the church hath in store for them that are called, even those that shall be called of you.

Then shall ye have them taught exceeding many things. They shall not be ignorant fishermen, or husbandmen, or men speaking one tongue, and serving God only by the knowledge of his law.

Nay ye shall make them wise in the things of your wisdom; yea, exceedingly cunning in mysteries, even the mysteries which you teach.

Then shall they be fitted for the "laying on of hands;" and when the Bishop hath done his office, then shall they be reverend divines.

But if any man believe that he is called of God to speak to his brethren, "without money and without price," though his soul be bowed to the will of the Father, and though he work all righteousness, and "speak as with the tongue of an angel"—if he be not made a Divine by your rules and by the hands of a Bishop, then he is not a Divine, nor shall he preach.

He that is chosen of you shall give you honor, and shall be honored of men and honored of women: and verily he expects his reward.

CHAPTER III

The Perfomance of Preaching

When ye go to the church to preach, go not by the retired way, where go those that would shun the crowd, but go in the highway, where go the multitude, and see that ye have on the robes of black, and take heed that your pace be measured well, and that your march be stately.

Then shall your "hearts be lifted up," even as the hearts of mighty men shall they be lifted up. And ye shall be gazed upon by the multitude, and they shall honor you and men shall praise you and the women shall glorify you, even by the women shall ye be glorified.

And when ye go in, go not as the ordained, prepared only with a soul to God and with a heart to men, and a spirit filled with the Holy Ghost; but go ye with your pockets full of papers and full of divine words; even in your pockets shall your divinity be.

And let your sermon be full of "the enticing words of man's wisdom," and let it be beautified with just divisions, and tropes, and with metaphors; and with hyperbole, and apostrophe, and with interrogation, and with acclamation, and with syllogisms, and with sophisms, and throughout let declamation be.

And take good heed to your attitudes and your gestures, knowing when to bend, and when to stand erect; when to lift your right hand and when your left, and let your motions be graceful, and in your attitudes and in your gestures let your grace be. Thus shall ye be pleasing in the eyes of the people and graceful in their sight.

Let your voice at times be smooth as the stream of the valley, and soft as the breeze that waves not the bough on its bank; and at times let it swell like the waves of the ocean, or like the whirlwind on the mountain-top.

Then shall ye charm the ears of your hearers, and their hearts shall be softened, and their minds shall be astonished, and their souls shall incline unto you; and the men shall incline unto you and likewise the women; yea, unto your sayings and unto your persons shall they be inclined.

And be ye mindful not to offend the people; rebuke ye not their sins; but when ye rebuke sin, rebuke it at a distance; and let no man apply your saying to his own case; so shall he not be offended.

If a brother shall rise up the banner of war against brother, and the Christians against Christians, rebuke them not; but be some of you on the one side, and some on the other; and tell the one host that God is on their side, and the other host that he is on their side, so make them both to kill. And even among swords and lances let your black robes be seen.

Preach ye not "Peace on earth and good will to men," but preach ye glory to the victor, and victory to the brave.

If any man go into a foreign land and seize upon his fellow man, and put irons on his feet and irons on his hands, and bring him across the great deep, into bondage; nay, if he tear asunder the dearest ties of nature, the tenderest leagues of the human heart; if he tear the wife from the husband, and force the struggling infant from its mother's bleeding breast, rebuke him not!

And although he sell them into foreign slavery, to toil beneath the lash all their days, tell him not that his doings are of Antichrist; for lo! he is rich and giveth unto the church, and is esteemed pious; so shall ye not offend him, lest peradventure he withdraw himself from your flock.

Teach them to believe that you have the care of their souls, and that the saving mysteries are for your explaining; and when you explain your mysteries, encompass them round about with words as with a bright vail, so bright that through it no man can see.

And lo! ye shall blind the judgements of men (and more especially of women) as with a band of iron; and ye shall make them blind in the midst of light, even as the owl is blind in the noon-day sun; and behold ye shall lead them captive to your reverend wills.

CHAPTER IV

The Clergy's Reward

"In all your gettings" get money! Now, therefore, when ye go forth on your ministerial journey, go where there are silver and gold, and where each man will pay according to his measure. For verily I say ye must get your reward.

Go ye not forth as those that have been sent, "without two coats, without gold or silver, or brass, in their purses; without scrip for their journey, or shoes, or staves;" but go ye forth in the good things of this world .

And when ye shall hear of a Church that is vacant and hath no one to preach therein, then be that a call unto you, and be ye mindful of the call, and take ye charge of the flock thereof, even of the golden fleece.

And when ye shall have fleeced your flock and shall know of another call, and if the flock be greater, or (rather) if the fleece be greater, then greater be also unto you the call. Then shall ye leave your old flock, and of the new flock shall ye take the charge.

Those who have "freely received, let them freely give," and let not men have your words "without money, nor without price," but bargain ye for hundreds and bargain for thousands, even for thousands of silver and gold shall ye bargain.

And over and above the price for which ye have sold your service, take ye also gifts, and be ye mindful to refuse none, saying, "Lo! I have enough" but receive gifts from them that go in chariots, and from them that feed flocks, and from them that earn their morsel by the sweat of their brow.

Yea, take ye gifts of all, and take them in gold and in silver, and in bread; in wine and in oil, in raiment and in fine linen.

And the more that the people give you, the more they will honor you, for they shall believe that "in giving to you they are giving to the Lord;" for behold their sight shall be taken from them, and they shall be as blind as bats, and "shall know not what they do."

And ye shall wax richer and richer, and grow greater and greater, and ye shall be lifted up in your own sight, and exalted in the eyes of the multitude; and "lucre" shall be no longer "filthy" in your sight. And verily ye have your reward.

In doing these things ye shall never fail, and may abundance of gold, and silver, and bank notes, and corn, and wool, and flax, and spirits, and wine, and land, be multiplied unto you, both now and forever. Amen!

MEMORY VERSES: Micah 6 8 [illegible] 13,14.

GOLDEN TEXT: Galatians 6 2

O WORSHIP THE KING

O worship the King,
  All glorious above,
And gratefully sing
  His wonderful love;
Our Shield and Defender,
  The ancient of days,
Pavilioned in splendor,
  And girded with praise.

Thy bountiful care
  What tongue can recite?
It breathes in the air,
  It shines in the light,
It streams from the hills,
  It descends on the plain,
And sweetly distills
  In the dew and the rain

Frail children of dust,
  And feeble as frail,
In Thee do we trust,
  Nor find Thee to fail,
Thy mercies, how tender,
  How firm to the end,
Our Maker, Defender,
  Redeemer and Friend

The secret of happiness is not in doing what one likes—but in liking what one has to do.

Our Weekly Puzzle

Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.

What is the meaning of "approved"?
To whom was the above written?
What kind of a "workman" was he?
What is it to be "ashamed"?
What is the significance of "dividing"?
Who wrote the above, and where found?
Answer next issue.

Answer to puzzle in last issue:

A "mediator" is one who "goes between" those who are at variance, endeavoring to make peace.

"Ransom" signifies the amount paid for the release, or freedom, of one held captive. In the case of our lesson, mankind was prisoner of sin and as such estranged from God. Jesus acted as a "mediator" to bring man back to God, paying with his life the "ransom"; therefore through the perfection of Jesus our own imperfection is covered, providing we have faith and love.

"Testified" means to tell publicly what we know to be true.

"Due time" means the proper time, or the time set, or agreed upon.

The lesson was written by Paul to Timothy and can be found in 1 Tim. 2:4-6.

* * *

Believe me, the talent of success is nothing more than doing what you can do well and doing well whatever you do without a thought of fame. If it comes at all it will come because it is deserved, not because it is sought after. And, moreover, there will be no misgivings, no disappointments, no feverish exhausting excitement.

Commonplaces

"Commonplaces," you say. Yes; commonplaces, which word means two things—truths that affect us all; and also truths which, because they are so universal and so entirely believed, are all but powerless. Surely it is not time to stop preaching such truths so long as they are forgotten by the overwhelming majority of the people who acknowledge them. Thank God, the staple of the work of us preachers is the reiteration of commonplaces, which his goodness has made familiar, and our indolence and sin have made stale and powerless. (A. Maclaren).

Facts About Conditional Immortality

Man is "feeble," "frail," "corruptible," and "mortal"; for God "only hath immortality" (Psa. 38:8; 39:4; Rom. 1:23; 1 Tim. 4:16; 1:17).

Man must "seek for . . . immortality," for only through Christ can it be obtained. (Job 4:17; 2 Chron. 14:11 (margin); Rom. 2:7; 6:23, John 3:16).

Christ hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel" (2 Tim. 1:10).

Study the above. Know your Bible, and "always be ready to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear."

This word "fear," means—as you will see if you read the marginal reference in your Bible—reverence. There is nothing about God that we need "fear" him. But his every attribute commands respect and reverence, for "God is love."

Tannahill said:

Mid thy wanderings let honor aye be thy guide,
O'er thy actions let honesty ever preside;
Then though hardships assail thee, in virtue thou'lt smile,
For light is the heart that's untainted with guile.

To have a clean mind, to have a pure heart, to have a truthful tongue; means we live a purely moral life, which of itself is no mean thing. Jesus, wishing to commend Nathaniel said, "Behold, an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile." Would you not like the Master to say this concerning you?

Truth

Pilate once asked Jesus our Lord, "What is truth?" For one, I firmly believe that Jesus answered the question, although we have no record as to what the answer was. But in other parts of the New Testament we find expressions, some by Jesus, that clearly set forth an answer to the question so that we may not be left in doubt. John records that Jesus said, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed. And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." In another place the same author said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life;" and still again the Master remarked, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." Numerous other passages might be quoted, but we feel that the above is foundation enough on which to build the belief that primarily, Jesus himself is the truth, also that the truth is the word of God, for it teaches the things concerning Jesus the Son of God. Therefore my beloved children, if we would be true disciples of the loving Master, let us diligently study our Bibles and learn the things that will give us a saving knowledge of, and faith in Jesus Christ, then shall we not only know the truth, but we shall live in the truth and we indeed shall be free.

* * *

People sometimes attempt to carry out their plots under the cover of night, but fail to exclude themselves from the All-seeing-Eye.

When the poet said:

New occasions teach new duties,
Time makes ancient good uncouth,
He must still be up and doing,
Who would march abreast of truth,

he did not refer to the truth of which we speak above. For "our God changeth not;" with him "there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." And concerning the Savior the same is true, for it is written, "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, and today, and for ever." What a blessed assurance!

* * *

A Prayer

Let me be a little kinder,
Let me be a little blinder
To the faults of those about me.
Let me be, when I am weary,
Just a little bit more cheery;
So that those about me may see
That I to the good Lord belong.
And through fervent prayer and song
Bring many to acknowledge him.

Remember What You Read

The story is told that a young man once went to an intimate friend, and this is the account of the conversation:

Question.—"What plan would you recommend to a young man for preserving the results of his reading? Have you yourself pursued any plan to develop the power of retaining the subject matter you read? Have you any plan for marking books, journalizing or copying the pith of what you read?"

Answer.—"No; but I think a common place book a very useful thing. I would advise every young man to get into the habit of keeping something of that sort. The great point is to read nothing without reflection. Dr. Macaulay, who used to preach in New York, told me that when a boy he began to read enthusiastically, but at the foot of every page, he stopped and obliged himself to give an account of what he had read on that page. At first he had to read it three or four times before he got his mind firmly fixed. But he rigorously compelled himself to conform to the process until now, he said, after he read a book through once, he could almost recite it from the beginning to the end.

"It is a very simple habit to form early in life, and is invaluable in acquiring accuracy and thorough knowledge of the material with which a man has to deal."

And my dear young friends, as we have nothing more important than to acquaint ourselves with a knowledge of God's will. Suppose we read our Bible according to the above method, and see if we can not improve our minds as well as our understanding. For there is little use in reading if we do not understand what we read, and have a memory to retain it.

Doing Right

Everything on earth has its price, and sooner or later we pay for all that we have. When we complain that doing right takes so much toll of effort, sacrifice, and the loss of what we call "success" we have only to look about us to see that evil-doing is more costly still. Its demands may come in on the installment plan, but they will be all the more exorbitant because of that.

The Hidden Man of the Heart

Whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel. But let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit (1 Pet. 3:3, 4).

The above language from the apostle Peter has been deemed positive proof of immortality of the soul and its continued conscious existence after death. It is assumed that the hidden man of the heart is the soul and that it is not corruptible, etc., which is deemed demonstrative of the position named above. But it is evident Peter is not talking about the nature of the soul, but of the true adorning which should characterize all true Christians. That this is the case will be seen from all modern translations.

Wakefield: "Now let not your ornament be that outward ornament of plaited hair with braided gold or of costly raiment, but the hidden man of the heart with the unperishable ornament of a meek and gentle mind."

Improved Version, printed in 1809: "But let it be the hidden person of the heart, in the incorruptible ornament of a meek and quiet spirit."

McKnight: "But let the hidden man of the heart be adorned with incorruptible ornament of a meek and quiet spirit."

Douay Bible: "But the hidden man of the heart is the incorruptibility of a quiet and meek spirit."

Wesley: "But the hidden man of the heart in the incorruptible ornament."

It will be seen from these various translations that it is the ornament that is called incorruptible, and this adorning is to be something peculiar to the child of God. If it refers to the soul of man and not to the adorning which should become the Christian, then all men both saints and sinners have the ornament and Peter's exhortation was superflous.

As to the hidden man of the heart we think Peter means no more by this than Paul does when speaking of Christ "dwelling in our hearts by faith" and with Christ "formed within the hope of glory." The inward man is possesed only by the righteousness; the Bible does not speak of wicked men having the inward man. Hence it does not refer to the soul in any sense. The word "heart" means the mind, and the hidden man dwells in the heart or mind by faith, and what better ornament than a true Christian character formed within us, can we aspire to? We conclude therefore that Peter is not talking about souls but about the true ornament which Christians should have. May that adorning dwell in each of us.—H. V. R.

VOLUME 71 CLEVELAND, O. JULY 22nd, 1919 NUMBER 28

"Sing, O Ye Heavens" !

TO MRS. LILLIE GILLETT

By S. Roxana Wince

Sing, O ye heavens, exult O ye earth !
With harp and with cymbal, go forth in your mirth,
And ye mountains break forth in victorious song,
For the Lord hath brought comfort, withheld for so long.

From poor accursed Judah, all "scattered and peeled,"
And trampled and crushed by the tyrant's proud heel,
He now will have mercy; his afflicted restore,
And give them the wastes to be theirs as of yore

O ye wastes of fair Salem, "bring forth into joy"
And sing altogether, let praises employ
Your tongues from this moment that God has redeemed
Your long trodden Zion that comfortless seemed.

It rises! it shines! it shakes off the dust !
Gives "beauty for ashes," for doubting gives trust,
For spirit so heavy, gives "garment of praise,"
"Oil of joy for your mourning," and hope newly raised.

That with "sins all remitted," God's favor again
Will place you once more 'neath his own peaceful reign;
Will give you the Savior, your prophet foretold
With trees of sweet healing and city of gold.

And "as life from the dead," to the world let you be
When glad tidings you bear to the Isles of the sea.
And to nations who "never the fame and the glory have heard,"
Of him, your loved Captain, Redeemer and Lord.

Safety First

An Appeal to Commonsense

Text: Two ways there are, one of life and one of death; but there is a vast difference between the two ways (Teaching of the Twelve Apostles).

OUR TOPIC is suggested by the sign boards on the streets of the larger towns and cities, and to us there is much in it. "Safety first," is as much essential from a religious standpoint as a worldly; and as the ways are only two, right and wrong, we should get to where we know our bearings. In the cities we are required under penalty to keep to the right hand side of the street, and are safe so long as there. We might go quite a while on the left side without endangering our safety, but if followed far enough, the left side will finally bring disaster. The same in the spiritual world destruction will come to those on the wrong way; for we are told, "Broad is the way that leadeth to destruction," while, "Narrow is the way which leadeth unto life" (Matt. 13:14).

To make this subject plain and vivid before the reader's eye we will take some of the theories that are now taught as truth, and contrast them with the truth, and show that even if they are safe, the person who acts as the word teaches is as safe as they.

UNSAFE	SAFE
Atheism	Believe God, teach and do his commandments
Infidelity
Universalism
Predestination
Future probation for the dead
Faith alone

(1) The Atheist teaches that God is the invention of a weak brain, and that the only evil that exists is between man and man. The only sin that men can commit is to sin against his fellow creature; and death is an eternal sleep. Now if he is right, and we who worship God are mistaken, what is his advantage over us ? Nothing; he even casts away all hope of a future existence, and cannot look beyond the tomb for anything. Hence he can only look with horror and dread at his approaching dissolution. We who believe God, teach and obey his word, can have the cheer imparted to us by the hope of a future life, and if we are right we have lost nothing; while on the other hand, if we are right, he has lost all, and we have gained all. We are safe either way, if the Atheist is safe.

(2) Infidelity in many instances believes in a supreme being; but not the God of revelation. As his God has not revealed himself to humanity, except through nature, he has given no laws pertaining to morality, and hence, it is with him like the Irishman, "One man is about as good as another." As another Irishman puts it, "a sight better." He has nothing to promise as a reward for well doing, and goes though life as an evil doer. If he is right then the obedient believer will get as much as he in the end; and if he is wrong, and obedience is essential, the believer has gained while he has lost all. It pays to take the safe side; for in either case we are are as well off as the other fellow.

(3) Universalism teaches that God will save every man that will be or has been born upon earth—Adam and Eve included. Now if he is right, then he will save the obedient believer as quickly as the most wicked reprobate; and thus we see the obedient believer is safe if Universalism is true: but not so on the other hand. The man who lives without faith in God, and refuses to become his servant in this life will be condemned, if faith and obedience happen to be stepping stones into the kingdom. Those who refuse to take the steps must fail to get there, and thus are not absolutely safe; while those who take the steps are safe even if Universalists are right.

(4) Predestinarians tell us God by divine decree has from all eternity chosen those, and only those, whom he wishes to bless in the future, and all others must be damned with eternal damnation. If this theory is correct some of us must be eternally condemned, it matters not how hard we try to get eternal life; but if he is mistaken, and God demands a willing obedience from his creatures, and gives them his admonitions to take heed to his injunctions, then we who do not neglect, but go ahead and obey to the best of our ability, asking his aid, will be called if it is his purpose to call us in some mysterious way; and thus we are as well off as the fellow who sits down, and awaits the call. But if his call is recorded in the word, and we have heeded it, while the other fellow has not, then we have gained while he has lost; and we have two chances to his one!

(5) Future probation for the dead who have not availed themselves of the opportunity of being saved in this life is very zealously taught throughout our land. Sinners are often neglected that it may be given in large doses to church members. Hundreds are depending for salvation on the promises of such men as C. T. Russell. He even went so far as to teach that gospel salvation is not now offered sinners, or rather has been withdrawn from the world. Others feel so badly over the poor deluded church members of the popular sects that they think it is very cruel not to hold out to them hope. Tracts are scattered far and wide teaching this doctrine, its advocates calling their opponents narrow, bigots, selfish, etc. It seems that as God has not made it plain that the resurrected sinner will be placed on probation, that those who wish to be like him and follow him completely in all things, should leave the subject as he has, and give sinners the advantage of being safe by accepting salvation now. If there is a future probation for dead sinners those who now believe and obey the gospel will be safe; and if there is not those who die in their sins are like Jesus told some people in his day, "If ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins," and explained by Ezekiel, "Die for them" (John 8:24; Ezek. 18:26).

(6) Faith aloneites teach that only believe, and you are saved. Now if they are right those who do not only believe, but obey as well, are safe; for God will not condemn a believer who tries to obey him, if he is just; but if he is in earnest about obedience being necessary to our salvation, then the faith alonite is left out, while the obedient is saved. Again the man who does all is absolutely safe, even if the man who depends on faith only is right.

Safety first takes no chances, allows no one's salvation to be endangered by some promise made him. Bible writers never hold out hope for any but those who believe and obey God. Jesus never promised the wicked of his day another day of salvation. Paul cautions Christian Gentiles not to walk as other Gentiles, whose understanding was darkened, and who were alienated from the life of God through their ignorance (Eph. 4:17-19). If I had a voice that could drown the thunders of the Niagara Falls I would use it thundering out the words, "Safety first"; and absolute safety at that. If you were sick, and several doctors were called to your bed side, one saying, "I think my remedy will cure"; another, "mine is good, but there is some doubt"; and then in stepped a third saying, "I know mine is safe"—whose remedy would you take? The one which was certain. Now be as wise in this question of salvation, and believe God, obey his word, and let the guesses about universal salvation and future probation for dead aliens alone. Make yourself safe by getting others in the way of safety.

Russellism Refuted

Article Three

NOW WE must fulfill our promise and return to examine the rest of the chapter in question, from verse 60. Here we evidently have words that promise a restoration of Israel. But let it be observed that the prophet having used words of hopelessness for the people addressed, begins the change with the word, "Nevertheless." Notwithstanding that I have consigned you abominable ones to the richly deserved oblivion of the Sodomites, "nevertheless" there will be some who will constitute the nation of Israel, with whom "I will remember my covenant." Yes, but he says "with thee," when speaking still to the same people. Granted, and here is an apparent difficulty, but one easily explained by comparing Scripture with Scripture; and we should not do justice to our subject if we did not prove several things here.

1. Prophecy addressed to an existing generation of a nation speaks of what will happen to future generations of that same nation, not including the one spoken to.

2. Prophecy sometimes pronounces condemnation upon a nation, which is not fulfilled upon the existing generation addressed, but is fulfilled upon the generation many years after.

3. Prophecy sometimes declares blessings and cursings for a nation, when the one directly belongs to the generation spoken to; and the other to a generation long in the distant future.

Now if we depended entirely upon future fulfilments of prophecy to prove these propositions, we would be liable to the charge of assumption, but if we have precedents, wherein such prophecies have been already fulfilled, then shall we have solid historic foundations for our propositions; and the past facts will be a safe rule to guide us in our interpretation of prophecies yet to be fulfilled.

Above Proposition Illustrated

In proof of the first proposition we refer to Deut. 28:49-51: "The Lord shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand; a nation of fierce countenance . . . And he shall eat the fruit of thy cattle and the fruit of thy land, until thou be destroyed." Read to end of verse 53. Here is a prophecy fulfilled A. D. 70, in the destruction of Jerusalem, about fifteen hundred years after it was spoken. Of course the generation of the nation to which it was spoken had no existence when the prophecy was fulfilled. Yet they were directly addressed in the words, "against thee," "thou shalt not understand," "eat the fruit of thy land," "until thou be destroyed," etc.

Our second proposition is sustained by the same passage; for the judgments described did not overtake the same nation, that nation consisting of another generation of individuals. We may add in further evidence verse 64: "And the Lord shall scatter thee among all people." Verse 65: "And among the nations shalt thou find no ease." It is clear that the identity of individuals is out of the question, and that it is the identity of the nation that is maintained, the nation consisting of different individuals in different times.

In proof of our third proposition we may first contend, upon the strength of the precedent already discovered, that, since the curse predicted did not overtake the generation spoken to, the promised blessing, included in the same prophecy, need not be realized by that generation. Hence we may read chap. 30:1-10 with this view: "And it shall come to pass, when all these things shall come upon thee" (verse 1). They did not come upon them in the sense of individual identity. "And the Lord thy God bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed and thou shalt possess it" (verse 5). Not that generation, but the one existent when the time comes. It is an historical fact that the national curse did not come upon that generation; and this is a criterion for the conclusion that the national restoration did not and will not come upon that identical generation; but will come upon the identical nation.

Now with these facts to show Scripture rules of interpretation of prophecy concerning a nation, we may return to the chapter under consideration in Ezekiel, and we shall find it in perfect harmony with these facts. Verse 60 can now be read as applying to the identical nation, but not the identical generation which up to this verse had been condemned, and whose destiny had been scathingly declared to be that of Sodom. "Nevertheless," although thou, the nation of Israel consisting of this generation, hast become abominable, do not imagine that my purpose to restore thee as a nation has been frustrated. "I will remember my covenant with thee (the nation) in the days of thy youth (when the nation shall renew its youth) and I will establish unto thee (not you individuals) an everlasting covenant. Then thou (the nation) shalt remember thy ways, and be ashamed, when thou shalt receive thy sisters, thine elder and thy younger (the Gentiles of that age who "shall serve thee" (Isa. 60), and I will give them unto thee for daughters, but not by thy covenant (the Gentiles will not be of the "first dominion," for it is to be "the kingdom of Israel"). And I will establish my covenant with thee; and thou shalt know that I am the Lord: that thou mayest remember and be confounded, and never open thy mouth any more because of thy shame (the nation shamed by the wicked generations that have disgraced it) when I am pacified toward thee for all that thou hast done, saith the Lord."

National Restoration Not Individual

It will not be out of place to refer here to other Scriptures in confirmation of national identity without involving individual identity. To Abraham it was said, "Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years; . . and afterwards they shall come out with great substance. . . . But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again" (Gen. 15:13-16). By the words "thy seed," and "they" the same race of people is kept in view, while there is no individual identity. Some of the people who constituted the "seed" suffered exile and slavery, while others received the blessings of deliverance and restoration to the home of their fathers. Both the exile and the restoration in this case are matters of history, and therefore serve as a key to events now future, decreed in similar language. To one generation of the seed when in Egypt, if a prophet had been sent to "show them their abominations," as Ezekiel was, he might have said "When I bless your Egyptian oppressers with a home in the land of milk and honey, then I will bless you with restoration to the home of your fathers." That would mean that, on account of their "abominations" they, that wicked generation, would never be so blessed. Then if the prophet had added, "Nevertheless, I will fulfill the covenant I made with thy father Abraham, to bring thee out after four hundred years, and bless and multiply thee in the land of thy fathers," the meaning would have been that this blessing would be bestowed upon the generation in existence at the end of the "four hundred years." This fully illustrates the case in hand in Ezekiel 16.

In this case we have a "scattering" and a "gathering"—the former for one generation and the latter for another, but both for the same nation. Now let us look at a case in which only the "scattering" has taken place, and the "gathering" is yet future; and here we shall find the destiny befitting the abominable generation addressed by the prophet Ezekiel in the first event, and the blessings of restoration that will be befitting the prepared generation when, after the "rebels are purged out" they will be gathered into the land of their fathers. A case of this sort will be found in Jer. 31:10: "Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him as a sheperd doth his flock."

Does this mean that the same individuals that were scattered will be gathered? Common sense and the historic precedents we have given show that the same individuals are not subjects of the two events. Not even all the individuals of the generation existent at the time of gathering will be gathered and "kept as a shepherd doth his flock"; for Ezekiel says: "As I live, saith the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you; and I will bring you out from the people and will gather you from the countries wherein ye are scattered with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out. And I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you face to face. Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I plead with you said the Lord God. And I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant, and I will purge out the rebels and them that transgress against me; I will bring them forth out of the country where they sojourn, and they shall not enter into the land of Israel; and ye (the nations) shall know that I am the Lord" (Ezek. 20:33-38).

Not only does this passage illustrate and confirm the position we are establishing, but it refutes Russellism in another error, in its emphasiz- the words "restitution of all things," and "all Israel shall be saved." This shows that the "all" is not to be taken in the individual sense, but in the tribal and national the nation will be complete, consisting of all the tribal sons of the family—the "whole house of Israel."

Should Russellism persist in claiming that the wicked generation condemned by Ezekiel will be resurrected and, with those living at the time, be restored—basing this upon the words "bring again thy captivity" then it is refuted by this passage; for they surely were "transgressors," and here it is declared, "I will purge out the rebels and them that transgress: they shall not enter into the land."

Emphasizing the words of Peter in Acts 3:21—"the restitution of all things"—some claim that every human being that ever lived will be the subject of "restitution." If the words "all things" are relied upon to sustain this extreme view, there is no reason why we should limit the "restitution" to human beings. Too much stress laid upon verbal forms often deceives. It is by carrying extreme claims to the conclusions to which they lead that their absurdity is revealed; and it is this that has led many to believe in the restoration of Sodom. If Sodom is among the "all things" why not Babylon? Why not spiritual Babylon, which is to be the subject of the words, "Thus with violence shall this great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all" (Rev. 18:21)?

Regardless of the absurdity of making the "all things" mean the restitution in the future of every identical thing of the past, Russellism will press these words into service to prove Sodom's restoration, and thereby console itself with the argument that if Sodom is to be restored, their lamented friends who they imagine, died without a chance they would have accepted if they had been given an opportunity, will be restored to live a second time, when the probation they missed during their first life time will be secured to them. Nothing, therefore, will do for Russelism but that in the passage under consideration Ezekiel meant that Sodom would be literally restored. Selected by Brother B. F. SMITH.

The Signs of the Times

In the Sunday School Lesson 35, the teacher dwells on the signs, and among the rest the signs in the sun, moon, and stars. His 9th item reads: "Immediately after the tribulations of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven" (Matt. 24:29).

Here we have important data which is necessary in guiding us as to when we should look for the signs in the sun, moon, and stars. It is the writer's belief that a mistake has been made here causing darkness in regard to the signs of our Lord's return.

These signs were to occur "immediately after the tribulation of those days." Now our first point is to ascertain what is the tribulation spoken of, and who are the parties to receive the tribulation?

Matt. 24:20, 21 reads: "But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the Sabbath day: for there shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be." This tribulation has reference to what came to pass at the destruction of Jerusalem, and history as well as prophecy bears testimony to the fact of it being the greatest in history.

Mark 13:19 reads: "For in those days shall be affliction, such as was not from the beginning of the creation which God created unto this time, neither shall be." Luke 21:22 reads: "For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled." This vengeance refers to what is written in the prophets as to the punishment of the Jews for their rejection and crucifixion of their Messiah. These signs were to occur immediately after the tribulation, the tribulation being not yet ended.

The time to look for the signs is not yet, because the pogroms or tribulations are not yet ended on the Jews. Now this being the case, there must be something radically wrong with the Adventist view of the signs.

First, the signs are sydbolic, not literal. This is proved by Rev. 6:12. All the other seals being symbolic so must the sixth seal be. God would not otherwise deal with his people. The white horse, the red, the black, and the pale are all symbols; and so is the cry of the martyrs; therefore the signs in the sun, moon, and stars must be symbolic too. We all remember how it was repeated, "This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled."

It is now about 86 years since 1833 when the stars fell; but they were not stars, only meteors, never associated with the sun and moon, as heavenly bodies. In the Encyclopaedia Britanica the time of meteoric showers are tabulated. Nov 13, 1833, and Nov. 14, 1866, are noted, and they seem to occur more or less at periods of about 33 years, or three times in a century.

The dark day, May 19, 1780, to be a sign of the end of the world, surely should have been world wide so all people could see the sign, whereas it was confined to only a portion of New England. People living in Palestine, where the prophecy was made, would be unable to learn of the event for a long time after its occurrnce. Steam and electricity were not used in 1780 as they are now.

The same objection holds good in relation to the falling of the meteors. It appears to the writer that the proper understanding of one verse of Holy Writ, Matt. 21:29, proves that the signs are not literal. "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken."

What are these powers of the heavens that are to be shaken? Paul in Heb. 12:27 says, "And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain." The things to be shaken are not the sun, moon, and stars that God made when he brought order out of chaos; but the political and ecclesiastical heavens.

NATIONAL BEREAN CONFERENCE

The Sixth Annual Conference of the National Berean Society convened at Dutton, Mich., with the Michigan Bereans, June 20, 1919.

After the devotional exercises conducted by Sister Selina Hill, of Blanchard, the report of the Secretary and different committees were heard.

The Corresponding Secretary reported 238 letters written, 150 received.

The Treasurer reported money received $172.28, disposed $74.36, leaving balance on hand of $97.92. This assures the society enough money to pay for the new booklets, which will be published soon and and ready for use by Oct. 1st.

The report of the Literary Committee shows an increase over last year both in interest and articles contributed as follows: Illinois 12, Nebraska 6, Minnesota 3, Iowa 2, Oklahoma 2, Michigan 1, Florida 1, Missouri 1.

The Tract Committee reported 2747 tracts distributed in 19 states.

The Social Corresponding Committee wrote 150 letters during the year. This committee writes to new converts, shut-ins, lonesome, isolated, etc. If any one wishes to receive social letters let them write to the chairman of this committee, whose name will appear in the next report.

Through the efforts of the Organization Committee two new societies were formed, one at Dayton, O., and one at Piedmont, S. C. These societies meet every week and study from Berean booklets. Good reports were also received from other points in Ohio.

The talks from the different states on "What the Berean Work has Done in My State and What it Can Do in Yours," brought forth such encouraging reports that we know no work was too hard that brought such results. Increased activity in church work, good leadership developed in those that are shy and lack self-confidence, increased interest in Bible study, training in systematic giving with an increased spirit of helping that follows and greater enjoyment were some of the things reported as results of the Berean work.

The question of dues was thoroughly discussed. One reason the society insists on payment of dues is the training that is received in systematic giving. It has been found that the societies that pay their dues regularly have money to help when calls are received and respond most readily when extra money is needed.

Brother Hanson's able paper on "Literary Work" will appear later in the Berean column. Look for it.

Election of officers resulted as follows:

Leila E. Whitehead, Illinois.	President
Mrs. Grace M. Marsh, Iowa, ...	Treasurer
Frank E. Siple, Illinois, ...	1st. Vice President
Clyde E. Randall, Minnesota ..	2nd Vice President
Evelyn K. Harsch, Illinois.	Corresponding Sec.
Harry A. Sheets, Michigan, ...	Recording Sec

The report of Committee Chairmen will be announced later.

Harry A. Sheets, Rec. Sec.

Editorial

To make a success of the truth we must admit, submit, commit, and transmit.

Our visitors this week have been Brother and Sister Ernest Blyth, of Columbus Ohio, and Sister Esther Ingham, of Rochester, N. Y.

The tendency of the natural man is toward coveteousness and greed. Therefore if the truth does not make us generous, it bestows upon us no blessing.

Never think that you can make yourself great by making others less. If you could, you ought to be ashamed of building up your glory on the ruins of another.

"I find it impossible to avoid offending guilty men; for there is no way of avoiding it but by our silence, or their patience; and silent we cannot be because of God's commands: and patient they cannot be, because of their guilt" (Martin Luther).

If the powers that signed the league of nations can withdraw from it at discretion, its conditions are not obligatory, and we have another "scrap of paper." On the other hand, if the league of nations is superior to the nations, then we have exactly what the allies went to war to prevent the Kaiser from obtaining world wide dominion!

Our address during the vacation season will be as follows: July 21 to 28, care H. W. Russell, 36 Lakeview Park, Rochester, N. Y.; July 28 to Aug. 4, care W. W. Coy, 325 Roosevelt Ave. Salem, Ohio; Aug. 4 to Aug. 8, care W. C. Heacock, 333 Smith Ave., N. W., Canton, Ohio.

On Sunday morning, July 13th, the following were inducted into Christ by baptism: Mr. Wm. Campbell, formerly Presbyterian, the husband of Sister Campbell; Jean Campbell, their daughter, formerly Campbellite; and Mrs. Annie A. Mott, formerly Methodist. Our new sisters and brother rejoice with us in the truth of God's kingdom, and we pray that their light may grow brighter and brighter until the "perfect day" come.

The Fourth Trumpet

Editor's Sermon Notes on the Apocalypse

And the fourth angel sounded, and the third part of the sun was smitten, and the third part of the moon, and the third part of the stars; so as the third part of them was dakened, and the day shone not for a third part of it, and the night likewise. And I beheld, and heard an angel* flying through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice, Woe, woe, woe, to the inhabitants of the earth by reason of the other voices of the trumpet of the three angels, which are yet to sound (Rev. 8:12, 13).

I Symbols Explained

1. The Third of the Sun, Moon, and Stars Smitten

1. Sun, moon, and stars are prophetic symbols taken from the natural world (Psa. 84:11; Jer. 15:1-5, 9; Amos 8:9; Isa. 60:2, 19, 20).
2. In the moral universe, the Israelitish, the Egyptian, the Chaldean, and Idumean kingdoms and empires have their suns, moons, stars, and constellations, as well as the natural world (Ezek. 32:6-11; Isa. 13:9-19; 34:21-23).

II Historical Application, A. D. 476

1. In the earlier years of Constantine's reign, the Roman Empire was divided among three emperors: Constantine, Licinius, and Maximin; hence the thirds of the text.
2. Barbarians demanded of Orestes that a "third" part of Italy be divided among them (Gib. 3:255, 256).

3. Emperorship of the West was "abolished" (Gib. 3:257).
4. Seat of Empire was transferred from Rome to Constantinople (Gib. 3:258).
5. Extinction of the Roman Empire in the West during the reign of Orestes (Gib. 3:258).

III Symbols Explained (Resumed)

1. Judgments Grow Severer: the Wind-Trumpets Merge into Woe-Trumpets

1. An eagle flying through midheaven: the saints proclaiming the gospel message, warning the inhabitants of the earth of coming judgments (Rev. 7:3; 4:7; 6:1; 12:14. Ex. 19:4; Deut. 32:10-12; Isa. 40:31; Rev. 14:6).

*Eagle, not angel, is the correct reading of this text. The Codex Sinaiticus, the Codex Alexandrinus, the Codex Vaticanus, and the Syriac all read eagle.

Report of the Lawrenceville Meeting

On June 21, 1919, we had the pleasure of meeting with the Lawrenceville brethren for a week's meeting. When we arrived we were glad to learn that Brother and Sister Robison were there, and that Brother Robison had been able to speak for the church on the preceding Sunday. We found the brethren very anxious for a good meeting, and that means a good meeting. On Saturday afternoon we went to the water and baptized Sister Johnson, wife of Brother Geo. Johnson, and Brother and Sister E. T. Poole, son and daughter-in-law of Brother Walter Poole, of Springfield.

On Sunday, June 29th, Brush Creek Church came over for an all day meeting. The weather was ideal for such a meeting. The writer spoke in the forenoon, and Brother Robison in the afternoon. We ate dinner in the grove. A table 75 feet long was filled with good things, and there were so many diners that one had to fill his plate and then give way to some one else.

The meeting closed July 3rd. Those who had been in the meetings held it had been good to be there. Lawrenceville has some good workers. Brother David Beck has proven himself a true shepherd. During the meeting we had the pleasure of hearing Sister Robison speak. She spoke on Thursday evening July 1st, from 2 Pet. 1:16. We left for home on Thursday, arrived on Friday, and found all well.

An Appeal to the Brotherhood

I HAVE before me The Restitution of June 10th. In editorial notes I read this: "Already our copy file begins to look depleted. To keep The Restitution up to its high standard of excellence we need articles from every contributor and every reader."

On the same editorial page I saw the names of eight who are "special contributors" to the paper. Naturally I looked for articles from their pens. I found one. When Brother Huggins asked me, several years ago if he might place my name among them, I asked what he expected of me. He answered one article at least every month, and more would be welcome. It seems strange to me that the paper belonging to the Church of God, which is composed of the elect of God, must borrow sustenance from other papers. Now do not misunderstand me. I have by the kindness of friends other papers which I prize highly and which are a source of strength to me for which I wait eagerly and read with pleasure and profit; but to me The Restitution seems to belong especially to our family, and I always look with longing eyes for some word from members of that family. I do believe if those who are over us as teachers and to whom we look for guidance, for strength in our weakness, for admonition and encouragement in these days of special trial, could realize how we who are "all alone," away from our Father's family need their words, they would write more often. I know many are not so young and vigorous as they once were, and many must work for their daily bread, and the summer days are hot and debilitating: but still we need them. A little letter through our paper would cheer us and make us more earnest and courageous to go forward.

It seems to me that in every age special testing has been given to the saints to show their allegiance to "the Great King." That the past few years has been a time of great trial in which many have "fallen away," the history of the church shows. Because of this the apostle exhorts us to not forsake the assembling of ourselves together; and to exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching. We who are isolated are denied the precious privilege of meeting brethren face to face, but we are not cut off from their exhortation. Those who sit constantly under the teaching of pastors, those who sometimes can attend meetings, those who are able financially to go any time they wish where there are those of "like precious faith," can have no realization of the hungering and thirsting of those who are always cut off from these aids to perfectness. To whom much is given from him much is required. Brethren have a duty in this respect (Rom. 15:1; 1 Thess. 5: 11-14; Heb. 12:12). There are many lone ones belonging to Christ whose touch with brethren comes alone through The Restitution. Brethren, those of you whom God has gifted, write for us often, and give us those things which make for our edification and uplifting in the way. Time is too short and the work of God too imperative to fill the columns of our paper with foolish questions which do not edify.

FLORA A. WOOD.

The one person who escaped imprisonment and death in this judgment on Judah was Jeremiah the man of God. He was saved because he did the will of God and trusted him. It is ever so. "They that trust in the Lord shall be like Mount Zion."

A Correction

Brother Huggins:

Brother J. J. Heckman claims that his position is misrepresented in my answer to his article on Rev. 13, and by examining a letter he wrote to me March 25, 1919, I find his position stated as follows:

"Daniel's little horn is the Christian Roman Empire instead of the papal power itself, and the false prophet is the two horned beast, or the catholic power of the pope." Therefore I hasten to acknowledge that I am at fault, and apologize to Brother Heckman. The point is in representing Brother Heckman as holding that the horn, the leopard, and the two horned beast represent the papacy. My memory of his position was at fault. I did not intend to mistake his position.

Indiana Conference Report

The Annual Conference of the churches of God in Indiana met at North Salem church July 4 to 6, 1919. The president, Floyd Stilson, presiding at every session.

The speakers were Elders Lindsay, VanVactor, and Croy.

Six of the churches responded to roll call by delegate and reports, one other by written report only. After the usual reading of the minutes, and all the reports, we proceeded with the business of which the following are the principal items:

Owing to the fact that no chairman was appointed on the Song Book Committee (due to oversight perhaps), no work has been done the past year toward getting out a new song book; therefore a motion was made and carried that the committeeman of the Iowa Conference act as chairman of the committee appointed from each of the other state conferences on the song book work. This action of our Conference to be communicated to the other State Conferences, that they may also take action.

Indiana is in much need of evangelistic work, the fact being very forcibly presented before the conference by Brother Richard Railsback. After some general discussion it was voted that Brother Railsback be given the power as a committee of one to take charge of the raising by subscription of $1500 or more for an evangelist for the coming year.

The question next brought up for discussion was that of a permanent place to hold the Annual Bible School and Conference. The president appointed a committee of seven which represented the seven churches represented in conference. This committee reported on Sunday afternoon that after due deliberation and investigation it was their decision that North Salem was the best location. The Conference accepted this decision and further ordered that the executive board be granted the privilege and power to carry out the work of planning and providing accommodation, etc., using their own discretion and wisdom in the matter.

The following resolution was presented by Brother David VanVactor, and recorded in the Secretary's book:

"Whereas Brother Asa O. Roose has passed under the power of death since our last meeting, and whereas by his death this Conference suffers the loss of one of its officers and substantial members and supporters:

"Be it resolved, that we deplore and mourn his loss, and that we extend to his bereaved family our sympathy and condolence. Be it resolved further that this be published in the Conference paper and a copy sent to the bereaved family."

The business meeting closed after the election of the following officers:

President, Wm. Huffer; First Vice President, Floyd A. Stilson; Second Vice President, Leroy Austin; Secretary, Flora Prior; Treasurer, Marshall Logan.

At the close of the Conference a very hearty vote of thanks was extended to the members of the North Salem Church for their kindness, goodness, and entertainment of their guests throughout the Bible School and Conference.

FLORA H. PRIOR, Secretary.

Lesson XXXVI

THE BIRDS OF THE BIBLE

Memory Text: Behold the fowls of the air; for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they? (Matt. 6:26).

1 And it came to pass at the end of forty days that Noah opened the window of the ark which he had made.

2. And he sent forth a raven, which went forth to and fro until the waters were dried up from off the earth.

3. Also he sent forth a dove from him, to see if the waters were abated from off the face of the ground (Gen. 8:6-8)

4. Gavest thou the goodly wings unto the peacocks, or wings and feathers unto ostrich? (Job 39:13).

5. As the partridge sitteth on eggs and hatcheth them not, so he that getteth riches and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days (Jer. 27:11).

6. Doth the hawk fly by wisdom and stretch her wings toward the south?

7. Doth the eagle mount up at thy command and make her nest on high?

8. She dwelleth and abideth on the rock, upon the crag of the rock, and the strong place? (Job 39:26-28).

9. I am like a pelican in the wilderness: I am like an owl in the desert.

10. I watch, and am as a sparrow alone upon the housetop (Psa. 102:6, 7).

11. These are they of which ye shall not eat: the eagle and the ossifrage, and the osprey:

12. And the glede and the kite and the vulture after his kind.

13. And every raven after his kind.

14. And the owl and the night-hawk, and the cukoo, and the hawk after his kind.

15. The little owl, the gier eagle, and the cormorant.

17. The stork, the heron after her kind, the lapwing and the bat.

18. But of all clean fowls ye may eat (Deut. 14:12-20).

Practical Truths

All Bible knowledge is useful. Some of the birds mentioned in the Bible are familiar to the children. Who has not watched the circling flight of the eagle or the lofty, steady flight of the swan and crane? What boy or girl has not felt the soft, sweet influence of the turtle dove as he coos to his mate in the nesting time? The swift-winged swallow, the little brook and the meadow of the old homestead, are memories dear to many of us. In sunny June time the most pleasant sounds that greeted my boyhood ears, were the song sparrow's laughing notes upon the hillsides where the wild strawberries grew. And so we have all come to associate these birds of the Bible with the teachings of the prophets and Jesus. Jesus said, "Consider the ravens" (Luke 12:24); and what a lesson of God's care for his people is taught in his parable of the hen and chickens. Let us study the kinds of birds and their habits and draw lessons of God's care and love from the songster of the forest.

Notes on the Lesson

Behold.—Look at, consider. Feedeth them.—Supplies them with food. God has care over even the birds, and men are so much better than birds, will he not take care of us? Why not trust him?

2. Raven. A bird of a black color allied to the crow but larger. The ravens fed the prophet Elijah with bread and meat at the brook Cherith during the famine in the days of Ahab.

3. Dove.—A bird of the pigeon family. They are gentle and inoffensive in disposition and character. Frequently mentioned by the Bible writers. Hezekiah says, "I did mourn as a dove." When David was in trouble and surrounded by wicked men, he said, "Oh that I had wings like a dove, for then would I fly away and be at rest." Jesus says his disciples should be "harmless as doves." Turtle doves were used for sacrifices under the law; and the spirit which came to anoint Jesus at his baptism was in the form of a dove.

4. Peacock.—A bird about the size of a turkey, and belongs to the pheasant family and the order of gallinae or scratchers. They are beautifully marked with black spots and very brilliant colors. In a wild state their wings are large and strong. They seem proud of their beauty and strut about and make a display like the turkey. Peacocks were imported by King Solomon from Tarshish during the palmiest days of his reign (1 Kings -0:22).

5. Partridge.—A grouse-like bird, having the feet bare, gray in color, mottled with brown, found in Europe, Asia and Africa. They are not found in America the partridge of America is the quail.

Hawk. A bird of the falcon family and of order of Raptores, or birds of prey. The beak is curved, the head covered with feathers, and the talons strong and sharp. There are more than thirty kinds of hawks and falcons in North America. The true falcon has a tooth in the upper mandible.

7. Eagle.—A rapacious bird of the falcon family, remarkable for its strength, size and graceful figure. The eagle is noted for its strength of sight and endurance of wing. Its nesting place is generally among the crags and peaks of the mountains, and its flight is sublime.

9. Pelican. A web-footed water fowl belonging to the order Natatores, or swimmers. It is larger than a goose or even a swan. It has an enormous bill, on the under side of which is attached a pouch capable of holding three or four quarts of water. It is found about the Mediterranean sea, and is an aquatic bird, and lives upon the products of the sea. When we understand this we can feel the force of David's words, "I am like a pelican in the wilderness," and certainly a pelican would not be able to live where no water was and where his favorite food could not be found. Owl.

The owl family is large and belongs to the order Raptores, or birds of prey. They are wakeful by night, and rest during the day. They have large heads, large and staring eyes, and cat like expression. Their plumage is soft and their flight noiseless. There are over forty kinds in America. In the desert they could find nothing to live upon. So David says, "I am like an owl in the desert."

10. Sparrow.—The sparrow family are all perchers and singers, and are very numerous. They are plucky little fellows and thrive almost anywhere. They have a rounded bill, a plump body, and are generally of a dull brown color, variously striped and marked. Our Savior took notice of them and used them to illustrate God's care for us. "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing, and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father." They are very social, hence David's reference to them in his lonliness "as a sparrow upon the housetop."

11. Ossifrage. From ossibone, and frangere to break—a bone-breaking bird, the sea eagle or bald eagle. In the text, however, the bird referred to is supposed to be the Lammergier, a kind of vulture; color black, marked with white and found in Europe, Asia and Africa. Osprey.—A name applied to the bald buzzard, fishhawk and fishing eagle.

12. Glede.—Falcon family, and a rapacious bird, found in Europe and Asia. Kite.—Same as above. Vulture.—A large rapacious bird which feeds upon dead and decaying animals which they scent at great distances. They make no nest but lay their eggs upon the bare ground or upon a rock.

14. Nigh-Hawk. It is probable that a bird of prey is here referred to and not the night-hawk of the U. S., which is allied to the goat-sucker. Cuckoo.

This bird derives its name from its song or note which sounds like cuck-oo. It builds no nest but lays its eggs in the nests of other birds to be hatched by them, like the fly-catcher of North America.

15. Swan. A web-footed bird like the goose but larger, with long neck and graceful movements. There is a tradition that it sings but one song, and that is at the close of life.

16. Cormorant. A sea-raven.

17. Stork.—A large wading bird with long bill and legs, allied to the heron. Lapwing.—Belongs also to the wading family and noted for its large lapping wings. Bat.—Bats are a numerous order and include five distinct families. They are mammals and not birds, although they can fly.

18. Clean fowls.—The Bible makes a division into clean and unclean. The reason God prohibited the eating of these birds called "unclean" is, is it safer for human life to eat clean birds and beasts. The unclean birds do not sing.

Suggestive Topics and Questions

1. The Kinds of Birds.—What two divisions does God make of the birds? Ans. Clean and unclean. Can you mention some of the unclean birds? Why are they called unclean? Which of them feed upon decayed carcases? Are such birds clean? Are they wholesome food? Do you think it was for "health" reasons that God forbade their use? Do any of the unclean birds sing? What animal is here put among the birds that is a mammal? Is a bat good to eat? What other animal can fly that is not a bird? Ans. The flying squirrel. What can you say of the doves? Tell the story of Noah's dove. To which class does the peacock and ostrich belong? What comparison is made with the partridge? Where does the Bible speak of the swallow? (Jer. 8:7; Prov. 26:2; Isa. 38:14; Psa. 84:3). How do you explain the migration of birds? (Jer. 8:7).

2. God's Care for the Birds.—What is meant by the expression, "Behold the fowls of the air," in our memory text? Do they sow and reap? Who feeds the birds? Are men better than birds? Will God feed and clothe us? From whence comes every good gift? (James 1:17). What does David say about trusting in the Lord? (Psa. 37:2).

Closing Thought.—God has given us instructions even in regard to diet which if we follow will lead to health and long life. The average of life is longest with the Jews, and is no doubt due in part to sanitary obedience. From the heavenly Father's care for the birds we may also learn a lesson of faith and trust.

MY MAKER AND MY KING

My Maker and my King!
To thee my all I owe:
Thy sovereign bounty is the springs
When all my blessings flow.

Thou ever good and kind!
A thousands reasons move,
A thousand obligations bind
My heart to grateful love.

The creature of thy hand,
On thee alone I live;
My God, thy benefits demand
More praise than I can give.

O, let thy grace inspire
My soul with grace divine;
Let all my powers to thee aspire,
And all my days be thine.—A. Steele.

"He That Glorieth"

Recently we read in one of our local papers a letter written by a visitor from the west, in which he asked the question, "Is America God?" Then he proceeded to state why the question was asked. He, with a friend, had entered a certain well known church to listen to a sermon by the pastor, a world famous preacher. During the services certain hymns were sung, all givng praise to God, one especially acknowledging that it was from God that every good gift was received and every blessing sent. During the singing of these hymns some of the audience stood, some remained seated, each did as he desired, no one noticing them. Toward the close of the service an American flag was carried across the platform, at the same time the organist playing "The Star Spangled Banner." Every person except two in that vast audience stood in honor of the flag! Ushers immediately approached, who told the two sitting ones they must stand. They explained that they loved the country and revered the flag, but being of a faith different to that of the worshippers, they could not take part in the services of the church. They were told. "You must either stand or leave the building." They elected to do the latter.

The writer of the letter did not take exception to the forcing of the men to stand, but what seemed strange to him was, why was the flag honored more than God? Why was the national anthem revered more in the house of God than the anthem giving God praise for bestowing on man every good and every perfect gift? And why should such things be? In the Acts (12:23) we read of Herod being given, and taking to himself, glory that belonged to God with the consequence that Herod was struck dead. And in the first chapter of 1st Corinthians we read of contentions, where some said they were of Paul, others Apollos, others again of Cephas, and still others of Christ. And Paul asks, "Is Christ divided?" and ends the chapter, after showing how the weak and foolish things of this world were chosen by God to confound the wise and mighty. And why? "That no flesh should glory in his presence." "But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption. that according as it is written, He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord."

Yes, brethren, we have but one thing wherein to glory; and if you will turn with me to Jeremiah 9:23, 24, we will find out just what it is: "Thus saith the Lord, Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches; but let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the Lord which exercise lovingkindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth: for in these things I delight saith the Lord."

Ours is a great and grand country. The Stars and Stripes is the emblem of that greatness and that grandness. Still when I read, "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God," and "He that glorieth let him glory in the Lord," then it is for me to choose the greater part, and with Joshua affirm, "As for me and my house we will serve the Lord."

Our Weekly Puzzle

God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world.

What is the meaning of "forbid"?

What does "glory" signify?

What is meant by "the cross" as here used?

What does the writer mean by the world and himself being crucified to each other?

Who wrote the above? To whom written? and where found?

Answer next issue.

Answer to puzzle in last issue:

The meaning of "approved" is no fault can be found with; satisfactory.

The lesson was written to Timothy.

He was a "workman" in the vineyard of God. He worked with God (2 Cor. 6:1).

To "be ashamed" is to be confused through a knowledge of guilt.

The significance of "dividing" is knowing how to place things of a kind together, or to sever into proper parts.

The lesson was written by the apostle Paul, and can be found in 2 Timothy 2:15.

Good Nature

A little thing, a sunny smile
A loving word at morn—
And all day long the day shone bright.
The cares of life were made more bright,
And sweetest hopes were born.

Daily Thoughts

God be merciful to me a sinner	Luke 18:13
O Lord, hear me: for I am poor and needy	Psa 86:1
Come and let us return unto the Lord	Hosea 6:1
A contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise	Psa. 51:7
The Master is come, and calleth for thee	John 11:28
The spirit also helpeth our infirmities	Rom. 8:26
A bruised reed shall he not break	Isa. 43:3

In the wonderful and mysterious workings of Providence some are humbled and others exalted; sometimes the needy are satisfied with good things while the rich are sent away hungry.

The Boy

Blessings on thee little man,
Barefoot boy with cheek of tan!
With thy turned-up pantaloons
And thy merry whistled tunes;
With the sunshine on thy face
Through thy torn brim's jaunty grace;
With my heart I give thee joy—
I was once a barefoot boy!

Jesus said, "Suffer little children and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

You can take several meanings from the above passage. I'll not argue with you. But this I'll say without fear of contradiction, that the boy of today is the man of tomorrow, and ofter the "barefoot" boy makes the best man. When we through age, and infirmities, must lay the burden down, it is the more youthful one who must carry the load: it is "the boy" who must relieve us and finish the work we have commenced. But "the boy" must be educated; he must be taught in "the way of the Lord." Therefore to those churches which have not a Bible School, I make appeal that they immediately organize one. To those churches already supporting Bible Schools, I appeal that they nourish them in every possible way. Truth must never be sacrificed, still the school itself, the officers, the teachers, the mode of teaching must be attractive. Love must abound. Our every word, our every act must show we are living in close fellowship with our God and with his Christ. Nothing will so touch the heart of a boy as for a man to stoop down and again be "a boy" with him. Cast off your reserve, throw away your pride, and remember that once you too "were a barefoot boy," and you have won your boy for all time. Try it.

No Hypocrite

"God knows I'm not what I should be nor am I e'en the thing I could be. But twenty times I rather would be an atheist clear than under gospel colors hid be, just for a screen."

The above is a quotation from the Scotch poet Robert Burns who, we all know was not a saint; still at the same time neither was he a hypocrite. Referring to myself, I do not know but that I can say a hearty "amen" to Robert's confession, as also to his disdain for hypocrisy.

The ruin of the ancient and glorious temple was a sad one, but it is a still sadder sight to behold the summit covered with stones where once the beautiful temple of character, with its big thoughts and aspirations, stood.

A distasteful duty is doubled by procrastination. We suffer not only the unpleasantness of the actual doing, but the scarcely less discomfort of prolonged dreading.

Here And Hereafter

Life's journey stretches o'er earth's mede
  That man must work it is decreed;
When he fell God cursed the earth,
  And sorrow now is mixed with mirth;
Though man may boast of his estate,
  His days are few, sad to relate;
His years are run, "three score and ten,"
  He drops his load perchance e're then;
Death lays him low and seals his fate,
  He cannot reach the immortal state.

But if in Christ we have a part,
  And serve him here with honest heart,
Then when the final trump shall call
  And wake the righteous, one and all,
The curse removed, and sin all gone,
  The glorious white robe then put on;
No sorrow there shall e're be known,
  When Jesus comes to claim his own,
Then choose what your lot shall be,
  For time, and for eternity.

Russellism Refuted

Article Four

THE PASSAGE in Ezekiel having been shown to be of no support to Russellism, the principle prop relied upon by the advocates of that theory is removed. Indeed, the illustration we have given, of how prophecy has been fulfilled in relation to nations, may be applied to all their misinterpretations and perversions, and are sufficient to expose the sophistry of the arguments invented to support the flesh-flattering doctrine.

New Testament Evidence Explained

But we are asked to explain those passages in the New Testament, which compare Sodom with Jerusalem and other cities, and which Russellism distorts in an effort to satisfy the wish which became father to the thought. The fleshly mind is prone to conclude that a thing is true which it first only wishes were so; and consequently "man has sought out many inventions." "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man but the end thereof is the way of death." A theory, therefore, which gratifies the fleshly mind may always be viewed with suspicion.

The passages to be considered next are the following:

> Matt. 5:15. Verily, I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment, than for that city.
> Matt. 11:21-24. Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works, which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes. But I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment, than for you. And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom it would have remained until this day. But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment, than for thee.

Russellite Judgment Artificial

In order to make those passages fit the theory of a future probation, Russellism found it necessary to invent an artificial "judgment." So the future day of the Lord, when all nations of the earth are to be blessed, they converted into a day of judgment, and the "judgment," after being subjected to the same ingenuity, came from the Russell pottery shaped into "probation." Applying the foregoing Scriptures in accordance with this new invention, we are to suppose the Savior saying, "Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! etc.; it shall be more tolerable for the Sodomites in the future day of your probation than for you." To accept this, one's conscience must be sufficiently elastic to believe that the restoration to a "fair chance" is a "woe," and that in the probation which this "fair chance" provides for, the "woe" of the citizens of the towns denounced by Jesus will exceed that of the Sodomites.

There is a strange confusion here, for Russellism was invented to secure a lost privilege that of a "fair chance" that was missed in this life. To prove a restoration to the enjoyment of this privilege we are referred to Scriptures which pronounce a "woe" that will overtake the probationers at the very time they are enjoying the second life "fair chance" privilege; and the "woe" of some of those who suffer the invented probationary "judgment" is to exceed even the "woe" that Sodom is to suffer a second time, for surely it has suffered one "woe."

Who would ever have thought that any one would have had the presumption to divert the fearful judgments which Jesus pronounced upon Chorazin Bethsaida, etc., from being executed during the existence of those cities, and withheld them till post-resurrectional times, when they would be executed "woefully" in the form of a "blessedness" of a "fair chance" to obtain the boon of life eternal dispensed in milder form upon Sodomites than upon others?

"The land of Sodom" had received its judgment; not in the form of a probation, but in fire stroyed them all." This dreadful fact was kept in stroyed them all." This dreadful fact was kept in memory all the way down the ages, and it became an example. To describe the wickedness of any particular people, it was compared with that of Sodom. To describe the punishment inflicted or to be inflicted, that of Sodom was brought down, and thrown forward to any coming event of dire punishment, for comparison, and to cause a realization of the intensity of the sin and to emphasize the degree of judgment to be poured out for such sin. This was what Jesus did in the words of the Scriptuers under consideration. Woe to that city which shall refuse to hear you: for its day of judgment for this shall come, it shall be worse than that of Sodom. Bring the judgment down in your memory and compare it with the judgment that shall overtake the cities in question and the comparison will show that it is more tolerable for A than for B, or more tolerable for B than for A the latter shall be worse than the former, dreadful to human memory though the former be.

This view is objected to by some because the future tense is used "shall be more tolerable." But in view of the fact that the "woes" or judgments were future in relation to the cities denounced, what other tense could have been used? Sodom's dire punishment was a past thing, as a matter of literal fact, but it was a present thing in thought with subsequent generations; and since Jesus was making it a matter of comparison with future events, it became a future thing in thought—to be thought of in comparison with an actual judgment to be poured out. It is the thing in question, therefore, that governs the tense, the thing compared with it being subordinate to that which was being emphasized, namely, the coming "woes" upon those denounced.

Russellism Against Itself

Now it was the imagination that many had died without a "fair chance" who, if given such "chance," would have been saved, that gave birth to Russellism. How strange, then, and what straits the inventors must have felt themselves put to, that they should be compelled to refer to passages which show that more than a "fair chance" had been given. It was because "mighty works" had been done and were to be done, in some instances by "signs and wonders, and divers miracles," without effect, that Jesus denounced those in question. In one of the passages, the twelve disciples are declared to have been given "power against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease" (Matt. 10:1). Thus armed, they were commanded to visit various cities. "And whosoever shall not receive you, nor your words, when ye depart, out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet. Verily I say unto you It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment than for that city." Did they not have "fair chance" enough? If not, who has? They were without excuse, and yet we are asked to believe that the denunciation of the Savior meant that they were to be given more than a "fair chance" again, another chance under a "judgment" whose terrors are to be only a moral training under more favorable circumstances and with an improved condition of nature that will make it comparatively easy for them to secure the salvation which they refused in their first life time, despite the fact that its preachers were proved to be of Divine authority by "signs and wonders, and divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Spirit." Viewed from every point it is clear that there is no soundness in this flesh-flattering theory, and the fact that it has deluded so many is not because it is true, not because it is reasonable, not because it is scriptural, but because "the people love to have it so."

The Judgment Day A Probation

Mr. Russell's claim is that the "judgment day" means a "trial" day, or a day of future probation. In writing of the benefits of that day, as compared with the "first trial," he says:

> The trial of the race, which resulted in the loss of the blessings at first conferred, is really turned into a blessing, by reason of the ransom from its condemnation and penalty, which God has provided . . . Man, by reason of present experience with sin and its bitter penalty, will be fully forewarned, and when, as a result of the ransom, he is granted another, an individual trial, under the eye and control of him who so loved him as to give his life for him . . . we may be sure that the wilfully disobedient only will receive the penalty of the second trial (Millennial Dawn, Vol. I., p. 146-7).

Here are set forth the advantages which future probationers will have over those of the present. "The blessings of the first," which were lost, we suppose he means by our first parents, are to be restored by a "ransom for all" back to the Edenic state. It is this bright future for those addressed by Jesus in the Scriptures under consideration that we are asked to see in the words, "Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! . . . it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment, than for you." Those against whom the apostles were to shake off the dust of their feet because they refused to listn to the message of love, and blasphemed the Holy Spirit, spurning the "mighty works" performed before their eyes, were assured, according to Russellism, that they would have a resurrection which would effect a "ransom" to Edenic conditions, when "the blessings of the first trial" would be conferred upon them; and "by reason of present experience of sin and its bitter penalty will be fully forwarned." These future advantages, these "blessings," this "ransom" all of this we are asked by Russellism to read into the words of Jesus: "Verily I say unto you It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment than for that city." One cannot help wondering whether Russellites would not have tried to use language more nearly expressive of what they say Jesus meant when he used these words. If Jesus was in these words, foretelling a "ransom" and "blessings" for these rejecters of Holy Spirit-confirmed truths, what a strange selection of words he made! But he meant no such foolishness, and the only strangeness in the case is the presumption of Russellism in insulting common sense in asking sensible people to detect such absurdity in the forceful words of woe the Savior uttered against a people who, instead of deserving "another trial" and the blessings of a "ransom," richly deserved the punishment foretold by him who well knew what he was saying.

The word in the original Scriptures rendered "judgment" in the passages in question, is krisis. When this word is used threateningly, it is clear that it means punishment to be inflicted. For example, Matt. 5:21, "Whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment;" Heb. 10:26, 27, "For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries;" Jas. 2:13, "For he shall have judgment without mercy, that hath showed no mercy; and mercy rejoiceth against judgment;" 2 Pet. 2:4, "For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment," etc.

In this same threatening sense the word is employed in denouncing the wicked in the passages in question. Can any one change these Scriptures to mean probation under the "blessings" of "ransom"? Such a suggestion is nothing less than an insult to serious, sensible minds. Selected by Brother B. F. Smith.

The Story of Rehoboam

Rehoboam's capital was at Jerusalem. The disruption occurred at Schechem, which was the first capital of the northern kingdom and the metropolis of Ephraim. It was 30 miles directly north of Jerusalem between mounts Ebal and Gerizim. Here were located incidents in the lives of Abraham, Jacob, and Joseph. Close by, as part of the larger town, was Jacob's well and Sychar where Jesus talked with the Samaritan woman, and there is now the seat of the Samaritans, the smallest religious sect in the world, about 170 in number. The name "Rehoboam" means "Enlarger of the people," expressing the hope of his father for his son. The son disappointed these hopes, and became the "Diminisher of his people."

His age on becoming king was probably 21. His father was Solomon, his mother was Naamah, a young heathen princess of the kingdom of Ammon on the borders of the desert east of Jordan. She was one of the many wives of Solomon by means of whom he made alliances with the surrounding nations. She was so attractive that he built on Olivet, opposite the temple, a sanctuary in which she could worship the national god Molech. Rehoboam's training was doubtless according to the eastern custom. His father was probably too busy with his kingdom to pay much attention to him. Such a home where interests clashed and rivalries flourished, where cowives and no wives and half brothers and sisters were evidently always on the look out for their own interests. This surely must have been a poor place to rear children. Rehoboam's mother would naturally bring up her son in her own vicious religion. Since he was a son of a favorite princess he would no doubt be waited on and petted and treated in every was as a superior being, with no business interests, no hard tasks and indoctrinated in a heathen religion.

On the other hand, the temple of the true religion was close by, always in sight, and he must often as a boy have wandered near it or within its courts. His father's early life and his grand father's character and achievements would tend to draw him toward better things, and open the door of opportunity to a better life. That he was a young man of fair natural abilities is shown by his conduct during the first three years of his reign. As a son of such parents, he was probably a handsome young man. But morally he was proud, selfish, insolent, conceited and narrow. It has been said that Solomon had a thousand wives, but only one son, and he was a fool. Even the wisest man cannot bequeath his wisdom to his children. Much of what we are we owe to our mothers and the home atmosphere they create. A grateful people has erected monuments to the mothers of Washington and Lincoln. Rehoboam's ruin was his mother's monument. It has been said that every great man is the son of his mother. The same remark might be made of every wicked man. But after all, the course Rehoboam took, depended on his own choice. What a man chooses, that he will become. Some one says: Boys will be boys: he forgot to add boys will be men, and it depends on themselves what kind of men.

Have you ever heard the story of the man who could have fought bravely if he had had a better sword, and the king's son who picked up the broken fragment that the grumbler had thrown away, and with it fought so successfully that he turned defeat into victory.

Not your environment makes you, but that part of your environment to which you attend, makes you. One of the first things boys ought to learn is the reason they have so many temptations so many "thou shalt nots"; "not smoke," "not drink," "not swear"; etc., is that they have the opportunity to overcome, and to be manly. All who would become strong and useful, must gain these powers largely through victory over temptation. It is a chief factor in education. No one ever became a great commander in time of peace.

The Kingdom Rehoboam Inherited

Solomon's kingdom extended from the Euphrates on the north to the boundary line of Egypt on the southwest, including the whole strip of territory lying between the desert on the east and south, and the Mediterranean Sea on the west, except the narrow strip occupied by the Phoenicians, who were in alliance with Solomon. The twelve tribes occupied a country having only about 13,000 square miles, about the size of Holland, or of Massachucetts and Connecticut together. But Solomon also ruled over a large extent of neighboring territory so that his entire kingdom covered about 60,000 square miles, about the size of England and Wales, a little less than all New England, and larger than Denmark, Belgium, Holland and Switzerland together. The temple was a splendid building with its courts, its magnificent ceremonials, representing to the world the glory of Jehovah and his religion, Jerusalem was made into a magnificent city. The palace was a wonder of architecture. Water-works brought supplies to the city through costly aqueducts requiring no small engineering skill. Great fortresses protected the country. The tower of David, near the house of the forest, shown with a glory beyond that of any other fortress, from the number and variety of its glittering ornaments. Five hundred golden bucklers, all shields of mighty men, hung round it (1 Kings 10:16, 17; 2 Chron. 9:15, 16).

Its commerce was widely extended; its ships sailed as far west as Spain, perhaps beyond, along the coast of France to the British Isles, southward along the African shore, probably to the gold coast, down the Red Sea, and without a doubt to some part of India. There was inland commerce with Egypt by caravans across the Arabian desert (1 Kings 9:26-28; 10:22; 2 Chron. 8:17, 18; 9:21). Gold was accumulated in great abundance and the "king made silver to be in Jerusalem as stones and cedars made to be as sycamore trees that are in the lowland for abundance" (1 Kings 10:27).

His revenues amounted to 666 talents of gold annually, or ten to twenty million dollars. The possibilities of a good wise king, sincerely devoted to the kingdom of God, were very great. He might have made his kingdom a light house of truth and religion for the whole world. The wealth belonged to the kings and nobles, and the common people gained very little advantages from it. The burdening of the people with forced labor stung them with injustice, and burnt out the feeling of patriotism and set men against the religion that allowed it. The allied countries under Solomon were ready to fall from the empire, like ripe fruit, under an inefficient king, and become enemies instead of allies and friends, and the divided kingdom would be weakened for resistance. The northern tribes were jealous of the southern. They had the best country, but the capital and the temple were in the south with many fold attractions. The seeds of division had been planted long before and were now growing rapidly.

A Quiet Hour with God

By S. Roxana Wince

"A quiet hour with God means conquering hours with men."

JESUS knew this. "He went up into a mountain apart to pray." "He went into a solitary place and prayed." "And he withdrew himself into the wilderness and prayed." And in nearly every instance, these quiet hours of seclusion followed the great meetings by the Sea of Gennesaret and throughout all Galilee, when at a low estimate there must have some times been at least 10,000 persons present, and when all that were sick were healed

But why did he take counsel with God after the meetings were over instead of before? That he might be ready for the next time? Or that the words already spoken fall into good and honest hearts? Both. And the Father heard him always. The Jews, he knew, would not be converted then; but there would be some of the light-bearing tribe of Benjamin of Galilee who would believe and who would carry the gospel of the kingdom of God into all lands. God would give it to him to conquer these, and through these to enter "the regions beyond" until the gospel of the kingdom had been preached to all nations and the end would come.

He had just been praying when the disciples came to him and asked him to teach them how to pray. He had prayed before he was tempted of the devil. He prayed that wonderful prayer recorded in the seventeenth chapter of John, just before he went over the brook Cedron with his disciples to be betrayed into the hands of his enemies. Never before nor since has there been such a prayer. Surely that was a "quiet hour with God that meant conquering hours with men." Yet he did not pray for the world; he prayed for those whom God had given him out of the world to whom the words given him by the Father had been committed, and not for these alone, but them also which should believe on him through their word, that they might all be one, and the world come to believe and know that God had sent him and had loved his disciples as he loved the Son.

That prayer was made for us, dear brothers and sisters, just as much as it was made for impetuous Peter and the beloved John. He has manifested the Father's name to us and we are his; his joy is to be ours; we are to be kept from the evil and "sanctified through the truth," though the prayer was made so long ago.

And as Jesus spent quiet hours alone with God that he might have "conquering hours with men," so also must we. Never must we be too busy to pray, not even about the Lord's work. To go into his work without prayer is to go without him and meet with defeat. Over and over again he has commanded us to pray, and we must keep his commands if we would abide in his love, and be the fruitful branches he intended us to be. What good is a branch that bears no fruit, brings no other men and women to a knowledge of the truth?

"If you love me," he said, "keep my commandments." And to be able to do this we must "love one another as he has loved us," even though we be called to give up even life itself for our brother's sake and for the truth's sake. To die for the truth is to die for our brethren, is to die for the world, for it is said of the martyrs that

From their scattered dust
Around us and abroad,
Shall spring a plenteous seed
Of witnesses for God.

The Jews thought they had done with Jesus when they had him crucified and laid away and sealed up in Joseph's tomb. Little did they dream what was to grow out of that death, that those "dejected, faint-hearted Galilean fishermen" were, by that death and resurrection, to be transformed into invincible heroes, that nothing could separate from the love of God in Christ, and that this same spirit would actuate all his after followers down to the end of the age, and that though multiplied millions should be put to death as Jesus had been, it would only be to have other millions spring up in their stead to stand up for him and his cause, and to bless the words by carrying his words to the uttermost bounds of the everlasting hills.

If we "abide in loving, spiritual union with Jesus," praying as he commands us to pray, loving one another as he commands us to love, then will the Father be glorified through us, the precious fruit will be given us, we will not be "barren and unfruitful," but will reap golden harvests of souls, to make us as true disciples of our Master and Lord. "When ye stand praying forgive." "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation." "When ye pray believe that ye receive." "Watch and pray for ye know not when the time is." "Pray for them which despitefully use you." Pray for your enemies. It is the only way to keep hate out of our hearts and to let pity and love and the desire to save them come in. It is the only way to be like Jesus. "Men ought always to pray and not to faint."

Saul of Tarsus prayed, Peter prayed, Silas prayed. Many were gathered together and prayed. Paul said, "I pray that your love may abound. We give thanks praying always for you. Continue in prayer and watch in the same with thanksgiving, withal praying always for us, that God would open to us a door of utterance to speak the mystery of Christ for which I also am in bonds." "Pray for us that the word of the Lord may have free course and be glorified." "Pray without ceasing." "I pray to God that ye do no evil."

We are not to restrain prayer (Job 15.4). "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." "God heareth not sinners." "Let my prayer come before thee." "I have heard thy prayer." "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers unto his harvest."

Surely this prayer is needed now, for "the harvest is plenteous, but the laborers are few." Let us unite in prayer that laborers be sent, nor stop until our prayer is granted.

"Pray for the peace of Jerusalem."

"Brethren, pray for us."

"The prayer of the upright is his delight."

"Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."

"Come Lord Jesus. Come quickly.

Responsibility in the Truth

The following was written by S. A. Chaplin, and appeared in The Restitution of 1888. Hanna Barber.

"But ye are an elected race, a kingly priesthood, an holy nation, a purchased people that ye should declare the perfection of him who has called you from darkness into his marvelous light" (1 Pet. 2:9, Macknight's translation).

Election is to honor and rulership. Fitness for exaltation will be the sole, and at the same time, the absolute prerequisite for kingly crown or priestly coronal in the coming ages. To be called out of the world into the church in this world is one thing, but to be chosen out of the church to the royalties of the world to come is quite a different thing. How few realize what the saintship is that to which royalties and priesthood of God's everlasting kingdom will be awarded.

To be merely saved is one thing, but to be glorified with Christ, and to sit with him in his throne is a very different matter. It is one thing to sing about crowns, and another thing altogether to win them.

The prize of royalty in ages yet to be was the object of Paul's ambition, and the crown awaits him when the Lord comes. We are in the race, and the fadeless diadem is the stake.

How to Win Success

Have Confidence in Yourself and Do Not Lean Upon Others

Power is the goal of every worthy ambition, and only weakness comes from imitation or dependence on others. Power is self developed, self generated. We cannot increase the strength of our muscles by sitting in a gymnasium and letting another exercise for us.

Nothing else so destroys the power to stand alone as the habit of leaning upon others. If you lean you will never be strong or original. Stand alone or bury your ambition to be somebody in the world.

The man who tries to give his children a start in the world so that they will not have so hard a time as he had is unknowingly bringing disaster upon them. What he calls giving them a start will probably give them a setback in the world. Young people need all the motive power they can get. They are naturally leaners, imitators, copiers, and it is easy for them to develop into echoes or imitations. They will not walk alone while you furnish crutches; they will lean upon you just as long as you will let them.

One of the greatest delusions that a human being could ever have is that he is permanently benefited by continued assistance from others.

Editorial

Busy and away from home, the Editor has not been able to write any editorials this week.

At the last moment the Editor has been able to supply a few notes on his visit at Rochester, N. Y. Next week a fuller account will be given.

Editor's Visit at Rochester, N. Y.

This year our vacation began Monday, July 21st. For reasons which need not be stated now, we planned a visit to Rochester, N. Y. Accordingly, on the morning of July 21st, we started on our trip accompanied as far as Buffalo by Brother A. E. Griffiths and Sister Alice Chapelle, both of whom were going there on their vacations. Here our congenial brother and sister left us, and we made the rest of the journey alone.

On arriving at Rochester we went immediately to the home of a friend, Mr. H. W. Russell. This home is composed of Mr. and Mrs. Russell, "Babe," a son, and Sister Russell, the mother of Mr. Russell. This home was literally and emphatically "ours" during our visit in Rochester. Mr. Russell had a season of freedom from business, and he gave us constant personal attention and unrestrained use of his automobile. Professional visits and pleasure trips were many. Rochester is a city of great beauty, and its environs are more beautiful still.

With The Christadelphians

We were not in the city long until we came into touch with the Christadelphians. During the week we met them frequently, and the hospitality of Mr. Russell permitted us to meet a representative number of them one evening at his home. We attended their meeting on Sunday morning, and enjoyed a quiet, sane and sensible "lecture" by C. C. Vredenburg. As a class Christadelphians are austere and intellectual. "The spirit of truth" they usually possess not, while they have the truth itself. Pugnacious intellects, spiritual pride, quarrelsome hypocriticism make swelled heads and shrivelled hearts. The Christadelphians in Rochester, however, we are glad to say are rather more cordial and agreeable than usual; but the absence of children and young people in their Sunday morning meeting suggested that intellectual dryness had driven them away. Christ attracted children. Any spirit that repels them is not the spirit of Christ. God pity the man or woman of whom children are afraid!

With The Megiddo Mission Band

The Megiddoites is another sect of big heads and little hearts. With all their bigotry they are more hospitable than the Christadelphians. The Bible commands hospitality, love of enemies, and so on. It must be recorded to the shame of the Christadelphians that we were in their midst for a week without receiving an invitation from one to call at his home! The Megiddoites, erratic as they are, are not driven into inhospitality by covetousness. We had very enjoyable visits at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burrows, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips, and with a half-brother, Gilbert Biers, and a half-sister, Esther Ingham. Eunice Ingham and Mr. Snyder, both devout Megiddoites, added much to the pleasure of our visit by spontaneous hospitality, welcome, and good cheer.

How Modern Religion is Obtained

Description of a Southern Revival

LONG PRAYERS were condemned by Jesus: long faces and groaning religion are all the fashion at the present day. What a lamentable condition the so-called religious world is in! Modern gospel, modern conversion, and modern religion, are as dissimilar to ancient gospel, religion, and conversion as light is to darkness. Indeed, there is no ancient gospel needed now to convict or convert sinners. All that is needed now is, first, a good warm room; second, a good leader or superintendent; third, a good set of prayers; fourth, a good set of singers, thank-the-lorders, ameners, and groaners; and a good [illegible] set, and the work they call "the Lord's work," is begun. A better name for it would be "Bedlam broke loose," for the "work" is characterized by howling, wailing, screaming, screeching, groaning, crying, laughing, stamping of feet, slapping of hands pounding the backs and shoulders of the "penitent," calling on God to send down fire, fire, fire; to come a little nearer, to give them another touch, to get to himself a great name in this place. They tell God what he has promised, and call on him not to break his word. They tell the sinners, before whose mind there is no testimony, to believe on Jesus, to give their hearts to God, to exercise faith, to look to Calvary, and see his bleeding side and so forth. At length the subjects of their operations begin to be impressed: one begins to groan, another to cry, and a third is struck down with the "power." The operators, seeing this, shout out, "the Lord is here! The Holy Ghost is doing his work; we know it, we feel it, we feel it!" But there must a change both in will" and in acts. How is this to be effected? By singing. "Arise, brethren, and sing! sing in the spirit, brethren!"

> "Arise my soul, arise, shake off thy guilty fears,
> A bleeding sacrifice, in my behalf appears."

The spiritual doctors now begin to visit their patients. They ask the sinners, "Brother, how do you feel?" He replies, "I don't know that I feel any different." "Don't you," says the medicine man, "want religion?" "O yes!" "Then give your heart to God and continue to pray." Another says, "Brother how do you feel?" "O, I feel bad because I don't feel worse." "Thank the Lord says the parson, "pray on brother, and you will get through." He then turns to another and says, "Sister, tell us how you feel; do you think you feel any better?" "Yes," she replies, "I feel my load is removed; I think God for Christ's sake has spoken peace to my poor never-dying soul. I feel a hope in me that I would not give for worlds like this." She begins to shout, and others follow; another "feels a hope," another, and another; and so the fire begins to spread, and all begin to shout, and one universal pow-wow is the result. They have "got religion," or religion such as it is, has got them.

After this religious spree is over, the next thing is to get the converts into the church. The pastor then enquires, "Do you feel it your duty to be baptized?" "No, I never felt it my duty yet." "Well," rejoins the accomodating divine, "just as you feel, brother, we do not believe it to be a saving ordinance, but you will give us your name won't you?" "Oh yes, if you please." "Thank the Lord one more is added." The inquiry proceeds. A number want to be baptized, and come down to the water. The clerical ignoramus begins his work. "My dear brother," says he, "do you believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God?" "Yes." "Thank the Lord!" he exclaims, "for the good confession. "How do you wish to be baptized?—by sprinkling, pouring, or immersion?" "Sprinkling, if you please, sir." "Thank the Lord!" says Balaam, "that is just as good as pouring." Now another to this says, "do you believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." "Yes." "Thank the Lord, how do you wish to be baptized?" "By pouring." "Thank the Lord, that is just as good as sprinkling." Now another says the divine, "do you belive that Jesus Christ is the Son of God?" "Yes sir." "Thank the Lord for the good confession! How do you wish to be baptized?" "By immersion sir." "Thank the Lord! that is just as good as sprinkling or pouring, but we think it to be very indecent, and absolutely ridiculous for females to be immersed in this age of refinement! But just as you feel." Thus all are accomodated; a quiet is put upon all their consciences by an appropriate dose from the clerical pill-bags! This is termed faith in kind, but not in degree, by modern lovers of what they call Christian union.—L.

Communications

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

Dear Editor:

After years of studying on the plan of life and salvation, the question comes to me when was the Church of God founded and by whom? I am ignorant in regard to this question, and as I read so many good, able writings from different ones in the church, I feel sure there is someone who will be able to answer all enquiries pertaining to the church. It is my desire that some good hearted person will answer these questions through The Restitution, as I need just such things here in order to hold my own with so many false doctrines. I have never heard any preacher of our faith speak on this line, and friends, I feel so lost without hearing the gospel. The Latter Day people claim their church has been founded eighteen hundred years but I fail to find the record in God's word; but I do find on record Church of God and of the first born, and churches of God. Where are those other churches who have so great power? I can not find them recorded in God's word. Therefore I can not accept their doctrine. In fact if the Church of God can be wiped out then I am through, but I am sure there is no one save God, or his Son can do this, and he tells us his word shall not come back to him void.

Now friends, I am not as yet in the church, but I say unto you who are in Christ, go on to victory and pray that we may become all one family in the kingdom of God and of his Christ.

I am yours in search of the truth,

SI HERREN.

FROM SISTER BAGGARLY

Editor of The Restitution:

I am left in bad circumstances. My companion was taken with the flu the twentieth of December 1918, leaving me with a little girl two years old, and now I have a little boy two months old. I am left without any support, I am in poor health and in debt seventy-five dollars. I wish to ask the brethren of the Church of God everywhere to help me to pay my indebtedness, for which I shall always thank those who see fit to help me and my poor children. My father boards us all, which is quite an item in these times of high prices. My address is

Orthodox Vagaries

Preexistence of Christ Absurd

I WAS invited to attend a Bible study; I found it to be a "one man talk." In the course of his remarks the speaker said, "Jesus existed with his Father ages before the world was formed in the beginning." He further said Jesus being of the nature of God, immortal, could not die for the sins of Adam's race, therefore God took away his Son's life, deprived him of his being. He did not tell us how an immortal person could be deprived of his never ending life, neither did he explain how the holy child born of Mary could be the Son of God (whom he said existed eternally), when God had destroyed the life of that Son.

I asked him these questions. He seemed angry and replied that was a mystery which we could not understand. Before there was time for further questions he said, "We will be dismissed." Before dismissing the people he prayed at me to a great length. Of course I could not answer that form of argument. Into such absurdities does error lead those who will not receive the word of God but love a lie. Think of this statement made to bolster the doctrine of the personal preexistence of Christ. He died twice according to this man: once God took his life from him; and once Pilate caused his death.

A noted teacher in one of the sects said Jesus was the angel of the Lord so often spoken of in the Old Testament, and that after Jesus' birth of Mary we heard no more of the angel of the Lord. I wanted to ask him if he never read Acts 5:19 or Acts 12:7.

Teachings Heard in a Tent

A few evenings ago I went to hear a lecture given in a tent. The speaker took for his text, Romans 9:15. He made this statement: "One might pray for a thousand years, he could not change God's mind. I thought of James 5:16, Gen 20:17, Numbers 11:2; I Kings 13:6; John 9:31-33.

A Bookseller's Theology

A traveling bookseller called at my house a few days ago. He told me that in a little while the Lord was coming in the air and then God was going to rain upon the earth fire and destroy every living person left upon the earth, every green tree, every blade of grass, completely destroying all animal and vegetable life. He further told me that before God began this destruction Jesus would take up to himself a few. I asked him where Jesus would take them, as the earth was in such a condition it could not be a resting place for them. He replied, he will take them to heaven where God is. I asked him if he would please read it to me in the Bible. This is what he quoted, which he said was in 1 Thess. 4:16, 17, and he finished with the words, "To meet the Lord in the air." He will take me to his Father's home in heaven." I said to him, "I have read that passage and these last words are not recorded. You are adding to God's word, which is a dangerous thing to do." He absolutely gave these words as a part of the quotation. I then asked him if he would please read Zechariah 14th chapter and harmonize it with his declaration that all people left on the earth and all vegetation was utterly consumed by fire. He read the chapter through. Space will not permit all his comments. When I asked him to notice particularly the 16th verse, he said: "Oh, those are the wicked who are resurrected at the end of the thousand year reign of Christ who come up to take the camp of the saints and are destroyed forever," referring me to Rev. 20:9. Well, my part of the conversation ended right there. I did give him some tracts. Whether I violated the command given us in Matt. 7:6 I have wondered since. When we see to what absurdities, to what unrighteous declarations those are forced who love not the truth, how we should love and praise our God that we have the willing mind which he promises shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God (John 7:17). We should be careful not to be carried about with divers and strange doctrines (Heb. 13:9), but be able by sound doctrine to exhort and to convince the gainsayer (Titus 1:9). And how doubly careful we should be to adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things (Titus 2:10). The "all things" is our daily life, our every act and word. May God help each and every one to be faithful unto the end. Yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry. And then our confidence (in God's truth) shall have great recompence of reward (Heb. 10:35.37).

Conference Report

The North West Conference of the Church of God was held at Felida, Wash., June 13-15, 1919. Brother Darby talked to us a few minutes Friday night from 2 Timothy, 4th chapter, telling us of the importance of striving to win a home in the kingdom rather than earthly gain.

Saturday morning our regular business meeting was held led by the president. The minutes were read and accepted. The treasurer's report stated that we had on hand $176.92, and had paid out during the year $18.32. It was accepted by the Conference. The Evangelist's report stated that 38 discourses had been delivered during the year, including one funeral The Conference voted to pay Brother Darby the amount due him for his services. It was also moved and seconded that we pay Brother Darby $2.50 per day for his work instead of $1.50 as he had charged. He was also asked t choose an evangelist for the coming year.

Brother Jim Wolfe gave a report from the Felida Church and Sunday School, and Sister Morgan from the Corvallis organization. Both were favorable and encouraging. In the election of officers it was voted that the same ones be retained for the coming year. Sister Palmer suggested that each member pick out some individual and bring them to the truth.

Brother Belshaw, Brother Jim Wolfe and Grace West were appointed on the resolution committee and they adopted the following:

Resolved, that we as brothers and sistesr of the Church of God, pledge ourselves to work more zealously for the Master and his kingdom, and that each and every member strive to bring at least one into the fold during the coming year.

Resolved, that we extend to Sister Palmer and family our deepest sympathy in their sad bereavement in the loss of husband and father, and to the church in the loss of a dear old brother;also extend to Brother Harlan and family our loving and sincere sympathy in the loss of a dear wife and mother, citing them to our Redeemer who hath said, "I am the resurrection and the life," knowing that if we are faithful as they, we will all meet again in God's kingdom.

Resolved, that we extend to Brother Horace Prosser our thanks and appreciation for his splendid letter "The synopsis of Paul's life," and that it be published in The Restitution.

Resolved, that we extend to Brother Darby our thanks for his untiring efforts during the past year

And lastly, be it resolved that we extend to the brothers and sisters of Felida our sincere thanks for their generous hospitality during our stay there.

Signed Chas. H. Belshaw,
J. W. Wolfe,
Grace C. West.

Saturday afternoon we had a social hour of prayer and song led by J. W. McIrwin on the subject of "Hope."

Sunday morning we had Sunday School followed by a sermon by Brother Darby on restitution and the restitution age. He talked to us again in the afternoon on obedience. After the services we went down to a beautiful little stream and baptized Charles Lapp, Ida Lapp and Clarence Lapp.

Sunday night the resolutions were read and accepted, and a finance committee appointed which consisted of Brother Belshaw, of Eugene, Sister Morgan, of Corvallis, and Brother J. W. McIrwin of Felida. Then Brother Darby talked to us on restoration from the 65th chapter of Isaiah, after which we partook of communion and extended to our new members the right hand of fellowship Then came the goodbyes and many eyes were dimmed with tears yet a smile when we thought of our wonderful hope of reaching the land where there will be no more parting and all tears will be wiped away for ever.

Grace Cramer West, Secretary.

"Thy Will be Done"

HOW UNREASONABLE: how inconsistent with ourselves; even we who are Christians. God does the very thing we ask him to do, and yet we complain of him, or grieve immoderately and almost inconsolably, because he does it. We ask that his will may be done, which implies, that our will, if it be in contrariety to his, should not be done; and this we sometimes in so many words express: "Not as we will, but as thou wilt." Well, God does his will, the very thing we wanted him to do; and yet we complain that he does not our will, the thing we deprecated his doing. We complain that he hears our prayer, and grants us the desire of our heart. Was ever complaint so unreasonable? If, when we asked him to do his will he had done ours, there would have been some semblance of reason for our complaint. Will we say that we never meant, in our hearts, what the terms of petition expressed that we never really desired his will should be done? Will any one acknowledge that he has uniformly been a hypocrite in the use of the Lord's prayer? Certainly, then, he ought not to complain that God has detected and chastised his hypocrisy. But if he were sincere—if he desired what he asked for, then if he complains, he complains that God has gratified his desire. How perverse it is in a creature to say to God, time after time, when craving good or deprecating evil, "Nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt;" and then, because it is as God wills, and not as he wills, to think hard of God.

Every one who prays, "Thy will be done," is aware that the will of God does not always coincide with the inclinations of his creatures. It were wonderful if it should wonderful indeed, if the will of an omniscent and infinitely perfect being should uniformly fall in with the capricious desires and inclinations of those who are finite, fallible, and sinful. Our own inclinations do not agree with each other. We are the subjects of conflicting desires; the will of God could not coincide with our inclinations without coinciding with contraries. Well, the prayer, "Thy will be done," which we all consent to use, recognizing this want of coincidence, begs that in all such cases, God will cause his will to be done rather than ours. It is a most reasonable request; no wonder God should comply with it. And yet we complain that in such cases of disagreement, he does not carry out our inclinations instead of his own will. It is well, in view of such perverseness, that we have to do with a God of infinite patience. How very slow to anger our God is.

But I have not stated the case yet in all its strength. Complaint against God would be altogether unreasonable, if he caused only his will to be done. But while he causes his own, he causes our will also to be done; for it is our will, as we have told him over and over again, that his will should be done. Why should he not gratify the inclination of ours, that his will should be done, as well as any other inclination which we have; for example, the inclination to retain a certain earthly enjoyment? He cannot gratify our every inclination, for the gratification of one would be the denial of another. He must name a selection. It is not his fault that we have warring inclinations. He did not make us so; it is one of the inventions we have sought out. It belongs to us as marred by ourselves. Will it be said that God selects the less worthy inclination to gratify? I think not. What worthier inclination can we have than that God's will should be done?

It is the pain of having an inclination crossed, of which we complain? But let us complain of ourselves, that we have inclinations which need to be crossed. And besides, would it give us no pain were we to discover that, in a particular instance, God submitted his own will to our inclination, and suffered us to be gratified in a certain respect when his judgment was against it?

Fellow-Christians, we must give up the use of that petition, "Thy will be done," or else act more consistently. It will not do to be daily asking a thing, and daily lamenting that the thing is granted. If we would have our will done, let us alter the petition, and say, "Our will be done.' Let us be sincere if we are nothing else. Let us tell the Lord the very desires we have, however wrong they may be. That is better, certainly, than to have such desires and tell him the contrary.

But I would by no means advise the alteration. I think we had much better keep to the old form, and pray as the Lord taught his disciples. Yes, let us go on to say, "Thy will be done." It is our heavenly Father whom we address. Surely, his children need not fear to have his will done. Let us consent with our whole heart that his will should be done, and towards us as well as towards others; and not merely in some things, but in all things; for why should not all his will be done, as well as any part of it? If we do so by and by we shall have no inclination contrary to his will. We shall be incapable of cross or disappointment. Every thing being as he would have it, would be also as we would have it.

If now a part of his will be hidden until events disclose it, yet in other respects it is already revealed. We know, for instance, that it is our Father's good pleasure to give us the kingdom; and that it is our Savior's will that we should be with him where he is, that we may behold his glory. him where he is, that we may behold his glory. isfied, when we awake in his likeness. In this expectation we should be satisfied now. Let us suffer God to reign, and let us not aspire to be his counsellors. He taketh no counsel of any. W Nevins.

A Conference Letter

Robert G. Huggins, Editor:

Enclosed is a letter by H. J. Prosser, of Newport, Ore., written to and read at the North-west Conference, and which I was requested to send to you for publication.

J. W. Woolf.

Dear Brethern:

You know how strangely a man or a woman who is in love will act. All else is nothing. The persuasion of friends, the advice of wisdom, the call of fame, all are thrown aside in the wild desire to win the object of adoration.

I am going to tell you about a man in love. Paul of Tarsus was in love with the Lord Jesus. Very few men have started out in life with fairer prospects than did Paul. He was brought up at the feet of Gamaliel, skilled in all the logic of the law. As a young man he went forth from the greatest schools of learning to meet the issues of life. He tells us, that all these advantages were counted as nothing that he might "win Christ" (Phil. 3:8).

Yes, he was a lover. And now let us look at some of the things he did for the one he loved. Twelve years have gone, Paul is at Lystra (Acts 14:12121). A cripple has been miraculously cured. He was adored as a god, but afterwards the Jews stirred up a mob against him. Gathering up the broken stones of the streets, this mob hurled them in a perfect storm at the brave apostle until they thought he was dead. Then one catches him by the hair another by the feet, another by the head, and they drag him to the wall of the city and throw him over on the rocks below.

Let us go along the crooked path down to where he lies. There he is by that thorn bush garments all torn—hair matted with blood and dust, face all cut and bruised. See he is breathing, he is not dead! Take your handkerchief and wipe the blood out of his eyes and off from his face. Let him lean against my breast, there, that is better.

Now I am going to talk to him: "Paul don't go too far in this matter They will certainly kill you sometime if you continue to be so outspoken." Hear his answer, Phil. 1:20: "As always, so now also, Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death." There is no use trying to do anything with such a man as this: he doesn't know anything but Christ and him crucified (1 Cor. 2:2).

Well ten years have passed away, let us try and find Paul and see if years of work and tent-making have lessened the love he formerly bore his Master. This is the city of Philippi in Macedonia: that low, dark building which you see before us is a prison. What! somebody singing in this dismal place? Listen, the voice is like Paul's I am going over there and talk to him. What! shoulders bare and bleeding, flesh torn into ribbons! O Paul, do you remember what we said to you ten years ago at Lystra? Would it not have been better for you to have taken my advice? You have the truth, but don't be so outspoken: they will surely kill you some day. Listen, Rom. 8:18 "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. We are children of God. We are joint heirs with Christ: if so be that we suffer with him that we may also be glorified together.

Brethren, what a manly Christianity. How such experiences ought to shame the weak and sapless profession of our days!

One more glimpse we must take of this lover of Jesus. And at the same time let us ask ourselves, do we love him who is the Christ? Again we enter the walls of a prison in the voluptuous wicked city of Rome. Do you see that block of wood hollowed out in the centre and leaning against it a round bladed axe with a short handle? Tomorrow morning at ten o'clock the old man whom we came to see will bow his hoary head upon that block and the executioner with one blow will sever it from his body, and the life of the grandest man that ever spoke the language of earth will be ended. Yes, it is a dark, gloomy dungeon and you can see him over there sitting on that stone. He is writing a letter. That damp moldy straw in the corner is his bed. A chain is fast to one ankle and to a ring in the wall. His gray hair and beard and his bent form shiver slightly at the damp chill of the place. Let us look over his shoulder and read as he writes: "I am now ready to be offered and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." Myriads of heavenly eyes are looking at this scene. To the eyes of that aged one the dungeon, the iron grating, the darkness is swept away and he sees only the jasper and gold of the City of God. He is hearing voices we never hear.. He is beholding visions our eyes have never beheld. Some one is in that cell with him we never saw. God give us men a time like this demands. Strong minds, great hearts, true faith, and ready hands.

Affectionately,

H. J. PROSSER.

The Apostles' Creed;

or the

Seven Pillars of Wisdom's Temple

Eph. 4:4-6

The One God

The one Eternal Uncreated Substance which is essentially Power, Incorruptibility, and Life, dwelling invisibly in unapproachable light; and known before the days of Moses by the name of Ail Shaddai, "the strength of the mighty ones," and from his interview with the angel at the bush by that of Yahweh or Yah, "He who will be" (Gen. 17:1; 35:11; Exod. 6:3; Psa.68:4).

The One Lord

Jesus, Heb, Jehoshua, "I-shall-be-the-Powerful," the Head of the the Ecclesia, the Anointed King of Israel and the Future Ruler of the whole world (Eph. 5:23; John 18:37; Matt. 2:6; Psa. 2:8; 67:4).

The One Spirit

The divine substance of the Eternal Uncreate, focalized and intensified in his servants for the revelation of his word and the display of those signs and wonders by which they were to attest the authority of their mission, and to establish, strengthen and settle believers in "the truth as it is in Jesus" (Exod. 4:12-16; 2 Tim. 1:21; Eph. 1:11-13, Mark 16:20).

The One Faith

The Glad Tidings concerning the Kingdom of God, of the Divine Purpose to establish a Dominion of Righteousness in all the earth (Luke 8:1; Dan. 2:44; Jer. 33:14-16; Zech. 14:9).

The One Hope

The Second Appearing of Christ on earth to confer Immortality on his dead and living saints, and to set up his kingdom (2 Tim. 4:1-8; Rev.2:7; Matt. 25:46; Acts 15:16).

The One Baptism

The Immersion in water (for the remission of sins) of such as having believed the things concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ, seek to be brought into the bond of the covenant and to take on the Name and Service of the Lord Jesus (Acts 2:38; Mark 16:16; Gal. 3:27-29).

The One Body

The Ecclesia of baptized Gospel-believing subjects of the "One Faith" and the "One Hope," in whom the word of the Christ dwells richly in all wisdom, and who by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory, honor, and incorruptibility at his appearing and his kingdom (Acts 8:12, 13; Col. 3:16; Rom. 2:7; 2 Tim. 4:1).

We may not be able to dissipate the forces which war against us, but we can strengthen the forces which range themselves for us. We may not be able to change the conditions in which we must live, but we can train ourselves to be more brave and patient in their endurance: to keep our spirits above them, instead of constant irritation against them.

"He giveth power to the faint, and to them that have no might he increaseth strength" (Isa. 40:29).

Be sure and explain every text of Scripture in harmony with the context to obtain a correct understanding.

Hope renewed is strength gained.

Things Hoped For

Brighter and better days are on the dawn.
The time the King long waited for is near:
Shadows of a heavenly shape and beauty
Forecast themselves upon the world and tell
Of substances that follow fast behind.
The years have pregnant grown with destinies,
And now are withering in the pain of travail:
Events undreamt of struggle to the birth.
Which shall strike dumb with a awe a slumbering world. The Rainbow.

The Wine of the Sacrament

WRITTEN FOR "THE NORTHERN INDIANIAN" FORTY YEARS AGO

By S. Roxana Wince

And he took the cup and gave it to them saying, Drink ye all of it; for this is my blood of the new covenant which is shed for many for the remission of sins. But I say unto you, I will not henceforth drink of this fruit of the vine until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom (Matt. 26:27-29).

For as oft as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come (1 Cor. 11:26).

THE IDEA is prevalent in the minds of many, that because a large part of the churches of Christendom have been wont to use fermented wine in the sacrament, that Christ so ordained when instituting the supper. But if we had no other proof than what is contained in the texts quoted above, it would be enough to show the utter untenableness of this position. The wine represented the blood of a new covenant, was symbolical of new things, new doctrines, new ordinances and a new life; it must be fresh and new. It stood for the pure, fresh blood of the newly slain. It would be out of all harmony to take some sour corrupting substance to symbolize that cleansing, healing fountain, to which all the dying sons of men are invited to come according to the terms of the gospel.

Fermented wine does in no sense represent the shed blood of him who died that we might live. Fermented wine destroys; the blood saves. That the Savior did not use fermented wine is shown from the fact that he would drink the fruit of the vine "new" with his disciples in his Father's kingdom. Christ was our passover; nothing therefore that savors of leaven can be used to represent him. No leaven could be used in the passover feast. This was the law: "In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at even, ye shall eat unleavened bread, until the one and twentieth day of the month at even. Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses, for whosoever eateth that which is leavened, that soul shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, whether he be a stranger or born in the land. Ye shall eat nothing leavened; in all your habitation ye shall eat unleavened bread" (Exod. 12:18-20).

"Chomets," sick or sour wine would be put away. It is the Hebrew word for leaven. Dr. Isaacs, an eminent Jewish rabbi, says, "The Jews do not, in their feasts for sacred purposes, including the marriage feast, ever use any kind of intoxicating drinks." "All fermented substances were prohibited during the paschal feast of the Jews."

The last supper was instituted "on one of the days of unleavened bread when no other kind could be eaten in the land of Judea," and that the bread might the more fitly symbolize the body of Christ that was broken for us, and which saw no corruption, the early Christians mixed it with new wine and oil, thus properly picturing the flesh of the Son of God, that he gave for the life of the world.

They who eat the bread that came down from heaven "shall live forever." Whatever represents it must have in it no elements of putrefaction, else is the beauty of the symbolization destroyed. And if the bread, representing the flesh must have in it no elements of decay, so must not the wine; for "the blood is" most emphatically, "the life." "Without shedding of blood there is no remission." "By his own blood he has obtained eternal redemption for us." All these precious thoughts must be embodied in that which we use to represent them.

The freshly expressed juice of the grape is healthful and life giving. The thick boiled wine of the ancient Jews was equally so. It was in truth grape juice, made into jelly. It was the custom during the first seven centuries to use this thick wine diluted with water, in the communion services. Raisin wine, or the juice boiled from raisins, was also used, and is still so used by some of the Syrian churches, down to the present day. Fermented wine has no place in the Lord's supper.

The rewards of life are for service. And the penalties of life are for selfishness.

The Story of Rehoboam

(Concluded)

REHOBOAM seems to have been the natural heir to the throne. Judah accepted him. But as in the case of Saul, David, and Solomon at least in Jerusalem the people had a voice in the selection of their king. Accordingly the tribes were summoned to meet at the old northern capital, Shechem, to confirm the successor of Solomon. The northern tribes were determined to obtain a charter of rights that would relieve them of their burdens as the price of their submission. For Solomon had forced them to give unpaid labor upon his great buildings, and these free and independent Ephraimites were reminded of their ancestors' slavery in Egypt. They were shrewd enough to send for their brilliant sympathizer, Jereboam, whom Solomon had banished to Egypt. They were ready to enforce their just demands. Rehoboam, apparently attended by a small force, goes to confer with them. Jereboam is their spokesman, and this is the condition on which they will receive him as king: "Thy father made our yoke grevious: now therefore make thou the grevious service of thy father, and his heavy yoke which he put upon us, lighter, and we will serve thee."

Rehoboam, asking for three days in which to consider and to consult, applied first to the older men who had been his father's counsellors.

Be a servant unto this people and speak good words to them. Be what every good king ought to be, and grant their reasonable request. A true king or ruler is one who serves. The elder men who had seen Solomon in all his glory told Rehoboam how he might be greater than his father. Rehoboam next consulted the young men, his comrades, those who had grown up with him, inexperienced like himself. The overbearing advice they gave shows that these youths belonged to what you would call the aristocratic idlers, who had no sympathy with the people, but mere wild, conceited, and overbearing in their selfishness. They believed the people were made for the king. They gave their advice not only because they believed it, but because they knew it agreed with Rehoboam's wishes. Their advice may be read in 1 Kings 12:10, 11.

Rehoboam's answer to the people was given in the words of the young men, expressing the bitterness of slavery he would inflict on them. The kingdom lost. All Israel saw that the king hearkened not. Josephus says that they were struck by his words "as by an iron rod." "What portion have we in David?" What have we northern tribes to do with David's son Rehoboam or David's tribe, Judah? We all have a chance to get into the kingdom; we may throw it away half of it or all of it, in the same way. Rehoboam did foolishly in following his head-strong will. We may take the advice of our Lord Jesus and become kings and monarch of all the possibilities God has placed before us. One's character, already formed, is a powerful factor in all emergencies of choice and decision. There is no time to prepare a new character. Rehoboam had formed the habit of taking bad advice when it fitted his inclinations. Be faithful in little duties and you will be faithful in great emergencies. We do not need to make our decisions unaided. Our first duty and privilege is to go to God for help, but to obtain his help we must go sincerely, otherwise the asking is hypocrisy and a sham. Pride in the form of self-conceit is the one assailable stupidity. "Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit? There is more hope of a fool than of him.'

Rehoboam reigned seventeen years. On his return to Jerusalem he assembled an army of 180,000 men to compel the receding tribes to return; but a prophet forbade the movement in the name of the Lord. To go would be to fight against God, and therefore bring only disaster to the whole nation, who as it were fell away from their alliance with the Israelites. Rehoboam had no experience in war or in government. A small kingdom was quite sufficient for such a man. Even David was king for seven years over Judah before he ruled the larger kingdom. Rehoboam obeyed the letter rather than the command, for during his whole reign and long after, there was a quarrel and war between the kingdoms

There were three years of prosperity and true religion (2 Chron. 11:16, 17). Many of the best people of the northern kingdom, such as set their hearts to seek the Lord God of Israel, came to Jerusalem, and strengthened the kingdom of Judah and made Rehoboam strong three years (2 Chron. 11:13-17) Among them were the priests and Levites from all parts of Israel, who had been dismissed fom their offices by Jereboam. Rehoboam's goodness was but as the cloud and morning dew.

As soon as he was firmly established, he returned to his old ways, and forsook the law of the Lord. His character and his kingdom were symbolized by the change from shields of gold, which Solomon had made for his palace armory, but which Shishak took away, and which Rehoboam replaced by shields of brass (1 Kings 14:26). This deterioration continued two years, when God used another instrumentality for making Rehoboam good. Read 2 Chron. 12:1-12. The Lord delivered them. Rehoboam continued to reign; and though his kingdom was not destroyed, yet it was far from what it might have been, for he did evil, because he prepared not his heart to seek the Lord.

"The Kingdom of God within you"

THE APPLICATION of this phrase to the reign of Christ in the heart, or in the skies, or to the church, is objected to in the first place, because the proper rendering of entosumor eime is, "will be be among you."

2. If "within you" is correct, then Christ's throne is in the Pharisee's heart! or if the kingdom is the church, it is in their hearts, or within them somewhere, for it is them that he addresses and them only.

3. If Christ reigns in the wicked Pharisees' heart, why not in the heart of every ungodly man? or if the kingdom of God is within them while sinners and "God is no respecter of persons," may not that Kingdom be in every sinner's heart?

4. If the phrase "Kingdom of God is among you," then was it not "set up" before Pentecost?

5. The fact that the Kingdom of God is among you, will be true when the time comes which Christ refers to. For he says, "Neither shall they say, lo here, or lo there." Why? Because the Kingdom of God is among you; i. e., it is in existence and in operation at that time. No one can be ignorant of its presence, therefore they shall not say, lo here or lo there. In the form of a syllogism, it stands thus:

1. When the Kingdom of God is among men, they shall not say, lo here, or lo there.
2. Men have been and are now saying, lo here and lo there; i. e., it is here in our hearts, or it is the church, or there, beyond the skies. Therefore the Kingdom of God is not now among men.

6. That the Kingdom of God was future from the time the Savior spoke, is clear from the 20th verse. The Pharisees demanded of him, when the Kingdom of God should come, implying that they looked for it as a future event. He answers in accordance with their question, and teaches that it is future, for he says, the Kingdom of God cometh not, or will not come with observation, i. e., with parade or show of men, not heralded with display and worldly pomp.

7. He tells his disciples, verse 22, that the day will come when they would desire to see one of the days of the Son of Man, and should not see it, referring doubtless to the persecution they should suffer, which would cause them to desire to see one of his days, which refers to his coming and Kingdom. They should not see that time as they would all fall asleep long before that time. "And they shall say, see here or see there, i. e., that here is Christ's coming and Kingdom or there; go not after them, nor follow them" (vs. 23). Would not the disciples stand as good a chance of knowing whether Christ's days i. e., the time of his reign, etc, was in their hearts or in the church, as any one else? How could they be deceived then? The advice is to us as well as to them, and we are not to follow men's lo heres or lo theres, for his coming and reign will be too clearly demonstrated to allow a mistake. See the 24th to 27th verses. But these disciples shall see his days, but not during their lifetime, but at the resurrection, as it implied in the 37th verse. In the figure of a body and eagles, he represents the gathering of the saints to him at his coming.

8. If the Kingdom of God is now among men, it does not exert as much influence or demonstrate as much power, as Belgium, although it has been over 1800 years in existence. T. W. Smith.

It was in making education not only common to all but in a sense compulsory on all that the destiny of the free republics of America was practically settled.

SLOGAN: WE STAND FOR UNITY, TRUTH AND RIGHTEOUSNESS

THE CHANGED CROSS

It was a time of sadness, and my heart,
Although it knew and loved the better part,
Felt wearied with the conflict and the strife,
And all the needed discipline of life.

And while I thought on these, as given to me,
My trial tests of love and faith to be,
It seemed as if I never could be sure
That faithful to the end I should endure.

And thus in longing trusting to his might,
Who says, "We walk by faith and not by sight,"
Doubting and almost yielding to despair,
The thought arose, My cross I cannot bear.

Far heavier its weight must surely be
Than those of others, which I daily see,
Oh! if I might another burden choose
Methinks I should not fear my crown to lose.

A solemn silence reigned on all around,
E'en nature's voices uttered not a sound,
The evening shadows seemed of peace to tell,
And sleep upon my weary spirit fell.

A moment's pause and then a heavenly light
Beamed full upon my wondering sight;
Angels on silvery wings seemed everywhere,
And angel's music thrilled the balmy air.

Then one more fair than all the rest to see,
One to whom all others bowed the knee,
Came gently to me as I gently lay,
and "follow me," he said, "I am the way."

Then speaking thus, he led me far above,
And there beneath a canopy of love,
Crosses of divers shape and size were seen,
Larger and smaller than my own had been.

And there was one most beauteous to behold,
A little one with jewels set in gold;
Ah! this, methought, I can with comfort wear,
For it will be an easy one to bear.

And so one little cross I quickly took,
But all at once, my frame beneath it shook;
The sparkling jewels they were fair to see,
But far too heavy was their weight for me.

This may not be, I said, and looked again
To see if there was any here could ease my pain;
But one by one I passed them slowly by,
Till on a lovely one I cast my eye.

But Oh! that form so beautiful to see
Soon made its hidden sorrow known to me;
Thorns lay beneath those flowers and color fair,
Sorrowing I said "This cross I may not bear."

And so it was with each and all around,
Not one to suit my need could there be found:
Weeping, I laid each heavy burden down,
As my Guide gently said, "No cross, no crown."

At length to him I raised my saddened heart,
He knew its sorrows, bids its doubt depart:
"Be not afraid," he said, "But trust in me
My perfect love shall now be shown to thee."

And then with lightened eye and willing feet,
Again I turned, my earthly cross to meet;
With forward footsteps, turning not aside,
For fear some hidden evil might betide.

And these in the prepared, appointed way
Listening to hear and ready to obey—
A cross I quickly found of plainest form,
With only words of love inscribed thereon.

With thankfulness I raised it from the rest,
And joyfully acknowledged it the best
The only one of the many there
That I could feel was good for me to bear.

And while I thus my chosen one confessed,
I saw a heavenly brightness on it rest:
And as I bent, my burden to sustain,
I recognized my own old cross again.

But oh! how different did it seem to be
Now I had learned its preciousness to see!
No longer could I unbelieving say,
"Perhaps another is a better way."

Ah, no! henceforth my own desire shall be,
That he who knows me best should choose for me,
And so, what'er his love sees best to send,
I trust its best, because he knows the end.

"For my thoughts are not your thoughts, saith the Lord:
For I know the thoughts that I think toward you,
Thoughts of peace and not of evil,
To give you an expected end" (Jer. 29:11).

And when that happy time shall come
Of endless peace and rest,
We shall look back upon our path,
And say, "It was the best." Sel. by May Moore.

SANCTIFIED THROUGH TRUTH

John 17:17-19

The social correspondent for the Bereans has asked me to write an exhortation for its columns. I choose this topic because of its great need in the church body, which seems to be about as much at sea as the children of Israel were near the close of their journey through the wilderness. If there ever has been a time since the days of Joshua and Caleb when faithful and uncompromising servants of God were needed, it is now. In the last two or three decades false doctrine, and principles of unrighteousness as its natural outgrowth, has multiplied at an alarming rate. The world is unthankful and unholy and strides on to ruin and destruction with rapid acceleration. Only the promised return of the Christ prevents the total destruction of all flesh. The people of God are not surprised at this condition. The world sneers at the warning as it did in Noah's day, and because of the prevalence of parallel wickedness shall not know until the day of distruction suddenly comes. And in the church, unity will never come so long as one error is preached to rectify another error, or when fundamental truth is smotheed out, whatever the purpose may be. We will do well do bear in mind that Jehovah never has paid much attention to numbers in accomplishing any desired work through man's instrumentality. It is faith that justifies, and the truth with the atoning blood of Christ that sanctifies. Justification precedes, but does not guarantee, sanctification. To sanctify is to set apart, and when we are called by the gospel, the setting apart begins. Suffering does not depend so much upon the amount of dross, but rather the stubbornness in the candidate to yield. Progress depends upon willingness to crucify self-pride, walk in humbleness before God and man, and recognizing the hand of God, whether it be in approbation or chastisement.

If a theory or even a circumscribed tenet of doctrine be championed which runs counter to the truth the continued advocacy of it brings condemnation and ultimate destruction. The law of Christ is explicit relative to the Christian's attitude toward the world, its govenrmental functions, etc., and those who have thought Christians owe nothing to the state, which is ordained to hold in check or restrain evil-doers until the time comes for the power and dominion to be given to the restored seed of the woman, have need to exerise great caution in arrinving at conclusions. Christ's yoke is easy and his burden is light. It is the incorporation of false ideas into the doctrines of Christ, and the burden of upholding them which brings on unnecessary suffering and grief. The self-made laws of the Gentiles provide for the right of petition and redress for established bodies which, if made use of, may bring temporary humiliation in the sight of men; but if it be according to the will of God through Christ it will come to light as the noonday sun and the honor and praise of the truly wise shall fill the heart with joy and gladness. If the Christian's life, property and all are placed at the disposal of the powers of darkness, what has he left for Christ? Is it not the part of wisdom and godly fear to be careful what we teach our brother lest he and ourselves come into condemnation. God is a God of oneness, a God of truth. He put truth into clean, willing vessels and guards it zealously. We are vindicated or condemned, in a measure day by day, in proportion to the truth or error in us. We can wriggle and squirm all we please, but Jehovah's estimate of the value of the children of men is registered in them by his measuring stick of truth. The following stanze and chorus of the hymn, "A Clean Heart," is beautiful and true when divested of the application orthodoxy gives to visions:

Yea, may as this heart is clean
May larger visions yet be mine
For mirrored in its depths are seen
The things divine, the things sublime

LITERARY WORK

Literary work among our Bereans should be encouraged to the utmost. The past year the work among our Bereans has been very good still there are lots of members who have not even tried to write an article. We find we must impress upon the president of the various state Berean societies the necessity of writing articles. So often we receive a letter from some member who has been asked to write an article informing us they cannot write anything worth while; of course they cannot if they take that attitude, and do not try to write. Our state president of each Berean Society should insist upon every member in their state to write an article at least once each year. They all follow the Berean booklet and anyone can write an article from one of these outlines. In Illinois our state president insists that each Berean write an article. She appointed a committee. It is the duty of this committee to ask by person or letter each Berean in the state for their article. The chairman of the committee receives a list of the names of the Bereans of the state from the president. Each member of the committee does the writing or asking whenever it may be one month, receiving the names from the chairman of the committee so that no member is asked twice in the same year. This means that one member of the committee is working at a time, and each member has to work only every third month. Although many articles are received, many more could be written, if the Bereans would respond more often to the call of the committee. If the chairman of each Berean Class would insist upon each member writing an article frequently, and have them read in class, each Berean would become accustomed to writing, and they would find it would not be so difficult, besides they could always send this article for our column, and when they were asked for an article it would be ready.

Of course we will not all become great writers, but how do we know if we will be able to write or not if we do not try. Some of us do not think we can write at all become the best writers, often we try and find it more easy to write each time we try. Practice makes perfect, and we cannot expect to write big articles if we do not start early to write small ones and acquire the habit of expressing our thoughts in words.

In James 1:22-27 it reads: "But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only deceiving your own selves. For if any be a hearer of the word and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass. For he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was. But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed. If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain. Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father, is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

Now Bereans, does this not mean us in our literary work as well as anything else? Remember our literary work is the binding together of a small family or church. Many of us live at great distances, but through our literary work we are reading each others writings which is good news to us, because we have the same hope and faith. It gives us different suggestions and thoughts on certain subjects, and keep us studying so we can find out more truth.

Every year some of our faithful writers lay down their pens, and if our literary work is allowed to stop who will take their place? Therefore let us as Bereans do our best to make the rest of 1919 and the first half of 1920 the best year our literary work has experienced. Once started with this determination, each year the work will be carried on with greater success.

An Appeal

To the Brethren, Sisters and Friends of the Truth in Indiana, Greeting:

We all know (or ought to know) that we are greatly in need of having more evangelist work done in our state. I therefore suggested to the Conference, and now I suggest personally to you, that we raise a fund of two or three thousand dollars for that purpose. Let us put a little business into the work by giving $50 and $100 instead of $5 and $10. This is for those who can do this without distressing themselves. If we wanted land or an automobile, or in fact anything else that we really wanted, some would pay much more. Christ said, "Be ye followers of me as dear children," and we learn that he went about seeking to save them that were lost. Are we following his example? Somebody brought the gospel to us, and it is our duty to carry it to others; for faith in, and obedience to the gospel brings salvation; and we all want to be saved and share with Christ in his glory. In order to get the good work started as soon as possible, I suggest that all who can do so send their money or pledge to our Conference Treasurer, Marshall Fogar, Plymouth Ind. May our heavenly Father bless us all in our effort to send out the word of life.

Yours for the Master,

R. C. RAILSBACK.

It is not what you do but what you get done.

We regret to report the loss of Brother Long, who has returned to Roll, Indiana.

During the week we had the pleasure of spending several pleasant days at the home of Brother and Sister Heacock, of Canton, Ohio

This week we have to report the temporary loss of Sister Meldrum, who has gone to Scotland on a protracted visit. On the other hand, we have gained Brother Eugene Miller, who has returned from Camp Meade, Maryland.

We spent last Sunday with the brethren in Salem, Ohio. Other visitors were Brother Ashford Lehman, of Canton; Sister Huggins, of Cleveland; Sisters McCave and Russell, of Atwater; Brother Franks and Sister Heacock, of Canton; and several interested friends from different places. After the morning meeting we drove to the home of Brother and Sister Townsend and all had dinner together at their beautiful country home.

A Megiddo Meeting Described

Sunday evening we attended the Megiddo meeting and heard the pastor, the Rev. Maud Hembree. The church is plain but comfortable, and we were among the auditors unknown and unrecognized. On the rostrum sat Mrs. Hembree, to her left Mrs. Nichols, to her right Mrs. Skeels. Behind these dignitaries was a band, composed almost entirely of women. We tried to make ourselves feel devout and reverent, but in spite of our effort we felt just like we were at a Woman's Suffrage Convention. After the band had played a song and a lesson had been read from the Bible, Mrs. Hembree prayed, omitting the name of Christ entirely from her petitions. Whether this omission was intentional or accidental we do not undertake to say. Mrs. Hembree was formerly a Catholic, Mrs. Nichols, a Christadelphian; Megiddoism therefore is a compound of Nicholism, Catholicism, and Christadelphianism a bad mixture, certainly.

Mrs. Hembree's Sermon

Mrs. Hembree is rather intellectual and, as a speaker, is superior to the usual woman speaker. You could trace some coherence in her address, and method was evident throughout, except in occasional impertinent digressions. The address was conspicuously a most admirable and worthy exposition of Unitarianism. The name of Christ was as completely ignored in the sermon as it had been in the prayer. Any body can die like Christ died, but to live like he lived was the desirable thing, and other Unitarian platitudes, were given out copiously. Sinners were told to quit sinning, and that "a thousand Calvaries could not atone for one sin"! The death of Christ was declared to be a pagan invention, his blood was declared to be a "common thing" (Heb. 10:29), and the Savior was sacrificed to make room for "good works." Salvation by good works, instead of by the Savior, was the burden of the sermon by Mrs. Hembree.

An Interview With Mrs. Hembree

After the sermon we were about to go when Miss Eunice Ingham asked us to remain and meet Mrs. Hembree. Upon being introduced Mrs. Hembree abruptly remarked, "You do not believe the truth at all." This was, to say the least, an unfortunate remark, as it showed that either Mrs. Hembree lacked diplomacy, or was a woman of temper. Cousin Eunice was perceptibly embarrassed by the remark and the people from all parts of the church gathered around us like boys to see a dog fight. They were evidently anxious to see a fight, but their expectation was doomed to disappointment. We were face to face with Unitarian bigotry. Loud-talking, narrow-minded Unitarians cannot provoke the serenity of our southern courtesy. In a very quiet way we talked with Mrs. Hembree a few minutes.

Our Conversation With Mrs. Hembree

"Mrs. Hembree, you say I do not believe the truth; will you illustrate your accusation by citing an instance?" we asked.

"Yes," she replied, "you believe we are saved by the death of Christ."

"I do," was our reply. "The Unitarians say he 'died because he was killed.' Is that your explanation of the death of Christ?"

Here a chorus of voices came to the rescue of Mrs. Hembree. Several talked at the same time. If our judgment is not at fault, and if phrenology does not lie, Mrs. Skeels is the substance behind the shadow. When she nods her head the others move; when she shakes her head they remain still. Mrs. Skeels intervened in the conversation to say, "We are not Unitarians. We believe that Christ is the Son of God." Turning to Mrs. Hembree we asked,

"Do you believe that Christ is literally and really the Son of God?" We said "literally and really" because the Megiddoites spiritualize away almost everything.

"Yes, we do," Mrs. Hembree answered frankly.

"May I ask you, then," I continued, "what Christ's sonship has done for you, which could not have been done were he the son of Joseph?"

"He died as our example," responded Mrs. Hembree.

"That is exactly what Unitarians say. Is that all you say was accomplished by the death of Christ?"

"We are not Unitarians; the record is plain that he is the Son of God."

"My question has nothing to do with the record," I continued. "We both accept the record, and believe that Jesus is the Son of God. I therefore recur to my question. What was accomplished by the death of the Son of God which could not have been accomplished had he been only the son of Joseph?"

There were mutterings again about "the record" but no answer to the question was given. The saving merit of good works had been hit on top of the head, and there was confusion among the advocates of good works. The question was too deep for Unitarians to answer. Entreating them not to get caught in the snares of Unitarianism, we bid them adieu.

Baptism Obsolete With Megiddoites

Rejecting Jesus as Savior, and "boasting" (Rom. 3:27) that each man can save himself by good works, the Megiddoites say with the Unitarians: "Stop giving emphasis to the death of Christ: it can be matched by the death of scores of thousands of other martyrs." The only kind of death which they will allow that Jesus died which has any bearing upon our salvation is a "death to sin" (which, by the way, means that Jesus was a sinner!). "Baptism into his death" therefore must be abolished somehow, and this is the way Megiddoites render baptism obsolete, "Baptism ceased with the gift of the Holy Spirit." It does not seem to occur to them that because the official authority with which the apostles, as the legates of Christ, were clothed to enact a law ceased, that therefore the law remains. No; they reason it the other way. The official authority with which the delegates were invested, who made the Constitution of the United States, perished when it had accomplished the work for which it was given; or rather having accomplished the object of its mission, it devolved back to the sovereigns who delegated it.

Now Megiddoite friends, did the Constitution of the United States perish with the delegated power that made it? Instead of perishing then, it only commenced to be! A Constitution once enacted continues in force until the power that made it shall repeal it; or until it is subverted by a greater power than that which made it unless is shall run out by limitation, having attained the end for which it was instituted. The law of Moses survived the delegated power with which Israel's great legislator made it, nearly fifteen hundred years; and would be in force today had it not been repealed, or run out by limitation. This is equally true of all laws and constitutions, the constitution of Christ not excepted. They remain in full force until overthrown by a greater power; or until the same power that made them shall unmake them. This statement is as valid when applied to one commandment, however small, as when applied to the whole constitution. The smallest commandment being vitalized by the same authority which gives legality to the greatest commandment, must be guarded with the same inviolability, unless it be repealed by the same power that made it. Campbell's translation of Matt. 5:18 enforces this legal fact in a most impressive manner "For indeed I say unto you, heaven and earth shall sooner perish than one iota or one title shall perish without attaining its end."

The Mosaic law survived the death of Moses and the cessation of his official commission. The same is true of the law of Christ as enacted by himself and his legates. Neither the cessation of the delegated power with which the apostles were invested to teach and enforce the law of Christ, nor their death, in any way impaired the force or weakened the law of God. Like Moses Christ was a legate to enact his Father's law. He transferred this power to his apostles, making them his legates or ambassadors (Mark 16:15, 16; 2 Cor. 5:20). Megiddoites are right in saying that the delegated power which established the new covenant ceased with the gifts of the Holy Spirit, after it was founded; but they err in claiming that the law established ceased when it was enacted! Baptism is in the law of Christ, enforced by as positive a commandment as can be found in the New Testament. This commandment stands or falls with all the commandments of Christ (Matt. 28:20). If it has become obsolete, the whole law is void. We repeat once more, it does not follow because the official commission and the gifts of the Holy Spirit by which the apostles confirmed the law of Christ, ceased, that therefore the law itself was abrogated. As well may it be claimed that because the miraculous power by which the word of God was confirmed (Heb. 2:3, 4) ceased when it had attained the end for which it was given, that therefore the word of God ceased with it.

No Saving Merit in Good Works

It is a mistake for a man to moralize on morals unless he has Scripture to back him up. People care very little what any man thinks; his personal opinion is worthless. Now the good works advocated by the Megiddoites are mostly taught by the precepts of men" (Isa. 29:13) instead of the precepts of God (Isa. 28:13). That is, their morality is taught by the traditions of men, which Christ says render their worship of God vain (Matt. 15). "The commandments of men" (Col. 2:22) govern them in both faith and morals, particularly in morals. Marriage, wine, tobacco, amusements, etc., are utterly condemned; and to indulge in any of these things means forfeiture of membership in their church. Yet they quote not one Bible text condemnatory of these things. We may and do have opinions on all of these questions, and conduct ourselves accordingly; but the Megiddoites enact opinions into laws. They agree with a poet who wrote,

Tobacco is an Indian weed,
And the devil sowed the seed:

but they repudiate the word of God which says the Lord created "every plant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field before it grew" (Gen. 2:5). They base morality upon externals rather than internals, and are "Shouting Methodist" with the "shout" left out. They are the descendants of the scribes and pharisees. "All their works (in which they boast so much) they do to be seen of men."

In closing let us suppose that Jesus Christ and his legates held the doctrine of Rome, Unitarians, and Megiddoites: let us suppose they believed men could merit eternal life by their good works: let us suppose that they intended to teach us this doctrine in the Gospels and Epistles. Tell us, we beseech you, if upon this supposition (which is exactly what the before-cited opponents pretend) they ought to have affirmed what they have. Tell us, we pray you, do you believe yourself well and sufficiently instructed in the doctrine of the merit of good works, when you are told, "When you have done all these things ye are unprofitable servants" ? Again, when the example of a miserable publican is proposed to you, who prays, "God be merciful to me a sinner" ! who smites his breast, and dares not lift his eyes to heaven; when he is placed in opposition to a pharisee glorying in his works; and when you are informed the first went down to "his house justified rather than the other"

when you are told. "If it be by grace, it is no more of works, otherwise grace is no more grace; if it be works, it is no more grace, otherwise work is no more work" when you are told, "you are saved by grace through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God" when you are assured you are "justified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, not of works, lest any man should boast" when you hear that "to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness" when you are taught to believe "the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life" tell us, we once more entreat you, can you persuade yourself that Jesus Christ and his apostles, by all these affirmations and declarations, intended to teach that man acquires justification and a right to eternal life by the merit of his works ?

Dear Restitution:

In a recent number of The Restitution there appeared an article the contents of which left a deep impression upon the writer, a paragraph of which is quoted herewith: "I do believe if those who are over us as teachers and to whom we look for guidance, for strength in our weakness, for admonition and encouragement in these days of special trial could realize how we who are 'all alone' away from our Father's family, need their words they would write more often."

What a note of sadness runs through these lines, and how doubly blessed are we who make up the number of the ecclesia in Cleveland in that we are privileged to enjoy all the things denied them, and what greater effort we should all make to hearken unto the appeal to make The Restitution a more helpful and up-building medium for our people, never lacking material to make up its pages.

It is to be deplored that there should be any isolated members of the Church of God. In these perilous times when the days are so fraught with signs indicating the near approach of the Master, we stand more than ever before in need of the association and up-lift which comes from contact with the brethren. It acts as a stimulus to go bravely on in spite of the dangers from without and the temptations from within. In our struggle to be overcomers, how it cheers us to meet with those of like precious faith, whose responsive touch of fellowship thrills and strengthens us.

So our hearts go out to the lonely and isolated ones dwelling apart from the assembly and who are so dependent upon the Church paper as a medium of communication from the brethren scattered abroad, and for the exchange of spiritual thought.

The time is very short indeed; let us try to brighten the hours of the dear ones who live apart because circumstances have so ordered their lives. God bless them and keep them from the evils of the world until he comes.

HANNA M. BARBER

Dearly Beloved in the Lord:

I sometimes wonder if we who are running for the prize of the high calling really appreciate this great privilege. Yes, it is surely a great privilege to be among those who are called of God according to his purpose. To be able to understand the deep things of God in these last days, is wonderful. How happy we who are called the sons of God should be at all times. In everything we should give thanks, and do all that we do to his glory. With the eye of faith we can look through clouds of darkness and see the light that shineth. Without faith we cannot see the light.

Dear brethren, we have an aim in life, a glorious hope to look forward to; a mark to reach. Let us joyfully keep our eye on that mark and keep pressing forward. Our time is limited, and we must not look to the right hand or to the left. Our path is laid out straight and we must not wander out of it, else we might lose sight of the mark altogether.

Yes, we have an aim in view. Not like the aimless mass of humanity that we see surging through the streets, parks, etc. They seem not to know where they are going or why they are here. They loiter along the way and gaze at everything they see, looking for some kind of amusement. Little do they think of their Creator. "O, that men would praise the Lord, for his wonderful love to the children of men."

We are begotten of the spirit at the beginning of our race, and we must not die spiritually. We must live and grow and, in order to do this, we must eat spiritual food. Thousands are starving because of the high prices of food in these last days, but this spiritual food is free to us: "without money and without price" we can get all we want. If we continually feast on this food we will live spiritually until we come to the birth. Glorious day when Christ will come: for then we will be born of the spirit. Then we will be like him and reign with him 1,000 years, after which he will deliver the kingdom to the Father, who will be all in all.

Let us strengthen one another in the most holy faith, and try to see that none who have named the name of Christ depart from the strait and narrow path that leads to life eternal.

May the Lord help us to overcome all the difficulties of this life, and win the victor's crown.

Report of the California Conference

The Conference just ended was largely attended by brethen from the southern and central part of California and Arizona, the latter state being particularly well represented.

Some of the speakers were chosen from outside of our own membership because of their special ability to talk on the subjects chosen.

The Question Box proved to be an enlivening feature of the program.

At the business meeting some changes were made in the officers, J. E. Adamson being chosen President, V. W. Pyatt, Vice-Pres., Earl H. Taber, Secy., C. I. Allard, Treas., A. Grace Steffa, Cor. Secy.

It is the intention to carry on the work next year with more vigor and along broader lines.

NEBRASKA MEETING

The Nebraska State Bereans of the Church of God will meet with the Nebraska State Conference at Omaha, Neb., which begins August 27th. The Bereans will have the afternoon of Saturday August 30th for their program. Considering all the handicaps growing out of the war and the flu, we have some very interesting reports to make. We are preparing a splendid program, and we earnestly desire the presence of all Bereans of the state and other states to meet with our Bereans.

Let us remember we are nearing the end, and let us make all needed sacrifices to get together again, and better prepare ourselves for the coming of the Lord.

GOLDEN TEXT: Philippians 2:9

TRUST IN GOD

As we linger faint and weary
Trav'lers through this vale of tears,
Darkness gathering all around us,
And our courage yields to fear;
Then how joyous is the message,
"Cast thy burdens all on me,
In the hour of sore temptation
As the day thy strength shall be."

When by sickness we are wasted,
Or fierce trials bring us low,
When by trusted friends forsaken
And we sink beneath the blow,
Then the words of love how precious
"Fear not put your trust in me;
If you love and serve me ever,
All shall work for good to thee."

How much love our heavenly Father
On his children has bestowed;
Calling us his sons and daughters,
Fitting us a bright abode.
When we reach those heavenly mansions,
Free from sorrow, care or pain,
We shall know that all our trials,
Were to us eternal gain.

Words of comfort, O how cheering
To the lonely pilgrim band,
Pressing on through mist and darkness,
To that bright and better land.
Courage then, we'll press with vigor,
O'er the strait and narrow way;
For behold! o'er yonder portals
Shines the dawn of endless day.

Trust In God

"The Lord is my rock, and my fortress and my deliverer: the God of my rock; in him will I trust: he is my shield and the horn of my salvation, my high tower, and my refuge, my Savior; thou savest me from violence. I will call on the Lord who is worthy to be praised: so shall I be saved from mine enemies."

When David spake the above words they had a three-fold significance.

First, they acknowledged God as the source of all his victories.

Secondly, they were in thanksgiving to God for his love and merciful kindness.

And thirdly, in them David declared his utter dependence on the Lord and avowed his future servitude. And these three conditions, when well mixed together, melted, and moulded into one word gives us TRUST.

It is the attitude of trust that God calls us to have for him. God wishes us to rely upon him, to lean upon him, to acknowledge his power, his strength, his willingness, and having tested him and found him both able and worthy to offer praise and thanksgiving for his wonderful kindness to us, the unworthy sons of men.

But we are not to stop here. We are commanded to show our appreciation of his love and grace in providing for us a Savior in the person of his only begotten Son, by so living that our friends and neighbors will know that we have been accepted of God, and are his sons and daughters. Our faith in God must be absolute; our acknowledgement of Jesus as "the Christ, the Son of God must be sincere; our acceptance of Jesus as our "wisdom, our righteousness, our sanctification, and our redemption," must be genuine; our hope of the soon return of Jesus to establish the everlasting kingdom of his Father must be without a doubt; our love for our God, our love for his Christ must be so perfect that their love for humanity will be so reflected in us that we will do good to all with whom we come in contact, causing them to shout praises to our God who has loved us, and redeemed us.

This is my conception of what God demands from us if we are to be partakers with Christ of the future blessings of God. David was not ashamed to acknowledge what God had done for him, also to proclaim to the world his dependence on God and the promise of his future obedience. Are we greater than David? Can we afford to do less? I feel that you each will agree with me when I say that there is but one way to please God, and that is by doing his will. "Therefore my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

August

August, originally called Sextilis, as being the sixth month in the pre-Julian Roman year, received its present name from the Emperor Augustus. The preceding month had been called July after Julius Caesar, and the senate thought to propitiate the emperor by conferring a similar honor upon him. August was selected, not as being the natal month of Augustus, but because in it his greatest good fortune had happened to him. In that month he had been admitted to the consulate, had thrice celebrated a triumph, had received the allegiance of the soldiers stationed on the Janiculum, had concluded the civil wars, and had subdued Egypt. As July contained thirty-one days and August but thirty, it was thought necessary to add another day to the latter, in order that Augustus might not be in any way inferior to Julius.

Have you as yet made that good confession and and come out on the Lord's side? If not, the present month is the best of all the year to do so, for "the present moment is our own, the next we never saw;" and no one knows what lies between the present moment and tomorrow.

Our Weekly Puzzle

Herein is our love made perfect, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment, because as he is, so are we in the world. There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love. We love him because he first loved us.

What does "perfect" signify?
What is the meaning of "boldness"?
Who is the "he" in "as he is, so are we"?
What does "fear" mean?
Who is "him" in "we love him, because he first loved us"?
Who wrote the above? Where can the passage be found?
Answer next issue.

Answer to puzzle in last issue:

The passage from which "Be ye holy, for I am holy" is taken, is Leviticus 11:44.

The meaning of "respect of persons" is to have a "preference for one person over another without a just reason;" and this God surely condemns. Of God it is written, "Who will render to every man according to his deeds." See also Rev. 22:12.

"Sojourning" means "dwelling in a place for a short time only." God wishes us to understand that our permanent home is in the future, and shall be with him, and that our present home—our life on earth—is but temporary, that we must not get attached to the things of this world, but long for the coming of Christ and the life that he shall bring.

"Fear," as used in the lesson, signifies "reverence." It is one of the many words where the meaning has completely changed between the time of the translation of the Bible and now.

The passage was written by the apostle Peter, and can be found in 1 Pet. 1:16, 17.

A Loving Word

A loving word is always a safe word. It may, or it may not, be a helpful word to the one who hears it; but it is sure to be a pleasant memory to the one who speaks it. Many a word spoken by us is afterwards regretted; but no word of affectionate appreciation to which we have given utterance finds a place among our sadly remembered expressions. Looking back over our intercourse with our fellow workers, we may regret that we were betrayed into a harsh or hasty or unloving word of censure or criticism in this intercourse; and we may wish vainly that we had the privilege of saying loving words that we might have spoken.

An Essay From 13 Year Old Mary Lee

Matthew 11:25, 26

When we hear people spoken of as wise, we sometimes wonder if they really are. So many times this description of knowledge is used incorrectly. A person may know a great deal, but he may not know the important things or know them at the right time. In the dictionary the word wisdom is expressed as "knowledge properly used."

The Last Prayer

Father, I scarcely dare to pray,
  So clear I see, now it is done,
That I have wasted half my day,
  And left my work but just begun.

So clear I see that things I thought
  Were right or harmless were a sin;
So clear I see that I have sought,
  Unconscious, selfish aims to win.

So clear I see that I have hurt
  The souls I might have helped to save,
That I have slothful been, inert,
  Deaf to the calls thy leaders gave.

In outskirts of thy kingdom vast,
  Father, the humblest spot give me;
Let me the lowliest task thou hast;
  Let me repentant, work for thee. Selected by Sister Avery.

Sunday Morning Address

Delivered Aug. 3rd, 1919

By

Brother W. S. Tomlinson

Putting on the Lord Jesus

IT IS recorded that our Savior said, "Every scribe instructed unto the kingdom of God is like unto a man that is an householder, which bringing forth out of his treasure things new and old." "Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord hath made ruler over his household to give meat in due season."

It would seem from this that one who essays to speak for God and Christ, must not only have a message to deliver, but he must also give it at the appropriate time. It seemed to me as if the words of our brother last first day were very timely. I was deeply impressed with the thought that Jesus had to work out his salvation. Because he loved righteousness and hated iniquity, God exalted him. Therefore I decided to call your attention to duties devolving upon us as children of God.

As a foundation for a few remarks along the line indicated, your attention is directed to the 11th 12th 13th and 14th verses of the chapter read, Romans 13. That they may be more impressed upon our minds I will read them again: "And that knowing the time that now it is high time to awake out of sleep; for now our salvation is nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light. Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof."

It seems as though these words were the summing up of what the apostle had said in this and the previous chapter, and I trust you will read and ponder them at your leisure, for only by so doing can we get into the writer's spirit. After reminding us of the duties and obligations devolving upon us as the called of God, he would have us understand the time we live in, and if we knew the time, then, we ought to know that it is now high time, full time, that now is the day of salvation that we have no claim upon the future; tomorrow will come, but it may not come for us; therefore we ought to "awake out of sleep." What the emergency, do you ask? Why, the salvation we registered a claim to, when we believed and obeyed the gospel, is nearer now than it was then. If we were wide awake then and in earnest then, we ought to be more so now.

Of the kind of sleep we are to awake from, it is only necessary to say that it is a spiritual drowsiness, moral obtuseness, a blunted or dulled condition of the moral perception which is so deadly an enemy to vital godliness. Such a condition will keep anyone from perceiving the imminence of the time, and the need of making necessary preparation. From such a state of carnal security the apostle would have us awake. On awaking from natural sleep there is usually some work to be done, some duties to perform; and as in the natural so in the spiritual. As we prepare ourselves for our daily work by putting aside our night clothes and putting on day apparel, so the apostle would have us, as children of God, "cast off the works of darkness and put on the armor of light." What he means by casting off the works of darkness, we may learn from the figure here used and also in his other writings. In Eph. 4 he says, "Put off concerning the former behavior the old man, which is corrupt according to deceitful lusts"; and in Colossians we are told to "put off the old man with his deeds." Romans 6:6 says: "Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed."

Oregon, Illinois

Works of darkness, then represent the course of life of those who are alienated from the life of God through ignorance. Such a course of life is unbecoming to a follower of the Lord Jesus. Oh, beloved, let us who are of the day cast off the works of darkness, cease from the practice of them, detest them, abhor them, have no more to do with them. The injunction to cast off the works of darkness is immediately followed by the command to put on the armor of light, which we understand to mean the renewed mind which results from a transfer of the affections and sympathies from the things of this world to the things of Christ. Light is the symbol of intelligence. James 1:7 informs us that God is the Father of lights. Jesus said he was the light of the world (John 8: 12). In Eph. 5:8 the saints are styled "lights in the Lord," and that to which we are called is the inheritance of the saints in light. Darkness has been called negative and light positive. Wherever light enters it makes itself known and felt.

We witness an illustration of this every day of our lives with the return of the light of day. Nothing in nature is so cheering as light. As natural light becomes visible through the eye, so spiritual light is said to enter through the eyes of our understanding. It is only by letting in the light that we can comprehend spiritual things. Then we get the mind, spirit, and disposition of him who said. "I am the light of the world." Light dispels darkness, and if we truly put on the armor of light the darkness in us must vanish. Introduce the light of life into one being and he is a changed creature—not physically of course, but mentally and morally. His mind has been changed: he has been converted. This same apostle says, "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature; old things have passed away, behold, all all things are new." The armor of light so changes one that those with whom he comes in contact, begin to inquire. Is this so and so. You know how it was with the apostle Paul after his conversion: those who heard him speak said, "Is not this he who persecuted the church ?"

Having put on the armor of light, the apostle proceeds to define the course of action we ought to pursue: "Let us walk honestly, as in the day;" and then as if drawing us to himself I imagine him saying, "the night is passed for us; being children of light we belong to the coming day. It is now broad daylight and there is work to be done." Did not the Master say, "Occupy till I come" ? The world only sees the religion of Jesus as they see it in his professed followers. We ought to be living epistles read and known of all men. Don't carry on the works of darkness any longer, it will surely be detected by your brethren. You are only deceiving yourself if you do. You ought to show by your conduct and action that you belong to the coming day. Yes, you ought to walk as if that day had actually come.

After mentioning some things prominent among the works of darkness immediately follow the words, "But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lust thereof." This is the climax of his argument. He did not tell us at once to put on the Lord Jesus, but step by step he has led us up to it. First, we were to awake because of the time; then he would have us put off night-clothes and put on the armor of light; and then to have us complete he would have us put on the Lord Jesus Christ.

Throughout the Scriptures the figure of clothing or "putting on" is frequently used in reference to both good and evil. Man in the first place tried to cover himself with fig leaves and then God stepped in and clothed him with skins. After this the figurative use of clothing is very frequent. In 2 Chron. 6:41, we read, "Let thy priests be clothed with salvation." "I put on righteousness, and it clothed me" (Job 29:14). "Let them be clothed with shame" (Psa. 35:36). "The Lord is clothed with strength" (Psa. 93:1). "Let thy priest be clothed with righteousness" (Psa. 132:9). "He hath clothed me with garments of salvation" (Isa. 61:10). "Put on thy strength. O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments. O Jerusalem" (Isa. 52:1). "Bring forth the best robe and put it upon him" (Luke 15:22). "Put on the armor of light" (Rom. 13:12). "This corruption must put on incorruption" (1 Cor. 15:53). "Put on the whole armor of God" (Eph. 6:16) "Put on the new man" (Col. 3: 12). It shows that something in addition to what we had, or were before, is to be taken on as a garment; something to make us appear or act differently from what we did before; something suitable to some office or service. The king put on his royal robe: the priest his priestly robe, the soldier his military uniform: the robe or clothes altering for the time being the individual, and investing him with a different character, suitable to some service or office. Clothing is not merely to cover uncomliness and shame, but also to give weight and dignity, and to represent an office. We are told to put on Christ. He is represented as a robe. He covers us so that no part of our former selves is seen, and in looking at us God only sees us in Christ. That is the reason of our being made accepted in the beloved.

But there is another phase to the subject that ought to be carefully considered. You may have already thought of it and are ready to ask, How is it that Paul could say in the beginning of this letter to the church at Rome, that they were called of Jesus Christ, beloved of God, called to be saints, and invoke upon them peace from God the Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ; and then to these saints or sanctified ones and himself included, say: "Let us cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light." Now what does he mean ? Does he mean the sanctified ones were sanctified before they cast off the works of darkness ? Then what does he mean when he tells these sanctified ones to put on the Lord Jesus Christ after reminding them in the sixth chapter that they had been baptized into Jesus Christ ? We must answer one question at a time. You know in the commission given to the apostles it is distinctly stated that he who believes the gospel and is baptized shall be saved, provided, as elsewhere stated, he maintains his confidence and patient continuance in well doing. To the Galatians it is said, "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ" (Gal. 3:27) The same Paul put away the sins of the past by baptism into Christ. With this fact definitely settled that Christ is put on at baptism, we must seek to find out what he means when he tells a company of baptized believers to put on the Lord Jesus Christ. It seems to me we can find an answer to this question in his own writings. In the 7th chapter of this same letter he confesses that although he delighted in the law of God after the inward man, there was another law of his mind. To the Galatians he wrote, "Through the law I am dead to the law, that I might live unto God. I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live: yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." Young's translation of Col. 3:5 is, "Put to death then, your members that are upon the earth." This is what made Paul cry out, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from this body of death ?" a body doomed to die—an organism not yet changed, whose members warred against the law of his changed or converted mind. Keep in mind also that it was this same Paul who said, "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection"; and then connect this with the words of Jesus in Matt. 15 where he shows that all that defiles one is from the heart—the mind and affections, and then you can see the nature of the warfare the Christian has to wage, and the powerful and persistent enemy he has to contend with, is the flesh.

If like Paul, our hearts were right when we were baptized, then like him we were justified by faith and have peace with God; like him we must keep our bodies under; like him we must fight the good fight of faith. And here is another lesson of great importance: besides the legal standing obtained by baptism into Christ, and the transfer of ourselves to him; that condition must be maintained. So I apprehend that the putting on of Christ enjoined in our text, is his moral excellence, his godlike disposition, his pure mind, his holy character, which involves a life-long putting on of Christ, a growing up into him and becoming more and more like him.

In view of the nearness of the salvation we expect, and in view of the intense interest Paul manifested to arouse the sleepers, would it now be to our eternal interest to ask, How do we stand; are we awake or asleep ? What if the Master should return suddenly, as he said he would, and find us with our lamps gone out and no time to buy more oil ? If we are not deeply solicitous this morning to be covered from head to feet by the Lord Jesus, I am afraid there is something the matter. If we are not striving daily to live to him, it is evident that we are not dead to sin, and the flesh is asserting itself, and that too right on the brink of salvation when there is barely time to be made complete in Christ.

Deeply conscious that I must wage a constant warfare with myself, that my way and my will must be subjected to Christ's or else I will never be made meet to partake of the inheritance of the saints in light; my heart goes out in love and sympathy for you all in this same conflict, this war against the flesh: and I pray that we may never become indifferent to any of the means given us to stablish, strengthen, and settle us in our blessed hope. May God in mercy add his blessing to whatever of truth may have been said. Amen.

Paul's Desire

To Depart and be With Christ

Phil. 1:23

In this verse and the two preceding it are those often quoted to support the belief of inherent immortality, especially the belief of entering into happiness at the time of death, let us consider them together. They read:

"For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. But if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labor: yet what I shall choose I wot not.

"For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart and to be with Christ; which is far better" (Phil. 1:22, 23).

By reading this first chapter of Philippians from the beginning, we learn from it some of the facts relating to the circumstances at that time, grasp the close relationship established between the church at Philippi and Paul and his fellow workers, feel some of the depth of gratitude and earnest desires Paul shows he felt. This not only clears up some of the seeming difficulty, but we reach the thought of what is really meant by "laying down our lives for the brethren" referred to by John (1 John 3:16).

The Circumstances

By the 7th verse we find that these Philippian brethren shared both in Paul's labor and in the dishonor he bore for the gospel's sake. He writes: "Ye are all partakers of my grace": "both in my bonds and in the defense and confirmation of the gospel." Notice how close this relationship had been by reading the 4th chapter of Philippians, verses 10 to 16 inclusive

We go on to the 12th and 13th verses of chapter one, and he explains that the things which happened to him, the bonds, imprisonment, persecution and "the loss of all things" which he suffered, turned out to be for the furtherance of the gospel, as it gave it more publicity, for the brethren had preached, or witnessed to it with greater boldness despite the bitter opposition then existing (vss. 14 to 18 inclusive).

Paul's Point of View

The furtherance of the preaching of the gospel and the faithfulness of those believing it was Paul's purpose in life. The consequences, being cast into prison, or the possibility of facing a death sentence did not in the least affect him as to that purpose. The way Paul looked at these results was that "Christ is preached and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice. For I know;" he was perfectly confident, "for I know that this" the antecedent, the increased preaching of the gospel—"this shall turn to (result in) my salvation, through your prayer and the supply of the spirit of Jesus Christ" (vss. 18, 19).

Yet, with his strong confidence, we see Paul recognizing the need of his brethren, their co-operation in his labor, their prayers; notice his fervent desire is: "According to my earnest expectation and my hope that" (1) that he might not be ashamed in anything; (2) "that with all boldness, as always, so now also" (though in bonds) "Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death" (vs. 20).

Paul is determined, there is no question in his purpose, under either of these two possible conditions, it is to magnify, to honor Christ; but he now comes to a point where there is a question in his mind, he looks at both sides of it, verse 21: (1) "For me to live is Christ," to live, his cause shall then be magnified; (2) "and" for me "to die is gain" to Christ—his cause shall then be magnified. "But if I live in the flesh," that is, if I continue to live in this present condition and times, "this," this what? This same purpose—to preach the gospel, to extol the name of the Lord, "this is" (or shall be) "the fruit of my labor yet what I shall choose I wot not. For I am in a strait betwixt two." Whether it be by life or by death, he weighed the two possibilities, the gospel would be promoted and Christ exalted in either case; which should he ask the brethren to pray for? "Having a desire to depart, and" having a desire "to be with Christ." And we need not wonder at his desire. His life filled with suffering, he would welcome even death, which would give him rest from the conquest. To be with Christ in his kingdom to Paul meant being faithful to death; he did not know just what might await him in the unknown future trials, should his then present life be continued, so in his meditation he earnestly desired to be with Christ. To depart as a faithful witness from a scene of trouble into peaceful rest appealed to Paul, but, counterbalancing his desire there was one thing more to be considered.

Paul's Decision

Once more Paul looks at the question, "For me to live is Christ" to live, and with an unselfishness that he alone could show in love for his brethren he quickly turns from his desire to a triumphant decision (vs. 24). "Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you." That settles the matter with Paul, no longer a wish or a doubt of choice, but in this most trying time he "esteems his brethren better than himself." "To abide in the flesh is more needful for you. And having this confidence, I know." Certain now what to pray for, and assured that the prayers of the church and his own would be granted, he says, "I know that I shall abide and continue with you all for your furtherance and joy of faith" (vss. 24, 25).

That Paul did continue his work with the church a little longer we know, for about two years later we find him saying, his whole work completed, "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand." From the rest of the verse we see that to Paul "to depart" from the conflict of life—to die meant the completing or the laying down of his work: to be with Christ to live in immortality to him meant the taking up of a greater work in glory and honor, for he continues: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing" (2 Tim. 4:6-8). Risen in immortality not only Paul's, but the desire of the faithful of all ages shall be fully satisfied, for have they not the promise that "when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory"?

Christian Sonship

NEITHER because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children, but in Isaac shall thy seed be called. That is they which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God, but the children of the promare counted for the seed (Rom. 9:7, 8).

"Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made." Who is the seed? "And to thy seed which is Christ" (Gal. 3:16). Hence the fulfilment of the promise can come only through Christ. "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." "And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise" (Gal. 3:26, 29).

Whether Jew or Gentile, all must come into the heirship through Christ, and not through natural descent. The Scripture says all are under sin (the whole world, "that the principle of faith through Christ might be given to him that believeth" (Gal. 3:21, 22).

All who accept Christ in this gospel age compose the body of Christ, and are joint heirs of the promise, and all one in Christ, by faith in the gospel. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

"He that heareth my word and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life" (John 5:24). "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me, and I give unto them eternal life and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand."

What a blessed assurance to know that when we have given up all for Christ we belong to his body, and are one with him, therefore secure. "No man can pluck them out of my hand:" these are Christ's own words. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God." From the moment we believe him and have been made new creatures by his precious blood we are his for all eternity. We have been given this free gift of salvation: we know we belong to God; we have his word for it. "No man can pluck them out of my hand." "For sin shall not have dominion over you, for ye are not under the law but under grace" (Rom. 6:14).

What a mistake to think we must still work and strive to perfect ourselves in good deeds in order to be worthy. We are saved by the grace of God, but not for our goodness or worth. Not that we are free from sin. "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us;" but because of our faith we are saved and have life everlasting. "For by grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God" (Eph. 2:8). Thank God we do not have to work for salvation, but our reward is another thing to be considered. "According as our work shall be." O that I might make greater sacrifice from day to day in the service of my Lord! "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies, a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service" (Rom. 12:1). It is the Holy Spirit that draws us toward God. The desire to accept Christ and belong to him, is the work of the Spirit striving with us. It may be years before we give ourselves up to the still small voice, and present our bodies a living sacrifice unto God. Then comes the joy and peace derived from the hope of a future, glorious life of bliss which defies description. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things that God hath prepared for them that love him." And as we study the Holy Book the meaning of the Scriptures is made clear to us by the spirit, and we wonder we have never understood it before. "But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him, neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." But ye who are the sons of God, and are led by his spirit, have the mind of Christ; and and these things are made clear in a most wonderful way. Brethren, we may all serve God in some way, and thus earn our reward. The most lowly and ignorant among us may give the glad tidings to the world. When we carry our Bibles let us carry them in plain sight, for the world to see that we are the followers of the Lord. I consider that, in itself, a sermon. Let us not be careless or neglectful in our service to God. We can each one of us, do some kind act, or speak a word of cheer and comfort to the needy ones all around us; and he who knows and sees all things will write our names in the Lamb's book of life. The good we do our fellow men, no matter how small the service, will be rewarded. "Will there be any stars in my crown?" Dear ones, we may all have a few stars in our crowns. Praise God! "For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward."

"And behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

Bereans—Attention!

The Berean books are ready for use the first of October. The Bereans have tried for years to have all of the societies begin the same book at the same time. In this way it is much easier to estimate the number of books needed for each issue.

This can never be done unless some of the societies are willing to sacrifice a little in giving up an unfinished book. If you have had ten cent's worth of use from your book, will you do this?

There has come a complaint from societies which meet every two weeks, that they study so much of the time in first principles. These are necessary in each book on acount of beginners in the work.

As the books can never be finished by such societies in the given time, it has been suggested by the book committee that they skip the lessons that are repititious and take the lessons that interest them most.

Enough societies meet every week to warrant ninety lessons for two years' use. Please order now and begin in October.

LEILA WHITEHEAD, PRES.

Nebraska Conference Notice

The 33rd Annual Conference of the Church of God in Nebraska will be held in the Eagle's Hall, Florence Addition, Omaha, Neb., Aug. 27th to 31st. We will have the use of the entire building, the lower rooms being fitted up for dining purposes. Good speakers will be in attendance and Bible lessons each day by competent teachers. Sleeping rooms will be free, and meals reasonable, cheaper than at home. We urge every one that possibly can to attend this meeting. It will be full of good things for every one.

Brother and Sister Clarence Doll report the death of their son Harold, Aug. 12th, 1919, at the age of four years, five months, and fourteen days.

Cleveland Miscellanies

Brother and Sister Charles Moore, two faithful and valued believers, have moved to Garrettsville, Ohio.

Brother Harold Baker, whose ill health has been previously reported, has moved into the suburbs of the city in the hope of finding rest and help.

Sister Jackson has had an operation, and will be in the hospital for several days. With her we indulge the hope of her complete restoration to health.

Visitors since last report: Brother Alfred Smith, of Monroeville, Ohio; Brother Alfred Titman, of Detroit, Michigan; Sister McClure, of Pittsburg, Pa., and Brother Franks, of Canton, O.

Sister McClure, formerly of our body, but who has lived in Pittsburg, Pa., for the past year, is now moving to Columbus, Ohio. We commend her as a worthy Sister to Brother and Sister Ernest Blyth, who are residents of Columbus.

Conscientious Objectors

ONE of the things hard to account for is the attitude of Christian governments in perpetuating the sufferings of Christian men in government prisons, who had conscientious objection to war, and who were averse to taking any active part in its deadly doings. England has made a record with these men that ill comports with the attitude which one might expect a Christian government to show to Christian subjects. And we are sorry to admit that our own government has followed a like course and made a similar record.

It is well that strong men in England are uttering a protest, and it is to be hoped that the agitation will be heard in Downing Street, and in Washington.

Dr. Jowett, formerly of New York, but now minister of Westminster Chapel, London, recently had this to say in one of his sermons:

"It ought to be possible to find a tribunal that can distinguish between treachery and principle. This is not a day when England can afford to shut her consciences in prison. There are men now in prison, serving long terms at hard labor, before whom I would take off my hat, and they are placed alongside of life-long criminals, often in solitary confinement. A tribunal can be found which will discriminate between the coward, seeking shelter from danger, and the idler refusing to share the burden of task, and the men—with martyr's blood in their veins who suffer because of their conscience. I would be false to myself and to my congregation if I failed to urge immediate action by our government looking toward their release."

The Editor of the "Gospel Messenger," the organ of the Brethren, has this to say concerning the experience of men in their own body:

"A number of our own people, with martyr blood in their veins, are suffering imprisonment.

"We have a godly elder—a good, righteous man, of high standing, an honor to any country—who said unthoughtedly that it is wrong to furnish money to buy bullets, with which to kill people. He was arrested, tried before a court, and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in the Federal Prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. The authorities, later on, recognized the enormity of the sentence, and reduced it to one year and one day. Perhaps, under the war excitement that then prevailed, the brother's assertion was not a wise statement to make. But think for a moment of the severe punishment inflicted! A crazed murderer, who killed his wife, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment for his crime. Here was a good, God-fearing, honest, intelligent man, with a long life of righteousness behind him—he is about sixty years old—sentenced to ten years of cruel imprisonment with criminals of the worst character, simply because he expressed an opinion he held. He never committed a crime. Surely the sentence for saying those few words was beyond all reason—too severe.

"God will not hold us guiltless if we fail to lift our voices against such action by our government, and do our best to have our good people released from prison. Some of our conscientious brethren, who could not bear arms, contrary to the doctrine of our Divine Teacher, are in prison today. Honest, godly men are compelled to associate with criminals of the darkest dye. We most sincerely hope that our government will release these good men, who are just as true and as loyal as are those who took up arms to slay others. They felt it were better to obey Christ and suffer imprisonment than to violate his divine law, his teaching and his example of peace.

"In the War of the Revolution our church held the same views, conscientiously, as we now hold against going to war. One of our leaders, Elder Christopher Saur, was arrested and taken before General Washington, at Valley Forge, Pa. When he explained his faith to the great general, he at once released him, believing that a man had a right to his conscientious faith. In the Civil War our people were relieved from service because of their being conscientiously opposed to war. This privilege was afforded them on the part of the Federal Government, as well as on the part of the Southern Confederacy. A small sum of money had to be paid, but no one suffered as some have suffered in this late war."

Forecasting from this what the probable outcome of general military training would be, a writer in the "Chicago Tribune" says:

"Human beings will always and increasingly have conscientious objections to military service, and society must decide their fate. If military training is made compulsory, let us clearly understand before hand all that it implies. There will be rebellious boys who won't put on the uniform. What are we going to do with them? Are we willing to destroy them body and soul? Shall their verdicts differ with the temper of their judges, and their jailers have free rein to torture them in jail, or shall they suffer a definite prison sentence and still be treated like human beings?"

We hope some one who has access to the facts, or who can get the sworn testimony of those who have suffered, and suffered in truth for conscience sake, will yet place this matter in its true light before the reading public in both Great Britain and this country. It would serve as a restraint on the whole business of future militarism, at least where there yet remains a true Christian conscience that still beats to the spirit and the standards of primitive Christianity. F. L. Piper, Editor of "The World Crisis, Aug. 6, 1919.

Ingratitude

Ingratitude seems to be the most popular sin in the world. We find it in the home as is evidenced in the child toward the parent; in the church as in brother to brother, and in the world as toward God, its benefactor. The sacred page is replete with instances of man's ingratitude for benefits conferred. He is prone to forget his mercies and benefits and to murmur at the least chastening. The daily bread that nourishes him, health that makes life joyous, friendships which cheer, these he considers as his birthright, and it hardly occurs to him that they should be received with thanksgiving.

It is but human to take all our blessings for granted and as a matter of course. "If you search the world around, among all choice spices, you shall scarcely meet with the frankincense of gratitude. It ought to be as common as the dew-drops that hang upon the hedges in the morning: but alas, the world is dry of thankfulness to God."

In reviewing the history of the Israelites from the time of their enslavement in Egypt, we find multiplied evidences of their ingratitude to Jehovah for all his tender solicitude and provision of their material as well as spiritual welfare. Any blessing vouchsafed to him was one of the "sure mercies of David." The Jews often forgot the benefits bestowed upon them by God and transferred the honor due to him to the strange gods of their idolatrous neighbors, and as a punishment for their ingratitude they were placed under a foreign yoke. Always a stiff-necked and haughty people, they stand today as a living monument of God's mercy and forbearance.

The estimates of gratitude and ingratitude do not vary much from age to age. Coming down through the centuries to the time of our Lord's ministry, we find this same display of ingratitude. And it came to pass that as he entered a certain village on his way to Jerusalem, he met ten lepers. They petitioned him to cleanse them, and he responded by telling them to go and show themselves to the priests. As they journeyed, they were made whole and went on their way rejoicing. But only one returned to thank and praise him for his act of compassion and mercy. Where were the nine? Gone on their way remembering no more the thing which had been done unto them. The incident suggests that ninety per cent of those who are recipients of God's blessings are more or less lacking in gratitude.

It is not alone our material wefare that God has made provision for, but he offers to a dying world the gift of eternal life through his Son, and how is it received? With scorn and indifference on the part of the majority of mankind. It is only the few down through the centuries that have accepted of his offer and in whom gratitude abounds for his great love and thoughtfulness of them in making it possible to enjoy life for evermore.

The worldly mind takes everything as it comes without any thought of its divine source; the spiritual mind attributes everything to its heavenly origin. "Where does the corn come from?" From the ground, says the materialist. "From the Father of [illegible]" says the Christian, and there is a world of difference between the two view points. The spiritual mind sees in every fact a blessing and in every possession a gift, and in every happening a divine influence.

It is in praise we draw near to him. Oh, that men would praise him for his wonderful goodness and his mighty acts in their behalf! Let us not be wanting in this respect, dear brothers and sisters, but daily lift our hearts in gratitude to him who is the author of all good and the source of every blessing, for we of all peoples have most cause to be grateful.

MINNIE McILRATH.

Church Notes

Deacon Rich was not particular how God's house looked, inside or out, but had to have everything up to date around his own home.

Brother Howler always insisted on the adoption of his views on all occasions brought up before the church, and never gave in for the majority. "The old guard dies but never surrenders," was a favorite quotation of his.

Brother Fuss never attended Sunday School. However, he admitted that it might be all right for little children, and old women of both sex.

Sister Scold never sent her pastor word when she was sick; wasn't he supposed to find out himself? But for weeks afterward, Sister Scold would tell all the neighbors how her pastor, mind you, had neglected her during her illness.

Brother Grumpy never encouraged his pastor, Brother Faithful, but was constantly speaking of the good doctor's faults to others. No sermon ever helped Brother Grumpy, and if it had he wouldn't let the preacher know it for fear it would give him a swelled head.

Brother Selfish never tried to bring anyone to church with him. He wasn't taking any chances on overcrowding the edifice.

Brother Ichabod never showed his face inside the door—unless it was to attend a funeral.

If Brother Slack did come he was sure to come late.

If too wet or too dry, too hot or too cold, Brother Easyman wouldn't even think of coming.

Whenever Brother Touchy saw any one taking hold and helping carry on any of the church work, he was sure to find fault and accuse them of trying to show off.

Brother Gloomy generally stayed away from prayer meeting, but when he did come always had a frown on his face, and was as silent as a sphinx.

Brother Spout never prayed for his pastor or fellow members. Perhaps he thought it might hurt them.

Sister Pride treated the pastor very coldly if he didn't call at her home as often as she thought he should. Of course, the pastor had nothing particular to do and could have called oftener!

If a stranger showed her face in the congregation, Sister Straightlace was careful not to shake hands with her or to invite her to come again.

Brother M. T. Head refused to subscribe for The Restitution. He found it cheaper to borrow his neighbor's copy.

Brother Pope wanted to run the church. The present church encumbents had been elected by the devil, and a change was needed!

Brother Lazy believed in letting the pastor do all the work. Wasn't that what they hired him for?

Brother Tightwad, the treasurer, saw to it that the pastor's salary was always behind. He believed that a preacher ought to board in heaven though he had to live on earth.

Sister Faintheart always occupied one of the rear seats. She wouldn't go up in front for fear people might think she was conceited.

Sister Fearful never joined in while the congregation was singing. She was afraid she would be heard if she opened her mouth.

Brother Crusty made a practice of bringing his telescope to the services. No, he wasn't interested in the stars of the heavens, but in the faults of heaven's ambassador. Brother Crutsy didn't pose as a carping critic, but he had made a study of elocution and knew something about homeletics, so naturally he was the proper person to diagnose the faults of the pastor, and instruct the people as to what a sermon should be and how it should be delivered.

Brother Smallman never spoke to any individual about the truth. Why should he do personal work? Didn't he help pay the pastor?

Brother Stingy always left his pocket book at home. However, he was willing his fellow members should give as much as they pleased to the benevolence of the church. Nothing mean about him. No, sir!

When he thought everything was working harmoniously, Brother Stinger would try to "start something"—and he generally succeeded. He didn't believe in letting the church go to the "bow-wows," and die of dry rot! He was a regular Samson. You remember Samson killed a thousand Philistines with the jaybone of an ass. Well, in every church row since then, the bone of contention has been the jawbone. And Brother Stinger surely had some jawbone. R. R. Jones.

Lesson XXXVII

THE CREATION OF MAN

Memory Text: So also it is written, "The first Adam became a living soul. The last Adam became a quickening spirit" (R. V. 1 Cor. 15:45).

1. And God said let us make man in our image, after our likeness.

2. And let them have dominion over the fish of the sea,

3. And over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth,

4. And over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

5. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him.

6. Male and female created he them; and God blessed them (Gen. 1:26;28).

7. And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul.

8. And the Lord God said, It is not good that man should be alone; I will make him an help, suited to him.

9. And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept.

10. And he took one of his ribs and closed up the flesh instead thereof.

11. And the rib which the Lord God had taken from the man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man.

12. And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh.

13. She shall be called woman, because she was taken out of man (Gen. 2:7, 18, 21-23).

14. And the Lord God took the man and put him in the Garden of Eden to dress and to keep it (Gen. 2:15).

Practical Truths

We have in our lesson for today a statement from the Bible showing us where man came from. If the Lord had not made this revelation of man's origin we must have been left to uncertain conjecture. Reason would teach us that man must have had a beginning somewhere. Men of thought have tried to account for man's existence in various ways, and after all speculations are duly weighed no theory is as satisfactory as the plain, simple statement of the Bible that God created or made man. Paul says that God made the world and all things therein, and that in him we live and move and have our being.

Notes on the Lesson

Living Soul.—Adam, although a living soul, was of the earth, earthy. A living being is not necessarily an immortal being; so a living soul may still be a soul subject to earthy conditions. Life-giving Spirit.—The second Adam was different from the first Adam, in that his nature became spirit, and deathless after his resurrection. The contrast is between the two Adams as regards their natures; Adam the first was an earthy, while Adam the second became an heavenly.

1. Image.—Image necessarily refers to the form or shape. As a metaphor it may signify the resemblance of one character to another. Likeness.—Likeness, may refer both to the form and mental capacity or character. In this passage however, it cannot refer to character, for Adam had no character at creation. Character was a subsequent developmnet.

2. Dominion. The right of possession and use; to control; the power to control his environments.

5. Created.—Formed out of material already existing. Brought into being.

6. Blessed. Conferred the possibility of happiness and prosperity upon them.

7. Breath of Life. The breath contains the life and is imparted to the blood in the lungs; hence "the life of all flesh is in the blood." We cannot live without breathing, and life being brought to us in the breath it is called the "breath of life."

8. Lord God. This term does not always refer to the Almighty. Sometimes used to signify angels.

9. Deep Sleep.—When any difficult or painful surgical operation is to be performed men are put by their physicians into a "deep sleep" by the use of powerful opiates. So, too, the Elohim caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, that the operation might be painless. A difficult operation was this about to be performed—taking out a rib, cutting it loose at the breast and backbones and then closing up the wound. It was successfully done, and out of the rib woman was formed.

14. Garden of Eden.—Where the Garden of Eden was located has long been a matter of great interest to Bible students. Dr. John Thomas says: "It laid somewhere between the Gulf of Persia and the junction of the Euphrates and Tigris" rivers. It is a singular fact that the origin of human languages find a common centre in this part of the world, showing that the first human pair here had their creation.

Suggestive Topics and Questions

1. How Formed.—Who created man? What is meant by the word "created"? What is your idea as to how man was made? Was man developed from lower animals or separately created? Do we find any other statement in the Bible that God created man" (Deut. 4:32; Isa. 64:8). What does Paul say upon this subject in his discourse at Athens? (Acts 17:24, 25).

2. The Material Used. What kind of material was used in making man? What do you understand by the phrase "dust of the ground," in verse 7? Is this creation of man literal or figurative?

3. The Dominion. Over what was Adam to have dominion? (2, 3, 4). Was this dominion taken away when Adam sinned? To whom will the whole world be given in the future? (Psa. 2:7, 8). How far will his dominion extend? (Psa. 72:8). Who will share this dominion with Jesus? (Dan. 7:27).

4. The Blessing.—Where in our lesson is it said that God blessed Adam and Eve? (6). What did ths blessing consist of?

5. The Image of God.—What is the image of God that man was made in? Was it personal image or the image of form, or was it a mental or spiritual image? In the case of Jesus, was it the image of person and form? (Heb. 1:3; Phil. 2:6).

FINDING FAULT

Addison says: "What an absurd thing it is to pass all over the valuable parts of a man and fix our attention to his infirmities!" But that seems to be the habit. About the first thing we try to find in a man is his faults. They are apt to transcend his virtues, even if the virtues are mountain high. It is a deplorable habit, for it not only does great injustice to the person criticized, but it hurts the critic himself. It lowers his views of life and confirms the habit of seeing the worst side of human experience and losing sight of its bright side. No man can be a moral man, or a religious man of any faith, who is constantly searching for the faults of people. The first duty a man owes to his neighbor is to look for the bright side and he will then find, in most cases, that the dark side is much smaller than he suspected. The thing to attack is the sin, for we will discover that that is greater than the man who is guilty of it. Selected by Brother Knapp.

GOLDEN TEXT: Isiah 66:2

GOD KNOWS THE WAY

God knows the way. I'm sure I cannot tell
What paths he chooses; but I know 'tis well.
If trials come to haunt me night and day,
He knows the way.
O, days are long, and years are slow indeed,
The pastures dry wherein we daily feed,
But plenteous grace and blessing doth abound,
When light is found.

The world seems old, and all its pleasures tire,
Our lives are surfeited with their fulfilled desire,
We pant for water brooks and healing springs,
Where nature sing.

O, God of heaven and earth, look down we pray,
Upon thy suffering sheep, lost and astray,
Let us abound in measures of thy grace,
Show us thy face.

Draw us still nearer as the days go by,
Hear our supplications as to thee we cry:
May thy deep love impart faith day by day,
Show us the way.

We know thy matchless power to heal defend,
Sustain our faltering courage to the end,
Help us to say, when tempests would us sway,
God knows the way.

Our Father's Love

Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him.

The above is a quotation from Psa. 103, and simply is one of many passages comprising the whole that bespeaks the tender love and compassion our heavenly Father has for those who put their faith in him.

We all have earthly fathers, and we know the pity they have when everything does not go just right with us. At this moment my mind is filled with the many sacrifices my father made for the sake of his little family, and how great the number must be of those I never knew. I know that my experience was different than yours. Your father, too, made many sacrifices so that his boy, his girl, would have an easier time in passing through this world than he had. In this all fathers—worthy the name—are alike; they willingly would sacrifice any pleasure, any gain, that the doing without would be of advantage to their children.

Sometimes a father's love is shown in correcting a child. A father's greatest ambition is that his son shall grow to be a leader of men; and when a father sees his boy travelling the wrong path he firmly but in love, uses such methods as in his judgment will make the boy retrace his steps till he again walks on the road of right and justice, thus regaining the respect of his fellows.

If our natural father, whose insight is limited and power weak, will make sacrifices, what think you of our heavenly Father who knoweth all things, and whose power is unlimited? He has promised to care for us. He has offered to carry our burdens; he has invited us to cast all our care upon him; and of him we read that "he is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think." And have you an idea that he never made a sacrifice on our behalf? Then what think you of Jesus? Was it not a sacrifice on the part of the Father to give his only begotten Son to suffer death, that through his obedience and righteousness our disobedience and unrighteousness might be blotted out and we receive the gift of everlasting life? The Father suffered, the Son suffered, that our suffering might cease. Then let us give our hearts, freely and fully, to God through faith in the Lord Christ "as our wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption;" knowing that while we are in this life we will at times stumble and fall, but as we do, God in his love will endeavor to bring us back to him, even though at times he will find it necessary to use chastisement. But as in the case of our natural father this was done for our good, so also with our heavenly Father; it is but an act of love and affection, and if we heed, will "work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." As Paul says: "We have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence; shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits and live?" "For as the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him. As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us." "The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousness unto children's children, to such as keep his covenant, and to those that remember his commandments to do them."

Our Weekly Puzzle

If ye be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory.

In the first line we read, "If ye be risen with Christ," and a little further down it states, "For ye are dead," Do these statements contradict each other?

What does "affections" signify?

When shall Christ appear?

Who wrote the above? To whom written? Where can the passage be found?

Answer next issue.

Answer to puzzle in last issue:

"Perfect" signifies "complete, faultless."

The meaning of "boldness" is "without fear, courageous."

The "he" in "as he is, so are we," refers to Jesus Christ.

"Fear" means "to be afraid;" "to doubt."

The "him" in, " We love him, because he first loved us," refers to our heavenly Father, God. He is love.

The passage was written by John, and can be found in 1 John 4:17-19.

He That Glorieth

In 1910 the population of the United States was about 98,000,000 and of this unmber 111,498 were sentenced prisoners in penal institutions. Add to this the figures recently published by the federal government showing the great number of our countrymen unable to read or write, and we readily can see and understand the foolshness of glorifying in anything of our earthly nature. God is all powerful; he also is all wise, as well as all loving. As subjects of the eternal King, as sons and daughters of the Father of our Lord and Savior, as future companions of Jesus Christ to spend eternity in the presence of God, our duty is to glory in the Lord. The earth, and the things pertaining to the earth are for the earthy. Our citizenship is heavenly and therefore we are not to glory in earthly things, but, as Paul says, "He that glorieth let him glory in the Lord. For not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth."

Be Brief

Moving water only is pure. The well that is not fed by springs is a breeding place for disease. To be something, move, act, do something. Oblivion with her smother-blanket waits for the man who has nothing to say and says it faultlessly.

Think of this when next at the prayer, or conference meeting. Have something interesting to say. Come prepared to say it. Say it in a few words. The longer you speak, the less you'll say, and the less impression you'll leave on your hearers. Speak, but be brief.

What Are You?

What a lamentable thing it must be for a person who claims to be Christian and yet never has been a "worker together with God," who never has labored in the vineyard of the Lord! I do not say who is not now a worker, for many a person who at one time or another was active, now, not through choice, but through necessity, may be passive in all things save influence. I remember seeing a business sign which read, "I am not a Has-been nor a Will be; I'm an Isser, I am." This inspired the following:

I'd rather be a Could Be,
If I could not be an Are;
For a Could Be is a May Be,
With a chance of touching par.
I'd rather be a Has' Been,
Than a Might Have Been by far;
For a Might Have Been has Never Been,
But a Has Been was once an Are.

So if you have not labored for God, if you are not now working with God, make up your mind that you will do your part in making known God's plan of salvation as revealed in the person of Jesus Christ, and do it now. You know there is something you can do. So get busy and do it. Remember that in this case

That a Can Be will be a Will Be,
Which is almost as good as an Are.

2 Timothy 2:15

Use Me, Lord

O use me Lord! use even me;

Until thy blessed face I see;
  Thy rest, thy joy, thy glory share.—Selected by Sister Avery.

Fate and Hope

We spend our lives in honest toil,
  To gain a living from the soil;
The race we run is not for greed,
  But to supply our mortal need:
"Diligent in business" is the command,
  In shop, in factory, or on land.

What e're your task or lot may be,
  Prepare yourself for eternity;
No safe retreat here can we find,
  To leave the cares of life behind,
No hope of everlasting rest,
  Till Christ shall come and call the blest.

Then he shall cleanse this mundane sphere,
  From sorrows that make life so dread;
Then all shall be full happy there,
  When we are free from sin and care.
Thus, if in life, sin we elude,
  We'll rest in joy and quietude.

J. E. Hogarth.

Who is My Neighbor?

JESUS ANSWERED this question very conclusively, when he brought before the questioning lawyer the picture of a man who, going down from Jerusalem to Jericho, fell among thieves who stripped him of his raiment, wounded him and departed, leaving him half dead, and of how the priest and the Levite, though seeing him, passed by unpitying on the other side. And of how the merciful Samaritan, though hated he might be, by that wounded Jew, "had compassion on him," and went to him and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast and brought him to an inn and took care of him. And on the morrow, when he departed took out two pence and gave them to the host and said unto him, "Take care of him, and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee."

It is a beautiful picture. But I wonder if any of us have grasped its real meaning? Read the hidden lesson it is meant to convey. There are worse thieves than those wild Bedouins, who on the Jericho road, hide behind the rocks and spring out to plunder the weak caravan, or the lone traveler; and, there are men who are wounded in other ways than by saber cuts. To be enticed by sinners into the wrong paths is to get hurt far more seriously than to be struck and bruised by a club. Yet men injured in this way are our neighbors, our friends. But our priests and our Levites pass by on the other side; the wounded men may die for all they care. They have neither wine, oil, nor money to spend on such cases.

And we? Do we love God in such way that though the wounded have no dealings with us and hate us, we can love and pity them enough to try to save them? Can we give God this sort of service? Do we?

Do we go to the sinning neighbor, with the wine and oil of the gospel, and pour it freely on his wounds, take him home, and teach him and pay all outgoes until he is completely healed? But what cowards we are! We can go to a meeting and beseech sinners to come to Christ (if there happen to be any there), but to do parlor preaching, to bring up the subject of personal salvation with casual acquaintances on the car in the street, anywhere we may meet them; to bring home their eternal interests to our own dear kindred, is not so easy. We fear the rebuff, the "mind your own business" exhortation, even though we know that it is our bounden duty to seek and to save the lost.

I feel the burden of this work upon me. Every day it presses upon me more and more heavily. Why? Well, there never was the danger in putting off "the day of salvation" as there is now. If I believed the truth and had not yet obeyed it, I should not want to wait a single hour. "1909 A. D. was the 6000th prophetic year of the world." Be wise. These are the days of the automobiles, iron chariots, lanterns, electric, red, rushing jostling each other in the streets, etc. and so premonitory of "his appearing" (Nahum 2:3-5), to wit not only them, but all our cars and carriages etc., are by law so equipped. "From Adam to Nathan's confirmation of the kingdom to David 2963 years thus bisecting the period to 5926 A. M. or 1928 A. D.

Oregon Bible College

What does this portend, in that Jerusalem is only to be trodden down during the times of the Gentiles. It means the second return of Israel and Judah, the restoration of Jerusalem to the kings of the east; our race and the second advent of their King to rule them and the rest for a golden age. Ponder over this!"

1916-1917 is the 1335th year of the Hegira. That number brought us to the end of Esau's or Turkey's days, and the taking out of her hands for ever of the land, the city and the people that she so proudly said "should be hers to have in possession" (Ezek. 35:10-15; 36:5; 25:14; Obad. 10-20).

"Four cycles of all the planets in their courses at 1444 years each are 5776 years. Add two epacts of adjustment between 2520 Solar and Lunar years to wit. 150 years, and reach 5926. A. D. or 1928 A. D., the astronomical end of all the times!"

We have been living since 1909 A. D. under the 7th and last vial (Napoleon poured out the first). A vial is 19 years in duration, 1909 added to 19 is 1928. The seventh vial has been poured out upon "the air" and so 'the Prince of the Powers thereof has been shaken terribly and have great wrath and but short time to do his worst and fail!'"

The second Advent is the only salvation now in sight for a helpless world.

We all know or ought to know that when the outer and greater planets in their periodic cycles come nearest to the sun, that there will be earthquakes, cyclones, floods, tidal waves, storms, pestilences, and wars, and general unrest, upset of prices, etc. "Jupiter and Saturn rule these cycles." And if one, two, three, or more come into perihelia at the same time, things will be all the worse. Jupiter was in perihelia in 1904, in 1916, and will come into perihelia again in 1928. Saturn reached her nearest point to the sun in 1914. Neptune will end its current perihelian passage in 1923, and Uranus in 1924, four great plantes holding the balance of power. No wonder there is serious troubles on the earth that will not end until Jesus comes! And I am telling you about these things, so you may know that he is very near and may get ready. We dare not put off his coming a single year. It is near, even at the door!

Rome plotted in this war to regain her temporal power, but all her plotting has come to nought. She is being destroyed by the words of Christ's mouth that have gone out for "the breaking in pieces of the nations" and a writer in the Menace says, "The Vatican will be vacant inside of two years."

O bride of Christ, take heed! Keep oil in your lamps and keep awake and watching. And you who are not in Christ had better make haste! There is no time to dally.—S. ROXANA WINCE.

Christ Our Example

Teach me thy way O Lord, I will walk in thy truth: unite my heart to fear thy name (Psa. 86:11).

THIS MORNING Brother Huggins gave us an inspiring exposition of Heb. 9:11, 12. He emphasized the sacrifice of Christ, the preeminence of his office as High Priest, and the absolute necessity of the shedding of his blood, to make atonement for our sins.

Paul's words come home to our mind with much force: "For as often as ye do eat this bread and drink this cup ye do shew the Lord's death till he comes.' If Christ had been any other than the Son of God his death could not have saved us. Peter makes this plain: "For even hereunto were ye called, because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps . . . . who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree that we being dead to sin, should live unto righteousness, by whose stripes ye are healed"!

The Death of Heroes

The philosophy of the at-one-ment is a profound study. It is the basis, the eternal foundation upon which our salvation rests. The Scriptures to my mind, nowhere suggest that the death of Jesus, was a substitute death for my death, that his death appeased God's wrath against me because of my sin. Many wise, good men have blessed the world with their living and with their dying, before the birth of Christ, and since his resurrection heroes, especially during the past five years, have poured forth their lives on the battlefield, a free libation for their country's good; martyrs confessing Christ, have gladly gone to the stake willing sacrifices to the truth. Philosophers in the solitude of their damp dungeons have drunk the cup of death. Hebrews 11 records many dying in agony and suffering extreme torture. I have read 2 Macc. 7:18-31 and 7:9, 11, 14, 29, 36, giving the account of the torture and death of the Jewish mother and her seven sons and God's faithful priests because they would not violate the law of Moses. I love the Jews, though most people despise them.

Philosophy of Christ's Death

Wherein, then, does the death of Christ transcend all these? Can I make this plain as my mind understands it, and my heart rejoices in the hope because of it. God's law is perfect, it is just, pure, and honorable. Adam and his posterity have failed to keep it, involving himself and all his descendents under the sentence of death. Now God has interposed by begetting a Son in his own likeness and disposition, but born through the channel of sinful flesh. This being known as Jesus of Nazareth, became a member of the human race, but God in his flesh as manifested. God demanded of him the same that he demanded of Adam, viz., to observe faithfully and righteously his law, the law of obedience to him. Man in his puny wisdom has thrown into God's face the accusation, "That God gave a law that it was impossible for man to keep." It is an awful thing to make God a liar. Now God's demand upon Christ was that he prove to the universe that God his Father is not only honorable but that it is possible for one of Adam's race to keep God's law in its every requirement. This Jesus did, and in doing so gave up all he possessed, even his life.

Christ's Death a Sacrifice for Sin

Paul says Jesus gave his life a sacrifice for sin, in other words, sin personified in man slew him (Acts 3:14-18). Paul agrees that he who is dead is free from sin. The law of our land inflicts upon a murderer the punishment of death; after that penalty is paid the murderer resting under it is for all eternity suffering the decree of the state, death. A million years from now, if dead, he will still be lying under and suffering (though not consciously) the sentence of the state.

Suppose after the physician in attendance pronounces him dead, and the state authorities verify and confirm it some one, having the power, should raise him again to life! He is free; the state, although he committed murder, has no claim upon him. Christ, not because of his sins, but for our sins, laid down his life in death. He committed no sin, hence death could not hold him. Paul says so in 1 Cor. 15:3, 4. He then, of all the human race is the only one whom God could justly raise from the dead, because death could not hold him. Sin or death had no claim.

How The Death of Christ Benefits Us

Now Paul in Gal. 3:24-29 points out the way by which God has made it possible that others of the same race may also possess life from the dead again. Now notice Jesus actually won his life by giving us his own in death. When we are baptized into Christ's death we also win our life through faith. Hence you see the deep significance of meeting the first day of every week to show the Lord's death until he comes.

Now you see it is not the good works of the flesh that saves us; it is the good works resulting from living the life that he lived and its sacrifices. In Christ we behold, as in a mirror, what manner of beings we should strive to be. Paul says which is "Christ in you, the hope of glory."

In God's sight mark this point well Christ is our actual and possible self. In his virtues we behold our defects; in his greatness, our littleness; our weakness in his strength.

Happiness in Christ

Beloved, I am always happy when I look upon Christ. "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." As I behold him, the qualities which shine forth in him reveal to me the inner man. The new mind begotten by the word of truth. The new man at present unformed, but daily being transformed by the renewing of my mind by the spirit of the truth. Beloved, listen: "Beholding as in a glass, the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory." Beloved, let us confess to each other. I will conclude this article in the spirit of prayer. Let us mutually repeat it together:

Our United Prayer

Dear loving Father who art ever near to us, though we see thee not. We pray for grace to realize thy presence, and to walk wisely and circumspectly before thee in the light of thy truth. There is no place where evil doers may hide themselves from thy searching eyes.

Praised be thy glorious majesty, O Lord, for thou fillest the heavens and the earth. We earnestly desire that thy grace may have its perfect work in us. Thou judgest not according to outward appearance, but in true knowledge of our hearts. Our secret thoughts and motives, and the hollow ground of every false show of reasoning whereby men deceive themselves are open in thy sight. Look into our hearts dear Father, not in anger, but in mercy. Show us in how many ways it has been our unworthy part to rely on vain speculations instead of seeking counsel of thy Spirit of the truth at all times and under all circumstances; to think favorably of evil practices; and to palliate what could not be defended or explained away.

Pardon our many sins. Thou knowest them all. Dear Father, we realize they are deeply rooted, and grievously offend. We pray for the spirit of purity, that we may choose the better part that shall not be taken from us.

We pray, dear Father, that in the journey of life we may shun all things that offend thee, that we may pursue and delight in the search of that knowledge which will make us wise unto salvation; that we may become stewards of good things, and bearer of the glad tidings of the gospel. Help us to adorn the doctrine, and thus follow in the steps of our Divine Master.

Dear Father, we pray for humility that we may be sustained with the comforting assurance that what thou seest and approvest is not our work but thine. For these and many other mercies make us more humble minded, as having thy gifts in much weakness, yet confident that every good work shall prosper therein, if we are striving only in thy strength. For Jesus' sake, the all-righteous Savior, mercifully receive these our united supplications, and send an answer of peace. Amen.

Russellism Refuted

Article Five

The Fallacy of Obligating God to Man

RUSSELLISM starts with a perverted mind, placing great value upon mortal man, and assuming that God is obligated to man. There are some lazy people in the world who say, and act accordingly, that "the world owes them a living;" and, quite as unreasonably, Russellism is based upon the conceit that God owes the entire race of Adam a "chance" to earn eternal life. Since many die without this "chance," there is, they suppose, a delinquency; and since there is no release, it being absolutely necessary to pay the debt and make amends for failing during one life time, a "ransom" must take place by resurrection to a better nature and better environments, and thus give the subjects an incomparable better chance than they would have had if, unfortunately, they had been reached in the first life time. Should the masses of idiots, Hottentots, heathen of all classes, and nominal Christians ever become the subjects of this Russell "ransom," will they not have good reasons to be glad they were not found out and put under the "much more severe trial" of having to "withstand satan, the prince of this world, with all his wiles and ensnarements"? while in the world's "judgment day" to come "Christ will be reigning, and satan will be bound that he may not deceive the nations." Had they been discovered with the first "trial judgment," they would "have suffered persecution for righteousness sake," while in the second "trial judgment" all "stumbling blocks and snares will be removed." It would be quite interesting to hear Russellism explain how, with "stumbling blocks removed," "satan bound," men no longed subject to his "wiles and ensnarements," and with "Christ reigning" how, in conditions so vastly better than those of this life, the words of Jesus are to find a fulfilment: "It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom than for you." If these words can be conjured into a promise of the blessing of a probation under conditions incomparably better than those of this evil first life time, who would not pray to escape the first chance and to be allowed to await a passive "ransom" by resurrection to a probation, when all lines will lead in pleasant places and it will be easier to succeed than to fail?

No doubt Russellites will answer this by saying that if we are not put on trial in this life, the reward we shall obtain by the second life "trial" will not be so great. This means that throughout the endless ages, Russellites, whom the "first trial judgment" reached, will be superior to all those who are not put on "trial" now, but who will succeed under the second "trial judgment." Here the question arises, How came this thing called "first trial judgment" to succeed in finding Russellites and putting them on "first trial judgment" and to fail to succeed in finding others? Is there no partiality in thus finding the few Russellites at the eleventh hour, and in not finding the rest of Adam's race till they are given a second life? And then, why should Russellites be given a better reward than those who succeed in the second life time? Is it that the merit is in those found, and consists in being found? or is the question of who shall be found for "trial" in the first and who in the second life time an arbitrary matter, regardless of merit, with this "trial" hunting things Russell's imagination has invented? In any event, the only thing it has succeeded in doing is in becoming confounded in its own confusion, and in deluding many who, in their distress in the loss of loved ones, became an easy prey to this cunning imposition.

When our first parents fell, and thereby forfeited the right to probation, they had no claims upon God for any opportunity for another probation either in this life or in a future life. They passed deservedly under the sentence to return to the dust from whence they were taken. Justice could make no further claims in man's behalf, and if any plan of ransom was intended to be revealed, it would be by the love of God.

Perhaps Russellism will agree with us thus far. Let us suppose so, and then we may also agree that if a plan of redemption is offered to man by the hand of love, it should be broad enough to meet the requirements of the newly formed fallen situation. Had God left man for six thousand years in the plight in which sin had placed him, and withheld the revelation of his plan till Russellism was "due" and ready to receive it, then there would be some excuse for the claim that the larger part of the race had died without an opportunity which was "due" to them; for, of course, it was as much due to them as it was to the few Russellites who claim to have been the recipients of it. Justice might then have said, Here is an opportunity offered in this late day to a few, while from millions, during thousands of years it has been withheld. If it is right to offer it now to Russellites, it is right that it should have been offered to all from Adam down to Mr. Russell. But Russellism declares this was not done, and therefore there has not been strict justice without partiality. The miscarriage of justice can never now be fully remedied because the millions are dead. The only thing that can be done now to offset the what? Oversight? Delinquency! Call it what you like the only thing that can be done now in fairness "fair chance" to those who preceded Russellite times and the ignored contemporaries of Russellites, is to try again. This can only be done by the resurrection to a second life time, and perhaps the failure (?) of the past will thereby be measurably remedied in the future.

Is there any reasonable person willing to view God's dealings with man in this haphazard, partial manner? I think not. Russellites would not, of course, express it in the way we have, because the theory requires a cunning manipulation of words to hide its folly; but the facts are just as we have stated them in plain language, free from the art of that verbal decoration which is so well calculated to "deceive the hearts of the simple."

No Favoritism To Russellites

God is no respecter of persons. He did not withhold his offer of the most superior degree of his ransom for a few who would conceitedly call themselves the favored "little flock." He made known his plan of redemption in "due time," and that time was immediately upon its having become necessary, and the plaster was there and then put upon the wound, and was large enough to cover it; and the fact that the remedy was not effectual co-extensively with the race as men multiplied, is not due to any defect nor difficulty in the remedy, but to the degeneracy and apostasy of mankind.

Here are the parents of the human family in a fallen state, needing redemption. The dimly revealed plan of redemption provides a "seed of the woman" who "shall bruise the serpent's head." That "Seed" was Christ. But he, personally and as an actual sacrifice, was not due for over four thousand years. To wait that length of time would be fatal to the millions who in the interval would go down under the sentence, "Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." Now is the time to set the redemptive plan in operation. Here are the sick patients, apply the remedy. How? By means of types of the "Lamb of God who is to "take away the sin of the world." In this manner he can become the "lamb from the foundation of the world" by means of the one faith being "once for all delivered to the saints."

Was the "one faith" delivered to our first parents? If it was, then God delivered it to the race the very same race which fell, and the plaster was put upon the wound, and became a remedy to the extent of restoring man to a state of probation, by which he could ultimately become cured of the physical disease with which sin had afflicted him. Restored to communion with God by the sacrifice of Christ provisionally operating through the typical "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world," the plan of redemption had done its work, and was to be an ever present thing for every generation of the race if they would retain it; and was adequate to the salvation of every soul of them if they would have it. The fact that they did not was no fault of, nor discrepancy in, the Physician nor his remedy; but it was in the anestatizing generations of mankind. God having extended the hand of love where it was needed and when it was needed, by once for all delivering the "faith" the "one faith," "without which," in all ages, "it is impossible to please God," and therefore impossible to secure its ransom there was no reason, so far as God's part in the matter was concerned, why Adam and Eve could not be saved, why their children could not, and why their children's children throughout all generations should not be saved why salvation could not be universal. But there was a Cain, and the Cains multiplied, and the vast majority of the race retained not God in their hearts, and forsook his "once for all" delivered saving "faith;" and now is Russellism going to have the audacity to impose upon God the duty of creating all the depraved, brutish and apostate masses of moral and physical corruption again and per force usher them into sound "very good" moral physical natures by a process in which they will be as passive as a machine in the hands of a mechanic, and then deliver, the second time, that "faith which was once for all delivered to the saints"? Verily they offer us a god who is as fickle as themselves. Away with the "wizards who peep and mutter: should not a people seek their God? . . . To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them" (Isa. 8:19, 120).

Was The One Faith Delivered to Adam And Eve ?

Our application of Jude's words, "the faith once for all delivered to the saints," to our first parents may be objected to by some. We must therefore give our reasons for this application. Dr. Young renders verses 3 and 4 thus: "When 'making all haste to write at once to you of the common salvation (or safety) I had a necessity to write you, exhorting to agonize-openly for the faith once-for-all given-over to the saints,' i. e., out of the earth.'"

The "common salvation" is the salvation common to all men, for all the Adamic race is in the same fallen state, and all need the same salvation from that state to life and glory. This "common salvation" was "once" given, and given "for all." The "one faith" is the gospel good news of eternal life and everlasting inheritance. The gospel preached by Jesus and his apostles was the same as that preached to Abraham, for Paul writes this to the Galatians when he says, "And the Scripture, foreseeing that he would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed" (Gal. 3:8). That there is only one gospel he declares in chapter 1:8 "But though we or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."

This gospel, under the name of "faith," is defined in the words, "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. For by it the elders obtained a good report" (Heb. 11:1, 2). In verse 5 we are told that "by faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; . . . for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God.' Then the apostle adds, "But without faith it is impossible to please God; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." This faith, or gospel, "cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God" (Rom 10:17). From the "word of God," therefore Abraham received the faith, also Enoch, the one hereby becoming "a friend of God" and the other "walking with God." Sel. by Brother B. F. Smith.

Brother Anderson's Tour in the South

On Wednesday July 30 as we were preparing to start to South Carolina for a meeting we received a telegram from Brush Creek, Ohio, stating that Sister Antonides had died, and asking us to come and conduct her funeral at Brush Creek, Friday, Aug 1. Sister Anderson was expecting to go South with us, so we told her to get ready and we would meet her at Spartanburg, S. C., the next Tuesday.

Early Thursday morning we left for Ohio, and arrived Friday morning in time for the funeral. A short service was held at the home, and then we went to Brush Creek where we spoke words of comfort to a crowd of about 300 who had come to pay their respects to Sister Antonides. We spent Saturday and Sunday with Brother Antonides, preaching Saturday evening and Sunday morning for the Brush Creek Church.

We left Ohio Sunday afternoon and arrived at Hendersonville, N. C. Monday afternoon. Monday night we spent with Brother and Sister L. C. Patterson. We can truly say we were happy to meet them. Tuesday morning we took the train for Spartanburg, where we met Sister Anderson and the baby. From Spartan burg we went to Greenville, S. C. From Greenville we went in Brother C. Reames' Reo to the church where we arrived in time for evening service. The meeting had begun on the preceding Sunday, and we found the attention and interest good. On the last day of the meeting we went to the water where the pastor baptized Mr and Mrs. Furman Gentry, Mrs. Pearl Garrett, Geo. Stone, Miss McElrath, J. Elrod, and Mrs. Relmond Anderson, wife of our sick brother. A sadness was cast over the meeting by the sickness of our Brother J. H. Pack, who lives near the church. However, when we bade him farewell on the last day of the meeting he was some better.

On Monday, Aug 11, we stopped over with Dana Adventist Church in Henderson Co., N. C., and spoke to them on the restoration of Israel and some other subjects we thought they should understand. We were well treated at this place. On Wednesday we left them, and the next day started for home where we arrived on Friday and found the family well.

Wartime Theology

Following article was sent to the daily press, but was refused. Editor.

Sir:

The great European War has had tremendously far-reaching effects. It has altered conditions in almost every civilized land. Cost of living, food and clothing, and the material necessities of life are not what they were. These, however, are but a transitory phase of human affairs; people soon become accustomed to them, and they cease to occupy the mind to the exclusion of things which make for the character of the nation.

Perhaps, no one thing in all the history of the war has been so noticeably affected by it, as current religious thought. True, the advance made in commercial and scientific affairs has been phenomenal, but it must be conceded that only comparatively small proportions of the world's populations are directly concerned; whereas the appeal of religion applies to every responsible individual. The effect of the war on scientific problems, has been to discard theory as much as possible and get to bed-rock facts to eliminate waste in thought as well as material. Start from an established fact, and one's thoughts will not run riot; start from theory and there is no limit to the imagination, and comparatively seldom is there any practical result. The great achievements in the world, and the great facts of life and knowledge, are admittedly the outcome of earnest, deliberate search for the truth on the part of the few. Possibly because religion is so universally recognized as belonging to all mankind is the explanation of the general lack of definiteness in which it is held and the utter inability of the majority to give any reason at all (valid or otherwise) of a basis of their belief. One of the most remarkable cases in point brought forward by the war is the incessant statement by ministers and clergy that a soldier who dies in battle at the hands of a German is not dead. It would be just as reasonable and quite as much in accord with facts for them to state that black and white are identical. Surely business men who are earnestly solicited to attend church require in their religion as in their business, that which will stand the searching scrutiny of common sense. Notice the following taken from the obituary notice of the brother of one of our local ministers:

> Not dead, oh no, but gone beyond the shadows
> Into the full clear light,
> Forever done with war and sword and conflict,
> Where all is calm and bright.

Can they prove it? No! Why should not a man be able to give sound reason for the hope that is in him respecting religious belief as well as in his business? Where else than from the pulpit will such self-contradictory statement as that when Britisher or Canadian dies he is not dead, but actually living in heaven be complacently listened to? The Bible, which the ministers profess to teach, emphatically denies such statement in the plainest of language, and makes the possibility of "living again" absolutely contingent upon resurrection from the dead. St. Paul makes this abundantly clear. For proof, let any unbiassed person read 1 Cor. 15:12-20, noting especially the change of the last mentioned verse in the Revised Version.

If the Britisher or Canadian does not die when "killed" in action, what happens to the German who not infrequently falls by the hand of the man to whom he has given a mortal blow? By contrast, the "orthodox" minister would send him to the "orthodox hell"; but let the minister hunt his Revised New Testament through, he will fail to find that the "Rich man" or anyone else, lifted up his eyes in the "hell" referred to. The story of the Rich man and Lazarus is so palpably a parable, that it amounts to deceit for any well educated person to attempt to bolster up the Methodist doctrine of eternal torment from it. St. Paul says, "How shall we that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?" The answer is obvious we cannot! Unless life and death are two actual opposites much of the Bible would be impossible of understanding. If "there is no death" what force have the words, "Reckon ye also yourselves to be dead unto sin"? Present day professors (not teachers) of the Bible destroy its plain and obvious meaning by their denial of the dictionary significance of such words as "perish," "destroy," "life," "death," and "resurrection" indeed this last mentioned has no place in their teaching. John 3:16 is the gospel epitomized, but taken in its literal sense, as translated, it gives the direct lie to current theology. Rom. 6:23 is no less emphatic.

Where else than from the pulpit are men and women asked to believe that the Bible throws arithmetic to the winds, by teaching the bewildering doctrine of the trinity? Christianity is no force unless we make it so. It rests on solid foundation.

Yours faithfully,
R. H. JUDD.

Faith and Obedience

FAITH IS that quality in a believer which enables him to grasp the unseen and the future. Paul says faith is 'the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. By it the elders obtained a good report. By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousess which is by faith

How do we obtain faith? Paul in Rom. 10:17 says faith cometh by hearing the word of God. There are so many faiths now, as well as in Paul's time. Can we keep any of them and then expect our reward? Let us go to the word of God and see. In 2 Tim. 4:7 Paul says: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but to all them also that love his appearing." "I have kept the faith." That sounds as though there was a certain faith. We read in Eph. 4:4-6: "There is one body and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one Lord and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in all." What constitutes the one true faith? It began with the promise that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head, and includes the covenants of promise, and the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and all kindred truths. Paul says in Gal. 3, "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus, for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." If we are children of God by faith in Christ, we must believe what he taught, and what he sent his apostles out to preach. He told them to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be condemned.

What is the gospel? It is the good news of the kingdom of God: that Jesus is soon coming back to this earth to raise the dead saints and change the living, and re-establish God's kingdom which is now overturned, and remove all sin and suffering and rule the world in righteousness. That is the faith we must have; not that we are going to heaven at death and receive our reward as our friends tell us. That is a man-made faith. Jesus says, "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me to give to every man according as his works shall be."

Will faith alone save us? No, for James says, "Faith without works is dead." Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he offered Isaac his son upon the altar? Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect." Faith and obedience must go together. Paul says in the 6th of Romans: "Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey, whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness? But God be thanked that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness."

We cannot inherit eternal life without obeying God's commandments. Adam disobeyed and brought death upon all humanity, where we all would have forever remained, if our merciful heavenly Father had not provided a way of escape, by a resurrection from the dead. We must accept the great plan of salvation, as he has revealed it in his holy word, through Moses and the prophets and Jesus Christ and the apostles. Christ was obedient unto death, even the death of the cross; and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him. Faith in the gospel, and obedience by baptism are the first steps for eternal life. In 2 Peter 1 we read, "Simon Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Savior Jesus Christ. Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God and Jesus our Lord. According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness through the knowledge of him that has called us to glory and virtue, whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. And beside this giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you and abound they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." Paul says in Heb. 10:25: "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together as the manner of some is, but exhort one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Paul knew that in the last days there would be so many things to draw us away from the truth, that we would have to take an extra effort to keep ourselves unspotted from the world.

Remarks

The month of June has been one of activity. It seems like old times, after so much delay on account of flu, etc. It now lacks but two days of being two months since I left home, and truly they have been months of hard work. I had thought by hard work I would catch up, but not so; the work has increased, and there seems to be no end of it.

I was at Wray, Col., when I last wrote. While there Sister Barber, of Pueblo, requested me to come and see what could be done there. So it was decided to comply with her request. I arrived there the 11th, and Sister Barber got busy at once, to find a place to hold the meeting; and to her surprise everything was occupied. One hall could be secured for Saturday night only. This meeting was well advertized, but only about 15 came. We tried in the home, and after Sister Barber had walked for blocks, and spent several hours going to the doors and asking people to come, and getting many promises that they would, she came back quite elated and thought we would have fair attendance. I said, "Sister Barber, you will feel quite disappointed if you should find out they told you that to make you feel good, and get you to pass on." My experience has been such as to make me look for that result. So we settled down in anxious waiting.

Finally, two ladies came, and how pleased Sister Barber looked, when she thought her efforts were bearing fruit, and my pessimism was to be turned into a triumph of her labors. But imagine the look that came into her earnest countenance, when those ladies asked her to sign a petition for a paving project and they departed, and not another one came!

Then after several days of effort, we sat down and compared notes to see if we could possibly discover why I was there, and if the effort had been a complete failure. This I was not willing to admit, even in the darkest hours. God knew Sister Barber's willingness to spend time and money for the cause in Pueblo, and the work was his, so could not be a failure. And so it proved. Now let us see if it was, and if we do not believe God directs the work.

In the first place, when we advertized in the daily paper, that I was to lecture in a certain hall, on "What Do These Things Mean?" a man saw it, and came to the meeting, who proved to be a brother in the faith, and had known of me by reading my reports and articles in The Restitution some years ago; and now he and Sister Barber have started a Bible Class. Who can tell what the result will be? It will benefit them at least, and that much good came out of the meeting at Pueblo.

But it is a small part of it, for while there a letter came from Sister Krogh, of Blair, begging me to go and see her sister Eva who was not far from Pueblo, and whom I had baptized years ago at Blair. I looked it up and found I was only 50 miles from them, so it was arranged that I go and visit them, with the object of holding at least a few meetings. So I arrived at Rocky Ford on the 21st, the place where I had to disembark, and drive across to Reno, the place of the meeting. When I stepped off the train I was filled with joy to see Brother Grimsley approaching to greet me. We got in the car and were soon on the way to his home. Along the way he kept stopping and telling the people they were going to have meeting in the church that night. They have built a neat little church in the country, and there was no one to say we could not preach strange doctrine in it.

In due time we arrived at their home, and how strange it seemed to meet Sister Grimsley away out there under such circumstances. I had not met her for several years. How it brought back old memories when I used to visit in her parents' home so often when she and all her brothers and sisters were under the parental roof. I baptized every member of that family, and spent many happy moments in their home. But now those parents both sleep, waiting the call to come forth, and inherit the kingdom they loved to talk about so much in life. The children are separated, but what a happy reunion when Jesus comes!

Well, after greetings, and some hurried inquiries about friends, we began to prepare to go to the church, wondering how many would be out. Imagine our surprise when nearly the whole neighborhood was there. The next day (Sunday) at eleven found them all there again, and Brother Grimsley invited them to his home in the afternoon, and they could ask questions. At three o'clock they were all there and requested that we give them another talk, which we did. At night we were back to the church. The interest was splendid from the start. One man had a number of men helping him repair beet [illegible] along the railroad tracks, and he had to drive fifteen miles to get back to meeting, but he never missed a meeting, and finally moved ten miles still farther away, and yet never let it hinder him. He was there every night on time. Finally, when we were convinced that they had heard the gospel in its purity, and understood it sufficiently to make a start for the kingdom, and when invited to heed the call, nine responded. The man who had come so far each night, his wife and two daughters being among the number. Brother Palmer, his wife, and her sister were among the number. Brother Palmer was formerly a Baptist, and is the section foreman on the main line of the Santa Fe, a splendid family. One brother getting somewhat up in years had studied to be a Methodist preacher, but had never gotten very far; but was posted quite well as to reading the Bible, but not as to its meaning. He also yielded obedience. After the baptism and communion service Sister Thimzan (pronounced Timmonz) invited all to stay for supper, and we held our evening service at her home, and we proceeded to set the church in order, after which we organized a Berean class. They paid their money right there to put them in the National Society, and connected themselves with the Nebraska State Bereans, and have written to the Nebraska State Secretary for their books.

Brother and Sister Grimsley are rejoicing, having a little band of believers to meet with. May the Lord bless these dear ones in their efforts to serve him. They have musical talent, and other good qualities to fit them for work. On the National day they conveyed me to La Junta where, after good byes and come again soon, we departed for other fields.

Now we go back to our Pueblo meeting. While there a letter came from home containing one from Sister Johnson, of Briggsdale, Colo. She saw by The Restitution I was going west, and she wondered if it was possible to make them a visit. We looked it up and found it not far out of our way on our return east, so decided to heed the call after corresponding with the chairman. We arrived here Saturday, began our meeting yesterday. The people express themselves as greatly pleased at what they heard. The Lord only knows what the result will be. They have a good Sunday School with Sister Johnson as Bible teacher, and they will not go without hearing some truth. Sister Johnson was a member of the congregation we built up north of Holbrook, Neb., and moved from place to place, till she and her husband seem permanently located here, and we hope her call will mean in time a congregation here. We will have to tell you the result in our next report. You can see what we mean by the work increasing. Several Nebraska points are kindly waiting for us to respond to these calls of former Neb. members, and they have our lasting gratitude for so doing. It makes an added strain on us, when we know so many are waiting, and we feel like closing a meeting and answering the next call, but when we consider that people cannot learn the truth in a few days, we just have to curb our anxiety and stay for the results. May the good Lord bless all, and may we see these results in his everlasting kingdom. ALMUS ADAMS.

MEMORY VERSE: [illegible]

GOLDEN TEXT: Isaiah 40:29

"GIVE US OUR DAILY BREAD"

"Give us our daily bread."
Claiming no right we come,
No money in our hand;
Before thee we stand dumb,
If thou a price demand;
Owning our weakness and our need we pray:
"Give us our daily bread."

"Give us our daily bread."
Thy promises we plead,
Not for ourselves alone,
But each his brother's need
Remembering with his own.
Our Father, thou; thy waiting children, we:
"Give us our daily bread."

"Give us our daily bread."
We ask no future good,
No anxious care we take;
We bless thee for our food;
We sleep in thee to wake;
As, day by day, we empty-handed come,
"Give us our daily bread."

"Give us our daily bread."
Not bread alone, dear Lord,
But our soul-hunger fill.
Give faith to trust thy word;
Give strength to do thy will.
Remember all our weakness, all our need,
"Give us our daily bread."

"Give Us This Day Our Daily Bread"

The above, as I no doubt you fully know, is one paragraph of our Lord's model prayer. Every time we utter it we make supplication to our heavenly Father to give us sufficient natural food to keep us in health and strength so we will be able to attend to our earthly duties, as well as to serve him and give him honor and praise.

If our prayer to God is honest and sincere, if we truly look upon him as "Our Father which art in heaven" then, when we voice our desire that he give us our daily bread, we do more than make supplication; we acknowledge him as the source from which our every blessing comes. We acknowledge that it is "in him we live, and move, and have our being"; we acknowledge with James "every good gift, and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." But it is this attitude that is pleasing to the Father. We are commanded to ask for such things as we need, and are told that if we ask in faith they will be granted unto us. But it is our dependence on God, it is our acknowledgement that we cannot get along without him, it is our admittance that we are nothing and God is all. It is our worship that he demands. For he hath made us and not we ourselves. We could not live were it not for him, and we must acknowledge that it is in him that all goodness, all strength, all power, and all glory dwells.

Then again, we must have a greater hunger than for the bread that merely sustains this natural life. We must at all times realize that this life is transitory, that this life merely is a state to fit us for that greater, that eternal life that will be granted unto those who through faith and obedience, will, with Jesus enter into the presence of the Father at the coming and appearing of him, who, when his apostles asked him to eat the natural food, said, "I have meat (food) to eat that ye know not of," and continuing, "My meat (food, or appetite) is to do the will of him (God) that sent me, and to finish his work." This is the real object of our being placed on this earth. We are to finish the work commenced by Jesus our Lord, even as his work was to finish his Father's; and our greatest work is to do the will of God, remembering at all times the words of the Master, "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled," and, "Labor not for the meat (food) which perisheth, but for that meat (food) which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of Man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed," knowing and practicing at all times that the kingdom of God is not meat and drink (satisfying the cravings of the natural nature); but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the spirit of him that is holy." That we may have strength to do this, O Father, "Give us this day our daily bread."

Our Weekly Puzzle

Beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.

The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is long-suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.

What is the significance of "ignorant"?
What is meant by "one day and a thousand years being the same to the Lord"?
What does "slack" mean?
What is the meaning of "long-suffering"?
How does "a thief come"?
Who wrote the above? To whom written? Where can the passage be found?
Answer next issue.

Answer to passage in last issue:

The passages referred to are in the sweetest and most absolute harmony. Christ died a physical death, and had a physical resurrection. If we, fully believing in Jesus as our Savior and Redeemer, make public confession of our faith through the ordinance of baptism, we then "have been buried with Christ," and we arise (resurrected) to "walk in newness of life." Then are we "dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord."

"Affections" are "attachments, fondnesses, love."

Christ shall appear in God's own time. "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only."

The passage was written by the apostle Paul to the saints and faithful brethren of Christ at Collosse," and can be found in Colossians 3:1-4.

"In thee my trust abideth,
On thee my hopes rely,
O thou whose love provideth
For all beneath the skies!
O for a heart to love thee
More truly as I ought,
And nothing place above thee
In deed or word or thought."

The Muddy Stream

We must admit that we do not know much regarding the circulation of The Restitution, but we imagine that it has many more readers in towns villages, and hamlets than it has in large cities; and, if this is correct, then the majiroity of our young readers will know that game fish do not like mud, for every country boy is a born fisherman and what he don't know regarding trout, etc., isn't worth while for a city chap trying to find out.

The muddy mountain streams disappoint fishermen whose picturesque camps are pitched along the beautiful creeks and small rivers, as the fish in these streams only travel when the water is clear.

After the recent successive showers all the streams were overflowing their banks, and worse yet, were of the color of the dusty country roads. It was interesting and useful to notice a crystal stream, pouring out of the rocks, which kept its purity for a long time as it leaped from rock to rock, but lost it entirely in sixty seconds when it joined itself to the company with the swollen and soiled creek reaching up to it and sweeping on to the river.

To be born pure and sweet amid the beauties of nature and to run along for a time without a stain and then suddely plunge in the giddy, noisy, and at times wicked company of the world and become part of its tainted life and entirely lose identity, seems a most horrible downfall.

The shifting currents of life must be watched closely and guarded carefully, lest they engulf us and endanger our now and hereafter.

Walk in the light! thy youth shall be
Peaceful, serene, and bright:
For God, by grace, shall dwell in thee,
And God himself is light

Some seem to live their lives accursed,
And many moans and wails attest
That they forever make the worst
Of the best.

In others' lives there is expressed
For hope and happiness a thirst,
And they appear to make the best
Of the worst.

Perhaps the chameleon believes that the surfaces it crawls over are changing color to match its moods.

If you haven't time enough to do what you know you shold do, take eternity.

The Restitution

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defence of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ.—Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 71 CLEVELAND, O. SEPTEMBER 9th, 1919. NUMBER [illegible]

Just Now

Just now, O Father, while we stray,
And wander from thy paths away,
While weak and blind we slip and fall,
We turn our eyes to thee, and call,
Oh, lead us back, our feet set right,
To walk again in thy blest light.

Just now, O Father, when we fail,
And efforts seem of no avail;
When hope and courage ebb away,
Then Lord, to thee we turn and pray,
Make whole our faith and in our night
Renew our [illegible] to onward light.

Just now, O Father, as we fret,
In tribulations thee forget,
But hearken, Lord, bend low thine ear
That thou our humble prayer may hear
Give peace, and help us by thy grace,
Our trials patiently to face.

In thy sure mercy, Lord, we trust,
For thou rememberest we are dust;
Our very frame thou knowest well,
Our every need thy wisdom tell.
We fear not then, but know that thou
Wilt care for us, just here, just now.

The Church of God

By A. E. Griffiths

IN A recent number of The Restitution the question was asked: "When was the church of God founded, and by whom?" As this question is one of general interest, perhaps it will be good subject matter for discussion.

Many different theories have been put forward on this subject, but fail to convince on the insufficiency of scriptural proof. Some writers claim that the truth died out with the rise of the papacy and was restored at the Reformation. This is erroneous on the face of it; for Luther did not preach the truth. He simply reformed the Roman church, so his doctrine was Rome still. Calvin also is credited with restoring the truth, but quite as erroneously; and it has even been suggested that Dr. Thomas restored it; but no one can restore what is not lost. We must thankfully admit that Dr. Thomas did much to revive interest in the truth, but at the same time it was in existence all down the ages; therefore the only answer we can give to the question is that the Church of God has always existed, and its founder is God whose name it bears.

Meaning of Word Church

The word church used in the New Testament is translated from the Greek "ekklesia," a compound word meaning "ek," out of, and "klesis," to call or invite, therefore signifying one body of persons separated from others of a similar nature. When we get this idea in our minds we can realize the meaning of such texts as: "Unto the church of God which is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified (set apart) in Christ Jesus, called to be saints with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both theirs' and ours'" (1 Cor. 1:2). Again: "These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings: and they that are with him are called (invited) and chosen and faithful" (Rev. 17:14).

We can see now that the word church signifies a body of people and does not apply to a building of bricks and mortar, and that body of people as it now exists was inaugurated by Christ and his disciples; but it existed prior to this, even to the time of Adam, of which we will speak later.

Christ's Reference to Church

The first reference we have in the New Testament is in Christ's words: "And I say unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it" (Matt. 16:18). To paraphrase this verse it would read: "And I say unto thee, that thy name in future shall be Peter, and upon your confession that I am the Son of God, which you have just made, I will build my church, or take out the body of people that I require for my purpose, and death shall not interfere with my plans." This gives us a more concise interpretation of Christ's thoughts when he uttered these words.

Disciples' Reference to Church

After Christ's death, resurrection, and ascension we find his disciples after they had been endowed with the Holy Spirit, continuing the work he had begun, and just after Peter's notable sermon on the day of Pentecost it is recorded, "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved" (Acts 2:47). In the 41st verse of this same chapter we find that "the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls," showing clearly that the element or substance of the church was individuals who were suitable for God's purpose and were invited or called out from the rabble of humanity, or population; and if they were faithful and obedient to God's word, they should inherit the promises when the time came for them to be fulfilled.

Falling Away of the Church

We thus have clear evidence that the church as we know it today was established in the first century A. D.; but we also find that there was a falling away even in the days of Paul. In writing to the Galatians he says, "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel" (Gal. 1:6). Again, "O foolish Galatians, who have bewitched you that ye should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you?" (Gal. 3:1). Here we have evidence of those who had been contemporary with Christ, and doubtless in some cases even witnessed his miracles, turning away from the truth and being seduced with fables. There was always a strong element in opposition to the truth, which was particularly obvious in Christ's own days. He had very few followers, and when it came to the crucial test at the last even his most faithful supporters deserted him.

This falling away should not surprise us when we recall Paul's words: "Let no man deceive you by any means, for that day shall not come except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition" (2 Thess. 2: 3). This reference clearly points to the papacy and harmonizes with the little horn of Dan. 7:8, which history corroborates. Thus we can account for the period known as the Dark Ages, when it was a death penalty to be found in possession of any sacred writings. Some have argued that during this period, prophetically designated the 1260 years, the truth was extinct and the church of God ceased to exist for that time; but we cannot accept that definition. Isaiah says: "So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth, it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it" (Isa. 55:11).

Vicissitudes of the Church

It is not feasible to suppose God's word did not exist during the Dark Ages, for his plans and purposes were being accomplished all through that era, which fulfilled prophecy confirms. When we need evidence of this sort it is always safe to rely on Daniel for light. He says: "And I beheld the same horn (the papacy) made war with the saints and prevailed (suppressed, not exterminated) against them, until the Ancient of Days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the most high, and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom" (Dan. 7:21, 22). Notice here that Daniel clearly states that the little horn shall prevail against the saints, i. e., the papacy shall make war against the ones professing the truth or the church of God until the Ancient of Days comes. Or in other words, until the second coming of Christ for which we are all looking forward. Now it is a matter of impossibility for the papacy to make war against the church of God, if the church of God is not in existence. This is just ordinary common sense, and does not require a very erudite mind to grasp it. And so Daniel clearly proves that the church of God will exist all down the ages until Christ comes to set up the kingdom of God.

This thought is confirmed in the Revelation of Christ to John: "And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and three score days, clothed in sackcloth. These are the two olive trees and the two candlesticks standing before the god of the earth" (Rev. 11:3, 4).

Here are two witnesses; one representing the apostate, and the other the true church, both existing contemporaneously for 1260 years, exactly the same period that Daniel states, proving overwhelmingly that the church of God as inaugurated by Christ has been in existence ever since his time, and that its founder was God, because Christ was God manifested in the flesh (John 1:14). And now we will look into its pre-existence.

The Original Church of God

All through the Scriptures we find the word of God as existent. Its observance fluctuates considerably, and it was disobeyed more than obeyed; but it always was to be found somewhere in however small a degree. We must remember that those people who obeyed the word before the days of Christ will have the same promise granted them that we are looking forward to. The only difference between us is that they believed the Savior was to come and bring salvation, while we believe he has come and brought it, the one belief being prospective and the other retrospective. That being the case, we know that all the ancient worthies mentioned in Heb. 11 believed in Christ and were therefore constituted by God his people. Moses says: "Now therefore if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people, for all the earth is mine. And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation" (Exod. 19:5, 6).

The word holy means "separate," "set apart," which harmonizes perfectly with the word "called" used in the New Testament, and designates the church or body of believers. So the Israelites in the days of Moses were the church of God under another name, and were God's people then just as we are his people today.

We find even earlier reference than this to the same body. Back before the flood in the days of Adam and Seth we read, "Then men began to call upon the name of the Lord" (Gen. 4:26). The marginal reading for this verse is, "Then began men to call upon themselves the name of the Lord," which is exactly what a believer has to do today to constitute himself a son of God; and these men whom we have just mentioned are called the sons of God in Gen. 6:2. Therefore if we constitute the church of God in these days by taking on the name of the Lord, so did men in the days of Adam, proving that the church of God was founded in the days of Adam by God himself, and it is impossible to date anything earlier than that.

Its antiquity and continuous existence are evidences of its divine origin, and we look forward to the day when it will be gathered together as one body to glorify God in the glorious age to come.

Astronomic Reflections

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

BROTHER ADAMS left home May 7th, and returned Aug. 1st. During his absence he baptized seventeen persons and set one new church in order.

It may seem a small matter to the indifferent worldling this setting of seventeen souls on the path that leads to eternal life, but to us who have in some measure grasped what eternal life means with its fathomless weight of glory, it is an achievement, the worth of which is beyond the telling. We count our present lives in years of 365 days. Such a year is scarce the tick of a watch on the calendar of eternity. A normal human life of three score years and ten is but a single day of the Annus Magnus of Great Year that will serve to measure history for immortals.

Shall I tell you about this great year? The story may help you to appreciate what Brother Adams and others are doing, and to give to their necessities all the more cheerfully and gladly. Years ago a certain Colonel Howard Vyse had his curiosity excited by discovering that "to an observer stationed down the entrance passage of the Great Pyramid and looking up and out towards the northern sky, the region in his field of vision was very closely circumpolar," and he asked "the elder Herschel whether that passage had ever pointed toward a polar star, and if so, when, and to what star?"

Herschel studied the question deeply, and then answered, "Yes; about the year 2070 B. C. a Draco, then the polar star did, at its lower culmination, shine directly down the axial line of this passage." This fact fixed in the mind of Herschel the date and age of the Great Pyramid. Professor Smyth also fixed on the date 2170 B. C.

Professor Totten says "The meridian of the Great Pyramid at midnight of this year (2170 B. C.) contained not only the north star at its lower culmination and of course the pole itself and the zenith, but some 90 degrees away from a Draco above the pole and towards the south, passed Alcyone, the chief star of that traditionally honored group the Pleiades," and that "at the very point of this overloaded meridian crossed the equator, it also intersected the ecliptic. In other words, it passed through the vernal equinox or the zero hour of Right Ascension! It is from this point as an initial one that astronomers have always reckoned time. It corresponds to the XII hour mark upon an ordinary clock, or to the XXIV point upon a siderial chronometer marked off into 24 hours."

"It is the meridian which contains the most noticeable star group in the heavens, likewise passed through the vernal equinox from and to which all distances upon the celestial sphere are estimated and counted!

In 2170 B. C. the Pleiades were heralded at the autumnal equinox," they (the Pleiades) could be seen from sunset until daybreak, "and in 2170 B. C. when spring began, the sun and Alcyone rose to their highest in the southern skies at the same instant of time." So that year 2170 B. C. marks the dawn of an astronomic cycle than which we know at present of but one other that is grander. With reference to it the celestial machinery is so delicately adjusted that it cannot recur for 25,827 years. This is the Pleiadic cycle, the Annus Magnus, the Great Year that we have been after. It is a long period, more than four times as long as the period of man's existence upon the earth. But there is a longer period or cycle still. The word Pleiades is Hebrew. It means axle or point around which our universe revolves. Alcyone, the name of the brightest star in this beautiful constellation, is very ancient Arabic and means the centre. It is the central star of the group, and of our universe as well, for "all the stars within reach of our telescopes appear to be moving in majestic circles around this notable constellation and the average revolution of our celestial system (i. e. of all the stars in sight) occupies the stupendous period of 10,770,083 years! which is but another year, of the eternal years, that are to measure the lives of immortal beings.

Professor Totten also gives what he calls "the universal year," a period of 9,433,105,134 etc. years, but the manner of obtaining this number is beyond my ken, and power to explain. He says, "it is equal to 365.24 by 25,827 years." No wonder the poet sang,

When we've been there ten thousand years,
  Bright shining as the sun,
We've no less days to sing God's praise
  Than when we first begun.

The Jews: Past, Present, and Future

THE PAGES of sacred writ furnish us with the most authentic history of the origin of the Jewish race. Glancing retrospectively into the past, let us say about 1500 years B. C., we find that a few people, a number living as slave in the land of the Pharaohs. At that time the population of the world were idolaters. This small group were the only people extant who believed in, and worshipped the God of heaven, and because of this, he set his heart upon them and desired to make of them a great nation. "For they were an holy people unto the Lord and chosen to be a special people unto himself above all people that were upon the face of the earth. He did not set his love upon them or choose them because they were more in number than any people, for they were the fewest of all people; but because the Lord loved them, and because he would keep the oath which he had sworn unto their fathers, that he brought them out with a mighty hand and redeemed them out of the house of bondage, from the hand of Pharaoh, king of Egypt."

For this purpose he raised up a deliverer and leader through whom the yoke was to be lifted and who by God's guidance was to bring them to the land promised them for an everlasting possession a land filled with good things and flowing with milk and honey. A code of religious laws were given them which they were to obey and follow in their worship of Jehovah, and ordinances were established to guide them in their material welfare and progress. For a time all went well. Jehovah's laws were scrupulously enforced and obeyed, and he alone was the supreme object of their love and worship. However, this state of things did not continue; they fell into the ways of their idolotrous neighbors by setting up images of wood and stone to worship in the place of the living God and intermarrying among heathen, which things caused them to forsake the true God and his ways, and which acts brought speedy disaster and punishment in their wake.

From time to time prophets appeared who were instructed by God to warn them of judgments to follow if they did not serve and obey him. In some instances these men were stoned and killed or thrown into prison and their warnings disregarded, and after an interval of 1500 years Jehovah decided to send his Son, conceived by his power and born of a woman, who was to deliver his people from their sins. "He came but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel" to show them the new way opened through him that they might have life, but his own received him not; and after three and a half years of ministry, which ministry consisted in preaching the gospel of the kingdom and in the performance of many miracles to prove his power and divinity, and they clamored for his life and pronounced their own doom in the memorable words, "Let his blood be upon us and our children."

A brief period elapsed (the year 70 A. D.) when the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus occurred, and they were driven from their land outcasts for this national sin and scattered among the nations. These afflictions and persecutions have been the most virulent in the history of mankind. Not a single so-called Christian people or nation has kept itself clear from the reproach of inhumanity to the Jews. To afflict them has been held to be a merit. The times when religion has been most rife and the conscience most sensitive have witnessed the [illegible] outrages and the most frightful [illegible]. But it appears that in times of their most terrible sufferings they turned to God and longed for the promised Messiah. This deliverer however was to be born among the people. At no time have the Jews ever looked for a man from heaven or the Son of God. A study of the history of the Jews from the time of their dispersion will corroborate this assertion and [illegible] Zionists [illegible] a man from [illegible] heaven, but one from their midst [illegible] a savior, and who will lead them [illegible] them as a nation once more.

Two thousand years ago they looked for one who was to be a redeemer of Israel. He came, [illegible] instead of a [illegible] comes with [illegible] lay his head. Instead of identifying himself with the exalted and rich, he sought rather to affiliate himself with the poor and lowly of heart, and as a consequence he was not received only on a part of the few. Always the minority yielding obedience and homage down through the centuries. Few in number in their original state in Egypt, we can trace the analogy down to our present time, in the few in number who accept and obey and worship the true and living God.

Multitudes of the once exalted chosen race have perished and are perishing without pardon or a hope of eternal life, still outcasts from his favor. "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets and stonest them that were sent to thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings and ye would not. Behold, your house is left unto you desolate. For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."

"Blindness in part is happened unto Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. For out of Zion shall come a Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob; for this is my covenant unto them when I shall take away their sins. As concerning the gospel they are enemies for your sakes, but as touching the election, they are beloved for the fathers' sakes. For as ye in times past have not believed God, yet have now obtained mercy through their unbelief."

One is impressed by the multitude of Jews numbering as they do about fourteen millions, despite the decimation and persecutions to which they have been exposed for so many centuries. Think of the cup that has been pressed to their lips for almost two thousand years. The bitterness has passed into their souls and utters itself in scorn and poisoned mocking. Truly they have drunk its dregs, and still they refuse to heed the voice of Jehovah, "This is my Son, hear ye him."

We find in the book of Ezekiel a prophecy concerning the Jew still unfulfilled and future. "The hand of the Lord was upon me and carried me out in the Spirit of the Lord and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones. There were very many bones in the valley and they were very dry. [illegible] these bones live? Behold, I will cause breath to enter into them and they shall live and know that I am the Lord." They were an exceeding great army, and represented the whole house of Israel. "O my people, I will open your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel, and shall place you in your own land." Thus saith the Lord. He will remember his holy covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob to redeem them [illegible] "He shall [illegible] for the peace of Jerusalem."

When Ye Think Not

[illegible] think not the Son of Man [illegible]

JESUS MADE this statement to his disciples, not alone to those few of them who were then living and present with him, but also to those who should succeed them in the years to come. While they were waiting and praying, longing and yearning for the return of their absent Lord, fixing their hopes on this day or that, only to meet bitter disappointment as the dates come and go. We are in our eager longings apt to forget that our Lord has plainly stated that his coming will be unexpected even to those who love him most earnestly and sincerely.

In Matthew 25 the ten virgins represent the [illegible] their [illegible] condition at the coming of the Lord. Some were wise and some foolish, but as the Lord tarried they all [illegible] slumbered and slept. [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] instead of the [illegible] while the world [illegible] with a sneer, "No [illegible] watching and waiting.

But dear ones, have we [illegible] "The night is far spent, the day is at hand." [illegible] the Lord tarries they slumbered and slept, [illegible] while all is quiet and at rest [illegible] unexpectedly the [illegible] cry is heard, "Behold, the [illegible] cometh." [illegible] the din and horrible confusion of a world war [illegible] may rather be expected during the lull that follows the storm. "While they slumbered and slept." May not the present peace be that time?

The foolish [illegible] world fondly hug the delusion that the [illegible] principles of democracy have triumphed, and that we are now entering an unlimited period of world peace, result of the wis- [illegible] and [illegible] the Lord tarries, the ten virgins are wearily continuing the cares and business occupations of life and many begin to doubt that the Lord will [illegible] come, and are setting themselves to sleep and slumber. But to me, dear ones, the time of alertness and expectation was not during the din and roar of battle, but rather now, during the calm that has followed. We know that the present lull in the storm is of necessity but temporary, and that the hopes of a permanent world peace, brought about by man's efforts, is but a fleeting [illegible] that to Jesus, the Prince of Peace, will belong the triumph and glory of procuring a peace to the world that will last.

In view of these facts, dear readers, let us not be found among those who slumber and sleep, but rather let us be alert and watching; for it is my [illegible] conviction that the world's hope of permanent peace will soon be rudely shattered. But [illegible]

Editorial

It is a mistake to speak of the "kingdom above," and that we are destined to reign in the skies. God has said that the kingdom and dominion "under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the Most High" (Dan. 7:27).

You ought not to sing, "With thee we'll reign, and with thee we'll rise, and kingdoms gain beyond the skies. The redeemed of all ages are to sing just the reverse of this: "We are made unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:10).

European Entanglements

European entanglements have been so complicated for centuries that Europe itself has been impotent to solve them. Unfortunately for America, intoxicated with the idea of "making the world safe for democracy" we have abandoned the Monroe doctrine, the stay at home policy of our forefathers, and with undiplomatic minds have entered into the quarrels [illegible] of the whole world. But take the disputes of Europe alone. Following are a few of its problems: to get the Roumanians out of Budapest; to depose Hapsburg Joseph as ruler of the Magyars; to oust Von Der Goltz in the Baltic provinces; to defeat Petlura, the Ukrainian autocrat; settling affairs in Silesia, also the Polish Lithuanian controversy, the Fiume dispute, etc. Then there is the controversy concerning Albania, the Thracian controversy, and the dispute about the ownership of the Aland islands. Europe, a hot bed of factions and quarrels, constantly in wars, turns to America in their extremity and as their only hope. But America cannot, or at least has not, been able to control the little sister nation south of her—Mexico! Truly Europe has no helper. She is reaping the harvest of her crimes, and conditions will continue to grow worse until the kingdom of God rules the world from Jerusalem.

Jews to Unite Workers in Palestine

Petah Tikwah, March 12. (By Mail) Jewish workers of all Palestine recently concluded their first joint convention here. It was a significant session, marking the birth of the Zionist Socialist Federation of Labor, under the name of "United Labor."

In this, the largest and oldest Hebrew colony, just north of Jaffa, more than eighty delegates from every part of the Holy Land met to organize the country's Jewish labor forces. They represented 2,000 "producers," not only agricultural workers, but teachers, office, business, trades, and professional men. Fifty delegates were sent by the thousand legionaries in the Jewish battalions, who have recorded their intention to settle in Palestine and are to be discharged here.

Enthusiasm at Convention

Enthusiasm was high in the convention. Buxom Jewish "farmerettes," but a few years from the Russian Pale, had their share in the lively debate. The Yemenites, a zealous, red-faced little group, more than once clamored for their "rights." Only the fresh-faced tillers from Galilee were calm, among their comrades from Judea, many of them sallow and thin, with the marks of the ghetto still upon them.

The attempt to unite all the workers in the country was not entirely successful. The "Poale Hazir" organization, which with the "Poale Zion" represents Jewish labor in Palestine, refused to send delegates to the convention. It is opposed to the proletariat against capitalism line of federation and is striving to fuse all classes of Jewry in a "back to the land of labor" movement. The "Poale Hazir," however, did take part in the agricultural conferences that preceded the convention.

Federation's Platform

The new federation hopes to organize 15,000 "producers" in the country soon through the Poale Zion Verband [illegible] international congress of Jewish workers to consider the labor and colonization problems of Palestine. Its platform is: nationalization of all the soil; the recognition of a minimum wage; the use of the Hebrew language now threatened by the influx of Yiddish-speaking newcomers; and land grants from the government for the Jewish legionaries who remain here.

Outside of the Workmen's club house, where the convention was held, Petah Tikwah lay quiet, dusty, with war-swept look. The numbers painted on its worn houses in the Rue Rothschild and the Rue Herzel still bear witness of those November days in 1917, when Petah Tikwah was part of the British front and Tommies were billetted behind its doors.

Changes For Better Apparent

Nature is beginning to revive here. The orange groves gleam green and golden in the sunshine. The almond trees are heavy with fragrant pink bloom. But the man-made streets are dilapidated, the people shabby. And yet the new spirit in the land is evident everywhere in the piano tunes that come from every second window, in the light step of the passer by, in the Hebrew and French street signs that the colonists never dared to post under the Turkish eye. Trinitarians at the Bar of Reason

Following article by Brother Judd was sent to the daily press, but was refused as usual. Editor.

To the Editor:

Sir: The Methodist Book and Publishing House is admittedly doing good work in issuing some very excellent publications, and very deservedly has a wide reputation among other denominations as well as their own. The general aim and object they pursue is good, yet it is sadly counterbalanced by much that is detrimental to their cause and to Christianity at large. Indeed, much that they teach is not Christianity, and one is painfully surprised to frequently come across statements that are utterly false, lacking in reason and commonsense and above all contrary to Scripture. Only the dire necessity of attempting to bolster up a false creed the dying creed of the Middle Ages could induce men of such mental calibre as Mr. Briggs to publish the rubbish that occasionally appears in their publication. Objection may be, and sometimes is taken, when these things are mentioned in connection with the names of such well known men. But we can see no valid objection to this. Paul certainly had no such scruples when he publicly accused such men as Mark, Hymeneus, and Philetus. He attacked the doctrine, and the men who attempted to advance the doctrine, by reason of the standing in the church they had attained. He was loyal to the truth even if it meant seeming disloyalty to his friends.

What calls for present protest is the fact that these things are presented for serious truth, and are [illegible] Sunday School libraries for young people. In the "Senior Berean Lesson Quarterly," published in Toronto for the Methodist denomination, the subject for April 27th was "The Holy Spirit." This necessarily required a consideration of the doctrine of the Trinity. The article is evidently editorial, and meant to carry the weight of the teaching of the Methodist Church on this matter.

The writer says: "When we speak of one God in three persons we do not abandon our reason, or suggest that God can be divided." Then why so speak of God, for it surely carries the suggestion? It is because they do speak so that we feel compelled to object. After charging older theologians with "stating truth in terms unpalatable to reason," and saying God never asks us to do violence to our nature, and that faith contrary to reason is false," he actually pens the following:

"There is one God, one only God, who reveals himself to us in three ways so different that we call him by three different names. When we think of God as the maker of the world, and giver of all good gifts we call him Father; when we think of God as dwelling in Jesus Christ who loved us and gave himself for us, we think of the same God, but call him the Son; when we speak of God speaking in our conscience, encouraging us, making us strong to do right, we think of the same God, but call him the Holy Spirit."

How any thinking mind can accept such nonsense as an elucidation (?) of the doctrine of the Trinity is beyond comprehension; and beyond the ability of Dr. Briggs or any other person to harmonize with either Scripture or reason.

How can God be both Father and Son? How can God be "dwelling in Christ," if God and Christ are the same?

These are some of the self evident questions which every one, big or little, to whom these periodicals are addressed have a right to demand a reasonable answer. Many such instances can be quoted in Methodist literature, containing a line of reasoning which they would scorn to use in connection with their business, but can see no shame in introducing to the young in the name of religion. To foist such teaching upon the young is reprehensible in the extreme.

Yours sincerly,
R. H. JUDD.

Russellism Refuted

Article Six

So far we can be sure that the one faith of the "common salvation" was known by means of the "word of God" in the days of Enoch, and that by it, "without which it is impossible to please God." Enoch "had this testimony, that he pleased God." We are now back to the seventh generation from Adam. Let us now enter the family circle of Adam and Eve and see if they had this one faith as the "substance of things hoped for" and therefore of things promised. Paul says, "For by it the elders obtained a good report." Is it asking too much to believe that Adam and Eve were among the "elders"? The Diaglott renders verse 2 as follows: "In Faith (capital 'F') we perceive that the Ages have been thoroughly adjusted by God's command, that not from things then manifest the things now seen have come to pass." "Faith" is here a system in which when learned the mind will comprehend thereby a proper adjustment of all ages leading up to the "age to come," when the rewards of the "Faith" will be gloriously realized. That this was sufficiently clear to Abel as to enable him to grasp "things hoped for," and to offer a sin offering as an exemplification of his faith in Christ as the "seed of the woman" whose heel the serpent would bruise and who would bruise the serpents head is shown by the fact that "the sacrifice more" which he offered than that of Cain secured for him the assurance that "he was righteous." Here, then, is the one faith in Adam and Eve's family, and when we add to this the evident significance of the record that Adam and Eve were clothed with coats of skins, have we not sufficient to show that their "sins were covered," their "iniquity forgiven" by the divinely appointed means of the sacrificial death of the victims from which the "coats of skins" were procured? Since it is positively stated that Abel offered a sacrifice of the firstling of the flock, must we not conclude that instructions had been given to the family as to the typical significance of these sacrifices? The very fact that Cain was condemned for not making the "sin-offering that coucheth at the door of the [illegible]" shows that he was disobeying a command, otherwise his condemnation was without just reason.

Here then is the sainted family sanctified from their fallen state by means of the "Faith which was once for all delivered to the saints." This delivered faith of the "common salvation" was never withdrawn from the Adamic race. The "chance" was given to the race through the same federal heads who forfeited the first "chance" in Eden. God did his part as an act of love did it "once for all;" and he in no sense is responsible for the fact that a large part of mankind "wandered out of the way of understanding," and are fit therefore only to "remain in the congregation of the dead" (Prov. 21:16). Catechism on the Soul

From a Bible Standpoint

The soul what is it ? It is something that God created. When did he create it ? In the beginning after he had created the earth and the animals. How did he create the soul ? God created man in his own image and form (Gen. 1:27). God formed man of the dust of the ground (Gen. 2:7). What kind of a being was he ? A lifeless being. How did he obtain life ? God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and this man that God formed of the dust of the ground, in his own image and likeness, became a living soul (Gen. 2:7). Was this soul to live forever ? No. Why ? Because this soul disobeyed God, and when God judged him he said to him: "Dust thou art and unto dust thalt thou return" (Gen. 3:19). Did this soul ever return to dust ? Yes. This living soul lived 930 years and he died (Gen. 5:5). Could he return to dust while living ? No. Then to fulfill God's law he had to die. Do all living souls have to die ? Yes. All go into one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again (Eccl. 3:20).

Can anyone, besides God, cause the soul to return to dust ? Yes. Who is the first we have any record of ? Cain. He slew his brother Abel (Gen. 4:8). What is the breath of life ? The air we breathe. Can anything live without it ? No. Who does it belong to ? God. There is no soul of man, or beast, or any living plant, or any living thing, that God has created on this earth, that can live without air. Is not anything that gives life spirit? Yes. Then air, being life-giving spirit, returns to God who gave it, at the death of the soul. It returns back to the atmosphere, which is the air that surrounds the earth, and it belongs to God. Have we any statement in the Bible that a soul must breathe in order to live ? Yes. "And they smote all the souls that were therein, with the edge of the sword; utterly destroying them; there was not any left to breathe" (Josh. 11:11-14). "Behold, I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live; and the breath came into them and they lived" (Ezek. 37:5 10). All the while my breath is in me, and the Spirit of God is in my nostrils (Job 27:3). The Spirit of God hath made me and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life (Job 33:4).

Does the Bible declare that the soul shall die ? Yes. The soul that sinneth, it shall die (Ezek. 18: 4:20). Does the soul sin ? Yes. For all have sinned (Rom. 3:23). Is there any other kind of soul mentioned in the Bible ? Yes, about forty different kinds. Do any of them live forever ? No. They all sin, and all die. Is there any other life than the present mentioned ? Yes. The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life (Rom. 6:23). Has anyone received this eternal life ? Yes. Who ? Jesus Christ our Lord. How did he receive it ? By a ressurrection from the dead ones. Then if he has received eternal life, he can die no more. Now what kind of a soul is he ? An immortal soul. Are there any immortal souls on earth ? No. Why ? Because the only immortal soul that ever was on earth has gone to heaven. Is he going to stay there ? No. Where is he going to spend eternity ? In due time he is coming to earth again. "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven ? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner, as ye have seen him go into heaven" (Acts 1:11).

What is he coming to earth for ? "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (1 Thess. 4:13-18). Those that are raised at this time will be like Christ. "For we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is" (1 John 3:2). Then if Christ was raised immortal, we also will be raised immortal. How can we become immortal ? By a resurrection. Who will be raised ? Those that are Christ's at his coming. Who are Christ's ? All those that believe the gospel, and are baptized into Christ. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ: and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise" (Gal. 3:27-29). No immortality out of Christ, and no living again without a resurrection.

Obituaries

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

John H. Pack was born in Anderson Co., S. C. Aug. 16, 1860, and died in the same county Aug. 17, 1919, at the age of 59 years and 1 day. He and Miss Mollie Browning were united in marriage about 38 years ago. She and 8 children are still living.

Several years ago Brother and Sister Pack learned the truth under the teaching of my father, Elder E. M. Anderson, and were baptized by him, Brother Pack lived to see all his children obey Christ in baptism. Brother Pack was a noble man, and a true servant of God. He was unable to attend the services in the last special meeting held in his home church; but on the last day of the meeting when the writer bade him farewell, he seemed some better, and as he handed us $5 he expressed the hope that we would come back and he would be able to attend the services. May God bless and keep the family in the narrow way that leads to life, is the prayer of the writer.

Funeral service was conducted by his pastor, Brother Durham. In their great sorrow the family does not sorrow as those that have no hope (1 Thess. 4:13-18).

Arthur R. Underwood.

Former Editor of "The Restitution"

After an illness of ten days, Arthur R. Underwood passed away at 9:20 P. M., July 22, 1919, at his home at 401 North Center St., Plymouth, Ind.

The cause of death was endocarditis, which is an inflamation of the lining of the heart. The blood carried this poisonous inflamation to all parts of the body. It was found that the heart was greatly enlarged, a condition which had been coming on for some time, evidently, but which had not been noticed. Injections of serum relieved the disease for a time, but could not stay it. The fires of disease burned out the life. The last fire call had come and the engine could not put out the flames.

He was of English parentage; his father Edwin Underwood, and [illegible] [illegible] Underwood came to St. Charles Illinois, when the city of Chicago was in its infancy. Mr. Underwood was born in St. Charles, Dec. 23rd, 1853, and spent his boyhood days in that place

While yet a young man, he went to Chicago, where he learned the printer's trade in The Restitution office, and during the Chicago fire he saved the record books and valuable mail lists of that paper. When this newspaper was removed to Plymouth in 1874, at the time H. V. Reed assumed the editorial management, Mr Underwood accompanied it to Plymouth. Later in 1887 he became editor and manager, and he retained complete control of the same until July, 1911, when he sold it to the Church of God Publishing Company, at Cleveland, Ohio, having spent twenty-five years of hard work and sacrifice in the interests of this paper, which he had raised to a high degree of excellence.

After severing his connection with "The Restitution" he held a position on The Plymouth Republican, as reporter until he left to assume again the official position as water superintendent.

Mr. Underwood united with the Church of God in 1875, to which religious conviction he remained faithful to the time of his death. He was superintendent of the Sunday School of the local congregation, and due to his long connection with The Restitution, the official organ of this denomination, his personal acquaintance with the people of that faith extended throughout the United States and Canada.

On May 9, 1876, he married Laura Evelyn Thompson, who survives him. In addition surviving him are his three sons, Arthur T. of Leroy, New York; Harold V. of Detroit, and Glen L. of this city. An only daughter, Litta E., died at the age of three years. He also leaves three brothers, Fred G., and Frank M. Underwood, of St. Charles, Illinois, and Charles A. Underwood of Chicago; two sisters, Emma M. Underwood and Sarah J. Underwood-Wilson, having died several years ago. In addition to these he leaves five grandchildren living, and many other relatives.

The funeral services, conducted by D. Van Vactor, will be held at the residence, 401 North Center St., Friday, July 25, at 3:00 P. M. Interment in Oak Hill Cemetery.--Plymouth (Ind) Republican.

BAPTISMS

Since our last report we have baptized Stella Lewis, Leroy Austin, Nolan Orr and David Glen Van Vactor. Sister Lewis was baptized June 20 and will associate with the Hillisburg church. Brother Austin was baptized July 7, and is associated with the North [illegible] church. Brothers Orr and Van Vactor were baptized Aug. 18, at Hillisburg. May these children of God by faith in Jesus and obedience to that form of doctrine once delivered to us press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling and win the crown of life when Jesus comes, is our prayer.

GOLDEN TEXT: I Timothy 6:11, 12

COURAGE

Because I hold it sinful to despond,
And will not let the bitterness of life
Blind me with burning tears, but look beyond
Its tumult and its strife:

Because I lift my head above the mist
Where the sun shines, and the broad breezes blow,
By every ray, and every rain-drop kissed
That God's love doth bestow:

Think you I feel no bitterness at all?
No burden to be borne like Christian's pack?
Think you there are no ready tears to fall -
Because I keep them back?

Why should I hug life's ills with cold reserve
To curse myself and all who love me? Nay,
A thousand times more good than I deserve
God gives me every day.

And, in each one of these rebellious tears
Kept bravely back—he makes a rainbow shine!
Grateful, I take his slightest gift—no fears
Nor any doubts are mine!

Dark skies must clear! And when the clouds are past,
One golden day will redeem a weary year;
Patience I listen and wait, sure that sweet at last
Will sound his voice of cheer!

Then vex me not with chidings let me be
I must be grateful to the end;
I grudge not others their cold darkness me
The power of light befriend.

Our Greatest Friend

What a friend we have in Jesus,
Our sins and griefs to bear!

Recently while in an emporium where hundreds of women are employed, I overheard one remark to another, "I tell you what Katie, there's only one friend you always can count on, and that's the Lord Jesus Christ." I do not know the cause of the remark, neither do I know Katie's answer, or whether or not she made one. The above uttered just as I was passing was all I heard.

We all know the meaning of friend. Solomon puts it thus: "A friend loveth at all times." To my mind one of the best examples of friendship known is that of Ruth to Naomi her mother-in-law who, when urged to return to her own people, said to Naomi, "Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest I will go: and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God: where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me."

Another great example of loving friendship is that recorded as existing between David and Jonathan. Surely no two men loved more than these.

Great as was the friendship of Ruth to Naomi, and Jonathan's to David, these are as nothing when compared to the friendship of Jesus to us. Did you ever consider the sacrifice made by Jesus on our behalf? He who was born the Son of God, he, who, in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant (slave), and was made in the likeness of men: and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Yes, this same Jesus who, though born a prince, could have summoned legions of angels to succor him, actually suffered the most dreadful privations so he could know by experience our temptation; suffered pain so that he would know what we had to endure, and in the end died; yea, not only died, but died by crucifixion, the most horrible death ever known. And why? Because we, through faith in him as the Son of God the Christ, our wisdom, our righteousness, our sanctification and our redemption, might become sons and daughters of his Father and with them live in peace and joy throughout the endless ages of eternity Truly Jesus is our friend, and in the words of the young woman, "the only friend you always can count on."

If Jesus, having already done so much and still in reserve holding other fruits of his friendship—such as his coming again to raise the dead, change the living, restore beauty and peace to this sin cursed earth—can love and protect us, can we afford to be less generous, can we afford to be less loving and friendly toward him and his Father than was Ruth toward Naomi? Those are glorious words of Ruth's and she acted out her words so that in Naomi's mind there was no doubt of her sincerity; and if we are to have part in the glory that God is to bestow upon his Son, as also upon those who follow after him, then our professions of loyalty, of service, of love, must also be genuine, must be sincere, must be true, so that in our dealings with our fellows, God's love and God's truth will reflect from us with such an abundance and brightness that the world will know we are his.

Yes, there's only one friend we always can count on, and that's the Lord Jesus Christ.

One there is, above all others,
Well deserves the name of friend;
His is love beyond a brother's,
Costly, free, and knows no end.

Our Weekly Puzzle

Paul stood in the midst of Mars Hill and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious. For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, To the unknown god. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you.

Who was Paul?

Where, and what is Athens?

What is the meaning of "superstitious"?

What is the significance of "declare"?

Who did Paul declare unto the people of Athens?

Who wrote the above? and where can the passage be found?

Answer next issue.

Answer to puzzle in last issue:

"Ignorant" signifies "not knowing; uninformed."

As mortals, we count time in moments, minutes, hours, days, week, months, years. God being eternal, has no need of dividing time. Therefore the terms, "one day," and "a thousand years," are of man's invention. God being, unlimited, his one day might equal a thousand years of man's time, or the reverse might be the case. Therefore when the apostle wrote, "that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day," he wished us to know and understand that as God was eternal, and the author of all things, he was not limited. Even time with God had no significance.

The meaning of "slack," as used, is "careless; not keeping one's word."

"Long-suffering" means "with long patience."

A thief comes unannounced, unexpectedly, hence we must keep a sharp look out for him.

The passage was written by the apostle Peter "to those who have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Savior Jesus Christ," and can be found in 2 Peter 3.8-10.

Which Do You Prefer?

We read that "faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God" "Being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. By whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God." "For, by faith ye stand."

While agnosticism is a school of thought which believes that beyond what man can know or feel by his higher affections, nothing can be known. Facts or supposed facts both of the lower and higher life, are accepted, but all inferences deduced from these facts as to the existence of an unseen world, or of beings higher than man are considered unsatisfactory, and are ignored. Agnostics, positivists, and secularists have much in common, and many people exist to whom any one of the three names might be indifferently applied.

If I were a voice a persuasive voice
That could travel the wide world through,
I would fly on the beams of the morning light,
And speak to men with a gentle might,
And tell them to be true.—C. Mackay.

Success

He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often, and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men, and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem, or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's fine beauty, or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best in others and given the best he had; whose life was an insipration, his memory a benediction.

The Letters

Recently the Sage Foundation conducted an investigation to find out which letters of the alphabet were mostly used, and in what proportion they were used, and according to Dr. Leonard P. Ayres A, E, H, N, O, and T, do more than half the work of the entire alphabet, E and T leading, doing fully one quarter of the whole. The greatest slackers being Q, X, and V. E, of course, is the letter used more than any other, and this made me think of an article once read which stated that the letter E is the most unfortunate letter of all because is always out of cash, forever in debt, never out of danger, and in trouble all the time.

For some reason this writer neglected the fortunates of the letter, so we'll call your attention to the fact that E never is in war, but always in peace. It is the beginning of existence, the commencement of east, and the end of trouble. Without it there would not be any meat, no life, nor heaven. It is the centre of honesty makes love perfect, and without it there would be no home, nor father nor mother, nor sister nor brother. Even self would be non existent.

The New Era

The following verses were written by a Clevelander for Prof. Thomas F. Moran, who recited them in his lecture on The New Era, at Chautauqua recently.

When will the clouds of discord cease on earth,
And man receive from heaven his nobler birth?
When all injustice shall have passed away,
And righteousness shall bring the perfect day.

When will the nations cease their wicked strife,
And live a better, sweeter, purer life?
When love divine cements them wise and good
In one great universal brotherhood.

Then right and truth and justice shall appear,
And faith and hope shall banish doubt and fear;
Then ignorance and sin shall flee from sight,
And wisdom shed its pure, celestial light.

Then love and joy and peace shall fill the soul,
And give mankind a richer, granded goal;
Then man shall know the truth that makes him free
To serve his God and all humanity.—Selected by Chas. A. Goss.

The Apostolic Church

MANY ARE troubled as to whether we are the original body of Christ or not. Others call us bigoted to claim that we are. Between doubt and an unjust criticism, we are left to prove our claim from the Scriptures. Paul in 2 Thess. 2:3 states that before the coming of Jesus there must bee a falling away first, an apostasy. We need not spend any time in proving the apostasy has been working since the apostle wrote this letter, and is still working. We need but compare present day church creeds with the one which is everywhere evil spoken of.

This apostasy was not of a rapid growth, but has continued from the second century to the present time. Paul admonishes the brethren not to let the things heard slip, that is, leak out (Heb. 2:2). These things were the words spoken by the Lord at the first, and confirmed unto us by those who heard him. God bearing witness both with signs and wonders and dives miracles and gifts of the Holy Spirit. All will admit that if we are able to trace and develop the thing which at the first was spoken by the Lord, we will be successful in identifying the church of the living God. A name will not do this as any religious people have a right to the name that suits them best. There is but one true way, and that is to establish the true apostolic doctrine and compare it with the nominal churches of today.

The churches which reject the gospel preached by Jesus and his apostles and which they gleaned from the prophetic word, must be the apostasy. It is evident that these Scriptures permit of but one Christ, one body of which Jesus the Christ is the head, and one God, the Father of us all. Please allow us first to give the principal doctrines held and preached by the nominal churches. The distinguishing features are:

1. The Trinity;
2. The immortality of the soul;
3. Receiving our reward in heaven; and
4. The torture of the wicked in flames of fire during the eternal ages.

The first rejects the first command and the teaching of Jesus when he said, "The Lord our God is one God."

The second rejects the judgment and the plain language of the Scriptures.

The third rejects the doctrine of the resurrection and the Scriptures.

The fourth blasphemes the character and the name of our heavenly Father and renders the judgment a farce. The charches preaching and establishing these doctrines may be classed as apostates.

This apostasy can easily be traced to the one church which is the mother of them all. The beginning of this church was at the first apostolic but now the apostate church. Ecclesiastical and profane history prove the above statements. The doctrines that will identify the true church which is called in Scripture the church of God, are,

1. The one God;
2. Jesus the Christ as the future ruler over the whole earth;
3. Man's nature;
4. Man's inheritance on the earth; and
5. The restitution of all things spoken of by the prophets.

Other truths may be mentioned, but the above are sufficient. It is our privilege and duty to show that the above are vital truths. When Jesus began preaching he proclaimed the gospel of the kingdom of God and that he was the Son of God. Gospel being good news concerning some kingdom we have but to prove what kingdom is referred to and who was the promised king. In the above quotation the word gospel is modified by the phrase, "the kingdom of God." Therefore it is God's kingdom that is spoken of. In Dan. 2:44 he states that God will set up a kingdom that will not pass away. In chapter 7:27 the prophet locates this kingdom under the whole heavens. He will give this kingdom to the saints of the Most High, and all dominion shall serve and obey him. Isa. 9:6, 7 says, that the child born and the son given shall sit upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this.

Oregon Bible College
Oregon, Illinois

Again, we read in Jer. 23:5, 6 that the Lord will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. To identify the Son and Branch we will give the testimony of an angel. Luke 1:31-33: "The Lord will give him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." To further enlighten the reader we call attention to Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost in which he states that God raised Jesus from the dead to sit on David's throne (Acts 2:30). In the 42 verse this is called "the apostles' doctrine." In this chapter Peter emphasizes the fact that Jesus died and that God raised him from the dead. When they believed these truths they asked, "What shall we do?" In verse 38 the apostle tells them that their sins will be remitted by an immesion into the name of Jesus the Christ.

The above testimony is sufficient to identify the apostolic church. The church that rejects this doctrine is apostate. In Deut. 6:4 the angel announces, "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord." In Mark 12:29 Jesus quotes this text in answer to the question, "Which is the first commandment of all?" Under the law covenant the penalty was death to one who would teach any other commandment. In 1 Cor. 8:6 Paul teaches, "To us there is but one God, the Father, and one Lord Jesus, the Christ." Those who teach the doctrine of the trinity reject the one God and the sonship of Jesus the Christ, and are therefore apostate. The angel announces to Moses, as sure as the Lord liveth he will fill the earth with his glory (Num. 14:21). Isaiah declares that the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the deep. Hab. 2:14 gives expression to the same grand truth. Peter says the times of the restitution will begin when Jesus shall come (Acts 3:21). Paul writes to the Ephesian church that God will, in the dispensation of the fulness of time gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in the heavens and which are on the earth, in him. When this shall have been accomplished the restitution will be complete, when nothing shall harm in all the earth. Then will Jesus occupy his throne and the twelve will be seated on thrones ruling the twelve tribes of Israel. Then will Jesus reign from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth (Matt. 19:28; Psa. 72). In view of the great blessing promised, should we not be diligent in adding to our faith the seven Christian graces? What an honor it is to be called out of the world into the body of Christ. But it is a greater honor to be chosen out of the church and given a crown of righteousness to rule in the earth. This honor will be given to those who have kept the faith and fought the fight. Remember that one star will differ from another star in glory.

"Out of Darkness Into Light"

By Allen D. Strickler

RELIGION IS not so much to prevent punishment as to save that which is worth saving. Nothing but the divine mind is worth saving; therefore the work of religion is for each one to create within himself the divine mind, that is, the New Man or New Creature.

Things do not just happen, that is, come by chance. The creation of the New Creature requires work by each one. It must be directed by the commandments of God, which are found only in the Bible. Peter says in Acts 2:40, "Save yourselves from this untoward generation;" and Paul says in Phil. 2:12, "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." Again Peter says, "God does not wish or desire that any should perish; but that all should come to repentence." Now repentance in its last analysis means a thinking with God; and to think with God, is to have the mind of God, that is, the divine nature as the apostle Peter says in 2 Epistle 1:4.

In commercial life, it is only the man that qualifies and makes himself capable, who secures the $25,000 job. Man as a mere animal, who has no spiritual aspirations, is no more to God than any of the animals of the lower creation; he serves a purpose for the time being, as a rough hewer, and then perishes, even as the animals have for untold ages. Psa. 49:20: "Man that is in honor, and understandeth not is as the beasts that perish." Verse 12, "Nevertheless, man being in honor abideth not; he is like the beasts that perish."

Christ said to the Pharisees, "God knoweth your hearts: for that which is highly esteemed among men is an abomination in the sight of God" (Luke 16:15).

Again, Christ said unto the Jews, John 5:44, "How can ye believe, who receive glory one of another, and the glory which cometh from the only God ye seek not." Job 11:12, "For vain man would be wise, though born like a wild ass colt." Psa. 73:22, "So foolish was I and ignorant; I was a beast before thee." Ecclesiastes 3:18: "I said in mine heart concerning the estate of the sons of men, that God might manifest them, that they may see that they themselves are but as beasts." Isa. 40:15, 17: "Behold, the nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance; behold he taketh up the isles as a very little thing." "All nations before him are as nothing, and they are counted to him less than nothing, and vanity."

What then, does amount to something in the eyes of God? Gal. 6:15: "For neither is circumcision anything, nor uncircumcision, but a New Creature." Isaiah 45:18: "For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens: God himself that formed the earth and made it: he hath established it; he created it not in vain: he formed it to be inhabited." Verse 12, "I have made the earth and created man upon it."

When God created man from the dust of the ground or the chemical elements of which the earth is composed, he had an object in view extending off into the distant future. His purpose was not temporal but eternal, and so Job said, "Thou wilt have a desire to the work of thy hands." The work has several stages, and so in the creation of man, God not only has an interest in the final stage, but in the first or natural as well, because from the natural will be evolved or created the spiritual and eternal state.

It is because what man is potentially, that God has regard for him. Prov. 8:4, "Unto you, O man, I call; and my voice is to the sons of men." Verse 6, "Hear, for I will speak of excellent things; and the opening of my lips shall be of right things." Verse 8, "All the words of my mouth are in righteousness." Verse 18, "Riches and honor are with me; yea, durable riches and righteousness." Verse 20, "I will walk in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment."

The wisdom of God is from everlasting; it is eternal. There has been no time when it was not; and its first manifestation to intelligences was in righteousness. Wisdom and righteousness are eternal principles, always existing in union, one having no precedence in time, over the other. Abstractly they could not exist; for they belong to mentality; and mentality belongs to individual and personal identity. Identity is the consciousness of separate individual existence. This conscious individuality is something: which something is of God. The Scriptures tell us that God is a Spirit. The wisdom of God says, "That I may cause those that love me to inherit substance." This substance is a spiritual body. The primary purpose of God is to increase himself in units like unto himself; hence Wisdom says, "I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him; rejoicing in the habitable parts of his earth; and my delight was with the sons of men." Gen. 1:26: "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." This work of making man in the image of God, is the work of faith based on the "testimony of Jesus, which is the spirit of prophecy" (Rev. 19:10).

Romans 5:1: "Being therefore justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Hebrews 10:38: "But my righteous one shall live by faith; and if he shrink back my soul hath no pleasure in him." God's "righteous one" lives by faith; but should this righteous one lose faith, he is no longer God's righteous one. Paul says in Romans 4:9, "That faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness." The faith that justifies a man in the sight of God, is not only to believe in the promises of rewards in the future which God has made, but also to believe in and love the attributes which make up the character of God. The attributes of God constitute his righteousness; and hence by a natural law, an intelligent faith in God as a being of righteousness, will make a person like God, because we become like what we have faith in and worship.

Seeing then that wisdom, the wisdom of God, and the righteousness of God, are inseparably joined together, the Scriptures exhort man to get wisdom. Proverbs 4:7: "Wisdom is the principal thing, therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting, get understanding." We now see why the study of the Scriptures is necessary.

In God's work of creating man in his image and likeness, that he may have something worth saving, he has furnished a pattern in the person of Jesus Christ. Phil. 2:6: "Who being in the form of God, counted it not a prize to be on an equality with God." Col. 1:15: "Who is the image of the invisible God, the first born of all creation." 1 Tim. 3:16, "God was manifested in the flesh." This image is designed to create "the hidden man of the heart," and hence Paul says in Romans 8:10, "If Christ is in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness." Col. 1:27: "To whom God was pleased to make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory."

Eternal life is conditional as to whether Christ, the Christ character, and faith has been created in the heart. Gal. 4:19: "My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you." Christ must not only be in a person, but the person must be in Christ. "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ, shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. 1:30: "But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who was made unto us wisdom from God, and righteousness and sanctification, and redemption." Wisdom, and righteousness and sanctification and redemption, come from God through Jesus Christ to us in the order here enumerated; it has pleased God to make these four things personal in Christ, the pattern, for the benefit of man redounding for the pleasure of God by companionship which will be agreeable to his pure and holy mind. One of the laws of God belonging to his moral kingdom is companionship, without which the object for which it exists is defeated. Genesis 2:18: "And the Lord God said, It is not good that man should be alone; I will make him an help meet for him."

Now as regards the Creator, we learn that "the Lord by wisdom founded the earth; by understanding he established the heavens" (Prov. 3:19), and that when God prepared the heavens, widom was there; and that his great creative work in making the mighty planetary systems of the universe by his wisdom, was a great delight and rejoicing unto him; yet there was something lacking to fill the cup of his pleasure. In a planet or system of worlds, there is no companionship, no intellectual appreciation nor response; and so wisdom says that God's (that is the wisdom of God) "delight was with the sons of men" (Prov. 8:31).

God's wisdom suggests that it is not good for God to dwell alone without any intellectual creatures who can enjoy and appreciate his creation and his righteous character; in other words, that it is not good for him "to dwell alone." To this great work of creating companionship for himself, God has devoted himself through the ages, in connection with this earth; and it is reasonable to believe that he has been doing the same in conjunction with other worlds during infinity of time. True companionship is founded upon unity of mind and spirit; therefore if God would have the company well pleasing to himself, he must of necessity create it in a creature having moral capacity; and such a creature is man.

The Revelator said, "And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he shall dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God." Numbers 14:21: "But as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord."

In these two passages of Scripture we behold the finished work of God with man in reference to salvation. God tabernacles with man when he is with man in mind and spirit, as we see from Rev. 3:20: "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come unto him, and will sup with him, and he with me." Christ said to his disciples, "I have meat to eat that ye know not" (John 4:32). "For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew him not, nor the voices of the prophets which are read every Sabbath, they have fulfilled them by condemning him" (Acts 13:27).

The voice that must be heard which admits God and Christ into the heart is the voice of the prophets; the voice of the prophets is "the testimony of Jesus," which came by the spirit of prophecy, or is the spirit of prophecy, in the same way that Christ said in John 6:63, "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life."

The voice of God, which is the voice of the prophets, is the testimony through the Bible from Genesis to the last chapter of Revelation, concerning Jesus Christ, as prophet, priest, and king; and is summarized in Acts 8:12 as "The things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ," and by Paul in Romans 1:16 as "the gospel," being the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.

This voice of the prophets is the incorruptible seed, the word of God, which liveth and abideth (1 Pet. 1:23). It is sown into the heart, and returns to God in the form of a perfected character the same in kind as the seed; making one more divine mind individaulized in personality; and part of that "great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues," destined to "inherit the earth."

If we understand that God's work with man is to multiply himself in man, so that he can have something worth saving; then we know why those "who have set to their seal that that God is true" (John 3:33) are called "children of God" (Rom. 8:16), and also in 1 John 3:2, "sons of God."

The connection between children and parents is that of sameness and equality. This the Jews understood, as we see in John 5:18: "Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill him, because he had not only broken the Sabbath, but said also that God was his Father, making himself equal with God." A father knows and acknowledges his children; this is equally so in reference to God, as the Spirit of prophecy testifies. 2 Tim. 2:19, "The Lord knoweth them that are his." John 10:27: "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me, and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." (See Numbers 16:5.) John 8:51, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my word, he shall never see death." Prov. 4:13, "Take fast hold of instruction; let her not go: keep her: for she is thy life." Prov. 23:23: "Buy the truth and sell it not; also wisdom, and instruction, and understanding."

Wisdom God's, word, and the truth, are all one and the same thing as used in the Bible. They have no reference to knowledge and wisdom in general; the knowledge of the sciences, history, politics, law; and that which relates to human endeavor, as a whole, will in no way profit a man apart from the wisdom that has come from God by inspiration and revelation. Paul says that "the world through its wisdom knew not God" (1 Cor. 1:21). In Job 11:7 the question is put, "Canst thou by searching find out God? Canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection?"

Paul was constrained to say: "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments and his ways past finding out." The wisdom that is worth saving for companionship with God, is that which converts itself into a concrete righteous character of which Christ is the model.

Paul says in 1 Cor. 1:24, "Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God;" and in Col. 2:3, "In whom are all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." The testimony is, "that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself" (2 Cor. 5:19). Christ, as God manifest in the flesh, by his word of wisdom, projected himself into man, and man became a new creature in the image of God, even the moral image which is his glory. The world that becomes reconciled to God, is the world that Paul speaks of in Heb. 2:5, "The world to come."

Psa. 146:8, "The Lord loveth the righteous." 1 John 1:4, "God is love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him." Verse 19, "We love him, because he first loved us." And why did he first love us? Because when he stood at the door and knocked, we heard his voice, and opened the door.

1 Pet. 3:12: "For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears open unto their prayers; but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil."

Psa. 50:17: "But unto the wicked God saith, What hast thou to do to declare my statutes, or that thou shouldest take my covenant in thy mouth? Seeing thou hatest instruction, and castest my words behind thee."

Prov. 8:34, 35. "Blessed is the man that heareth me, watching daily at my gates, waiting at the posts of my doors. For whoso findeth me findeth life and shall obtain favor of the Lord."

Isa. 40:31: "But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint."

In Proverbs we learn, "That as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Man is what he knows and believes in: his knowledge and faith determine his actions, making his habits and character; which determines his standing in the sight of God. The cry of the Bible is for the righteousness of God that it might be fulfilled in men, "who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit" (Rom. 8:4). Jesus said, "But seek ye first his kingdom, and his righteousness: and all these things shall be added unto you." Paul in his letter to the Romans gives the facts about the mind; because of these facts salvation is possible, therefore what the apostle says is of supreme importance. Starting in Rom. 8:6, Paul says: "For the mind of the flesh is death; but the mind of the spirit is life and peace; because the mind of the flesh is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be; and they that are in the flesh cannot please God." Verse 12: "So then, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh; for if ye live after the flesh, ye must die: but if by the spirit ye put to death the deeds of the body, ye shall live."

In these statements of the apostle we see two adverse and opposite minds or mental conditions: one is the mind of the flesh, and the other is the mind of the spirit. The first mental condition or state is a state of death to God and ends in a death from which there can be no resurrection; therefore it is a death more than natural death, because it is possible for those who die under or by natural law, to be raised again to mortal life, and no injustice or setting aside of the penalty of God's law due because of transgression.

The second mental condition or state is one of being alive to God, and ends in eternal life. The finality of every individual, therefore, is either eternal death, or eternal life. The greatest of all questions then is, What is the mind of flesh, and what is the mind of the Spirit?

Some Garbling

The following is a clipping from "The Christian Witness and Advocate of Bible Holiness" of July 24, 1919:

> ### The Earnest
> If we dwell in heaven we must experience heaven in this world. We must be acclimated to that country before we go to it. We need have no doubt as to the existence of heaven. "You will soon be in heaven," was said to a dying saint, who replied, "I have been in heaven many years."
> The apostle says to the Ephesians, "In whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of that purchased possession." Heaven is the possession of the saints. It was purchased by the blood of Jesus. When parties make a purchase, they often pay down a part of the price as earnest money to ratify the bargain, paying the rest at a lated time. The gift of the Holy Spirit is the earnest. It is a sample of the fuller heaven that we are to enjoy later. It is the pledge of the future heaven, if we are faithful.

If we had not seen the above actually in print, we would not have believed that any could teach that "heaven" is the "purchased possession." It may be objected that nothing is said in the above purported quotation of Eph. 1:13, 14 about the "redemption" of anything; and the answer is that there isn't. Why? Because the verses were garbled by the above writer. Let us give it just as it reads in the Bible: "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also, after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of pormise, which is the earnest of our INHERITANCE, until the REDEMPTION of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory." Now this is the way it reads. But what has the above writer done? He has taken out the words "inheritance" and "redemption." Why? Well, evidently for a purpose. At any rate if he talked of redeeming heaven it would not sound just right, and he knew it. So he just used as much of Paul's language as he wanted to. He garbled Paul's language. This is serious business, however.

What does Paul mean? This: that the Spirit is the earnest or pledge of our "inheritance." And does the Bible anywhere ever say that we shall inherit "heaven"? No! It does say over and over that we shall inherit "the earth" (Matt. 5:5; Psa. 37). Why cannot men see this? And does the Bible say one word about the "redemption" of "heaven"? Not a word. Does heaven need to be redeemed? Was heaven sold under sin? No! Well, neither does it need to be redeemed. But the earth is the "purchased possession." Who purchased it? Jesus did. What was the price he paid? His blood. And that is the purchased possession to which the saints are heirs. They have the earnest or pledge of God's Spirit until the redemption of old earth actually takes place. Why do men talk of "heaven" as the home of the saved? Is it scriptural? No! They do it because they teach the false doctrine of the soul's natural and inherent immortality. And that doctrine is not found taught by the inspired Word of God.—J. J. Schaumburg.

"Astronomical Reflections," an article in last week's Restitution, should have been credited to Sister S. Roxana Wince.

It is a mistake for us to speak about our "trancient stay on earth" and our "sudden change for heaven." Jesus said, "The meek shall inherit the earth"; and David said, "The meek shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever." Solomon adds, "The righteous shall never be removed, but the wicked shall be rooted out of it"—the earth (Matt. 5:5; Psa. 37:29; Prov. 10:30).

A post card from Brother and Sister Alexander Donaldson, who are on a visit to Campbell Inn, Roscoe, N. Y., says: "Surrounded by every evidence of the majesty, power, and love of Jehovah, our heats overflow with gratitude to him. We realize that from him all blessings flow. The hotel and all its appointments are in keeping with the surroundings—quiet, grand, dignified. Accept full Christian love."

* * *

To talk of the "spirit land above" and of "mansions above," popular as these expressions are, is a mistake of the first magnitude; for God made the earth "to be inhabited," and he promised the land of Canaan to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob for an everlasting inheritance, all of whom, having died "not having received the promise," will receive it when Christ returns and reigns as King of kings and Lord of lords, ruling "the world in righteousness" (Gen. 13:14-16; 17:1-9; 26; 28; Gal. 3; Acts 17; Heb. 11:8-12).

* * *

Once more we are under the necessity of asking both our "special contributors" and readers for manuscripts for The Restitution. All should remember that in returning to work after vacation we should return to the Lord's work as well as our own. "Diligent in business" is a precept that is usually applied to business enterprise in secular life, but as interpreted by Christ (Luke 2:49), it belongs to religious duty also. Suppose we all show more "diligence" in sustaining The Restitution in a literary way.

Reports Blindness Cured

Girl Tells How She Regained Sight at Beaupre Shrine

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 4.—A miraculous cure from blindness is reported again at the shrine of Saint Anne de Beaupre in this city, where numerous witnesses testify as to the following story:

Dora Dugre, of 183 Bell Street, Manchester, went to Ste. Anne's last week and spent several days at the shrine. In a statement she signed she related the following tale:

> I had been blind fourteen years. For five days I had been touching my eyes with the relics of the saint. On the fifth day as I was kneeling at the altar, after applying the relic to my eyes, my eyes closed tight, and for a full hour I could not open them, no matter what effort I made. After a while I felt my eyes revert to their pre-blindness strength, and within a few hours I opened my eyelids to the light of the sun and fell on my knees sobbing, thanking heaven for the miracle. The Plain Dealer, Sept. 5, 1919.

EDITOR'S COMMENTS

Here we have a Catholic "sobbing, and thanking heaven for a miracle." Anti-Catholics will sneeringly point to the confessed fact that Dora Dugre "had been touching her eyes with the relics of the saint" for five days—a massage of sufficient duration to account for the "miracle" were the miraculous left out. Granted. A word, however, to Dowieites, Christian Scientists, Mormons, and faith healers of various protestant cults: you repudiate the Catholics wholly, and denounce the miraculous healing of Dora Dugre as spurious, although "numerous witnessess testify" to its genuineness. Then you claim you heal, and ask us to believe "numerous witnesses." Now if you refuse to believe the testimony of witnesses who certify that the shrine of Saint Anne de Beaupre healed Dora Dugre, why should we believe the witnesses on your behalf? In either case we are asked to repose confidence in man, which we must decline to do. Instead of the testimony of men, we require the testimony of God. You are as destitute of this testimony as the Catholics.

Sacramental Wine

Personally we have no contention to wage against those who believe grape juice is "the fruit of the vine," and should be used in the communion. We are only too glad to break bread with all of our brothers and sisters, let them use what kind of bread and wine they will. The fact is we use grape juice in our communion service in Cleveland, and every one seems perfectly satisfied. Probably this "custom" prevails in most of the churches, not by command but by universal suffrage.

Not satisfied, however, to let this custom rest upon the foundation of tradition (harmless in itself), some forget the injunction, "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God" (1 Pet. 4:11), and try to prove by these oracles (Rom. 3:2) that grape juice has been divinely enjoined. This claim is wholly destitute of scriptural proof; and lacking divine law some, who have more zeal than knowledge (Rom. 10:2), have manufactured both Scripture and history to sustain their pretensions. When we point out the fact that grape juice is not "wine," they retort that Pliny and Columella give prescriptions for keeping grape juice from fermenting, and because these authors happened to use the word "wine" by anticipation (just as Sister Jones often calls dough "bread"), they quote Pliny and Columella to show that unfermented wine existed in their day and was a beverage! Some even go so far as to say that Horace praised this unfermented wine as best! Well, of all the magical feats of theorists, this is surely the most magical.

Water and Communion

The evil in using grape juice is not in the practice, but in the authority claimed for the practice. In ecclesiastical history one is struck with the presumption which substituted water for wine in the communion. Abercius and Irenaeus are the first to speak of wine mixed with water in the eucharist. In Justin Martyr's first Apology, about 140 A. D., occurs the following description of the eucharist:

> Then there is presented to the brethren bread and a cup of water . . . . When the president has given thanks . . . . the deacons distribute to each of those present . . . the bread and the water . . . . (chapter 65).

The reading in the above quotation from Martyr is the one preferred by Prof. Harnack, Dr. F. C. Conybeare, etc. The churches for whom Justin speaks used neither wine nor grape juice, but water! Tatian, the pupil of Justin, used water in the communion; and so did the Marcionites, the Ebionites, the Montanists of Phrygia, Africa, and Galatia, as also did Alcibiades of Lyons, in A. D. 177. Now all admit that using water for wine in the eucharist was a departure from the example of Jesus and the apostolic church. Why this unauthorized substitution? It was a concession to the asceticism of the time, an asceticism throughout the Roman world and which, to a certain extent, had infected even the church of God.

The True Church Rejected the Water of the Ascetics

The church as a whole did not succumb to this water substitution, innovation, and aberration. The true church never ceased to carry on the Lord's supper as he instituted it, transmitted by the apostles and enshrined in the Gospels. "The Teaching of the Twelve Apostles" was within this water period, and in its prayer concerning the cup says: "We give thanks to thee, our Father, for the holy vine of David thy servant, which thou didst make known to us through Jesus thy servant"—language not applicable to water.

Corroborative of this belong evidence from the Catacombs. The eucharist is frequently represented on the walls in which the faithful are reclining at tables with baskets of bread and with bottles of wine.

In 200 A. D. Tertullian tells how scrupulous the priests were lest a crumb of the bread or "a drop of the wine" should fall on the ground, and thus Christ's body and blood be trampled on the ground and profaned (Ency. Brit., 11 Edition, under "Eucharist").

Let us be thankful that the church in part, that is, the part that was faithful to the tradition of Christ, struggled on in her weakness, without tolerating the widespread departure from it, foisted upon the Christendom of the time by "I am holier than thou" (Isa. 65:5) ascetics. Concerning this asceticism, which was one of the church's most persistent and troublesome foes then, and which is no less dangerous today, we may have something to say next week. In the meantime the reader is entreated not to let arguments for grape juice decoy him into the use of water in the Lord's supper.

The New University of Jerusalem

IT IS typical of the Jewish spirit that the first action of the Zionist Commission in Palestine, after the conquest of the country from the Turks, was to lay the foundation for a Hebrew University. The Jewish people is a strange people. Our spiritual acts always precede our practical and political acts. Before we came to the land of Canaan, we were given the law at Sinai. Immediately after the destruction of the Temple Rabbi Yochonan ben Zaccai obtained permission to organize a Hebrew School at Jabne. Thus it was in the past and thus it is in the present. Even before we are in our land, we have established there a Hebrew University.

Ever since the destruction of the Temple, the Jewish people has been craving for a spiritual centre. All through Jewish history we meet again and again with various attempts to organize and establish such centres where the Jewish soul could express itself in all its fulness.

The modern idea of a Hebrew University however, was first conceived by Dr. Herman Shapiro, whose creative Zionist mind also evolved the idea of the Jewish National Fund. After his death the great Zionist leader, Dr. Theodor Herzl, became interested in the movement, and at the fifth Zionist Congress in 1901 it was decided to investigate the prospects for the founding of a University. It was not till 1913 however that any definite steps were taken towards the realization of it. In that year, at the eleventh Zionist Congress Dr. Weitzman, Professor at the University of Manchester, actively interested in the University project, presented a paper on the "Founding of a Hebrew University at Jerusalem." The Congress subscribed $90,000 to further the work, and later a Russian Zionist, Isaac Goldberg, donated a beautiful tract of land near the Mount of Olives, looking out upon the sad ruins of the Temple on one side, and down upon the ancient rift of the Jordan and the historical Mountains of Moab on the other side.

Then the Great War broke out. It swept over the world and over the Mount of Olives, sweeping away the immediate plans for the founding of the Hebrew University. The war left Great Britain in possession of Palestine, and left a British Zionist Commission with Dr. Weitzman at its head as the first omen of Zionist control over the country. And on the 24th day of July 1918 the whole Jewish world was thrilled by the news that Dr. Weitzman laid the corner stone of the Hebrew University.

And so another dream of the Ages became realized. A beginning was made to reunite the Jewish people spiritually after two thousand years of dispersion. For twenty centuries the Jewish soul has been struggling for self expression. Living in a foreign environment as it does it cannot however unfold itself Jewishly, independently, originally. It can contribute its share to the civilization of which it happens to be a part. It can perhaps even change that civilzation and impart to it a strange and exotic tinge of its own. But then the product is a hybrid, a mongrel; neither the Jew nor his neighbor finds himself reflected in it, and hence it remains forever alien to humanity. In order for the Jewish intellect to create its own values, in order to contribute its distinctly Jewish part to civilization, it must have its distinctly individual Jewish environment in which it can best develope. It is amidst such an environment that our greatest contribution to the world was made—our Bible was created. It was likewise in an intensely Jewish atmosphere that the splendid Hebraic-Spanish culture and the Hebraic-Arabic civilization were produced, and who can tell what Jewish genius, supplemented by the experience and matureness of a history of four thousand years, if given the proper conditions, can produce? Such a surrounding can only exist in a Jewish Palestine, such an environment will be created by a Hebrew University.

In a letter to Dr. Weitzman, congratulating him on the laying of the corner stone, Ahad-ha-Am, the greatest living exponent of the Hebraic spirit, wrote as follows:

> The brighter the prospects for the establishment of our National Home, the more urgent is the need for laying the spiritual foundations of that home on a corresponding scale, which can only be conceived in the form of a Hebrew University. By this I mean not a mere imitation of a European University with the Hebrew as the dominant language, but a University which from the beginning will become the true embodiment of the Hebrew spirit of old, and will shake off our mortal and mental servitude to which our people have been so long subjected in the diaspora.

The Jewish University will attract to it thousands of Jewish students from all over the world. In every land, especially in the eastern lands, there are more Jewish students than we dare expect to satisfy waiting to grasp the opportunity. It will be a powerful factor in the rehabilitation of Palestine, and its influence will be felt the world over. Before the war the growing anti-semitism in many of the European Universities became a serious problem. With the establishment of a Hebrew University in Jerusalem this problem will be solved in a natural and obvious manner.

The University will however be not an undergraduate school only. Its graduate and research departments will draw Jewish scholars and scientists from the world over. It will become the great clearing house for Jewish thought and intellect.

Jews, especially among scholars, who hitherto had little interest in Zionism, became enthusiastic over the idea of a Hebrew University. Such men as Henri Bergson, George Brandes and others, who but a few years ago were hardly recognized as Jews, have offered their services on the faculty of the University.

The University will thus become not only a centre of Jewish life, but also a fountain of it. Its student that will leave Palestine will carry to humanity the contribution of the New Jew—the healthy, normal, creative Jew. Those that will come back to the country will bring with them the viewpoint of other peoples, and thus will enrich and broaden our own, and help develop our National life.

A Hebrew University in Palestine. After two thousand years of life tending to deaden and destroy everything that is creative and productive in us, anything beautiful that we posses as a nation, threatening our very national existence. A school upon the very ground where our great teachers of the past have lived and taught. Whether one is a Zionist or a non-Zionist, a Jew or a Gentile, can he help but be inspired by the romance of it?—Solomon J. Golden, Oglethorpe University, July, 1919.

Questions Answered

Question 2

What were the better things God provided for us? Why would the ancient worthies not be made perfect without us (Heb. 11:40).

AS THIS question really is two questions, our attempt to answer will be divided into two parts. First the text reads, "And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise: God having provided some better things for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." What did God provide for us that was better? "For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did; by which we draw nigh unto God" (Heb. 7:19).

Better hope than what? Than the law offered, as its hopes were only temporal; but not a better hope than the ancient worthies died in; for theirs was the "hope of the gospel" (Col. 1:23), the one hope (Eph. 4:4), "the hope of the promise of God made unto the fathers:" and "the hope of Israel" (Acts 26:6; 28:20). The fathers being among the ancient worthies, and our hope theirs makes the better hope theirs as well as ours. Their hope, like ours, was in the promises unto themselves. God says, "I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob" (Acts 7:32). The gospel was preached unto Abraham (Gal. 3:8). Hence his hope was the gospel or better hope. "They which be of the faith are blessed with faithful Abraham" (Gal. 3:9). They share the blessing with him. Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law (Gal. 3:13). Why so? "That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles (Greek, nations) through (Greek, en, in) Christ Jesus" (Gal. 3:14).

Those Scriptures show that the blessing of Abraham comes

(a) To those which be of the faith;

(b) Those redeemed from the curse of the law. And

(c) Those in Christ Jesus. They prove that the saints of today are blessed with the same blessing Abraham is to be blessed with; and kills Russell's theory which promises greater blessings to the saints of today than the ancient worthies. They that "be Christ's, are Abraham's seed, and heirs acording to the promise" (Gal. 3:29). According to what promise? Certainly the promise to Abraham, or the promise hoped for by Paul, which is the same thing. Then Christians are not heirs to heaven; but land, as that is what God promised the fathers, and "Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises unto the fathers" (Rom. 15:8). Confirm—"to make firm, to assure by added proof; bear witness to the truth of; to corroborate; verify" (Stand. Dic.). The better covenant is the Abrahamic, and holds out better promises than the law covenant: but it is the covenant made with Abraham giving him, Christ, and the faithful of all ages, the land for an everlasting home. The better thing, then, which God provided for us is the gospel promises, and hope held out by them.

Second, the perfection mentioned in this passage is not the same as that we mentioned in answer to question one, but the perfection obtained in resurrection—perfect being; and this too proves that the ancient worthies will be perfected in body as well as those of the Christian dispensation, and again is against the theory that resurrects Christians immortal, and the ancients mortal. David expected to awake in the likeness of Jehovah, and then be satisfied (Psa. 17:15). If we must contend that the saints of past ages could be made perfect in body, or rewarded before the day of judgment, why should not we also contend that the wicked are punished also before the judgment; and accept orthodox's heaven and hell going theory at death. God works according to his plans, and according to system; and as has set the time of reward at resurrection, at the second coming of Christ, he would be placing the ancients in glory before the time if he rewarded them before the time of the judgment of the dead. (Rev. 11:18; 20:11-15; and compare Matt. 25:19; 16:27; Luke 14:14; John 14:1-3; Matt. 25:34; Rev. 22:12). The reward comes to all the faithful of this and past ages at one and the same time. "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed" (1 Cor. 15:51, 52). Who will be rewarded when the trumpet sounds? "And the seventh angel sounded (the seventh and last trumpet) . . . And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great." This must include all the righteous dead; for it includes the prophets, servants of God, the saints, and them that fear God's name and hence proves they all will be raised incorruptible, or death proof!—This is a premise of immortality to the ancients saints, and a proof that God in his plan places the perfecting of all the faithful of this and past ages at one time—the time of their judgment; and this arrangement is according to every law of common sense and justice.

J. J. HECKMAN.

An Expositfon of Micah 5: 2

I offer the following exposition, founded on Dr. Hale's translation of Micah 5:2:

And art thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, little to be (esteemed)
Among the thousands of Judah?
From thee shall issue (the leader)
Who shall rule my people, the Israel (of God),
From days of eternity.

Shall we understand this prophecy in harmony with Paul's declaration, "It is evident that our Lord sprang out of Judah?" or in accordance with the pre-existence theory, which makes of no account the divinely generated son of Mary—the holy child Jesus. It is clear from the prophecy, that he who was to originate out of Bethlehem, is a being, distinct from what is called "his issuing." And as the personal issuings of a being who originated at a particular place and time, as did our Lord, cannot be from eternity, it can only refer to the eternal word of God, as emanating out from him as the authorized power by which he is to rule Israel. "The Hebrew verb here used is applied to the rising of the sun (Psa. 19:6), to the flowing of a fountain, to the springing of plants, and a variety of other objects" (Cott. Bible).

Dr. Pocock observes that "the going forth is used in Deut. 8:3, for a word which proceeds out of the mouth" (Henry's Expositor). This being so, we have only to find what issued from him which was "from of old," in order to find what is meant by "his issuings."

Said the Revelator, "Out of his mouth goeth (issueth) a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations." What is it that he is to smite the nations with? (Isa. 11:4). The breath of the lips, denotes that which is spoken by the lips. And Christ has declared that the word which he has spoken shall judge those who reject him; and this word is "the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." And as it issues out of his mouth, we may say that "his issuings are from of old, from days of eternity;" that word which issues from him, being the ever-living word of God, and eternal in its nature. Kai exodoi auteu ap arches ex hemeron aionos. And the exodes of him (are) from the beginning "from" days everlasting.

That this view is correct, is apparent from the fact that Micah prophesied of a future being who was to be ruler in Israel—one who was to originate out of Bethlehem; and hence, "his issuings" must also have been in the future, although from everlasting as emanations from the Eternal One. The apostles not only speak of the word of God as being manifested in him, but also of the Son of God as being manifested, as such, to the world. Said the apostle John, "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son" (John 5:10-17). Now if this life is "in his Son," as John declared, when he speaks of this life being "manifested" we are to understand the "word of life" was manifested in him; the same life which he will impart to those who believe in him. So we might as well confound the life, and those who receive it as the same identity, as to confound the Son of God and the word of life as the same—eternal life being a divine principle, inherent in the Father alone, and communicated by him to Christ, and through him to us. Hence, John speaks of this life, as manifested in him, as follows: "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the word of life; for the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and show unto you that eternal life which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us" (1 John 1:1, 2).

Now as John declares this life is in his Son, to be communicated to those who believe, we have his authority for not confounding together "the word of life" and the Son of God, as the same identity. And therefore, from the evidence presented, we may justly conclude that God spake truly, when he said to Jesus, the Christ, "Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee." Amen. Ever so let it be. Stand up for Jesus of Nazareth, the only begotten Son of God.—Wm. Hobbs.

Put Cheer in Your "Good Morning"

Good morning!

Where could you find a better salutation? In its unabridged form it is, "I wish you a good morning," and everyone who utters it is tacitly saying:

"Here is a brand new morning. It is the only one of its kind. In all the history of the world there never has been one quite like it, and it can never be duplicated. It is entirely your own; you possess it outright until noon, and then it will spread its wings and fly from you for ever. But while you have it, I hope that you will enjoy it, and that you will regret its departure."

Obviously, the tone in which this wish is conveyed should match the sentiment. It also needs its accompanying smile. But the smile is frequently omitted, and the voice is rarely in harmony with the words.

There are fifty-seven different ways of saying it. Sometimes it is growled, sometimes it is barked, or snapped, or sighed, or moaned, or snarled—all of which is unjustifiable. It is the putting of a beautiful thing to base uses.

The favorite method is to say it in a curt, unpleasant way which implies "I don't care what kind of an old good morning you have. I am rather hoping that it will be disagreeable. I haven't much use for you, anyway, and I'll shed no tears if you get what's coming to you."

One woman I can think of always says "Good morning" in such a dispairing, hopeless way, that it is enough to darken the day and shut out the combined light of the sun, moon and stars. I don't know whether she had a bad conscience or indigestion, or whether she is simply letting a grouch get the upper hand of her. But under any circumstances she has no right to impose her gloom on others.

If they have had something to make them happy there is no reason for her to cast a cloud over their sunshine: and if they have something to bother them, there is no reason why she should deepen and increase their troubles.

And there is no excuse for her crepe-draped voice. She has had more than the average share of good fortune, and no more worries than fall to the common lot. But she has let what was in the first place a mild, baby grouch grow to such proportions that it completely masters her. She has gotten into the habit of fussing over every trifle: she is dissatisfied with everything and envious of others who enjoy themselves.

She is on the wrong side of the sun and sees only darkness. She has turned the whole fabric of her existence inside out and is wearing its seams outwards, which is an unseemly thing to do. A bad pun, but let it stand.

No matter how beautiful the material of a garment is, it's nothing to look at if it's made with raw seams, and people would naturally regard it with disapproval.

Many persons are fond of pets. Some like cats, some dogs, others prefer goldfish or canaries; and still others choose "grouches."

These fail to understand that one tenderly cherished grouch is a much more dangerous companion than a lion or tiger cub; for like the cub it will inevitably reach an age and size where it is certain to turn and bite them, and they find that instead of being the "grouch" keeper it is theirs, and rules them with a rod of iron.

When I was a child I had an old nurse who, if I got into a temper and whined or howled, very promptly put me in a chair in the corner and told me I could sit there until I stopped yelling and counted my blessings. Of course I insisted that I hadn't any blessings but nevertheless I was not allowed to get down until I had receited a long list of reasons why I should be a good and happy little girl instead of the devil child I was enacting. And I usually got so occupied in thinking up these reasons and discovering new ones, that I quite forgot to develop the tantrum upon which I had started.

You may get up tomorrow morning and look in the glass, and yawn, and then say: "Oh, dear! How blue and depressed I feel. It's awful."

That is an unfortunate state of mind, but it's one that you've got to settle with yourself. It isn't fair to scatter your "blues" broadcast and cloud the day for other people.

We will all probably say, "Good morning" a number of times tomorrow. Then why shouldn't we do our little share toward building a gladder, gayer world by saying it with some fervor and sincerity and enthusiasm and good cheer, while at the same time we count our blessings.—Fort Worth Star-Telegram. Selected by Brother S. T. Blessing.

OPTIMISTIC WOMEN

The cheery woman plays an important part every day that she lives. She is always needed. There is no time when she can be spared from the face of the earth, for there is this day, and another, and all other days when you or I will be glad to see her, and hear her say to us: "The darkest hour is always before day," or something else quite as hopeful.

The bravely optimistic woman, however, continues a writer in the St. Louis Republic, does not force her smiles upon you. If you are grieved, she will weep with you. She will not insist that your trouble, which is a real one, else you would not weep, is as thin and light as air. That it worries you is enough to demand your sympathy, though it is her way to set about to see if she can't point out to you a way to clear it up, and she is willing to put her shoulder to the wheel, too, to help you do so.

The pessimist is a robber. He enters your home and steals away the sunlight. He meets you on the street and he robs you of the feeling of contentment that crept into your veins when you noticed that the day was fine and clear. I cannot tell you just how he does it—his ways differ so—but you know well enought that he does.

The pessimist criticises your friends, and his own. And can you think of anything more depressing than to have the little shortcomings of the folks you like discussed? These little shortcomings you have long ago recognized, and you do not need anyone to point them out to you. Besides that, you are generous enough to want your friends to appear well in the eyes of everyone else. But trust the pessimist for throwing the worst light upon them possible. His Coming

It may be at noon, when the day is awaking,
When sunlight thro' darkness and shadow is breaking,
That Jesus will come in the fulness of glory,
To receive from the world "his own."

It may be at mid-day, it may be at twilight,
It may be perchance, that the blackness of mid-night
Will burst into light in the blaze of his glory,
When Jesus receives "his own."

While its hosts cry Hosanna, from heaven descending,
With glorified saints and the angels attending,
With grace on his brow like a halo of glory,
Will Jesus receive "his own."

Oh, joy! oh, delight! should we go without dying,
No sickness, no sadness, no dread, and no crying;
Caught up in clouds, with our Lord into glory,
When Jesus receives "his own."—Sel. by Flora A. Wood.

H. W. R.

THAT THE dead in Christ will awake and come out of their graves, no individual conversant with the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament will entertain a doubt, but that the dead will come out of their graves in conformity with the character formed by them in their relationship to the Lord Jesus Christ, very few in our day and generation can see and appreciate.

"How are the Dead Raised Up?"

That the resurrection and exaltation or "raising up" into the inheritance of God are the result of character, we shall endeavor to show is the apostle's argument, or answer to the interrogation, "How are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come?" The apostle introduces his argument by the exhortation, "Awake to righteousness, and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God. I speak this to your shame" (1 Cor. 15:34). Then the apostle proceeds to expose the foolishness of calling in question the resurrection of the dead, by the fact of grain being quickened after it dies. He meets the skeptical enquiry "How are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come?" by this argument: If grain can be quickened after it dies, cannot the dead in Christ be quickened also? For God, who quickens and gives body to grain, can quicken and give body to "the dead in Christ." "Therefore," the apostle says, "that which thou sowest is not quickened unless it die; and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body which shall be, but bare grain; it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain; but God giveth it body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body."

Different Flesh and Seed Bodies

Now if God can give different seed bodies, and to every seed his own body, he can also give different flesh bodies, and to every kind of flesh its own body; so the apostle says: "All flesh is not the same flesh; but there is one kind of flesh of men, and another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds." Therefore God who made all kinds of flesh can give a flesh body to "the dead in Christ" and, as in the matter of grain, God gives to every seed his own body. So to every one in Christ he gives them his own body, which will be a flesh body. But as "all flesh is not the same flesh," nor all bodies the same, it may please God to give "the dead in Christ" a celestial flesh body, or a terrestial flesh body; for the apostle says, "There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestial; but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestial is another." So if God please, he can give "the dead in Christ" a flesh body of terrestial glory, or a body of celestial glory; but as there are different bodies of glory, the apostle goes on to show that "the dead in Christ" shall come in a body God shall give, and be raised up afterwards, according to the resurrection previously sown by them; for, says he: "There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead. It (the resurrection) is sown now in corruption, it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power."

Therefore every one in Christ that is awake to righteousness, and has the knowledge of God, knows in what body "the dead in Christ" shall come, and in what glory they shall be raised up. How can they know ? By the grain they sow. For if a man sow a resurrection for celestial glory, God will, when he comes forth to the resurrection, reap according to the seed sown.

It matters not that the seed is sown in this corrupt, dishonorable, weak, and mortal state: if good and honestly sown it will spring into sun, moon, and star glory. God will give the seed its own body. The time for doing this is at the judgment. Here men will reap as they have sown. The bad seed will germinate corruption; the good seed of the kingdom will be clothed in incorruption as the fruit of its development, the first stage of which is the "coming forth, (as the green blade) of the good unto the resurrection of life." But what are we really to understand by the phrases "it is sown" and "it is raised" ?

Sowing Pertains to the Resurrection

First, the apostle evidently affirms "it is sown" of the resurrection, not of the dead in Christ, for it cannot be clearly shown from the apostle's argument that the dead in Christ are sown. The apostle does not say "they," but "it." This pronoun is in relation to grain to be reaped, to kinds of flesh and bodies celestial and terrestial, and brings before us the life of faith and deeds of love, instead of the dead bodies of those asleep in Jesus. They are dead, but their works are sown for a celestial glory. This is in harmony with the other portions of the word of God: "The wicked worketh a deceitful work; but to him that soweth righteousness shall be a sure reward" (Prov. 11:18). "Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart" (Psa. 97:2). "Be not deceived, God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit, shall of the spirit reap life everlasting" (Gal. 6:7, 8). "And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace, of them that make peace" (James 3:18). We understand the apostle to apply the phrase "it is sown" to the resurrection of the dead in Christ.

Second, by the term "it is raised" we do not understand the simple act of coming out of the grave, but the development of seed sown into the full harvest of ripe immortality and eternal life. In this sense the apostle Peter, on the day of Pentecost, used the term in the following manner: "David, being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne. He seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption. This Jesus has God raised up, whereof we are all witnesses" (Acts 2:30-32). Again: "Unto you first, God having raised up his Son Jesus, sent him to bless you, in turning away everyone of you from his iniquity" (Acts 3:26). Paul himself said: "And we declare unto you glad tidings, how that the promise which was made unto the fathers, God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second Psalm, "Thou art my Son this day have I begotten thee" (Acts, 13:32, 33).

As for the term "resurrection-sown" we understand it to express a life now planted by the truth with reference to resurrection award. Christ is the basis of it all. "I am the resurrection," says Jesus. "Christ in you, the hope of glory," is Paul's definition to the Colossians, also in his second letter to the Corinthians, he says: "Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus and shall present us with you" (2 Cor. 4:14).

The Dead are Raised in Natural Bodies

But the apostle, in the 15th chapter of 1st Corinthians, goes on in his argument to say: "It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. And so it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul, the last Adam was made a quickening spirit." A correct understanding of this matter, we think, will help to remove some difficulties out of the way of enquirers concerning the resurrection. From the statement of the apostle, concerning the natural body sown, it is evident there is matter involved requiring revelation to make know to us what is not apparent. Mankind in this sinful and mortal state, are not exactly in the natural body. Sin-flesh is the nature of men now; it was not the natural state of man at the beginning. This will appear more distinctly from the inquiry, was Adam a transgressor when God made him from dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and he became a living soul ? No; he was neither saint nor sinner, mortal nor immortal, but a natural body, like all the rest of creation, very good. Therefore the beauty and propriety of introducing the principle of the divine procedure, in the resurrection of the asleep in Jesus, in relation to the first man, and also to the last Adam. "Howbeit, that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural, and afterwards that which is spiritual. The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven. As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy; and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly. And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly."

Results of the Argument

According to the ideas before us, we have the following results: The first man Adam was an earth formation by the Spirit of God; he rose from the earth, earthy; to a terrestial glory. When those asleep in Jesus awake they come from the earth earthy, a terrestial glory also, to be fashioned like the glorious body of Christ. The first Adam rose from the earth, without a resurrection, having been sown, or character formed for good or bad. Those asleep in Jesus awake and come forth a resurrection sown, or character formed by them before they died, when they were "bare grain, perhaps wheat or some other grain." The first man came from the earth, and was placed under law in terrestial glory, to evolve character worthy to have dominion over the works of God's hands. Those asleep in Jesus awake and come from the earth with a character evolved by faith and obedience in Christ, when they were under the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus; not in terrestial glory, but in a state of sin, corruption, dishonor, and weakness, that they might be raised in incorruption, in glory, and in power, and reign in the kingdom of God; and as it is impossible for flesh and blood to inherit the kingdom of God, it is therefore evident that Adam after he had formed character by obedience must be changed from a natural body to a spiritual body. Those asleep in Jesus awake, bearing the image of the first man, a reorganization of flesh and blood, also of character and identity as possessed before they died, for God can give a body, and it is his pleasure that those asleep in Jesus stand approved in the very image that sinned, with a character worthy of incorruption, glory, and power in the kingdom of God. Through much tribulation they come, bearing the image of the first Adam, to be adjudged according to God's good pleasure in Christ Jesus changed into spirit body (celestial glory), they rise like sun, moon, and stars.

"We Shall Not All Sleep"

Having noticed these results, we pass on to another matter brought before us by the apostle, and that is, the mystery of the resurrection, viz., "we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed." This mystery relates to two distinctions: first, we shall not all sleep; and second, we shall all be changed. The first distinction introduces us to the consideration of the fact that there is a portion or measure of mankind, who, by faith and obedience are separated from the rest to be servants to God, to do special service for him; and as God will not be served in his house but by his own family, therefore the separated ones are all adopted in his Son Jesus Christ, who is head over all his house. By this relationship, they are God's sons and daughters; this measure or portion of mankind are the "all in Christ." This measure—gathered into Christ—are not separated from one generation of mankind, but are from nations and generations requiring great length of time; therefore the greater part of the gathered into Christ fall asleep and rest in their beds (graves) till the "all" are developed. There is a part of the "all" that shall not sleep or die, so the household is divided into those that sleep and those that shall not sleep, but remain unto the coming of the Lord.

"We Shall All Be Changed"

We pass now to the second distinction, contained in the mystery of the resurrection, namely, "we shall all be changed." It is this mighty and mysterious event that fills the living and the dead in Christ with the highest satisfaction. It is the great christing; the hope of glory; the hope of the gospel. The resurrection without the change, would be as empty as the covenants of God without the Christ of God; or the kingdom of God without the righteousness of God; or the gospel of the grace of God without the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, or the forgiveness of sin without eternal life. Resurrection is but the restitution of demolished organization, but the mystery of the resurrection is the changing of one organization into another, as distinct as heaven is from earth, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye that which is a natural body changed into a spiritual body. Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God, neither doth corruption inherit incorruption, for this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortaliy. These are imperatives over which proud man cannot pass. Mortality may vaunt itself over these broad principles, in dreams, vision, and fancy, yet it finds itself in all its weakness, this side the Jordan of immortality. It must be changed, for the end to be gained by the all in Christ in the kingdom of God for a possession forever and ever. Living soul organization has not the durability, nor fibre of spirit organization. All organizations vitalized by blood are overcome by age; every individual whether in sin flesh or natural body, vitalized by blood, succumbs to the triumph of time. They cannot hold possession of an everlasting inheritance: blood life and spirit life are opposites, as heaven and earth, as sun, moon, and stars, to tree, shrub, and flowers. Blood life in flesh or natural body is corruptible and mortal, although it may outlive the years of Methusaleh. Spirit life in flesh cleansed from sin, or spiritual body, is incorruptible, immortal, and shall live the years of God. When the spirit of life leaps like lightning-flash along our nerves and sinews, we leave behind in the far dim distance, death and the grave; to them we bid an everlasting farewell, and march along triumphant amidst celestial scenes. Then who would not awake to righteousness and sin no more by giving away to unbelief, and calling in question the great and glorious finality of faith and obedience ? Let not the shame of our weakness appear any longer by a want of the knowledge of God like many in our day, for they are more occupied with the personality of the dead in Christ, whether they shall come out of their graves immortal or not, than they are with the truth that gave them a relationship to the Christ. The truth makes free; the truth raises up: the truth will give body and glory; the truth is Jesus; the truth is the Christ; the truth is the word of God; and in that word is light and life to every man coming into that world of incorruption, glory, and power, the kingdom of God.

Conclusion

We repeat in conclusion, "the dead in Christ" shall be made alive: they shall be raised in incorruption, glory, and power, and are given the kingdom of God if their resurrection is sown to the spirit. They shall appear in a natural body before the judgment seat of Christ, bearing the image of the first man with a tried faith; they stand in a natural body to be changed into spirit body, which is the pleasure of God to give to all in Christ who, by a continuance in well doing, seek for glory, honor, immortality, and eternal life. Thus we see that it is character formed in the truth, and by the truth, that raises up and exalts to God's right hand. God is not a respecter of persons; but he that worketh righteousness is accepted with him.

Man cannot raise himself into immortality, but he can believe the truth; the truth believed and obeyed can raise him from a mortal to an immortal son of God. Truth is the incorruptible seed; "it is the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." Sin, corruption, dishonor, weakness, are but accidental. Sow, then, liberally to the spirit, in the soil of our poor mortality amidst all its corruption, dishonor, and weakness, and when the Lord Jesus Christ comes in power and great glory, this mortal shall put on immortality. So in the full assurance of immortality the apostle, in a grand and lofty personification of corruption, death and the grave, announces bold and fearless, to each their doom through the God-given victory in Christ Jesus our Lord. Amen.

"Out of Darkness Into Light"

By Allen D. Strickler

The Mind of the Flesh

Gal. 6:8, "For he that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption."

Gal. 5:19: "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like; of the which I have told you before, as I have also told you in times past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

Eph. 2:3: "Among whom also we all had our conversation in time past in the lusts of our flesh fulfilling the desires of the flesh, and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others."

1 Pet. 1:18: "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things as silver and gold, from your vain manner of life handed down from your fathers."

Matt. 15:19, 20, "Out of the heart proceedeth evil thoughts--these are the things which defile a man."

1 John 2:15-17: "For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eye, and the pride of life, are not of the Father, but of the world."

James 4:4, 5: "Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." "The spirit that dwelleth in us lusteth to envy."

Gen. 6:5, "That every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually."

Worldly ambition in whatever direction it is turned, goes to make up the mind of the flesh. The mind that is absorbed in the things that the natural senses discern, the temporal things of life are all such thoughts that they perish with the object upon which they are concentrated. Solomon sums up the mind of the flesh when he says in Eccl. 2:11: "Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on all the labor that I had labored to do; and behold all was vanity and vexation of spirit, and there was no profit under the sun." It is not necessary for a person to have what is termed an immoral or filthy mind to have the mind of the flesh. Such an one can be a great statesman, merchant and manufacturer; a great engineer, and even an educator or professor, such as those in the universities of Germany, and still have what the Scriptures speak of as "the mind of the flesh."

Paul, in Eph. 3:10, speaks about "the manifold wisdom of God." There is also the manifold wisdom of the natural man, all useful and necessary, and pleasing in connection with life in the natural body; but being concentrated and confined to things that are perishable, and having its origin from a perishable organ, the brain, there is nothing in such wisdom that can give anything but that which perishes with the person. Solomon states the case so far as the mind of the flesh is involved by saying, "For the living know that they shall die; but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward, for the memory of them is forgotten; also their love, and their hatred, and their envy is now perished; neither have they any more a portion forever in anything that is done under the sun." Again we read in Ecclesiastes: "For to the man that pleaseth him, God giveth wisdom, and knowledge and joy; but to the sinner he giveth travail, to gather and heap up that he may give to him that pleaseth God. This also is vanity and a striving after wind."

God classes all as sinners and wicked, who have confined their minds to things which are temporal, and who do not believe his promises or have hope for themselves as beneficiaries in the fulfilment of the promises which God has made for the benefit of all who love and obey him. Love for God, which is the first commandment, and obedience to his commandments, is founded upon the knowledge of the revelation which God has given to man concerning himself and his "eternal purpose." "And as they went forth, Jehoshaphat stood and said, Hear me, O Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem; believe in the Lord your God, so shall ye be established, believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper" (2 Chron. 20:20).

The reverse of this statement of Jehoshaphat is found in connection with those who refuse the invitation to "incline their ears, and come unto God, and hear that their soul may live; and an everlasting covenant be made with them, even the sure mercies of David" (Isa. 55:3). And also that other invitation made by Jesus of Nazareth, that man who was the image of the invisible God, the first-born from among the dead, namely, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

A most emphatic statement is made in Psa. 51:16, 17 in reference to the class who theoretically may understand God's covenant, but do not create within themselves the mind of the spirit; "who mind earthly things" (Phil. 3:19), or as the apostle states it in Romans 8:5, "mind the things of the flesh." "But unto the wicked God saith, What hast thou to do to declare my statutes, or that thou shouldst take my covenant in thy mouth? seeing thou hatest instruction and castest my words behind thee" (Psa. 51:16, 17).

The destiny that awaits "the mind of the flesh" is seen in the examples of the mighty empires of the past history of the world; such as the Assyria-Babylonian, the Medo-Persian, Grecian and Roman, and not the least among them, the Egyptians. All in their day and generation, as the prophet said, "caused their terror in the land of the living" (Ezek. 32:23, 24, 26). "There are the princes of the north, all of them, and all the Sidonians, who are gone down with the slain; in the terror which they caused by their might they are put to shame; and they lie uncircumcised with them that are slain by the sword, and bear their shame with them that go down to the pit" (Ezek. 32:30).

Modern architecture is, to a large extent, but a revival of the different styles that existed with the Romans and Greeks and other nations; it took great minds to build the Pyramids and such buildings as are now in ruins in Rome and Athens; still, what was the mind that built and planned but a mechanical one, and although a religious mind might have been associated with it, what was it? Idolatry. Idolatry is mentioned by Paul as one of the works of the flesh. In fact, according to the statement of Christ to the Jews, Jews who believed in the only true God, those who even worshipp "the only true God" if they do so according to the teaching and doctrines commanded by men, worship God in vain (Matt. 15:9). Such worship springs from the mind of the flesh and not from the mind formed by the Spirit words of inspiration, as found in the Bible. Paul prophesied in his letter to Timothy (2 Tim. 4:3) "that the time would come when they will not endure the sound doctrine; but having itching ears, will heap to themselves teachers after their own lusts; and will turn away their ears from the truth, and turn aside unto fables." All false doctrine, all religious fables, are the result of the thinking of the flesh brain of man, and are, therefore, what Paul calls "the mind of the flesh."

When the mind of the flesh is analyzed it will be found that it is composed or made up of several different kinds of feelings or impulses, such as are enumerated by Paul in Gal. 5:19-21, nearly every one of which, when gratified or given way to, acts as poison in the human system, hastening its dissolution and death. Taken as a whole, they discourage faith in a Supreme Being, produce gloom and discouragement, eliminate hope, ending in disease and misery.

The great desideratum of human existence is happiness without alloy; this the mind of the flesh cannot produce because its whole constitution is such that it demands gratification and is selfish in the extreme; the apostle says that it is enmity against God; "for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." God's commands run contrary to the desires of the mind of the flesh, as a rebel against the authority of God.

John says in Rev. 4:11 "that God created all things, and for his pleasure they are and were created." In view of this statement it is evident that a rebel gives God no pleasure, and therefore death must come to the rebel and the mind of the flesh that caused his rebellion.

Paul says in Romans 7:16: "But if what I would not, that I do, I consent unto the law that it is good, so then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me." Again he says, in verse 20, "But if what I think not, that I do, it is no more I that do it, but sin which dwelleth in me." Paul sums up his argument in verses 24 and 25 by saying, "Wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me out of the body of this death?" (That is, from the natural man controlled by "the mind of the flesh".) "I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord." Paul sees that Christ will finally deliver him out of the mortal and natural body; but in the mean time until the resurrection of the dead, the apostle says, "So then I of myself with the mind (not by the natural impulses springing from the desires of the animal instincts) indeed, serve the law of God; but with the flesh, the law of sin." Christ was the only man that ever lived who could with his mind serve the law of God, and not with his flesh or human nature serve the law of sin.

Now inasmuch as Christ's brethren condemn in themselves the service to the law of sin, not rendering the service by free-will, but by impulse, God reckons them as righteous by faith which causes them by their free-will power to serve the law of God. The mind of the flesh, and the impulses springing from the natural desires of human nature, will both finally perish from off the earth, and God will tabernacle in man with his divine and holy mind.

Therefore we will consider why it is that "the mind of the Spirit is life and peace."

Editorial

As September contains five Tuesdays this number will be the last this month, the next issue being Oct. 7th.

Brother A. D. Strickler is now giving us a series of contributions entitled "Out of Darkness into Light." They are full of sound doctrine and wholesome Bible teaching, and we commend them to the readers' attention.

Our leading article this week is by a friend, H. W. Russell. On the whole his contribution is interesting, and on some points it may be said to be original. It is a mild rebuke to those who teach mortal emergence for the righteous dead in the sense of insisting upon this detail as essential to fellowship The article is worthy a careful reading by all.

A Bible Reading on Spiritualism

Spiritualism has taken advantage of the opportunity which the war made possible, and has ingratiated itself into thousands of bereaved hearts. Rejecting the Bible, it entreats recognition on the ground of sentiment solely. If any reader comes into contact with this deception, let him remember how the word of God warns him to beware of it. To show him what God thinks of spiritualism we give herewith a Bible reading on the subject. He is requested to spend an hour in the reading.

Exod. 22.18; Lev. 19:31; 20:6, 26, 27; Deut. 18:9-12; 1 Sam. 15:1-26; 28:6, 7, 8; 1 Chron. 10:13; Isa. 8:19-22; Acts 16:16; 19:13-20.

Please notice that "a spirit of divination" in the margin of Acts 16:16, in the Greek is "a spirit of Python." Read the story of Apollo Pythius in any standard work on Mythology.

Sacramental Wine

Asceticism of Heathen Origin

Last week we showed how asceticism invaded the church and substituted water for wine in the observance of the eucharist. As far back as history, and probably as far back as humanity, men tortured their bodies to obtain favor from imaginative, vindictive gods. Even since civilization has gained a foothold among men, great waves of asceticism have arisen and swept over countries and races forming all kinds of fastidious cults. Pythagoras started such a movement at least five hundred years before Christ. Shortly after this Budda preached his gospel of renunciation. Both of these teachers, in harmony with the dictum of asceticism, taught that "the body is the tomb of the soul."

Ascetic Jewish Cults Hotly Rebuked

When Christ and his apostles preached the gospel of the kingdom in the first century, society was everywhere permeated by these cults. Among the Jews, to whom Christ preached exclusively at first, were the Therapeutae and the Essenes, both of whom followed a monastic system, living in poverty, chastity, and fasting. When Christianity reached the Gentiles it also found asceticism at every turn among them. Ascetics from among the Jews and Gentiles were drawn to the church by its lofty and pure morals and, sad to relate, they objected to the honor as well as the privileges it accorded to the body and its normal instincts. "The body is the temple of the Holy Spirit" jarred upon the delicate nerves of these spiritual moralists; and to neutralize this and many other similar Scriptures they claimed it was their mission to improve on the gospel! Paul's hot denunciation of these rigorists, "forbidding to marry and commanding to abstain from meats, which God created to be received with thanksgiving by them that believe and know the truth. For every creature of God is good, and nothing is to be rejected, if it be received with thanksgiving: for it is sanctified through the word of God and prayer" (1 Tim. 4: 3, 4), was a bitter pill for these "good men" to swallow. According to their creed, what was pleasant and what was right were always contraries. If anything was amusing, pleasing, funny, that alone was enough to damn it forever. The devil was to have all the fun, while Christians were to make themselves as miserable as they could—and the more miserable the better Christians they were!

Asceticism the Savage Conception of Tabu

Now the origin to the aversion to these "creatures of God" goes back to prehistoric times, to the savage conception of tabu. This superstition had almost, but not quite, died out among civilized peoples; but not the observances that had originated in it. These persisted as habits, and pagan philosophers found new reasons for them; and these new reasons were systematized and multiplied which, of course, augmented the original prohibitions. To illustrate: Tabu applied to the flesh of only a few animals; but asceticism, when it became full grown, refrained from all meat, on the new and philosophic ground that every animal had a spirit, and that to eat flesh of any kind was to incorporate in oneself this inferior beastly, and irrational soul. Then the argument was advanced that since human souls at death often passed into the bodies of animals, therefore to eat the animal was to eat a human being—perhaps a father, mother, brother, sister, or a dear friend!

The Deadly Trinity: Meat, Marriage, and Wine

In keeping with this nonsense wine was though to have a "spirit" by which intoxication was caused, "the demon rum," and this inferior soul must not be admitted into union with the human soul. For reasons which it would be indelicate here to give, marriage also fell under the ban of these "holy" pagans. Meat, marriage, wine—these three great tabus were common to all ascetics. To this trinity each cult added it particular tabus, as for instance, the Pathagoreans, beans! But the three—wine, women, meat—were the fountain heads of evil, the poison of the spiritual life, the insurmountable barriers to God, the ministers of immorality, decay, death the deadly trinity. Asceticism in its modern form still prohibits the use of women, marriage, and wine, but generally adds a few extras, such as tobacco, chewing gum or anything else it takes a mind to, but usually with a view to impressing the people with the idea of its peculiar sanctity.

Christ Was Not An Ascetic

Christ preached the gospel at the very time when the earth was a hot bed of asceticism. Both his conduct and preaching were hostile to it. His gospel recognized all the natural institutions of society equally with all natural instincts of the body, and bestowed blessings upon them. Yes, dear reader, they are all good gifts from God, for useful service, for innocent enjoyment in their own place and in due measure. Jesus drank wine. Christ ate meat. He did not marry, but "he adorned and beautified with his presence and first miracle" the marriage in Cana, and helped serve the guests. Instead of being an ascetic he endured the lying reproach of being a glutton and a winebibber (Matt. 11:19; Luke 7:34). If Jesus, like John the Baptist, had not drunk wine, they could not have called him a wine-bibber; if he had fasted like John and his disciples, they could not have called him a glutton. He knew this, and in the face of this knowledge he ate and drank. Evil men might misrepresent his example; weak men might abuse it to their own undoing. But Jesus moved and lived among men, the norm and measure of a man while the world endures. His sweet reasonableness, his beautiful moderation, his perfect sanity, his delicate and sensitive adjustment of conflicting appeals, avoiding like leprosy "the falsehood of extremes," have ever puzzled the fanatic and the weak in faith; but to the children of wisdom "Christ is the power of God and the wisdom of God" (1 Cor. 1.24).

Encratites, Ancient and Modern

The early ascetics in the church had many divisions and many names. Comprehensively they were termed Encratites. These were the people who used water instead of wine in the Lord's supper, and were specifically known as Aquarians, Watermen. Grape juice advocates are Aquarians, approximately. They think themselves too good to do what God says, and would consider themselves humiliated and disgraced were they to give up their three-legged pedestal of self-righteousness and thank Jehovah for "every creature of God." These "creatures of God" are, to their perverted understanding, creatures of the devil rather than creatures of God. And thanksgiving for these "creatures"—what? Thank God for women, marriage, tobacco, wine, anesthetics, poisons, gum, tea, coffee and swine? Listen, and instead of thanks you will hear curses! No amount of "sanctification through the word of God and prayer" can cleanse these vile, devilish things and make their use fit for these snow-white souls. To say that "every creature is good" is to shock and offend the delicate sensibilities of these ascetic monks. Therefore to conform the ordinances of God to their ideas of what they should be, they substitute water or grape juice for wine in the Lord's supper, and as a Methodist minister once told us, "for decency's sake" they change immersion to sprinkling in the ordinance of baptism. Men who thus temporize with the ordinances of God are in dangerous business. Those who do so are Encratites whether they know it or not.

FROM S. H. STEVENS

Dear Sir:

I have seen your book, "The Bible: Its Principles and Texts" with Brother Murray, of Tacoma, and having looked into it some, have come to the conclusion I would like to have one. The way you explain the Scriptures, both in your book and what I have seen in your paper, The Restitution, is in agreement with my own views, and I am enclosing $1 for one of the books. If the price has advanced, let me know by return, and I will forward whatever may be needed to make the required amount. Hoping to hear from you at an early date, I am,

Respectfully your·

FROM BROTHER JOHN WEEKS

In The Restitution of May 20th, the question was asked, Who are the just men whose spirits were made perfect? In The Restitution of July 22nd Brother Heckman answers. If Brother Heckman's answer is not correct we have one more. The apostles were baptized with the Holy Spirit which made their spirits (or minds) perfect. They then could write a perfect law. Christ said when the spirit if truth had come it would lead them into all truth. Yes, these just men, now being perfect, could write God's law to man. If we obey this law we shall have life eternal.

SISTER W. L. ROBBINS

Dear Brother Huggins:

I want to appeal to the brotherhood of Texas to wake up and see if we cannot start the Lord's work in some determined way by all working together and by helping some brother to keep continualy in the field. If we can raise the money we can keep an evangelist at work and help sow the seed of the kingdom all over Texas and as the old song says, "With your prayers and with your bounties you can do what heaven demands." You can be like faithful Aaron holding up the prophet's hands. We have the fund for an evangelist started and now have $130. Would be glad to hear from others on the subject and all help who can. We believe the night is far spent, the day is almost here, and what we do we should do quickly, remembering that they that preach the gospel should live of the gospel. They must be taken care of while they preach it. Your in hope of of the soon coming kingdam,

Riviere, Texas.

Remarks

The month of July was a very active month. I made my last report from Rene, where I baptized nine and set in order a new congregation of believers. Here we ran our meeting into July, leaving them on July 4th, after a stay of a couple of weeks with these earnest lovers of truth. It was with much reluctance we took our leave. They now have a Bible class, and are studying the Scripture for the knowledge they will so much need in these times of trouble.

At noon July 4th I boarded the train at La Junta for Pueblo. Upon arriving there I went to the 5th Ave Hotel, where Brother Fanning, and I put in a couple of hours talking of the kingdom of God and of the signs that show its nearness. Brother Fanning invited us to take supper with him, after which we went out to Sister Barber's, where we spent a couple of hours talking with her and Sister Halcomb of current events. Again good byes were said, and at 2.30 in the morning we entrained for Denver. Our train being late, we barely had time to go from one train to the other, so could not get any breakfast. We arrived at Briggsdale at noon, so had dinner and breakfast all at once. Sister Johnson had not received my letter, so no one was there to meet me. On the restaurant steps I saw two boys and asked them if they knew Sidney Johnson. One of them said he went by his place. So I rode out with him. Judge their surprise when I arrived! I baptized Sister Johnson just before her marriage near Holbrook, and when she saw by The Restitution that I was going west, begged me to come over and help her. The pleasant hours spent with her and her husband will long be remembered. The truth seemed to take with the people as a whole, most of whom belonged to several orthodox churches and, to our surprise, gave it all up for truth, but could not see the necessity as yet for coming out boldly and being baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, having a definite faith to precede. One man said, "I may see that yet;" another took a stand and was baptized, so Sister Johnson is not alone. Besides, the whole community is in sympathy. At the conclusion of our meeting a man got up and said they had had such a feast of good things they ought to be willing to pay for it. And here a thing occurred that I never experienced before in my long career in the work. The children came up, apparently as much interested as the older ones, and gave their pennies and nickels. I would love to know some time that these little ones were all in Christ. After many invitations to return, we bade them good bye; and Sister Johnson and her husband took me to Raymer, to Sister Smith's formerly of Palmer. Here we stayed two nights and a day, when they drove me to Ft. Morgan. We took the train at that place for Yuma, where we were met by Brother and Sister Burke, and stayed one day. Here they said they believed a work could be done, and they want me to come as soon as we can arrange to do so.

Our next stop was at Laird. Upon arriving there we found Brother Minton had gone to Denver to have an operation, and several of his children had gone along. This made it impracticable to try to hold a meeting at this time; so after visiting the different members, we entrained for McCook, where Sister Hamilton wanted us to give a few lessons for the benefit of her children. Two of her sons have lately returned from over seas. One was stationed in England, and brought home an English girl for a bride. After teaching them, she wished to be baptized; but as her husband could not be there at that time, it was postponed so he could be present, hoping that he too would obey. On Friday I told Sister Hamilton I felt impressed to put off our meeting there and go to Bartley, and she said all right, and called up Brother Brusch at Bartley and told him to arrange a meeting that evening. In the evening we all drove to Bartley, not knowing why we had given up our meeting at McCook. Imagine our surprise when we arrived to find a meeting had been arranged at Sister Sellick's and her daughter and two grand-daughters were there on a visit, and the two grand-daughters both wanted to be baptized. They had been to the river and selected a place to perform this sacred rite. The strange part of it was that Sister Wheeler (Sister Sellick's daugher) had set the following morning to return home and her daughter wept because she wanted to be baptized, and thought she would have to go home without it. I knew nothing of their being there, and they knew nothing of my presence in the country until I phoned them I would be there that evening. But when I arrived I knew why I was so impressed that I must go there. While standing in the water in the darkness of Night, I was reminded of the jailor who was baptized the same hour of the night. By the time we changed our clothes, partook of the emblems and had preached a discourse pointing out to the two young members their new obligations and got over to Brother Brusch's, it was two o'clock. So circumstances compel us some times to work overtime in the Lord's work, but we do not get time and a half for over time. There is a love and good will between employer and employed, so a perfect co-operation in every department of the firm. Then again if we need rest, or for any reason are compelled to lay off, we are not docked. Our heavenly Father only docks us for wilful neglect of duty. When we consider all this, how faithful we should be! We should be just as faithful in our work pertaining to the kingdom of God, as we are when we serve the world, and more. Is there any hope when we wilfully neglect to do the work assigned us? Jesus only asked for glorification after he had finished the work: can we do any less and still be glorified? Jesus said, "My Father worked hitherto, and I work." Now we have our work. Jesus was faithful and finished his: now how about us? "Moreover it is required in stewards that a man be found faithful" (1 Cor. 4:2).

But to resume our account: On Sunday we arranged to go to Cambridge, and hold a meeting at Brother Gamble's. When we arrived there were brethren there from Bartley, Holbrook, and Freedom, and how pleased Brother and Sister Gamble were to have us come. Sister Gamble has been in poor health for some time, and is quite deaf, but said she could hear most of what I said. The smile on her face showed she had the old time interest. After I closed Brother Gamble gave us a talk, and among other things, told of my coming to their old sod school house, so many years ago, when they first heard the truth. He said one night on the way home, he told them if he lived till the next night, he was going to accent of the truth, but Sister Gamble opposed it. The next evening after my sermon I asked if any there wished to make an open confession of faith. He started and looked back, and there was Sister Gamble at his heels. They have never faltered from that moment.

Sister Moore also gave a good talk. She has the duty imposed on her of writing to the new converts, and keeping them interested. This is no small task. She asked for our prayers that she might be guided to say the right thing in the right place. Brother and Sister Steadman, and Sister Sellick lead the singing with their usual melody. Again the time came to say good bye. We then, with the Holbrook people were soon speeding toward that burg. Here we found the people bsuy threshing. After visiting a few days with them and promising to return later, we boarded Nahum's chariot for Omaha, where we arrived Aug. 1st after three months' absence, and found all pretty well. While we were treated so well yet it seemed good to once more rest under the home roof and relax.

Another year is now closing, and will soon be in the past, and we will all be confronted with the

Divine Friendship

Dear Brother Huggins:

Please find enclosed a poem that I have been reading. It seemed so good and comforting to me that I wish to pass it on—perhaps to The Restitution, if you think best. Every line of it is good.

Fraternally yours,

MRS. H. E. RUSSELL.

Lord, let me talk with thee of all I do,
All that I care for, all that I wish for, too.
Lord, let me prove thy sympathy, thy power,
Thy loving oversight from hour to hour.
When I need counsel let me ask of thee;
Whatever my perplexity may be,
It cannot be too small for me to bring
To one who marks the sparrow's drooping wing;
Nor too terrestial, since thou hast said
The very hairs are numbered on our head.
'Tis through such loopholes then the foe takes aim,
And sparks unheeded burst into a flame.
So many troubles press! Thou canst dissolve
The doubts and dangers such concerns involve.
Are those I love the cause of anxious care?
Thou canst unbind all burdens they may bear.
Before the mysteries of thy word and will
Thy voice can gently bid my heart be still;
Since all that now is hard to understand
Thou wilt unravel in yon heavenly land.
Or do I mourn the sore-besetting sin,
The tempter's wiles that mar the peace within?
Present thyself, Lord, as the absolving priest,
To whom confessing we go forth released.
Do weakness, weariness, disease invade
This earthly house, which thou thyself hast made?
Thou only, Lord, canst touch the hidden spring
Of mischief, and attune the jarring string.
Would I be taught that thou wouldst have me give
The needs of those less favored, to relieve?
Thou canst so guide my hand that I shall be
A liberal, cheerful giver, Lord, like thee.
Of my life's mission do I stand in doubt,
Thou knowest; thou canst clearly point it out;
Whither to go, do thou thyself decide,
And choose the friends and servants at my side.
The books I read would I submit to thee—
Let them refresh, instruct, and solace me;
I would converse with thee from day to day,
With heart intent on what thou hast to say;
And through my pilgrim walk, whate'er befall,
Consult with thee, O Lord, about it all.
Since thou art willing thus to condescend
To be my intimate familiar Friend,
Oh, let me to the great occasion rise,
And count thy friendship life's most glorious prize.

Luke 16th Chapter

MORE THAN usual I have been shocked lately by the strange infatuation of ordinarily sensible people who still hold so tenaciously to the atrocious doctrine of eternal torment. After one has seen the uselessness and absurdity of this heathen teaching and learned of the true hope of the gospel, it is difficult to refrain from being somewhat impatient at the seeming stupidity of those holding to the old notion; but we must take the thing good naturedly and calmly and do what we can to eradicate the disease, for it really is a mental disease and I think in some cases, a moral one also. For you will notice often that the coarser the moral fibre the more indulgence there is in language usually termed "profane" that conveys the old idea. Still this is not always so, and I heard a discourse not long since by a highly intelligent, moral and intellectual preacher on that stone of stumbling, the story of the rich man and Lazarus (Luke 16) and like many others he fell down on it very badly.

Now this story stands out in such bold contrast to the rest of the Bible teaching that some have suggested that the whole thing is simply an interpolation—does not belong there at all. Others have explained it away to their own satisfaction as an intricate prophecy of political conditions of some sort in connection with the Jews and Gentiles. Either of these explanations is entirely unnecessary considering the circumstances in which the story was told, who it was told to, and "the point" made. And we are not left in doubt as to what the point is, for Christ himself pushes it home dexterously and sharply at the conclusion of the conversation in Hades; it is this: "If they believe not Moses and the prophets they will not believe even if one rose from the dead." Now this is entirely in accord with the Lord's general teaching and so disposes of the interpolation theory; and as the "moral" of the story is based on a matter of personal choice in belief the historical explanation is altogether too far fetched, especially when, the circumstances considered, the thing explains itself.

Now if I may be allowed a little digression I would like to say that the words we speak have sometimes little to do with the thoughts we mean to express. You can say "how do you do" a hundred different ways; with the proper accompaniment of love-light in the eye you can give a man to understand he is a brother and a friend or you can freeze the marrow in his back-bone with the "icystare" attachment. We talk with our eyes as question, what have we done? This year another thing, how much have we improved our Christian status? Are we ready and waiting for the call of the Mastter? The signs that tell of the near close of this age are thickening; the unrest is wonderful—nothing like it has ever occurred before. We can see no need for further delay in te Master's return so far as unrest and general wickedness is concerned. But there is wisdom in the delay, as we shall see when the Lord comes.

ALMUS ADAMS.

We Are the Lord's

By S. Roxana Winer

"For none of us liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself. For whether we live, we live unto the Lord, and whether we die, we die unto the Lord; whether we live therefore or die we are the Lord's" Rom. 14:7, 8).

How expressive are these words, how great their depth of meaning. We belong, truly and explicitly, and without any reservation, to Jesus. Christ died, rose, and revived, for this very purpose, that he might win us to give our lives to his service and if need be, might die for the honor and success of his cause. We do not enter the household of faith to live for ourselves, striving for wealth and ease and fame, but we do battle for our King, though fighting thus bring but shame, dishonor and loss.

Nor do we enter it to judge our brethern and sisters as to what they eat and drink, and in case such things have been dedicated to some idol, as was the case in Paul's day, and would be the case now were any of us permitted to sit down at a heathen festival and partake of the food and drink, the wine consecrated to some false god.

We might see a brother or a sister do this but if we did we were not to judge him, thinking that he was eating and drinking as an act of worship to a thing that "was nothing in the world," nor were we to eat at idolatrous feasts ourselves, lest we cause some brother to stumble and so "destroy with our meat him for whom Christ died." He seeing us eat might think we were eating the things sacrificed to idols, for the very reason that they were so sacrificed might be emboldened to eat them for the same reason and perish (1 Cor. 8:4-13; 10:7).

"We shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ." "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves. Let every one of us please his neighbor for his good unto edification. For even Christ pleased not himself, but as it is written, The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell upon me."

We have not been called to cruelly criticise one another, but to "submit ourselves one to another in the fear of God," walking "as children of light," "circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise."

Every day, every hour, we need to say "I am the Lord's; "I am not living for myself: I am living for him." My thoughts, my conversation, my acts, must all be made to tell for his glory. "He that considereth his ways is wise." We cannot help influencing others either for good or ill. God grant that it may be for good. It is not well to be heedless as to how we live. Brother Woodward used to say, "It is a fine thing to be a Christian." Indeed, it is. It is to live for others; it is to seek gain for others; it is to die for the sake of others.

"We are the Lord's." Let us live, not to ourselves, but unto him.

Nebraska Conference Report

The 34th annual conference of the Church of God met at the Eagle's Hall, Florence Addition, Omaha. This was an ideal place for our meeting. The large hall fitted with everything for our comfort and convenience, the upper part for the meetings, and the lower rooms for resting and dining purposes, all of which made our work very easy and pleasant. Brother Crowe was with us, and we feel that we were greatly blessed by the good lessons and sermons on prophecy with chart illustrations showing beyond any doubt that the coming of the Lord is very near, even at the door; lessons on spiritual living showing us the necessity of living closed to Christ and his teachings, and fitting ourselves for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, which will keep us in the time of great trouble that is coming upon us. Brother Myers and Brother Zeller gave some good talks that we all appreciated. Brother Adams very kindly gave most of the preaching time to Brother Crowe, but gave many good talks during the lessons, also preached the Sunday afternoon sermon, along the same lines as Brother Crowe had given, taking in the current events in the world, the league of nations, federation of churches, and federation of labor—all showing us we are in the close of the age. The spirit of love and harmony prevailed throughout the meeting. Each sermon or lesson seemed to us the best we ever heard.

At the close of the last sermon, which was by Brother Crowe, five dear children came forward, thus choosing the way that leads to life. It was a cause for great joy, especially to Brother Adams, as four of them were his grandchildren, two daughters, one son and one niece. The other was Gifford Sorrenson, son of Brother and Sister Sorrenson. Many shed tears of joy and especially Sister Virginia Cronk, as they were her pupils in Sunday School, and she can realize the result of her untiring efforts as their teacher. I think the children had more part in this meeting than any I ever attended. They were always in the choir; and on Saturday afternoon, after the Bereans had their business meeting, they gave a splendid program, consisting of songs and recitations, and a debate between a soul-sleeper and a Presbyterian by Russel Thrush and Gifford Sorrenson with Walter Cronk, Jr., as moderator, which we all enjoyed very much. At the close of the program, Brother R. E. Zeller gave a short talk in which he gave Sister Myrtle Adams credit for the Berean work, and especially for the program.

Brother Adams reports 94 sermons. We have been greatly hindered this year in the work, and the number of sermons does not include the Bible lessons and teaching. Baptisms twenty; set in order one church; organized one Berean class; expense for year, $60.34; Treasurer reported $1311.34 received and paid out; a balance of $19.32 from conference dues and table fund after all bills were paid. We thank our dear Father for his blesssings all along the way the past year, and pray for the love and peace of all the brethren, that we may have more blessings in the year to come.

Annual Nebraska Berean Report

The Nebraska State Berean Society met with the Nebraska State Conference in Omaha, Aug. 31st, 1919. Saturday was set apart for the Bereans. There was a splendid program given by the Omaha Sunday School children.

The following officers were elected: President, Russel Zeller, R 4 No. 49, Palmer, Neb. Vice-President, Rose L. Storjohn, Phoenix, Neb. Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. Myrtle Adams, 3824 Jaynes St., Omaha, Neb. Literary, Lillian King, 569 So. 33rd St., Omaha. Tract, Maynlidt Sorens, Route 1, Florence, Neb. Isolated, Adele Bray, R. 5 S. Side, Omaha, Neb. Program, Adele Bray, R. 5 So. Side Omaha, Neb.

I have on hand yet some of the new Berean books. These new books are for a period of two years. Now let us all sacrifice a little and lay aside our old books for the present, and get the new ones. They are 15 cents, and I am sure that they are worth that amount. The new books are to begin the first Sunday in October. Now all those that have ordered your books, let us hear from you soon then we will all be ready to start together the year and work in unison until the end, which is not far off.

Let all societies get organized and send in their National dues, also the State dues, and endeavor to make the coming year's work a great succeses.

They are getting up a new set of tracts to be scattered around. As soon as they are completed our Tract committee will notify the President in each local society, and you can order as many as needed.

We hope to make this one of our most successful years in the Berean work, and we hope the interest will increase so that we may make a better showing than the past. This can only be accomplished by each and every member doing their best. Let each of us at the beginning of this new year, work. Do not lag but be a booster. In this way the work will make progress.

A New Book on Prophecy Proposed

Brethren: This is not an appeal for your money, but to place before you a work that we believe is much needed, so that if you desire a part in it you can use some of the Lord's money entrusted to you to enlighten hungry and thirsty souls on "present truth" and "the meat in due season."

The great work done by Pastor Russell and by Seventh Day Adventists, could never have been done without the hundreds of thousands of dollars in tithes and offerings freely given by the people, and we surely have more important light for the present hour. Yet I have been forced to turn to worldly work because sufficient funds did not come in to support my family. I am now in a little shack I built near Kansas City, baching and doing carpenter work. I don't need to beg for funds for I can make from $9 to $17 a day here, if I will go into the union.

One old brother has offered to help me to put out literature on prophetcy, the covenants, and on spiritual life, so I quit worldly work for a while, returned to my "Gipsy place" in the woods, and am now putting together the best light of the present time on the prophecies now being fulfilled, and the events just before us.

I would like to put out 2000 books in paper covers of from 60 to 120 pages, if sufficient pledges and funds come in. I know that every reader of our paper could give from $1.00 to 100.00 of the Lord's tithes to this work, and not miss it. To all such I will send as many of the books when published as you feel you can use profitably, to give to the poor who are interested, and to relatives and friends who show any interest in spiritual things. If enough does not come in, I must make the book smaller, and issue fewer of them. If a surplus comes in above the cost of the books, I will quit worldly work and again give all my time to study, to prayer, to writing, to visiting, and to preaching the gospel. "Children, it is the last hour" (1 John 2:18, Diaglott). Acts quickly, if at all. Address me as follows:

Dean Swift, in his "Gulliver's Travels," says: "Whoever could make two ears of corn or two blades of grass grow where only one grew before, would deserve better of mankind and do more essential service to his country than the whole race of politicians put together."

That we would always choose;
Our weaknesses are hard to find
And harder yet to lose.

Keep doing, whether it be at work or recreation. Motion is life, and the busiest are the happiest. The fire fly shines only when on the wing; so it is with the mind. When once we rest, we darken.

Redemption Nearing

Luke 21:28

My soul crieth out for a jubilee song!
There is joy in my heart, let me praise with my tongue;
For I know, though the darkness of Egypt still lowers,
That the time ere release is not ages, but hours.

As sailors, not yet within sight of the strand,
Know well their approach by the "boom of the land";
So they who will lend but a listening ear,
Can now catch the whisper that tells He is near

He is near! the stars in their courses prepare
To utter the sign he hath bid them declare!
The world in its guilt waxeth haggard and grim
And its crop of iniquity fills to the brim!

The curse so long camped upon Bosphorus' side
And she that sits queen upon Tiber's foul tide
And famine and pestilence stalk in the land,
Of witness, attesting the Lord is at hand.

Spent at last the long cycle of wilderness dearth
Once again sounds of latter rain gladden the earth;
In the land, still despised, but preparing e'en now
For the feet that shall stand upon Olivet's brow.

And thither to gather the tribes have begun,
From the east and the west, from the climes of the sun;
For "the times of the Gentiles" have answered their need,
And the hiss has gone forth unto Israel's seed.

The world as of yore, naught of all doth divine
Saith again that believers are filled with new wine
Suffers warnings to pass all unseen and unheard,
And, like Herod, fulfills while opposing his word.

Then welcome, thrice welcome, ye tokens of God!
What else but his coming can comfort afford?
What presence but his set this prisoned earth free?
O Star of the Morning, our hope is in thee. —Selected by a Sister.

The World Not Growing Better

THE TRIUMPHS of art and science, the progress in invention, discoveries, etc., by no means argue an increase in godliness. Many of the acknowledged leaders today in science, philosophy yes, even those who rank the very highest among them, are positive infidels. And very many more, who disclaim absolute infidelity, deny the divinity of Jesus Christ.

The power, splendor and wisdom of David and Solomon were followed by the idolatry of Ahab and Manasseh, resulting in the overthrow of Jerusalem and the Babylonish captivity. The temple built by Herod was one of the grandest works of art. It fairly flashed with splendor, and the temple service was conducted on a magnificent scale. The Jews of the time enjoyed great privileges in literature and learning, and yet they crucified the Lord Jesus.

The Greeks rose to a pinnacle of triumph in literature, poetry, and art and yet they failed by wisdom to find out God. To them he was the unknown God. The world then by "wisdom" or "philosophy" (Col. 2:8) or "science falsely so called" (1 Tim. 1:20), can never find out God. Civilization and refinement are not the source of holiness. They may elevate the head, while the heart is untouched. The gilded palace of sin is as certainly the gateway to hell as the darkest den of vice.

The Church Not Growing Better

It is argued, that, as Christians are the light of the world and the salt of the earth, the greatly increased number of professed Christians must certainly have augmented the light and the salt, and consequently have made the world better. Jesus speaks of the salt losing its saltness and becoming good for nothing; and he also intimates that the light may be hid under a bushel. Evidently the Jews lost their "savor" and were broken off. The parable of the leaven shows the corrupting influence of evil in the church. All these Scriptures teach that the professing church will lose its saltness, becoming nominal and lukewarm, fit only to be spued out of the Master's mouth. The entire teaching of the word of God agrees with this.

We have but to take an unprejudiced survey of the church even now, to see the truth of it. The loss of spiritual power in the different branches well as our voices, with our minds as well as our feet sometimes. I went up to a neighbor at a local gathering a while ago and said I understood he was from the old country, and added that "so was I." "That is very interesting," he replied, and turning on his heel walked away. That might be termed pedal conversation and the explanation was, I afterwards learned, he had "great possessions" in a small way.

So also we have to consider the manner of Christ's speech as well as the matter. He did not always mean what he said in so many words. It is said "he spake in parables." He did more, sometimes he spoke in [illegible] the reverse of what he meant, speaking in irony. [illegible] he said "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." We understand by this that he refers to the self-righteous pharisees who [illegible] In such a case [illegible] the speaker [illegible] his meaning by the [illegible] voice or gesture of body or expression of face. In plain print this cannot be shown but it will appear to the intelligent reader who takes into consideration the speaker's attitude [illegible] circumstances [illegible]

[illegible] Christ [illegible] Syro-Phenician woman [illegible] to him [illegible] that he came only [illegible] of the house of Israel" [illegible] seemingly added, "It is not lawful to take the children's bread and cast it to the dogs." Could [illegible] more [illegible] as such a remark [illegible] to a poor [illegible]? But the event [illegible] that she did not mind it because she saw the [illegible] in his eye and the smile on his face, and answered back with wit and appropriateness that [illegible] to stagger even him; and the enthusiasm with which he expressed himself in regard to her reply gives the key to the incident and the remarks about the "lost sheep" and the "dogs" were for the flock that stood around to "stomach."

The art of reading is in giving the proper expression, not by the words exactly but through the words. In all literature ancient and modern, this point has to be considered first and foremost. One of my daughters came to me one day when she was a little thing and said, "Papa, I have been trying to read Shakespeare but I can not understand it: will you explain it?" But I said, "You will have to grow to be a big girl before you understand Shakespeare." But a good reader can bring out all the meaning of his wonderful language. So also in reading the Bible, especially the wonderful sayings and parables of Christ; they need reading. Christ did not mean that some people carried logs in their eyes while they hunted specks in others—not literally—or that they swallowed camels or devoured houses (stone houses at that). We all know what he did mean by such expressions (although absurd in the literal sense); and they have gone down and came down to us, spread through all our literature, by-words bantered about in common parlance.

Now with these facts in view let us return to consider the story related by Christ in Luke 16, where the "tortures of the damned" are introduced. It was an old story to the audience to which the Savior spoke. The scenery was just as familiar to them as to us today. I have seen photo pictures thrown on the screen of carvings on Egyptian monuments said to represent the "writhing of the damned;" and the Budhist "models" of hell in China have often been written up and photographed in popular monthly magazines. Now Buddhism is 500 years older than Christianity, and the Egyptian carvings are probably much older. The "notion" was indeed as old as Babylon, and from thence spread to the four corners of the earth.

In this connection I have introduced a rather lengthy quotation from Flavius Josephus which throws light on this matter, and introduces us into the same scenery that Christ portrays—the underworld of hades as seen by that generation, Jewish and Gentile. Josephus was born [illegible] A. D. He was skilled in the lore and learning of his time and took an active part as a leader in the great war that resulted in the [illegible] of his nation. Like Paul, he was [illegible] pharisees and not ashamed to show his [illegible] with their [illegible] out of the [illegible].

Now in reading [illegible] are [illegible] the Greek and Jewish [illegible] both being based on the doctrine of the "immortality of the soul"; and the picture is perfectly true of the "notion" as it has come down to us and to which we have added some slight modifications in detail. For instance, the Greek hades under the earth was presided over by Charon whose boat ferries souls across the Styx. In the Jewish hades, according to Christ's picture father Abraham was president. This was probably the popular conception just as with us today St. Peter is the keeper of the "pearly gate" with the bunch of keys hanging at his girdle, and the Devil is boss of the lower section. Again, we moderns have been more liberal in the matter of space, separating the different parties by astronomical distances, while the ancients used to dwelling in walled cities, jammed them as close as New York tenements, with only the streets between, or the Styx, just a talking distance apart.

Now getting these facts together what are we to make of them? We have here the Lord Jesus speaking to them in a language that, according to the historical testimony of Josephus, they perfectly well understood, and of scenes that their own philosophers had made them familiar with. There is no need of esoterical explanation. All that remains is to consider whether he was endorsing or ridiculing their "notions" in the matter. That, like "the dogs under the table," would be settled for his hearers by the smile on his face and the twinkle in his eyes.

Telling a fictitious story to teach a moral or make a point is one of the oldest artifices in literature. Away back in the book of Judges Jotham tells ironically how the trees elected the bramble bush for king. In Kings Nathan relates about the poor man's ewe lamb, and nearly all the major prophets treat of Baal and Astaroth just as if they actually existed, whereas they were only creatures of distorted human imagination, but still they were sufficiently realistic, popular, and constant to found an argument or predicate a denunciation. In modern literature we have all kinds of examples of the same thing. No sensible person supposes that Burns' narrative of the devil and the witches in "Auld Alloway Kirk" in his "Address to the Devil" signifies that he was a believer in such things. On the contrary the Scotch bard did much toward ridding Scotland of such superstition (rampant in his day) by making light of them by humorous stories. Cervantes' story of Don Quixote is said to have laughed the mock "chivalry" out of Spain, and Byron's vision of judgment with Peter at the gate and the wonderful rhymes of the Ingoldsby Legends built on the superstitions of the Roman church, are instances which every reader is, or ought to be familiar with.

In the detail of the Lazarus story there are other points besides the main one at the conclusion that are quite palpable to any one with the sense of humor unbiassed by prejudice. For instance, salvation is predicated in misery and poverty and salvation in ease and comfort. This side dig at the pharisees who "despised riches" (theoretically at least) finds somewhat of a parallel in Burns' hit at "Calvinism" of his time:

Oh thou wha in the heaven dost dwell
And wha as pleases best thy sell
Sends ane to heaven an' ane to hell
A' for thy glory.
And wha for ony guid or ill
They've dune afore thee.

Certain it is that in the Lazarus case no mention is made of virtue or vice as the criterion of judgment. Of the two the poor rich man was the most generous and even in his damnation he thought of his "brethren" in merciful consideration, whereas in the picture of the cold blooded complacency of father Abraham and his protege we have another fine specimen of the passing-by-on-the-other-side pharisee. This ought to betray the meaning of the story at once, not to mention the incongruity of father Abraham as the "judge of quick and dead."

In fact as a satire it is a masterpiece, but theologians and sectarain preachers have to settle on something to defend their absurdities and on which to base their illogical conclusions. I was witness myself some years ago to the hearing of a sermon by one of Baltimore's most popular Presbyterian ministers in which he stated that although such a scene as Lazarus viewed would be unbearable to humanity in its present condition, in the "world to come" our natures would be so changed that we would be able to enjoy the situation!

Beside the evil effect of thus stultifying human judgment there is also to be considered the misrepresentation of the character of God in his dealings with his creatures. Can any one love a being who insists on the eternal continuance of his creatures in misery? In the recent demonstration by the Kaiser and his junkers we see an instance of how enlightened humanity despises cruelty even though in his case there was no power to inflict pain indefinitely. Yet there are these backward people among us who tell us that "if we did not have a hell to frighten people they would be worse than they are." That was the Prussian idea also, but when with fierce relentless fury they undertook to frighten humanity into submission, the civilized nations rose "as one man" in indignant resentment. So also this threat of fiery damnation under the auspices of father Abraham has only the effect of disgusting decent people and bringing the profession of Christianity into contempt by being coupled with such a monstrosity. The southern negroes may be excused for falling into such errors. Not long since their ancestors were Voodoo worshipers in the Congo region from whence came the weird melodies they still chant; but that white people should listen to such doctrine in the "new era" and raise funds of millions of dollars to propagate the same, is one of the paradoxes of modern times when "the tares are ripening with the wheat."

JAMES F. GELLATLY.

Some extracts from Josephus, the Jewish historian, in regard to the "philosophy of the Jews."

"Now the pharisees live meanly and despise delicacies of diet, and they follow the conduct of reason and what that prescribed for them as good for them to do . . . they also believe that souls have an immortal vigor in them and that under the earth there will be rewards and punishments according as they have lived viciously or virtuously in this life, and the latter are to be detained in an everlasting prison, but the former will have power to reveive and live again.

"The doctrines of the Essenes is that all things are best ascribed to God. They teach the immortality of souls and esteem that the rewards of righteousness are earnestly to be striven for" (Book XVIII, Chap. 1, Antiquities of the Jews).

"These Essenes, (a sect of the pharisees) reject pleasurres as an evil but esteem continance and conquest over the passions to be a virtue. They neglect wedlock but choose out other persons' children while they are pliable and fit for learning . . . They do not absolutely deny the fitness of marriage and the succession of mankind thereby continued, but they guard against the lasciviousness of women and are persuaded that none of them preserve their fidelity to one man.

"These men are despisers of riches and so very communicative as to excite general admication. Nor is there any one of them to be found among them who has more than another (here follows account of formal prayers at sunrise and washings) . . . . For their doctrine is that bodies are corruptible and that the matter they are made of is not permanent but that the souls are immortal and continue for ever, and that they come out of the most subtle air and are united to their bodies as of the great nominal churches has resulted from the imbibing and internal working of false doctrine which, like leaven, has fermented the mass. Is not the church flooded by worldly conformity and creeping doubts regarding the inspiration of the word? How very few of its members are crying out for separation and holiness.

Signs of Christ's Speedy Coming

"Many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased" (Dan. 12:4). Invention has chained the mighty forces of steam and electricity to palatial carriages by land and sea, so that one can go round the world with comfort and ease, in sixty days. Railways cover the earth and steamers track the sea like a mighty spider web. "Many shall run to and fro." In the year 1896 the number of passengers carried on the railroads in the United States was 535,120,756, and the mileage was 13,054,840,243; and in the whole world the railroad passengers were 2,384,000,000, and the mileage 28,677,000,000. Add to this the travel by steamers and private conveyances, the explorations into every conceivable corner of the earth, from the equator to the poles, and the enormous aggregate is surely a literal fulfilment of this sign of the end.

And Knowledge Shall be Increased

The unprecedent educational facilities are a remarkable feature of our time. We have public schools for our youth, colleges and universities for higher education, and denominational schools for religious education. The public press, with its ceaseless stream of news and information, covers the earth with its ever increasing circulation, like falling leaves from some mighty tree of knowledge. And, of the making of many books, there is truly no end. The means of communication by the mail, telegraph, and telephone have been multiplied in geometrical progression. By the Universal Postal Union, printed matter is carried as cheaply to Iceland or China as to the next street in Chicago.

Perhaps our text refers more especially to the increase of Bible study. Since the year 1804 over 230,000,000 of Bibles, Testaments, and portions have been distributed by the Bible societies alone, and millions more by private publication agencies. The Bible has been translated into over 287 languages, and parts into 340. Over nine-tenths of the race have the Bible to read in their own language. (And yet there are those who say men and women have not had a "fair chance" to know God's word.)

Perilous Times Shall Come (2 Tim. 3:1)

Perilous times.

(a) Physically. Pestilence, earthquakes, cyclones, etc.

(b) Politically and socially. Under this head we need only refer to the progress of nihilism, socialism, communism, and anarchy.

(c) Distress of nations. National jealousies have caused offensive and defensive preparation on a scale of such magnitude as to literally grind out the life of the people with oppressive taxation. Weapons are invented so ingenious and deadly as to put all the past record beneath the shadow of comparison. Corps is added to corps and ships to ships, costing vast sums of money. In the very midst of the scene lawlessness lifts its hydra-head Capital cringes before the coming revenge of labor. Truly men's hearts fail them for fear of those things that are coming on the earth.

Now the spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils" (1 Tim. 4:1). For fulfilment see modern spiritualism and Christian Science. Spiritualism has its myriads of adherents, and Christian Science has swept over the country like a prairie fire. There are said to be more esoteric Buddhists in and about Boston than there are natives in Australia. "Go to, ye rich men . . . ye have heaped treasures together for the last days" (James 5:1-8). The accumulation of riches in the hands of a few men is specially characteristic of the present times. If Adam had lived to the present time and accumulated $10,000 additional wealth each year of his life, this vast aggregate would not equal several individual fortunes which have been amassed in recent years.—Selected from writings of W. E. Blackstone, by Flora A. Wood.

By Allen D. Strickler

The Mind of the Spirit

Paul said in 2 Cor. 4:18: "While we look, not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are not seen are eternal."

Jesus said: "He that cometh from above is above all; he that is of the earth is of the earth, and of the earth he speaketh; he that cometh from heaven is above all." In John 8:23, he said unto the Jews, "Ye are from beneath; I am from above; ye are of this world; I am not of this world." John says: "That which was from the beginning, that which we have heard, that which we have seen with our eyes, that which we beheld, and our hands handled, concerning the Word of Life (and the life was manifested, and we have seen, and bear witness, and declare unto you the life, the eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us); that which we have seen and heard, declare we unto you also, that ye also may have fellowship with us; yea, and our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son, Jesus Christ; and these things we write that our joy may be made full." From these statements made by Christ to the Jews, and by John to the brethren of Christ, it is certain that in them we have the proof of something that is above and beyond the natural. Something that did not originate in or from the earth; but came from God and heaven and was manifested concretely so that natural eyes could behold, and natural hands handle. That which makes the lower animal different from the vegetable is natural power, a limited degree of intelligent, independent action.

The chemical materials of the bodies of animals and of the vegetable world, are all of the same kind. The mechanical structure of the body is for the use of the mind, and the mind makes use of the body to the extent of mental capacity adapted to the preservation of the mind by the preservation of the body. Tangible physical substance exists for pleasure and benefit of the mind. So far as the individual animal exists, not taking into consideration the purpose which God had in creating the animal world, it is for the gratification of the mental impulses springing from the brain or organ of mind.

In the higher animal, man, the same things are true, only to a much greater and enlarged extent or degree. Man has intellectual and moral capacity which the lower animals have not, so that he can use physical things, including his own body, to gratify those greater capacities. All joy and sorrow, all feeling and sensation, is due to the mind as it reaches out through the body or the knowledge of the things that exist. In short, it is the mind that makes up the real man, and as is the mind, so is the man (Prov. 23:7).

The "Word of Life" as a concrete thing, and known by John as Jesus Christ, was what John calls "the eternal life." What he saw and handled was not the "mind of the flesh," but it was "the mind of the Spirit"; that is, it was the mind of God.

This "mind of the Spirit" in a spiritual body is just as much the real person, as "the mind of the flesh" in a mortal body is the real person. Such a mind as that belonging to the man Christ Jesus, God has decreed shall never go out of existence. When once the divine mind becomes concrete as an individuality, God preserves it in his own imperishable memory, called in the Bible "the Book of Life." At the resurrection of the dead, it becomes a very easy matter for God to make such a mind conscious again by clothing it with a spiritual house from heaven; and thus man becomes immortal. So far as there is any knowledge of natural or spiritual things, character or mind has no existence in consciousness, in identity, outside of a body. Now inasmuch as the spiritual and imperishable body would have no existence were it not for "the mind of the Spirit"; the apostle John calls the mind of the Spirit eternal life; for without it there cannot be any immortality for any moral creature of God.

In the purpose of God, for a man to have the mind of the Spirit is as though he had eternal life, for God who cannot lie, promised it before the Mosaic ages began. Paul tells us in Romans 4:17 that "God calls those things that be not as though they were."

To know what the "mind of the Spirit" is, and to possess it, is the most important of anything under heaven for the individual man; for as Christ said, "What is a man profited if he gains the whole world, and loses his own soul?"

A man with a certified draft on a bank for a certain amount of money, or with a bank book, has that amount of money; it belongs to him, although on deposit in the bank; and so it is in reference to "the mind of the Spirit"; that mind calls for eternal life, and the banker, God, who has it as a deposit, will pay it out when it is called for at the judgment seat of Christ, a set time such as all banks have for the payment of money on deposit.

Paul says in Col. 3:3, 4: "For ye died and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

In writing to the Ephesians, he also says, "Ye were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise, which is an earnest of our inheritance unto the redemption of God's own possession, unto the praise of his glory." Paul further says, "Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price" (1 Cor. 6:20).

We stop right here for a very important consideration, which is that God is the purchaser of a certain class from among the sons of men, for his own possession; and that he gave to this class the Holy Spirit as a means by which the "mind of the Spirit" might be caused to exist in the several members of the class. To those in the first century to whom the Holy Spirit was given by the laying on of hands, it was an advance and partial payment of the purchase price, which will be wholly paid at the time when mortality shall put on immortality. "The Holy Spirit of promise," that was given to believers in the days of the apostles of Christ, is called "an earnest" or evidence to the individual, because by it in those days of religious darkness, it materially helped in creating in its possessor "the mind of the Spirit," which in reality is the true earnest or evidence that the possessor of it will recieve eternal life by being given a "spiritual body."

There were some in the first century who received the Holy Spirit, who abused the use of its power, and did not create within their hearts "the mind of the Spirit." The possession by such of the Holy Spirit would not be to them an earnest or evidence that they would be made immortal.

Christ said to his disciples and apostles, "These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you. But the Comforter, which is the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you" (John 14:25, 26).

Upon another occasion Christ said to his disciples, "The words that I speak unto you, they are Spirit and they are life." Christ's words were spirit words. That is, words coming from God by the Spirit as a vehicle; the words of God are the expression or outward form of his mind; hence when the word of God finds a lodgment in the heart, the mind of God, who is "a Spirit," is created therein, and the believer has what Paul said was "the mind of the Spirit."

Paul says in Romans 10:17, "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God."

It matters not how the word, thought or mind of God reaches us, only so we have "the mind of the Spirit"; it may come by hearing the written word or by reading it, or, as it did in apostolic times, by the Holy Spirit strengthening the mentality and by direct inspiration from the Holy Spirit. In the case of Jesus Christ John says, "For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God; for God giveth not the Spirit by measure" (John 3:34). See also Heb. 1:2.

to prisons into which they are drawn by a certain natural enticement, but when they are free from the bands of the flesh they are released from a long bondage, rejoice and mount upward. And this is like the opinion of the Greeks that good souls have their habitation beyond the ocean in a region that is neither oppressed with storms of rain and snow nor with intense heat, but that this place is such as is refreshed by the gentle breathing of the west wind that is perpetually blowing from the ocean; while they allot to the bad souls a dark and tempestuous den full of never ceasing punishments. And indeed the Greeks seem to have followed the same notion where they allot the islands of the blessed to their brave men whom they call heroes and demi-gods, and to the souls of the wicked the region of the ungodly in hades, where their fables relate that certain persons such as Sisyphus, Tantalus, Ixion, and Tityusare are punished, which is built on the first supposition that souls are immortal . . . . These are the divine doctrines of the Essenes about the soul which lay a considerable bait for such as once have had a taste for their philosophy" (Book 2, Chap. 8. War of the Jews).

By Allen D. Strickler

"I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life" (John 8:12).

"Jesus answered them and said, My teaching is not mine, but his that sent me" (John 7:16). Christ was the living, walking mind of the spirit; and those who follow him, as he said, shall have "the light of life." No man can follow him unless he has the same mind which he had, which was "the mind of the spirit." "It is the spirit which quickeneth," that is, gives eternal life: the spirit word or mind. Christ said to the Jews, "Ye search the Scriptures because ye think that in them ye have eternal life, and these are they which bear witness of me; and ye will not come to me, that ye may have life" (John 5:39, 40). The Scriptures and the word of God are one; and Christ was the personal living mental word of God, "the word become flesh," having for his mind, not "the mind of the flesh," but "the mind of the spirit;" and therefore he had the right to eternal life; which also all others will have who have the same kind of mind as he had.

Now of this mind or word the apostle by inspiration said: "For the word of God is living, and active, and sharper than any two edged sword, and piercing even to the dividing of soul and spirit, of both joints and marrow, and quick to discern the thoughts and intents of the heart; and there is no creature that is not manifest in his sight: but all things are naked and laid open before the eyes of him whom we have to do" (Heb. 4:12, 13).

In this writing of the apostle to the Hebrews, he reaches up to some of the highest conceptions of spiritual things; for he says that the word of God is living, it is not dead; "the mind of the spirit" is today the living conscious mind of the Lord Jesus Christ, now in heaven; and before it was the mind of Jesus of Nazareth; it was the mind of the Father, who is in heaven. There never has been a time when it was not living, and there never will be a time when it will not live, even as Peter says, "which liveth and abideth forever."

In the Proverbs it says, "The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his way, before his works of old, I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was." "Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I say unto you, I speak not of myself; but the Father that abideth in me doeth his works" (John 14:10).

The words of Jesus Christ were the words springing from "the mind of the Spirit:" and this mind be derived from God by ideas communicated to him in the several ways previously mentioned; and which were controlled and regulated by the same law that governs all mind formation. Christ was no exception to the general law: his freewill was a controlling power.

With these facts before us, we are able to comprehend and believe Christ when he said, "I and the Father are one" (John 10:30). "The mind of the Spirit" is one mind, although it may be in any number of personalities, such as the heavenly host of angels, the Lord Jesus Christ, or the brethren of Christ. "Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I am" (John 8:58). The "I am" appeared to Moses at the bush, and also to Abraham (Exod. 6:3), and also to Adam in the garden of Eden (Gen. 3:8). "The mind of the spirit" in the angels and in Jehovah, existed long before Abraham, although the Jews could not comprehend that the one who was talking with them was the divine mind in an earthy tabernacle, awaiting the time when it would be clothed upon with "the house from heaven" at the resurrection, after the third day. We know that the Jews did not comprehend what Christ said to them; because Christ said, "Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word."

Now here is what he said to them. "I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of myself, but he sent me." Christ, an individuality of the "mind of the spirit," some years later was able to say that he was "the first fruits of them that slept," the first of such to be "clothed upon with the house from heaven." "I am he that liveth and was dead," never more to die. "I proceeded forth and came from God." "So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth; it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it" (Isa. 55:11).

The principles of truth and righteousness sent forth from God in the form of his word, created "the mind of the Spirit" as a character concrete in the personality of Jesus; and as a personality has returned to God in heaven: "whom the heaven must receive until the time of restoration of all things, whereof God spake by the mouth of his holy prophets that have been from of old" (Acts 3:21).

Though Christ has been crowned with glory and honor (Heb. 2:9) because he had "the mind of the Spirit," God is not satisfied with that one salvation; he will bring "many sons to glory" (Heb. 2:10); all saved in the same way and for the same reason, and that is because each one had a character built upon "the mind of the spirit." He who was the first one saved from the dead because he had "the mind of the Spirit" declared himself to be "The Way, the Truth and the Life." "The mind of the Spirit" is "the truth," therefore by it we can reach the Father, and in no other way. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth hath eternal life." No one can believe "the mind of the Spirit" without first knowing what it is; therefore, as Christ said, "It is written in the prophets. And they shall all be taught of God. Every one that hath heard from the Father, and hath learned cometh unto me." What has God said and what has he taught? What is the mind of the Spirit? It must be believed in and lived, be a living thing in the person, otherwise there is no eternal life. "He that hath received his testimony hath set his seal to this that God is true" (John 3:33). The angel said to John that "the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy" (Rev. 19:10).

Jesus said to his eleven apostles gathered together at Jerusalem, "These are the words which I spake unto you while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and the prophets, and the Psalms concerning me, Then opened he their mind that they might understand the Scriptures."

The Bible as a whole is the Spirit of prophecy, and it bears testimony about Jesus Christ commencing at the book of Genesis and ending with the Revelation. The mind of Christ was an understanding faith in the teaching of the Bible throughout, and in the things taught therein we learn the mind of God, and it can be found in no other place. Therefore it is impossible to believe in Jesus Christ in a scriptural way, without understanding and believing the truth taught in the Bible; attaining to such a state of mind is to have "the mind of the Spirit" which Paul says is "life and peace."

When the jailor said to Paul and Silas, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved? and they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved, thou and thy house" (Acts 16:31), something vastly more was intended than to believe in Christ as an historical person. That something has already been pointed out; but can again be stated by saying that to believe in "the Lord Jesus," is to have the same mind that he had, which was "the mind of the Spirit" formed as such, by a knowledge of te word of God given by the Spirit through the mouth of "God's servants the prophets." The testimony is that Paul and Silas spake unto the jailor and all that were in his house, "the word of the Lord."

"Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free" (John 8:31, 32). A start is made with the "milk of the word," the simple first principles of the truth; but as the word of God is a living thing, it keeps on growing "until all attain unto the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a fullgrown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ," and for this reason "he gave some to be apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers;" all necessary to create "the mind of the Spirit" as a concrete consciousness in all who accept the call to God's kingdom and glory, to whom Paul said, that "they should walk worthy of it" (1 Thess. 2:12).

The kingdom of God does not belong to the present political system of things; even as Christ said to Pilate: "My kingdom is not of this world. If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews; but now is my kingdom not from hence": that is to say, it was not then to be set up, but at a future time, just as David by the spirit of prophecy said that it should, namely, "Thou shalt arise, and have mercy upon Zion; for the time to favor her, yea, the set time, is come" (Psa. 102:13).

The kingdoms of this world are governed by the "prince of the power of the air (political), of the spirit that now worketh in the sons of disobedience" (Eph. 2:2). The spirit of disobedience in the sons of disobedience, emanates from "the mind of the flesh"; and therefore "the powers that be" have a prince to govern them that is disobedient to God; this disobedience springs from the foundation upon which "the mind of the flesh" is built, to wit, "the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life": these are the things that make up "this present evil world," and every human government is controlled by them. But this will not be so when Christ's kingdom supplants the kingdoms of this world and they become his (Rev. 11:15).

"Since Brother Russell passed into glory there have been no general conventions until this year" (The Watch Tower, Oct. 1, 1919). "Since Brother Russell passed into glory"! Can an orthodox, with an immortal soul, say more?

"The earth was without form and void" (Gen. 1.2). Here "the earth" is emphasized by position: and, as emphasis implies contrast, should be introduced by "but": "But the earth"! A rich mine of wisdom here has been strangely overlooked by practically all expositors. "But the earth had become," etc., whether by first creation or subsequent catastrophe, the record does not say.

In Mark 11:22 we read, in both the common and revised version, "Have faith in God." The Greek, however, is singularly peculiar. The word "God" is in the genitive case, literally, "have faith of God." For this reason some have decided that the genitive described the kind of faith rather than its direction, as, "have a faith like God's." But in Luke 6:12 we have a passage which explains the case of the genitive as indicating direction. The tense is correctly translated in both versions, "in prayer to God."

How the Bible Came

In very simple words Peter tells how we came to have the Bible: "Holy men spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." First, there was the condition of character "holy men"; second, there was the inspiring spirit called "the Holy Spirit"; and third, there was the human instrumentality and activity guided by the Holy Spirit: "They spake."

A Hint on Inspiration

Partial inspirationists claim that because God used men in writing the Bible, the inspiration of God became mixed with error before it reached us. Human weakness contaminated divinity. But human instrumentality did not taint the divine record. In the palace of Belshazzar the solemn sentence of doom on the wall was a divine message inspired and infallible, and yet it was "written with the fingers of a man's hand" (Dan. 5:5, 26-28).

An Appeal

Sister Emma Garard, of Dayton, Ohio, sends the following appeal:

We, that is, husband and I, received a letter from Mrs. Howard in Canada asking that some one of our brethren go there to baptize her. My husband is a minister but not a paid minister, too poor in pocket to make the trip, or I would try to spare him to go. We are like the rest of those of like precious faith: we must labor for our bread. The dear one seeking baptism is in poor circumstances and is 65 years old, with failing health. Must we that love and look for our Lord's coming soon let this dear heart go down to the grave out of Christ? She is now begging to be taken into the Ark of safety. Our dear brothers and sisters can get enough together, I am sure, if they would try. Let us go to this poor woman and make her heart glad. We will give two dollars toward this service. Please heed this poor Sister's call for help. With love to all of like precious faith.

"Mediums" Challenged

Francis M. Cowgill, of Marion, Ohio, writing to "The Plain Dealer," Sept. 21, makes the following challenge to the Spiritualists everywhere:

"Sunday Editor Plain Dealer Sir: I have been reading the various articles your paper has been publishing regarding 'Spiritualism' with more than passive interest. Having had experiences more broad and far reaching than perhaps any writer, writing for your paper; I deem it my duty to expose facts regarding the dangers of this rapidly growing faith.

"First, I want to say that I am personally convinced it is a 'frost' and I can convince any broad minded person open to reason and consideration that it is a farce. As a magician and inventor I have come into personal contact with practically every 'medium and seer' in Ohio and several other states. I can name 'mediums' working in Ohio at this date that I personally know are fakes.

"I challenge any 'medium' in the world to meet me before a committee in your offices and perform a single feat that I cannot duplicate or surpass. I make this statement knowing that I have the backing of every magical society in America

"I can control a boat or automobile at a reasonable distance by wireless. I can send the human voice through space (not 'spirit voices') by wireless, I can perform 'materialisations' that I defy a 'medium' to duplicate. I can defy any man to push me over, or to lift me off my feet and in turn I can lift three of the heaviest men that you can select with the palms of my hands. I can do these feats in your offices just as easily as I can do it in my home. Can a medium do these feats by spirit power? Can a 'medium' make an unprepared automobile run without a driver down Cleveland's crowded streets pass all trafic, turn corners, blow horns, light and extinguish lamps? I can do it with wireless and I am ready to prove my statement.

"I can put the 'Ouija board' to tests that will 'stump' it. I am ready to prove my claims or the farce of 'Spiritualism' any time or place."

Forsaking the Fountain of Life

ABSTRACT OF A SERMON BY THE EDITOR

Two Evils

The words for our meditation this evening are found in Jer. 2:12: "For my people have committed two evils: they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewn them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that hold no water." In the eleventh verse of the same chapter we have this question propounded, "Hath a nation changed their gods, which are yet no gods? but my people have changed their glory for that which doth not profit." By the context we learn that idolatry is a permanent fixture among the nations: there has not been an instance in the world's history of an idolatrous nation abandoning its gods. The prophet looks at the stability of the heathen in their devotion to idols, and says the Israelites, God's own people, had been guilty of "two evils," while the heathen had only been guilty of one. To the credit of idolaters he says they were stable in their religion: to the discredit of his people he says they were wavering in the true religion and apostate in its service. "My people have committed two evils: they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewn them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that hold no water."

Living Waters

In Gen. 21:19, in the Hebrew Scriptures, the waters of a spring are called "living" because they are more refreshing and life-giving than stagnant pools which are fed by rains. God uses this fact to illustrate himself and his law. In Psa. 36:8, 9 David says: "They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures. For with thee is the fountain of life. in thy light shall we see light." Here God's blessings in his "house" are compared to rivers, "rivers of pleasures." We may understand that both God and his law are intended in this Scripture. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple" (Psa. 19:8, 9). David conceives of Jehovah as a fountain and his testimonies as converting or reviving dead men and women when it comes into contact with them. "Out of Zion shall go forth the law" during the reign of Christ, like a stream (Isa. 2:3). This is the fountain which shall be opened for the house of David for sin and for uncleanness (Zech. 13:1).

Forsaking God

From these premises, to forsake the law of God is the same as to forsake God himself. "You have forsaken me." People say, "I never go to church," and yet think themselves very good men. We remind such people that there is no neutrality in religion. "Forsaking me," forsaking the Lord's "house" where flows the "rivers of pleasures," an inevitable result follows: "You have hewn out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water." As soon as a musician leaves off his music, he loses a sense of fine harmonies: when an artist gives up art, he immediately is deprived of the delicate touch in plying his brush; and when the literary man allows the stern occupancies of life to interfere with his calling, his power of up to-dateness wanes. Therefore when men forsake Jehovah and ignore his word, their fine perception of duty and sensitive conscience are soon blunted. The history of Judas illustrates the point in its individual application, and the history of France exemplifies it in its national proportions.

Lesson XXXVIII

HOW SIN ENTERED THE WORLD

MEMORY TEXT: As by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous (Rom. 5:19).

1. And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food.
2. The tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil.
3. And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat:
4. But the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it.
5. For in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die (Gen. 2:9, 16, 17).
6. Now the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made.
7. And he said unto the woman, Yea hath God said, ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden.
8. And the woman said unto the serpent. We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden:
9. But the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden God hath said.
10. Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.
11. And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die.
12. For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.
13. And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise,
14. She took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her: and he did eat (Gen. 3:1-6).

Practical Truths

The world is a world of sinners. Paul says, "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." In our last lesson we had the Bible solution of the problem of man's origin. Here we have the question of the origin of sin: that is to say, the first pair amid the beauty of the bowers of Eden were the first sinners. The story is a simple one, yet it covers the whole ground, and if it is a part of inspiration it is a truthful one. It teaches a very vital truth with great force; and that is, the importance of exact obedience to God in all things.

Notes on the Lesson

Many.—The Revised Version is preferable, which reads as follows: "For as through one man's disobedience the many were made sinners, even so through the obedience of the One shall the many be made righteous." The many are the recipients of the resurrection to life (Rom. 5:18) by the righteousness of the One. Eternal life is received only through righteousness (Rom. 5:21; 2:7) and obedience.

1. Out of the Ground.—Man was made out of the ground, the beasts and birds likewise, and the trees grew out of the ground. The earth furnished the material for the creation of everything which lives upon it, and the earth still is the great storehouse which furnishes food to all it inhabitants.

2. Tree of Life.—We have every reason to believe that whatever figurative use there may attach to the term "tree of life" in other parts of the Bible, there is, nevertheless, a real kind of wood, or species of tree, as the basis of the figure. A reality must underlie all figures. Jesus is reprented as the "bread of life," yet he could not be, if there were no such thing as literal bread. B. Wilson in Diaglott translates Rev. 2:7, "Wood of the life," and says in a note that the Greek word may refer to an aggregation of trees or a forest.

3. Commanded.—This commandment was to the effect that he should not eat of the tree of the knowledge of good anl evil.

5. Surely Die.—This was to be the penalty if the command was disobeyed.

6. Serpent.—The Bible use of this term is varied. Generally refers to reptiles which are familiarly known as snakes. See Concordance.

11. Not Surely Die.—Some kind of human immortality was here taught by the serpent to Eve. But we are told that he lied at the beginning, and being just opposite to God's statement both cannot be true. Let us state them side by side. "Ye shall not surely die."—Serpent. "Thou shalt surely die." God. Which will you believe?

14. She Took of the Fruit.—Poor woman! She was deceived. She ate of it and Adam ate with her.

Suggestive Topics and Questions

1. The Commandment.—What one man's disobedience is referred to in our memory text? When Adam was created in what garden was he placed? Tell what kind of trees were in the garden? What other trees are particularly mentioned? (2.) What properties had the tree of life? (Gen. 3:22). What would be the result of eating of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil? What command did God give Adam concerning this tree? (4.) What is meant by "surely die?" Is it literal death or a death in trespass and sin? Was this command an important one? If so, why? Do you think Adam ate of the tree of life while in the garden?

2. The Temptation.—What or who was the serpent? (6.) What did the serpent say to Eve? (7.) Did he tell the truth in verse 7? What did he tell her in verse 12? Was that true? (Gen. 3:22). Where did the serpent's story differ from the Lord's statement? (11.) What induced the woman to take the fruit? (13.) After taking and eating the fruit what did the woman do? (14.) Was the woman deceived? (1 Tim. 2:14). Was the man deceived?

Closing Remarks.—The most dangerous temptations are those where the error is nearest like the truth yet differs in some important item. The nearer a counterfeit is like the genuine coin the more likely to deceive. Had the serpent's temptation been presented in opposition to God's command Adam and Eve would have revolted at the idea: but it was presented in such a way as to agree with God in every particular, except that of dying. The idea was presented that, in addition to them having the wisdom of gods, they would never die. Here lay the deception to Eve. Let us not be deceived by any promise of immortality outside of Christ, for he alone brought life and immortality to light through the gspel.

The Burning Bush

Exodus 3:2

The burning bush: Israel in affliction, burning but not consumed—a miracle all the way down the ages. Israel scattered and persecuted among all the nations, burning but not consumed. And why so?

The ansewr is found in Gen. 22:15-18: "And the angel of the Lord called to Abraham out of heaven the second time, and said, By myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son: that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice."

This oath bound covenant is not contingent upon any thing to be performed by Israel, the conditions having been already performed by Abraham. Israel is scattered and persecuted because of their sins; but God says: "And yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies I will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them: for I am the Lord their God" (Lev. 26:44). "For thus hath the Lord said, The whole land shall be desolate; yet will I not make a full end" (Jer. 4:27). "Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, which thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old" (Micah 7:20). "Go ye up upon her walls, and destroy; but make not a full end." (Jer. 5:10).

Popular Christianity gives to Israel all the curses, and claims all the blessings for themselves; but God by virtue of his foreknowledge has caused it to be written that the same Israel that is scattered that will be gathered. "Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him as a shepard doth his flock" (Jer. 31:10).

That the gathering of Israel is not a past event but future, is proved by the testimony of Amos: "And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord God" (Amos 9:15).

We should not confound the literal gathering of Israel in the flesh to old Jerusalem, with what is written concerning the New Jerusalem. The first is the literal descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob gathered to the land promised to their fathers: the New Jerusalem is a spiritual municipality a corportion for the government of the earth. This city is the masterpeice, the finished work of the Architect of the universe, reflecting his wisdom, power, and benevolence. Its conception in the mind of him who knows the end from the beginning is surpassingly grand and glorious. Its environment is perfect and lovely. There is nothing in all the world that can be compared to this city in grandeur, purity, and perfection.

GEORGE FRANCIS.

ORTHODOX MEDLEY

In a striking indictment of Church overlapping copied in the "Outlook" from an American exchange, a story is told which in a humorous way carries an instructive moral. In a certain town where two streets crossed, three churches were built on corners so near to each other that the people in each could hear what the others were singing. One Sunday morning the Methodist was heard singing "Will there be any stars in my crown?" The Baptist was heard singing, as if in reply, "No, not one." The Presbyterian brought on the climax by singing "That will be glory for me."—Selected.

BIBLE READING

"For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God. Being justified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God. Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ" (Rom. 3:23-25; 5:1).

Cleveland Miscellanies

We sorrow with Sister Heloise Crawford this week, who lost her father by death.

Sister Lilly Wick, from near Youngstown, Ohio, met with us at the Lord's table Sept. 21st.

In response to a telephone call from Brother Jergensen, in company with Brother Jesse Titman, we attended the funeral of Brother Harry Earl, of Akron, Ohio, Sept. 12th. Our deceased brother died in the 81st year of his life. He had been in the truth for many years, and "died in the faith." He sleeps in Jesus, and will undoubtedly be among those who "are his at his coming."

The Young Peoples' Society held a meeting, Friday evening, Sept. 19th, at the home of Brother and Sister Sanford. Twenty-two members responded to roll call. There were eleven visitors. Three new members were taken in. The lesson was conducted by Brother Huggins and Sister Bessie Nichols. The subject was a debate: Resolved, that Christ personally pre-existed. Sister Bessie Nichols, opening with the affirmative, attempted to prove that Christ pre-existed (1) physically, (2) in a state of glory (3) and on an equality with God. Brother Huggins, on the negative, then gave a correct version of the texts quoted by the affirmative pointing out where and why unbelievers make their mistake. The meeting was most interesting as well as instructive and was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

A Discrepancy?

An unbeliever has recently claimed to me that in Amos 9:11, 12, "remnant of Edom," is quoted in Acts 15, "remnant of men." How can I answer her contention that there is a discrepancy?

EDITOR'S COMMENTS

In Amos the passage reads "remnant of Edom," and in Acts this is quoted "remnant of men." Such is the fact, and we cannot but wonder how an unbeliever can see a "discrepancy" in the two statements. The probability is that the vowel points have been changed by some scribe in Amos. Instead of "Edom" it probably read "Adam" in the original. In that case James restores the quotation to its original form. Be the facts in the case what they may, any fair minded unbeliever should be able to see that "Edomites" are "men," and that as a people ostracized from Israel they represented Adam, Adamites, Gentiles, the "men" in question.

HANNA M. BARBER

I would like to say to the brethren that we have had the privilege of having Sister Randolph, of Lipscomb, Texas, with us awhile this summer. She is the widow of our beloved Brother E. F. Randolph, who died last spring. She is very lonely since Brother Randolph's death, but she sorrows not as those who have no hope. She is rejoicing in the soon coming of our Lord when those who are loosed from the prison house of death shall exclaim, "O grave, where is thy victory?"

While Sister Randolph was here we had many good talks on the things concerning the kingdom of God. We had the pleasure of meeting Sister Cramer, of Blackwell, Okla., who has been visiting her daughter here in Pueblo. We had Bible class, and it seemed good to meet with those of like precious faith. We are isolated here and are always glad to see the brethren. We distributed tracts with an invitation to attend Bible class on Sunday, but not a person came. Good proof that we are in the "last days."

Pueblo reminds me very much of Sodom. The love of money seems to be the besetting sin. Greed and graft are on every hand. How true "the love of money is the root of all evil."

Sister Randolph intends visiting Sister Ella Gates, of Quinlan, Okla., after which she will return to her home in Texas. May the Lord be with her in this severe trial.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS AGAINST TOBACCO

The Christian Endeavor Societies of Georgia and South Carolina at their recent convention adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, The society ideal of Christian Endeavorers is to 'do whatever Jesus Christ would have us do'; and,

"Whereas, Our Bible ideal is 'clean hands and pure heart' (Psa. 24:3, 4), and to 'present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God' (Rom. 12:1), and to abstain from 'defiling the temple of God' (1 Cor. 3:17), and that we have left all to follow and obey Christ:

"Therefore be it resolved, That we Christian Endeavor Societies of Georgia and South Carolina, in convention assembled, express our devotion to these ideals, and seek to realize them in our own lives, by opposing, so far as we may, the use of tobacco in all forms by the young through life."

It would be well for us to follow their example.

MARGARET WATT

Again it is our sad duty to announce that the grim monster has carried from our circle another saint of God, namely, Sister Margaret Watt, who fell on sleep Saturday, September 13th, cause, heart failure. Sister Watt made the good confession, and was baptized in the day of Dr. John Thomas, and has ever since lived a consistent Christian life. We are confident that when he, for whom we all watch and wait, shall appear, she shall be among those who shall be told, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

May he soon come and gather together his waiting ones, both sleeping and awake, is the sincere prayer of

Your brother in Christ.

ALEXANDER D. DONALDSON.

Nancy Eldora Dickson was born May 18th, 1862. She was the daughter of John B. and Margaret Dickson, and a member of one of the pioneer families of Marshall County

She was married to Daniel Mochel, August 25th, 1906, and has since lived on a farm near Plymouth. After a brief illness she answered the summons of death September 19, 1919, at her home. She had lived 57 years, 4 months and 1 day.

She heard the gospel message in 1881, and yielded herself in obedience by baptism, and united with the Plymouth Church of God where she remained a faithful member till death. Sister Mochel possessed a quiet, unpretentious disposition in which she went about in the discharge of life's duties reflecting the character of Jesus whom she had learned to love and serve. In her death the church loses an active member, the community a good neighbor, and the world a noble woman. The husband has lost a loving companion and dutiful helpmeet by this encroachment of death upon the sacred precincts of his home. She leaves her husband, Daniel Mochel, and two sisters, Mrs. Jennie McDonald and Mrs. Nina Pontius, of South Bend, besides many other relatives to remember her life of love and kindness.

Sister Tavernier served luncheon at noon, after which Sister Ruth Mowery gave a reading on the seventh "Bible Lesson on First Principles." Under "posthumous probation" Larger Hope was exposed in a most transparent way.

The following notes are supplied by Sister Bessie Nicholls, Secretary of the Fellow Helpers' Society:

The Fellow Helpers' Society of the Church of God in Cleveland met at the home of Brother and Sister Lang on Friday evening, Oct. 3rd. The business part of the meeting was conducted. Several brothers and sisters, who are ill, were reported as having been visited by different members of the Society. The subject under discussion for the evening was, "Will fleshly relations be perpetuated in the Kingdom of God?" Sister Frances Russell, who was the leader, handled same in a very able manner. Several interesting points in the lesson were brought out which proved beneficial to all present. The collection was $3.95.

The Fellow Helpers wish to extend an invitation to any who are not members of the Society to attend one of their meetings; for they feel certain that any who attend one meeting will want to come again.

The following items of information concerning the Sister's Society are supplied by Sister Goss:

For the benefit of sisters in other churches and isolated readers of The Restitution, the Sister's Society of the Church of God in Cleveland asked me to write a short article, giving a little account of our doings.

We meet every two weeks on Thursday afternoon for business and Bible lessons. Meeting is called to order at 2 o'clock, usually opened with prayer by the sister who has charge of the lesson. The minutes of the previous meeting are read. Reports of calls made on sick or well, and letters written are made. Any answers received are read.

New business taken up, dues collected, 10 cents at each meeting. The amount seems small but in a year's time amounts to a nice sum and enables us to do a lot of good, such as sending fruit and flowers to the sick, etc.

After business is over our lesson is taken up. We have, for some time been studying the "Bible Lessons on First Principles" by Brother Huggins, pastor of our church. Thursday Oct. 9, is the date of our next meeting, and we begin the study of the 8th lesson. Our meetings close at 3:30, after which a little repast is partaken of before going to our several homes. We should be very pleased to hear from anyone and gladly answer their letters.

Russellism Refuted

ARTICLE SEVEN

THE RUSSELL RANSOM AN INVENTION

THE "RANSOM for all" harped upon so much by Russellism is an invented "ransom." It would force upon man a restitution of a physical condition without man performing any part of it. Man having fallen by sin, the wisdom of God is seen in requiring that he profit by the experience of trial under the evils he brought upon himself; it requires that to secure the physical redemption, man must be a voluntary and an active participant in the work, not a mere passive subject operated upon miraculously by resurrection.

The ransom, in the primary sense, was only the reinstating of man in the relation to God from which he fell. Before he fell, man was on probation, with the way to the tree of life open to him; after the fall, he was not on probation, and the way to the tree of life was closed to him. The ransom, which was entirely an act of God's love, and in which, primarily, man did not participate, was a restoration to a probationary relationship, by which man could "work out his own salvation," which would result ultimately in healing the physical sin-produced condition, and end in the "redemption of the body." The matter of the "ransom for all," therefore, may be stated thus: Sin closed the door against all—Adam and his descendants; the ransom opened the door "for all"—Adam and his descendants. Taking this view of it the ransom is as truly "for all" as the effect of the fall was. It may also be expressed in this way: Adam closed the door against "all;" Christ opened the door "for all." While Christ personally and literally as a sacrifice was not there to effect the ransom, the wisdom of God provided that the efficacy of his predetermined sacrifice should be drawn on in advance by means of types of what would certainly become realities.

The door which the "ransom" thus opened was never afterwards closed. That thousands have wandered away and lost it does not change the fact in the least. The special revelations which have been made since the delivery of "the faith once for all to the saints" have not been new "ransoms," new gospels, new faiths; they have been a resounding of the same "ransom," gospel, faith, etc. True there have been changes in the means of induction into the one faith, necessarily, by reason of transitions from times of "shadow" to times of "substance," but the gospel has always been the same, because man's common condition has always required a "common salvation."

The Russell Ransom a Delusion

The Russell "ransom" is a resurrection of all, except Russellites, to the condition of Adam's nature before he fell, when all are to have a chance of salvation in a condition of things politically, socially and physically incomparably more favorable than that which obtains during the times from Adam to the Millennium. This puts a premium upon procrastination. A philosophical mind would reason thus: Russellism tells me that God is indebted to me in the sum of another chance, or a chance in a future life to obtain salvation. So long as I keep outside the Russell "little flock" that debt remains in force, and it can only be discharged by raising me from the dead in a body free from the sin-productive proclivities of my present body. If I were to try to be a good Russellite, and thereby to obtain the "better thing" reserved for them in the form of a greater salvation, I might fail, and then my future chance would be forfeited. Now, even the "ransom" I shall have by resurrection will restore me to that "very good" condition of Adam and Eve before sin cursed them and the earth. That of itself, and without my turning a straw to effect it, will be an exceedingly good start for me. Then, when I am thrown on my own responsibility, I shall be in a glorious millennium, where satan will be bound, and the present allurements will be removed—why, after the "warning" I have had in the fall of Adam and in my "bitter experience" during this life, it would seem impossible for me to fail of obtaining salvation under such extremely favorable circumstances. In view of this,, what is the use of my troubling myself now, when everything seems against me? I will wait for that Russell "ransom" and take no chances in this life. I know that Russellism says I may not hope to have a salvation quite as good as Russellites, but that is only a difference in degree; and even if Mr. and Mrs. Russell and their followers do have a better position than I, it will not matter then, because surely there will be no envy in those times. After looking the matter all over, from every side of the question, I am convinced that I had better wait for the Russell ransom, and then try to work out my salvation under a cloudless sky. So I will "eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow I die;" but almost the next day I shall be alive again and find myself miraculously transformed into a nature, condition, and relation, all "very good." Really, when I think of Russellites, I am astonished at their ambition. To think, that they would run such risks as to try to obtain salvation in these times and hardships, when everything is against them, and yet they believe in a future "ransom" such as I am reviewing: and, just think of it, they are running the risks simply to gain a little superiority over me and those of my class in the ages to come. Really, this love of a prospective power on their part over the rest of us exceeds anything I know of in the rivalry of the political and social worlds of the present—but there, that is their business. As for me, I will wait the future Russell ransom to a "fair chance." Selected by Brother B. F. Smith.

DELIVERANCE

"We were pressed out of measure, ... Who delivered us . . . and doth deliver . . . He will yet deliver us."—2 Cor. 1:8-10.

Pressed out of measure and pressed to all length,
Pressed so intensely, it seemed beyond strength;
Pressed in the body and pressed in the soul,
Pressed in the mind till the dark surges roll;
Pressure by foes, and a pressure from friends,
Pressure on pressure till life nearly ends;
Pressed into knowing no helper but God,
Pressed into loving the staff and the rod;
Pressed into liberty where nothing clings,
Pressed into faith for impossible things,
Pressed into living a life in the Lord,
Pressed into living a Christ-life out-poured.

As Our Faith, So Shall Our Strength Be

Last week we told you we were on vacation, away from home, and in a limited manner, described the place where now we are staying; but we did not tell you we would be without a home when our vacation ends.

We call this department "the Young People's Page." The term "young people" is relative. Some people at 86 are younger than some others at 16. Still, as a rule, we count only those of more tender years as young. Hardly would we consider all those who have commenced their 37th year in that class. Very few of those for whom this page is written were born when we moved in our present residence, 127 Ryerson St., Brooklyn, on August 1, 1883.

During these 36 years many things of importance have happened, many things that go to make family history have transpired. The old home has witnessed two family weddings also the same number of births, while the grim monster has claimed three, who now sleep awaiting the coming of him who shall make all things new. May he soon come. Three members of the family have left the home to make the good confession and be buried in the water of baptism, and have returned children of God, heirs of his kingdom. So while we have seen sorrow we have experienced joy. All our days have not been sad; many days of extreme pleasure have been spent within the old walls, such as family reunions, family instruction in religious things, Sunday school, cottage meetings,

Funeral services were held at the Church of God in Plymouth, Ind., Monday, Sept. 22, 1919, at 3 o'clock, conducted by the writer, assisted by Mr. Northup. The house was filled with her old time friends, neighbors, and relatives, to whom we spoke words of comfort and hope from 1 Cor. 15 and 1 Thess. 4:13-17. Burial was made in the Pisgah Cemetery five miles from Plymouth, where Sister Mochel was laid to rest to await the coming of the Lord.

CHICAGO ITEMS

On Sunday, Sept 21st, the Aurora Bereans entertained the Chicago Church at an all day meeting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Colburn.

In the morning Brother Siple spoke on "The Gospel Message." He gave in a clear and simple way God's plan of salvation. In the afternoon he gave a fine discourse on "Jesus the Christ."

Lunch was served to thirty seven, making a pleasant social time at the noon hour.

Besides meeting the Aurora brethren, we were pleasantly surprised by the greeting extended to us from the Elgin folk who also had a hand in this entertainment.

Brother Clyde Randall, president of the Minnesota Bereans, was present and gave us a talk on the splendid results of the Berean work in his state.

We thank you all for this very enjoyable "get together time." These gatherings always draw "the church family" into closer fellowship.

On Sunday, Sept. 7th, Brother Clyde Randall visited the Chicago Church. After communion service he was asked to give us a few words of exhortation. He spoke very well on "The Promise given to Abraham," a subject of great interest to all. Come again, Brother Clyde.

We are glad to say that Sister Jessie Wilson is better though not very strong as yet. However, she managed to go to Aurora for the Sunday.

Our beloved Sister Chaffee, a great Berean is well enough to have a little vacation at the home of a friend. May God continue to give her daily strength.

Brother Paul Hatch is at home with us again after a summer of various occupations away from the city. We have missed Paul's talks, and we are glad that he is there to take up his share of the work.

A letter from Sister Anna L. Adams of Mulberry, Florida tells us that her old ankle trouble has returned and that she is suffering severely. She is unable to be on her feet, and says that it requires patience and then more patience. She is isolated and sick, and she is one who spends much of her time writing to others who need words of comfort and cheer. Let us write to her.

Brother H. V. Reed is in the Wesley Hospital, 25th and Dearborn Sts., Chicago. His son Dr. Reed, says that he has been there five weeks with a fractured leg. This news just reached us. As the days must be weary and the hours long, Bereans, see what you can do to help some of them pass more quickly and pleasantly.

A CORRECTED REPORT

Sister Anna Adams, chairman of the Social Correspondence Committee says that the report of the work of her comittee published in July represented only what had been accomplished up to the time of the Executive Board meeting in April, and not for the year. The report should be as follows:

Total number of letters written 292. Total number of answers received 181, total number of letters returned uncalled for 3.

Two of this committee together wrote 157 letters and they received 122 answers. A number of our soldier boys were written to, but no record was kept.

These letters according to answers received have been greatly appreciated by the recipients, and this fact is very encouraging to the committee.

The next conference will be held in Indiana in 1920.

ORGANIZATION

In union there is strength. By system much is accomplished. Organization, what is it? Webster says it is the act of arranging in a systematic way for use or action.

Any great work to be done is always begun by the getting together of the workers and forming some plan or plans by which the most possible can be accomplished in the shortest time. This is usually done by a division of the work among certain ones who will direct, while the others do their part by working in perfect harmony with the leaders.

Take our government, for example. Without its chosen officers to direct, without its system of doing things, and without the co-operation of the people, all would be turmoil; and riots and lawlessness would be the rule.

In the late war when we were all so sorry that some of our boys had to be sacrificed, yet many more might have had to go had it not been for the complete organization of the work along the lines of resistance.

Think of the great drives for money in the Liberty Loans. More time was spent in organizing and getting ready for the drive than was spent on the drive itself, simply because the leaders recognized the fact that complete organization was a long step toward accomplishing the end attained.

Look at our city school systems. Some one must be given authority to oversee the work, and also to see that the work is done. In olden times when each school was conducted independently of all other schools, but little was accomplished in an educational way; but now with our great united system of school work, much is done for our children and more no doubt will be done for our children's children.

If system or organization is needed in political, military, and educational circles, why not in religious circles?

Although I have been unable to find the words system or organize in the Bible, yet we find the idea carried out in many places. Ever since Adam was placed in the garden of Eden and told to dress it and to keep it, we see system in all God's work. Yes, even before that, for God in his creative work certainly had well organized plans and carried them out to the fullest extent.

When Moses was told to lead the children of Israel out of Egypt, there was system in the work; and when the tabernacle was moved in the wilderness, not just any one could take a part down and carry it as he pleased, but the whole structure had to be taken down by the Levites and had to be set up by the Levites, and each family of the Levites had to carry a certain well described portion. In the line of march there was nothing haphazard about it, for each tribe of all the tribes had to be in a certain place in the line, those carrying the tabernacle being placed near the centre.

When Joshua surrounded the city of Jericho everything was done according to a well organized plan, and success was theirs by the working out of what had been planned.

When Jesus fed the five thosand, he commanded the apostles to make all sit down by companies upon the grass and then he gave the disciples the food to set before them. Was there not system in this?

HOW TO ORGANIZE

1. Interest a few, or many, as the case may be, in the work. It does not take large numbers to organize a society. Three can organize and do good work.
2. Set a time and a place for a meeting, and announce that time and place either by personal invitation or public announcement, or both.
3. Be present at that meeting.
4. Choose someone to act as chairman and state the purpose of the meeting.
5. Form rules to work by and adopt them.
6. Elect officers. Said officers to be president, vice-president, secretary and treesurer. One person can be secretary and treasurer, so that if you only have three members each office will be filled.
7. This completes organization. You are now ready to go to work.

HOW TO WORK

1. Meet regularly and be at the meeting.
2. Get lesson books and study the lessons.
3. Take turns in leading the meeting so that each one will be benefited by the experience.
4. Collect dues and remit a portion to the state treasurer.
5. Read secretary's report of previous meeting and attend to any business that should come before the society.
6. Open and close meetings with song and prayer.

DUTIES OF TRACT COMMITTEES

Each state committee please write to each president of local societies of your state and ask that a tract committee be appointed in the local society, whose duty shall be to keep tracts on hand for distribution by himself or any member of the society. Also to establish and maintain a tract library, tracts to be furnished free by the National Society. The tract library is for use of any one who wants information on a certain subject, the same as one would go to any library for information. As many tracts of a kind can be kept on hand as the committee sees fit; these tracts to be used and returned or given out and replaced by the tract commitee.

Local societies, if you have no state committee write direct to National Committee for tracts or information. At any rate, sow the good seed and work, work, work in his name, so that a few more may be brought to see the true light of the gospel.

MEMORY VERSES MICAH 6:8. TITUS 2:13,14

GOLDEN TEXT: 2 Cor. 7:1

GRASP HIS HAND

We rush along the busy street
With shoulders bent and lagging feet;
  Nor dare to falter by the way
  For life's no longer than today.
The weaklings fall, the cowards shirk,
But we who're men must do our work.
  Grim duty drives us without rest
  Until we make our better, best;
And so we pass, our narrowed eyes
Fixed on some transitory prize.

Yet, as we press on to the end,
A cheery voice calls, "Greetings, friend!"
  A hand thrust out—a grip that's true—
  A smile that warms you through and through;
A message brief and soon forgot,
But, oh, the change that it has wrought!
  The shoulders squared, the quickened pace,
  We meet an old friend face to face!
The clouds have lifted and a ray
Of human sunshine gilds our way.

prayer-meetings. Entertainment has also been offered to such worthies as Wiley Jones, William Wilson, George R. Kramer, George W. Young, Francis Malcolm, James Forman, George W. Aldridge, J. B. Cook, John O. Woodruff, W. G. Moncrief as well as a host of others, whom to name would fill this page.

We said we had no home to go to at the end of our vacation. Sometime between October 1st and 15th (just as soon as papers can be examined and passed) the new owner will take possession; and as the house problem is the same in Brooklyn as in the rest of the country, you readily will understand our predicament; but we have explicit faith in him of whom it was said that he numbered the very hairs of our head. We know that God will open some avenue to us whereby our wants will be supplied. We do not claim righteousness, except through our faith in Jesus, our Redeemer but through that faith we claim the following words apply to us, as even they did to David, the sweet singer of Israel:

"The steps of a good man are ordered (or established) by the Lord: and he delighteth in his way. Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down: for the Lord upholdeth him with his hand. I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor their seed begging bread. He is ever merciful, and lendeth; and his seed is blessed. Depart from evil, and do good; and dwell for evermore. For the Lord loveth judgment, and forsaketh not his saints; but the seed of the wicked shall be cut off. The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever."

Yes, in God have we placed our trust: in him through our Lord Jesus Christ, shall our faith be rewarded, and our hope realized. We are not ashamed: for we know whom we have believed, and are persuaded that he is not only able to keep that for us that we have committed unto him against that day, but that he also is able, willing, yea, anxious to help, assist, comfort, and console us now. As our faith, so shall our strength be.

Greatness

Greatness is the aggregation of minuteness; nor can its sublimity be felt truthfully by any mind unaccustomed to the affectionate watching of what is least (Ruskin).

Dare to Turn Back

It often requires courage to turn back when we have taken a wrong step, but it is easier to turn back after the first step than after the second or third, and much safer and pleasanter.

Don't Be a Busybody

"He that passeth and meddleth with strife not belonging to him is like one that taketh a dog by the ears; as a madman who casteth firebrands, arrows and death; and so is the man that deceiveth his neighbor" (Prov. 26:17-19).

What Might Be And What to Do

Until such time as we again shall have a permanent home, when we shall have "a place for everything and everything in its place," we may occasionally not be able to send copy for The Young People's Page in time to be published in the current issue. Rest assured we shall do our best, but humanity has its limitations; and if The Restitution should, once in a while, reach you without our customary talk, just say, "Poor fellow; he's more to be pitied than blamed;" and give a prayer that we may be granted strength and guidance to continue as a faithful workman in the Master's vineyard. Will you?

How to Live

Not to get all we can for what we give,
But to give all we can for what we get,
To practice friendship every day we live,
To merit peace wherever our sun is set.

Rock of Ages, cleft for me!
Let me hide myself in thee;
Let the water and the blood,
From thy wounded side that flowed,
Be of sin the perfect cure,
Save me, Lord, and make me pure.

A Bible Lesson on John 6:44
By Request

Jesus said unto them, Murmur not among yourselves. No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me, draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day" (John 6:44).

In Matt. 11:28-30, is another statement by Jesus, this time an invitation. He says: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." In this passage nothing is said about God drawing. Is there any contradiction?

Let us try still another, this time John 3:16, 17, also spoken by the great Teacher: "God so loved the world that he gave his only begottten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved."

As concerning the manner or the mode, or the way of coming to Christ, is there any idea expressed in either of the foregoing verses that is not also expressed in the other two? In the first we have, "God must draw;" in the second, "Come, all ye;" while in the third we have it stated that the purpose of the coming of Jesus was to "save the world."

Let us try the word "love" and see whether or not it will act as a key to open the door of explanation. Kindly turn with me to 1 John 4:8-10: "He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love. In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be a propitiation for our sins."

From this we learn that God is love, that he loved us before we loved him, and that it was his love that prompted his gift of Jesus as a ransom for our sins.

In this connection let us define the word "draw." In the first place it does not mean to coerce or force, or compel us to do something against our will. But it does mean to bring us closer through appreciation; "an acknowledgement by affection of a kindness received."

We are admonished to "rightly divide the word of truth;" also it is stated that God's word is self explanatory if we but take the time and trouble to dig for the treasure of explanation. In this case we have not far to go. Suppose we again turn to John 6 and re-read verse 44, adding to it verse 45 and see if I am not right in asserting that by reading both verses, remembering the definition of the word "draw," that it explains itself, and removes everything of a mysterious nature that was supposed to be lurking there.

"No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day. It is written in the prophets, And they shall all be taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me."

We now see that when we realize that God is love, and that it was love that prompted him to sacrifice of his Son for our sins, that we are drawn by his love to an acceptance of his plan, thus acknowledging Jesus to be the Son of God, the Christ, our wisdom, our righteousness, our sanctification, and redemption.

The True Light

The north pole has six months day and six months night, the sun apparently traveling in a circle round it from the time it appears in March until it disappears in September. And so it is wherever we may live. The day and night are about equally divided. During the year we have about the same amount of light as darkness, and the same amount of darkness as light, only in our zone the time of change is divided into shorter periods and we do not feel it the same. The only way we may alwaws have light is to be a consistent follower of Christ our Lord. "Jesus said, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." And if we follow Jesus, then we must let our light so shine before men, that they may see our good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Yea, friends, Be light. Let your light shine. For if your light be darkness, then great is that darkness."

Gratitude

An old Scotch lady sitting down to her mid-day meal and finding she had nothing but a crust of bread and cup of water, reverently raised her eyes above, and said: "I thank thee, God of our fathers, that thou hath given me all this, and Jesus besides." How many of us sitting down to a sumptuous meal, think to thank the Giver of all good for his mercy and love, and "Jesus besides"? If, in the past we have not shown our gratitude, suppose we begin now. Yes, do it now.

Love

What is Love? "God is love and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God and God in him" (1 John 4:16). Love then, is most important in our race for everlasting life. We must have love to dwell in God and to have God dwell in us. We say we love God. We read and love his book, and try always to obey his commands. Can we do more than that to show our love for him? Let us see.

A man that once was our friend has proved to be our enemy. He has wronged us. Naturally he is no friend of ours anymore. In fact we dislike him, hate the very thought of him. Why should we not? Has he not committed a great sin against us? Jesus answers, "But I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you, Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you" (Luke 6:27, 28). That sounds very different from our poor weak selfish point of view, does it not? Again Solomon tells us that "Hatred stirreth up wrath, but love covereth all sin" (Prov. 10:12). From Paul's letter to the Romans we read that "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor, therefore love is the fulfilling of the law" (Rom. 13:10). Undoubtedly this little word "love" must fill a large space in our minds if we wish to have a part in the age to come. It is a mark of ownership that God has placed upon us, his children: a mark that our Lord Jesus has left for us, always to keep in plain sight. We are not supposed to cover up that mark or hide it in any way, for "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another" (John 13:35). And surely we do want "all men" to know that we are Jesus' disciples. Therefore, "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God" (1 John 4:7).

VOLUME 71 CLEVELAND, O. OCTOBER 21st, 1919. NUMBER 39

The Lord's Prayer

Our Father God, in heaven above,
Look down in pity and in love,
Hallowed be thy holy name,
And Jesus Lord be thine the same.
Thy kingdom come o'er all below,
Thy power on earth we pray thee show,
Thy will be done, our prayer shall be,
O'er all the earth, both land and sea.
Provide, O Lord, our daily bread,
And with thy word may we be fed.
Forgive our sins in thought or deed,
And may we not to man give heed.
Leave us not when tempted, Lord,
But guide us by thy living word,
From sin deliver us each day,
And hear us, Lord, when e'er we pray.
For thine is the kingdom ever more,
With power to rule from shore to shore.
And thus to thee due praise we'll give,
Forever more while here we live. Amen

The Glory of Two Houses:
The Natural and the Spiritual

IN THE parable of the sower the seed sown fell, some by the wayside where it was trodden down and carried away by the fowls; and some fell and germinated in other kinds of unproductive soil which lacked the necessary life-sustaining elements. But some fell into good ground, containing sufficient richness to make response, and supplying the necessary nourishment for subsequent growth, with the added sunshine and showers from the bountiful hand of God. Now the constituent elements of all these soils were present before the seed was sown, which determines the class to which they belong. It was not the falling of the seed into this soil that gave it productive properties, else the poor soil would have produced like results as that of the good. The good soil had in it what was lacking in the others: the ability to take hold and nourish a deeply rooted plant. And so out of the worthy natural by the sowing of the word of God springs the spiritual, yielding thirty, sixty, and a hundred fold.

We have here typified the different classes of the natural or Adamic race since it was given dominion. There is a class so beastly and unresponsive that the gospel message would not effect in the least way, though it be preached to them a thousand years. This class represents the mass of humanity that takes divers, circuitous, deceiving routes, pleasant to the eyes and enticing ways of worldly wisdom, but which lead the traveler out of the straight way of understanding. Their minds and hearts are so occupied by the gods and glories of the natural order as to render them completely blind to the true and living God and the glory of his presence. Wickedness in some form shuts out the light. Light and darkness cannot abide in one place at the same time. If you love darkness rather than light, the light will not be so rude and impolite as to intrude on the premises. It is those who receive the word gladly and love it enough to refuse longer to follow after the lusts of the world, that are the profitable servants of God. Here are some wayside, stony, and poor soil conditions which render them dead and unproductive: Inordinate desire for wealth, selfishness, self-pride, vanity, boastful spirit, covenant breaker, without honor, lying lips, adultery, lovers of themselves, unthankfulness, ungodliness, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof.

If the wayside soil is unresponsive now, would it be any different in the next age? Would a prudent husbandman knowingly waste valuable seed on worthless wayside ground? Would he neglect to utilize every nook of the good ground? All these classes of soil we find in every place, unless it be the good soil. The wayside is plentiful, the stony and poor come next in point of numbers; the good soil is very scarce. Some plants as clover and alfalfa add nutrition and strength to the soil constantly. The gospel seed has this effect on the good soil, adding continually instead of robbing, giving vitality and life instead of deterioration and death.

The Spiritual, Permanent House Built on a Rock and the Natural, Perishable House Built on the Sand

There is a house which God and not man has pitched, which the most vehement storms cannot shake (Luke 6:48). The house of the righteous shall stand, but the wicked are overthrown and are not (Prov. 12:7). "The house of the wicked shall be overthrown, but the tabernacle of the upright shall flourish" (Prov. 14:11). Just two houses comprise the human race. There are no half-way apartments. So, when you see a friend in need
Of friendship, be a friend indeed.
Just grasp his hand and say, "Hello!
Old man, I've really missed you so:
It seems real good to glimpse your face
While passing at this fevered pace.
I hear you're working mighty hard;
You're bound to win— it's on the card."
And though such words may hint of guile,
You'll feel repaid to see his smile!

Don't wait until some other time
To operate this friendly rhyme;
But start today, ere it's to late
And get ahead of gloomy fate.
Don't wait until the papers say,
"Alas, a good man's passed away!"
Present the glad hand and the word
Of friendliness so seldom heard.
Help others shed their gloom, then you
Will find your burdens lightened too.

The Mountains and the Hills are God's

Well, young people, we're on vacation. We're stopping at the Campbell Inn at Roscoe, New York. When at home in Brooklyn we live, practically, at sea level; here we are at an elevation of 1450 feet. All about us is the most beautiful scenery. Sitting, as I am, at the window of our room, we can see six mountains with quite a picturesque valley between. Below us, about one half mile distant, immediately to the front and to the right, we can see about two hundred buildings of various shapes, sizes, and colors. This is the town of Roscoe, slightly to the left. Further down the valley dotted with the different shades of green, with here and there yellow patches showing where the ripened grain has been garnered, are other houses forming Rockland. Near by, within ten minute's walk is a romantic little river called the Willowemoc. We vastly enjoy standing on the iron bridge which spans this stream watching the never ceasing water flow by, wondering from whence it came, and whither it will go after emptying into the larger and more famous Beaverkill just a little way beyond.

Perhaps some of you live among the hills, care free from the worries of city business cares, and to you this will not mean much, but to me tied down to the customs of city life, with all its hurry and bustle, and nerve racking noise, it simply is ideal for, added to the beauties and bounties of nature which is everywhere so apparent, the Inn lacks none of the comforts and conveniences of the modern city home.

It has been raining and, in consequence, everything outdoors is clear and fresh looking, while between us and the nearest mountain miles away can be seen a most magnificent rain bow, that bow of promise that God made to Noah that never again would all flesh be destroyed from the face of the earth through flood.

To me, the strange part of life in the country, and especially in the mountains, is, that so many people surrounded with every evidence of the glory, and strength, and might, and power of Jehovah, fail to see his handiwork in nature and refuse to honor and serve him. How do these great mountains exist? Who created the valleys? Who made the rivers? Who formed the lakes? Who fashioned the rocks? Who covered the earth with verdure and made the trees? Who put fish in the waters, and birds in the air, and beasts in the forests? Can we look upon all these things and still doubt there is a God? Are we so gross, are we so blind, are we so dull that we cannot comprehend that some power greater than man is responsible for all these things? Can we not understand that it was "God who made us, and not we ourselves"? Read, in the opening of Genesis, how that God in the beginning did create all things; also how in the Psalms he says: "Every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. I know all the fowls of the mountains: and the wild beasts of the field are mine." Again, "The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof: the world and they that dwell therein. For he hath founded it upon the seas, and established it upon the floods." With such a multitude of proofs of the power and love of our Creator all about us, and the Book filled with evidence of the majesty and grace of the Father, let us not doubt, but have faith, growing in grace and knowledge. Thus may we let others know of God's loving kindness, and bring many to him through Jesus Christ our Lord.

And as a guide for our own walk, conversation and behavior, safe, sure, and comforting, let us closely follow the admonition of Moses to Israel, when he said: "And now what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to fear (reverence) the Lord thy God, to walk in all his ways, and to love him, and to serve the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul. To keep the commandments of the Lord, and his statutes, which he command thee this day for thy good. Behold the heaven and the heaven of the heavens is the Lord's thy God, the earth also, with all that therein is."

A Bible Lesson

Being away from home, and not remembering the subject matter of our last week's "Weekly Puzzle," we will not be able to give an answer to it. Instead, we will give a little Bible Lesson, taking as a subject 2 Cor. 6:9, 10, which on the face appears to be a bundle of contradictions. Now let us together read very carefully the verses:

"As unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and behold we live; as chastened, and not killed; as sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things."

How can we be one thing and yet be the exact opposite at the same time?

As an answer let us listen to what Paul says in his letter to the Corinthian church: "As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy: and as is the heavenly, such as they also that are heavenly." Again, "It is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent. Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?"

In 1 John 3:1 we read, "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not."

We now see the passage simply means that if we belong to God we can not belong to the world; also that if we belong to the world we cannot belong to God. If we are Christians, then we will be well known to God and his Christ, but we will be unknown to the world. If we are members of the family of God we will be dead to the world, but very much alive in doing the things that God would have us do; also that through our present deadness, we inherit eternal life, to be given us by Jesus at his coming. If God loves you, he'll chasten you; but his chastening will be to draw you nearer to him, wich means in the world to come, life everlasting. If we follow Christ we will feel sorry that so many others refuse to follow him, but we will rejoice in the fact that God, in his love, provided a way, so that those who will may come. If we are called a child of God, we must of necessity be poor as the world calls poverty, but we are rich because we are the child of the King, an heir to the kingdom of God, and in time we shall be used as implements in the hand of God in his blessing of the world. And as the poor have nothing, still we are heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ.

We trust we have made it plain how a person can be two things, and they exactly opposites, at the one time. "Therefore let no man glory in men. For all things are yours; whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; and ye are Christ's; and Christ's is God's."

Wisdom

The wise man sigheth in his knowledge, while the fool singeth in the lack of his understanding.

The wise man developeth a brooding melancholy over what he knows, while the fool remaineth happy, revelling among the things he knows not.

To have frequently is to suffer; not to have frequently is to know content.

A man who never has seen the glory of the sun may be excused for praising the brilliancy of the moon.

Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting, get understanding.

Receive instruction, and not silver; and knowledge rather than choice gold. For wisdom is better than rubies; and all the things that may be desired are not to be compared to it.

Wisdom resteth in the heart of him that hath understanding: but that which is in the midst of fools is made known.

A wise son maketh a glad father; but a foolish son despiseth his mother.

To know wisdom and instruction will make the heart of man glad.

Manly Principles

We must tramp upon our feelings when principle is at stake.

The power to do great things generally arises from the willingness to do small things.

The union of energy and wisdom make the completest character and the most powerful life.

The gentleman is a man of truth, lord of his our actions, and expressing that lordship in his behavior; not in any manner dependent and servile, either on persons, or opinions or possessions.

Those great masters who have travelled the same road with success are the most likely to conduct others. The works of those who have stood the test of ages have a claim to that respect and veneration to which no modern can pretend. The duration and stability of their fame is sufficient to evince that it has not been suspended upon the slender thread of fashion and caprice, but bound to the human heart by every tie of sympathetic approbation.

Silent Sympathy

Pray, count me those,
A wounded heart need never dread,
Who, knowing, soften woes
With sympathy they leave unsaid.

So rare and dear,
Asking nought of "how" or "why,"
Comes a quiet presence near,
Something just by being nigh.

L'envoi

Ah, could we mourn
By the side of such as they,
Truly, then, were trails borne,
In a more enduring way?

Duty is the end and aim of the highest life; the truest pleasure of all is that derived from the consciousness of its fulfilment. Of all others, it is the one that is most thoroughly satisfying and the least accompanied by regret and disappointment. In the words of George Herbert, the consciousness of duty performed "gives us music at midnight."

is built upon Christ. If you are in this house, and stay in, you are safe; but if not in it, you are an occupant of the other house founded upon the sand, which, on account of its enormous size, shall have a great fall. The house of God has been in course of construction down through the ages contemporary with the more ostensible house being erected on a sandy foundation. Quietly, steadily, but surely, the material for the house of God has been chiseled and fitted. Every dis[illegible]sation has its [illegible]. Though small yet indispensible. These are hid away in the earth with God's marks upon them, awaiting the day when they shall be gathered and every stone find its abiding place to adorn the structure and reflect the glory of God.

No wonder the resurrection of the dead is of so great moment in the divine plan of salvation. The Architect of this building has been particular in drawing the plans and specifications. He has warned those who seek to have a part in its perfecting that it must be builded according to the pattern [illegible] his holy [illegible]. Defective material which will not yield to divine workmanship, must be discarded. Only tried and seasoned timbers must be allowed [illegible] eternity. [illegible] the [illegible] a place in a building [illegible] planned before the dawn of creation and being [illegible] day by day by the hand of God to be revealed in the last day with a glory [illegible] away. And [illegible] if you are [illegible] Christ, and if God [illegible] be [illegible] who have no hope. You [illegible] have sunk to the lowest depths of sin but if you are willing to humble yourself and ask God's mercy, you will find [illegible] never has cast [illegible] his invitations have always [illegible] without hypocrisy when he pleads "Whosoever will, may come," and is truly [illegible] of the earth and every [illegible] heaven. He has [illegible] every bit of serviceable material to be had at all [illegible]. He [illegible] waste [illegible] and nothing escapes his [illegible] eye. Think not that God fails to see and know you through and through, and if you can be used in this building at all, you must be used now; for if you fail to become a part of this building you are sure to be a part of another of which it is said, "great is the fall thereof."

No wrecked or second hand material of this sort will be used to complete the household of God in the next age. The family or household of God will not be completed until the personal return of his Son from heaven where he is being invested with the power and sovereign authority of the Father to subdue the world and gather out all things that offend and renew the beauty of the earth which was created for the inheritance of the righteous.

There is a glory of the natural, but the glory of the spiritual is as high above it as the heavens are above the earth. There is much in the natural that reflects the glory of God. It is the abuse of natural things and not in the things themselves where sin lies. Knowledge of the natural [illegible] from God, but when through this knowledge men become puffed up, vain and ungodly instead of using it to glorify God's name, then they are given over to their own lusts and evil ways. When the sinner is willing to recognize that it is in God he lives and moves and has his being, and that he is without excuse, for the invisible things of God from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead (Rom. 1:20), all the teachers he needs for instruction in the way of salvation will be amply provided. The inner or Christian through a foretaste of that glory which is to come, lays aside the armor of the old man and puts on the new, rejoicing in the hope of eternal life through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. God's attitude of patience and forbearance toward the froward and unbelieving reflects his holiness, but he is governed by the same council of wisdom he gives his children: "Rebuke and give instruction to a wise man and he will love thee and increase in learning: but he that rebuketh the wicked getteth himself a blot" (Prov. 9:7-9).

What Does 1 Cor. 15: 22 Teach?

IT IS the commonly conceived idea that the above text teaches universal resurrection. We do not think so. We believe the apostle had in mind only consecrated Christians. If "in him we have redemption" means "we have redemption in him" then "in Adam all die" must mean "all die in Adam." If "all die in Adam," then "all" must be alive "in Adam" before they could die "in Adam"; so with the expression, "in Christ shall all be made alive." If "in Adam all die" means "all die in Adam," then "in Christ shall all be made alive" must mean "all shall be made alive in Christ." If "all" must first be alive "in Adam" before they can die "in Adam," then "all" must first be "dead in Christ" before they can be made alive "in Christ." [illegible] admit "all" are "in Christ" before being made alive, [illegible] are dead where? "In Christ," or out of Christ? If "dead in Christ," then they are [illegible] to meet the Lord in the air (1 Thess. 4:16). If dead out of Christ how then could they be "in Christ" in order to be a part of the "all" that are made alive "in Christ"? [illegible] they must first be "in" Christ before being made alive "in" Christ? The "all" that are "made alive in Christ" must first be "dead in Christ"; the "dead in Christ" must first "die in the Lord." Do the wicked or heathen "die in the Lord"? If so, then "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord"! Since only the Christians "die in the Lord," only they are the ones who are "dead in Christ"; hence they are the "all" that are "made alive in Christ." "By" is sometimes suggested as a rendering of "en" in verse 22. This is a mistake, "dia" is the word that is rendered "by" in verse 21. It seems like the apostle foresaw that some would misunderstand him in verse 21, so he uses "en" in the King James Version.

It is affirmed that Paul had in mind all of Adam's descendants in the expression, "in Adam all die." Where is the proof of this? "As we have borne the image of the earthy" - let us stop here and reflect: Do not all men bear that image? If so, we might say "even so we (all men who bear the image of the earthy) shall bear the image of the heavenly"!! Just because other men besides the saints "bear the image of the earthy" or "die in Adam" is no proof Paul had them in mind when he said, "in Adam all die." "Such are they also that are earthy" can be expanded wide enough so as to include all who are of the dust; so with "in Adam all die." But such an expansion is wrong, for those "earthy ones" in the apostle's mind and the "all" that die "in Adam" are both restricted; The one to only those who "bear the image of the heavenly"; the other to those who are made "alive in Christ."

When "baptized into the death of Christ" the penitent sinner secures remission of sins and therefore becomes a "new creature in Christ Jesus" (2 Cor. 5:17). Hence Paul says, "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature." Therefore it is clear, if all men are in Christ and shall be made alive, then Paul's word for it, they are "new creatures." If one is in a house he can not go into it unless he goes out and enters it a second time. If sinners are "in Christ" before baptism, they would have to get out of Christ in order to be "baptized into Christ," as they could not be "baptized into" what they are already in.

"In him we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins" Eph. 1:7; Col. 1:14). If all men are "in Christ," then all men have "redemption" and the "forgiveness of sins." To our mind it is clearly evident that the obedient only get "into Christ." After they are "in Christ" their great task is to be "faithful unto death" and "abide (where?) in him" (1 John 1:7; 2:24-28; 3:24; 4:13-15). If they "abide not in him," but go "out from among us" who are "in Christ" (1 John 2:19), and die out of him, they are reckoned as having trodden the "blood of the Son of God under foot," hence must expect the "resurrection of damnation" (John 5:28, 29; Heb. 10:26-30).

That "in Christ shall all be made alive" refers to the good only is evident from the Greek word rendered "alive." The word is "zoopoiethesontia." This same word "zoopoiesei" occurs in Rom. 8:11 where it is translated "quicken." It shows there that only those who have the indwelling Holy Spirit are quickened as 1 Cor. 15:22 shows only those "in Christ" shall be "made alive" in the resurrection under consideration.

"In Christ shall all be made alive. But every man (of the "all") in his own order; Christ the first fruit; afterwards they that are his at his coming." "First fruits" of what? "Of them that slept" or the "all" that are "made alive in him." How was he raised? Immortal. Then as are the "first fruits," so is the harvest or the "all" in him ---that is, "all" are raised immortal. "They that are his" no doubt means the "dead in Christ" or the "all" that are made "alive in Christ."

It is generally conceded that the expression "resurrection of the dead" in verse 21, and "in Christ shall all be made alive," cover the same territory. If "resurrection of the dead" here means all the dead, then it must mean the same in verse 22, for verses 21 and 22 are merely two ways of stating the same thought. Well, does "resurrection of the dead" here mean all the dead? Does it even include the wicked, as it does in some places (Acts 24:15)? Well, we shall see. Here is where the battle must be finally won or lost. Dropping down to verse 35 Paul asks the question, "How are the dead raised up"? Notice the expression: "the dead" is not restricted by any modifier. Verse 52 says, "the dead (what will be done to the dead?) shall be raised incorruptible." Can "the dead" then even mean the wicked, much less the heathen? No! a thousand times no!! Verse 42: "So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption." So then "resurrection of the dead" as used in verses 21-42 means those who are "raised incorruptible" and "in incorruption." Notice the term "the dead" is used in verses 21, 35, 52. If we say "the dead" in one verse means all the dead, why not in the other two? The expression "the dead" in all three mean the "dead in Christ." If so, then as verse 22 is a repetition of verse 21, it follows the expression "in Christ shall all be made alive" merely means "the dead" who are "raised incorruptible" or "in incorrption."

Submitted in love.

By Allen D. Strickler

The principles upon which Christ's kingdom will be built are stated in Romans 14:17 "as righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit." These spring from "the mind of the Spirit," which is in opposition to "the mind of the flesh." A kingdom that has for its rulers and governors such as have "the mind of the Spirit," "doing justly, loving mercy; and walking humbly with God" (Micah 6:8), would be a great blessing to all nations. This is what God had in mind when he called Abraham are sware unto him, "That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying, I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed: because thou hast obeyed my voice" (Gen. 22:17, 18).

Paul says in Gal. 3:16 that Christ is the seed that God promised should bless all nations; but Christ is only one, and the promise was that his seed should be as the stars of heaven. The difficulty vanishes when we consider what Paul further says: "For ye are all children of God through faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as were baptized into Christ did put on Christ." "And if ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to promise" (verses 26, 27, 29). This is in harmony with what James says in Acts 15: 14, 16: "Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name. . . . .After this I will return (after he has taken out from the Gentiles the number necessary as name bearers), and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up."

Here is where the religion of Jesus Christ centers in connection with God's promise and purpose, to bless all nations by turning every one of them away from their iniquity, so that they may become "the meek" and "inherit the earth," as an "everlasting possession." "A people for his name" would bear his name, and be his sons or children; and if children they would be like their Father, having "the mind of the Spirit." "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God; and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ, if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together" (Rom. 8:16, 17).

Paul gives the divine order by saying, "Christ the first fruits; then they that are Christ's at his coming" (1 Cor. 15:23). Christ Jesus was the first to have "the mind of the Spirit" in concrete consciousness and identity; then those who are visited by the gospel become partakers of that same mind, and so they become one in him, and in God the Father; as the prayer of Christ shows: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou hast sent me" (John 17:20, 21).

The multiplication of "the mind of the Spirit" is the great work that has been going on since Christ, in the last half, even at the end of that half, at the end of the Seventy weeks of Daniel's prophecy, 490 years from the twentieth (20th) year of Artaxerxes, 456 B. C., "made a firm covenant with many," and which will continue until he comes a second time without sin (without being a sin-offering as at his first coming) unto salvation."

Although the work of creating "the mind of the Spirit" had been in operation since the time of Adam up to the coming of Jesus the first time, its magnitude was not as great as since the time "the mind of the Spirit" became a concrete reality among men by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, "the first fruits of them that slept." Here was the proof that if a man die having had "the mind of the Spirit," he will live again. With this fact before the world, mankind have a sure thing to believe in, and have, what the Scriptures call "faith." No one can create within himself "the mind of the Spirit" without faith. It was Christ's faith in the gospel that enabled him to do it, and then abolish death in himself by resurrection (2 Tim. 1:10).

He gave assurance to his brethren by saying, "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world" (John 16:33), indicating that they would also be successful; for he says in Rev. 3:21, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." It was for others that they might have "the mind of the Spirit" that he met the supreme test, "going over the top," and down into the valley of the shadow of death." The apostle says, "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief" (1 Tim. 1.15). To the Romans Paul wrote thus, "But God commandeth his love towards us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us" (Rom. 5:8). John says, "We love God because he first loved us," and Christ said, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends" (John 15:13). In God's justice in dealing with repentant sinners for their salvation, it was necessary that they be furnished and shown "the way" by which they could make confession to God for what they deserved for their sins. Christ steps into the breach, and says, "Here am I, send me"; and so he humbled himself, and became "obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." This was a mode of death he did not deserve; but those for whom he died, did deserve it for their past sins. Having the common sinful human nature with those he died for, he was able to show forth by the death of the cross, a violent death, what man, as a free-will moral creature, deserved because of his sins in thought, word and deed; and at the same time, what the common human nature deserved because of its lusts, that is, natural impulses. Human nature, divorced and shut off from moral instruction and training, is not only a curse to the one having it, but also to all that come in contact with it; and it deserves circumcision as well as annihilation. God will not forever curse those whom he loves because they have "the mind of the Spirit," with a nature that prompts them to disobey him. Common experience and also "the spirit of prophecy" testify that human nature as all men know it, is an evil nature. We read in Gen. 8:21, "The imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth. Jeremiah says in chapter 17:9, that "the heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it ?" Paul says, "Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin which dwelleth in me" (Rom. 7:20). "But with the flesh," Paul said he served "the law of sin." Christ's human nature did not make him unclean. It did not make him serve "the law of sin." To say that Chirst's human nature was unclean, although potentially true, is wide of the mark, for the reason that his death was an atoning sacrifice; a covering for sin that there might be forgiveness of sins and oneness of mind with God. Christ had no sins to atone for; and in reference to his sinful flesh or flesh full of sin, it could only possibly be atoned for, because Paul says, "the mind of the flesh is not subject to the law of God, neither can be." "Sin in the flesh" is not something to be forgiven because there is no guilt in connection with having it, coming as it does with inheritance of birth; and where there is no forgiveness there is no atonement, as the two are inseparably connected in the Scriptures of the Old Testament. The physical nature, either of Christ or his brethren, is not the object of salvation. Paul explicitly says that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God" (1 Cor. 15:50). "The mind of the flesh" and the physical mortal body are one; just as "the mind of the Spirit" and the "spiritual body" will be one. God's purpose is not to save the flesh nor those who are in the flesh; everything belonging to the flesh is doomed to destruction "So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his" (Rom. 8:8,9). If a man has the Spirit of Christ he has "the mind of the Spirit," because the Spirit of Christ emanates from "the mind of the Spirit," and from no other source. God's purpose is to save "the mind of the spirit" (which during the days of probation, attaches itself to the "ego" or conscious identity of man) by giving it a spiritual and incorruptible body, wherein exists no impulses for sin and rebellion against God. Paul's closing argument in the 8th chapter of Romans corfirms this view. The apostle says: "And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit (that is, "the mind of the Spirit") is life because of righteousness" (verse 10).

Those who deny these things have not "the mind of the Spirit," neither do they accept "the testimony of Jesus," which is the "Spirit of prophecy." Paul says in Rom. 7:20: "But if what I would not, that I do, it is no more I that do it, but sin which dwelleth in me." Here is where Paul is locating or placing the responsibility for his service to the law of sin, which in verse twenty-five he said he served by the flesh, although Paul admits that he sinned as a person and therefore came under the condemnation of the law; through Christ and the law of grace and mercy, he would be delivered from the punishment that the law inflicts upon transgressors. The sin which he says dwelt in him, was only so in a secondary and derived sense, because the first sin of Adam from which it was derived, fixed itself in the flesh brain and became the cause of transgression. In the first sin, the serpent lie was the cause; then afterwards, the lusts or impulses of the nature was the cause. The same mental law still exists in connection with any good or bad habit. Sow a thought and reap an act; sow an act and reap a habit: sow a habit and you reap a distiny. It is recorded in the 8th chapter of Luke that Christ spake a parable, and he said, "A sower went forth to sow his seed" etc. Now the parable is this; the seed is the word of God," and some of it fell on good ground; "that on the good ground are they, which in an honest and good heart, have heard the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with patience." "So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth; it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it" (Isa. 55:11).

God said to Moses as written in Exodus 3:14, 15, that his name was Jehovah, that is Yahweh, which Hebrew word has the meaning, "I will be who I will be." "This is my name for the age, and this is my memorial unto all generations." This name of God is a name that declares his purpose, and therefore to be remembered, "a memorial unto all generations." God's word that goes forth as seed, accomplishes his purpose, or as Isaiah says, "that which I please." God's purpose and pleasure is to tabernacle with men, and dwell with men living upon this earth. "Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God" (Rev. 21:3). God will dwell with men, by men having "the mind of the Spirit," in spirit bodies. Christ was God manifest. He was the first one of the "I will be who I will be"; his brethren will complete the number in whom God by "the mind of the Spirit" wishes to dwell. "In whom also we were made a heritage, having been foreordained according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his will" (Eph. 1:11).

Paul in 1 Tim. 3:16 state the fact that the name "Yahweh"—"I will be who I will be"—is a great mystery, when he says: "And without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifested in the flesh, justified in the spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory."

The Silent Guidance of Books

In the highest civilization the book is still the highest delight. He who has once known its satisfaction is provided with a resource against calamity. And to us they are angels of entertainment, sympathy and provocation—silent guides, tractable prophets, historians and singers, whose embalmed life is the highest feat of art, who now cast their moonlight illumination over solitude, weariness and fallen fortunes (Emerson).

Turn to "The Young People's Page" and note Brother Donaldson's new address.

The baptized believer is righteous by the righteousness of another; he lives by the life of another; he is acted on by the spirit of another; therefore he, of any man in the world, should have least of self in him.

Dr, Riley, of Minneapolis, Minn., in an address in Cleveland. Sept. 9th, appealed to ministers "to quit preaching other stuff and proclaim the Scriptures." Good advice. We wish the preachers would heed it.

* * *

"The Glory of Two Houses," and "What Does 1 Cor. 15:22 Teach ?" the two leading articles this week by Brethren Hammond and Fiske, are worthy of special commendation. Those who are accustomed to the average religious journals, filled with doggerel poetry, sing song compositions, and "wise sayings from great men," may cast The Restitution aside and complain that it is too "heavy" to read. Instead of casting it aside let them lay it away carefully and return to it many days hence. The subject matter of the paper is rather studious and deep, we admit: but this is why the most of our readers value it. Each number is valuable as any tract, and may be used for that purpose or kept for future reference. Once more we bespeak for the epigrammatic articles of Brethren Hammond and Fiske a diligent reading and study.

Brother A. B. Luther, of Geneva, and Sister Ella Knowles, of Salem, were visitors Oct. 12th.

On the morning of Oct. 5th, our door bell rang. Responding to the call, judge of our surprise when we looked upon the smiling faces of Brother and Sister Glotfelty, of Lanark, Illinois. They were going east, and had stopped to spend the day with us. Truly it was good to have them set with us at the Lord's table and feast upon the bounties of God's love.

The Sister's Society held their meeting Thursday afternoon Oct. 9th, at the home of Sister Drenske.

There were twenty-one members and one visitor present.

It was announced that nine calls had been made and two baskets of fruit sent out.

The lesson was conducted by Sister Ruth Pate, the subject being the eighth Bible Lesson, which deals with the Holy Spirit and its gifts. The leader showed that the Holy Spirit instead of being a distinct person, as taught by some, was the power and energy of God himself. The meeting was then closed by all repeating our motto found in Heb. 13:15, 16. Sister Addie Gibbs.

Brother and Sister Charles Pate opened their home to a large attendance of the Young People's Society, Friday evening, Oct. 10, 1919. In the course of the business meeting one new member was received into the society; a motion was carried to give ten dollars toward the new floor covering for the church, and the Corresponding Secretary gave a report. Announcement was made that the next regular meeting will be Oct. 30th, on Thursday evening instead of the usual Friday night, the place to be announced later. The Young People wish to extend their sympathy to Brother and Sister Tomlinson on account of injuries received in an automobile accident.

Sister Alice Chappelle led a very interesting lesson, subject: "Thou shalt have no other God before me" (Exod. 20:1-6). The lesson in brief pointed out that in return for all the spiritual and temporal blessings which God has given us, we owe him obedience from love, not from fear. God should be the object of our supreme affection; he is a jealous God. The Ten Commandments may be divided into two parts: the first four teach our duty towards God, the last six, our duty towards one another. Christ's own words command, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart" (Matt. 22:37). From Matt. 6:24 we see we cannot serve two masters, so as the Israelites could not serve God acceptably and at the same time worship idols and images, neither can we now worship money, power, or persons, and remain faithful to God (Isa. 40:18-25; Rom. 1:20-25). If it is contrary to the Bible then, to worship anything more than or equally with God, is not the doctrine of the trinity idolatry ?—Sister Heloise Crawford.

The Folly of the Wise

DID SHEM DIE?

Dear Editor:

You have, in the past, through The Restitution and your published works, shown to me in a convincing way that Enoch and Elijah died You have not, to my knowledge, treated the case of Shem. A great man, Dr. John Thomas, in "Chronikon Hebraikon," page 11, makes the following statement which I ask you please to review: "It no where says in Scripture that Shem died. I have, therefore, said, 'he ceased from among men.' I rather conclude that he is the Melchi, king of Zedek, righteousness, of whom Paul says 'it is testified that he liveth' (Heb. 7, 8); and that being alive, he is a very fit and proper type of the apostle and High Priest of our confession' (Heb. 3:1)."

EDITOR'S COMMENTS

Personally we are greatly indebted to Dr. Thomas for our knowledge of the truth. While God has commanded us to honor those to whom honor is due, he has likewise told us to follow men only so far as they follow Christ. Israel plowed wickedness, reaped iniquity, and ate lies "because they trusted in their own way, in the multitude of their mighty men" (Hos. 10:12, 13). History is a running commentary on the fact that "the leaders of the people cause them to err." Allowing, then, that Dr. Thomas was a "great man," as our correspondent calls him, we still must remember that "great men are not always wise neither do the aged understand judgment" (Job 32:9). Dr. Thomas was not "always wise." Wherein he was wise and scriptural we are glad to follow him; wherein he was weak, foolish, and erratic, we refuse to follow him.

Shem Died

Dr. Thomas makes bold to say in the quotation given by our correspondent, "It no where says in Scripture that Shem died." Were this unqualified statement true, it might be as truthfully affirmed of others as of Shem. There is no formal record in the Bible of the death of Arphaxad Salah, Peleg, Rue and a host of others If Melchizedek must be picked out of this mighty host, which one are we to select; and how are we to know that our selection is correct ? Why select Shem and reject the others, without stating a single reason for the choice ?

But Dr. Thomas grows more presumptuous still: "I have, therefore, said, 'he ceased from among men.'" Not content with this affirmation, more worthy of an orthodox preacher than an expounder of the truth, he presumes to say that of Shem Paul says, "It is testified that he liveth" ! If the reader will read what Paul really says, he will see that instead of saying this of Shem, the declaration refers to Jesus Christ. An orthodox preacher never wrote any worse nonsense than this. Think, if such an unthinkable thing can be thought, that the same apostle Paul who said that there is only "one mediator between God and men, the man Jesus Christ" (1 Tim. 2:5), flatly contradicted himself in Hebrews by saying that Shem is Melchizedeck. and remains to this day a priest along with Christ—making two mediators! Truly the wisdom of the wise God brings to nought. It is all foolishness to him. To say that "it no where says in the Scripture that Shem died" is unpardonable ignorance. The death of Shem is recorded in the Bible in positive and unmistakable language. The record satisfies us perfectly, and we transcribe it without comments as sufficient to convince every honest minded reader that, instead of teaching that he "ceased from among men," or that it "testifies that he liveth," it says he died in language which no child would misunderstand: "And Shem lived after he begat Arphaxad five hundred years, and begat sons and daughters" (Gen. 11:11).

Questions Answered

QUESTION THREE

The holy city New Jerusalem: is it a real city of walls and buildings (Rev. 21:2) ?

No; the holy city is not a real city; for we are told by John that an angel came unto him. saying, Come hither, I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife" (Rev. 21:9). Reading further we have and he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and showed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God' (vs. 8, 10). This proves the holy city to be the bride, the Lamb's wife.

Now what is the bride ? After John had heard the voice of a great multitude, saying, "Alleluia; for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth," he hears them continue, "Let us be glad, and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white, for the fine linen is the righteousness of the saints" (Rev. 19:7, 8). A city clothed in white linen is not spoken of; but saints are clothed in righteousness. That the church is the prospective bride of Christ is evident from this: "But ye have come unto Mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, the general assembly, the church of the first born, which are written in heaven;" etc. (Heb. 12: 22, 23). We, then, in coming to the church, come unto the heavenly Jerusalem, the bride, the Lamb's wife.

But further: "I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ" (2 Cor. 11:2). "Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to him that is raised from the dead" (Rom. 7:4). These quotations show that the church is espoused to, and is to be married to Christ, and hence proves beyond a doubt that the church glorified is the bride of Christ: and as the bride of Christ is the holy city, the holy city must be the glorified church.

But how about its walls ? Isaiah says, "In that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judah: we have a strong city; salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks" (Isa. 26:1). "Thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise" (Isa. 60:18). "I will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and will be the glory in the midst of her" (Zech. 2:5). These passages show that walls are not always literal; and as God is to be a wall unto some in the future, and he is our salvation, we can see that he is the wall of salvation unto his people, and the most high God would be a wall great and high. The twelve gates representative of the twelve tribes of Israel, is called "praise," because Israel will spend eternity praising God. The walls had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb. If the wall is representative of God, or the salvation of God, the twelve are represented as sharing in that salvation, and dwelling in the Father eternally.

"The nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of the city." This is not the saints of this and past ages; but those saved during the millennial age. The glorified saints of that age are in the age eternal walking in the glory of God and the Lamb, and the light thereof. They being no part of the bride, are not part of the city, and hence do not dwell in it; but walk in its light. All the saved must be saved by getting into Christ; for redemption is found only in him; and he is the seed in which the nations are to be blessed. None enter the glorified throng, holy city, New Jerusalem, except their names are inscribed in the book of life. Thus we see how careful we as Christians should be that our names are not blotted out of that book. If any alien should chance to read this we warn him that now is his opportunity to get his name inscribed there. Delay may forever take away this opportunity, and cause him to be cast into the second death.

J. J. HECKMAN.

The Divine Translator

It is the glory of God to translate the speech of heaven into the language of earth. He brings the eternal realities into our currency; he speaks to us as we are able to bear the truth. Between this scene and the eternal world there stretches a land hard to cross, into which human eyes can see but a little way. How can messages be sent to and fro unless there is One who will translate for us and who send and bring his word ? God must interpret for us; God has spoken to us through the prophets, and in his Son.

I.

But translation is two-fold: the language of heaven must be turned into our homely speech, and the language of earth must be turned into eternal values. This, too, is the work of the same Translator; and at times in the Holy Scriptures we are able to discern this perpetual work of grace. We see him busily transposing our thoughts and longings and acts. What we mean by our lives we know but only in part; they mean something else, and something greater to him. It is our temptation to imagine that our gifts mean little to him; they are almost too trivial for us to present before his throne. It is our way to undervalue the achievements of others; it is the Divine way to magnify them a thousand fold. They lose nothing in translation.

II.

We see faith; it is only faith, we declare; it is only faith, not something secured, and achieved. Abraham takes a step into the unknown; we advise others to build very little on such an act. God sees faith, and reckons it in terms of achievement. He translates into another language. It is not that God sees an unrighteous man, and by a kindly fiction calls him righteous. He sees a man with faith at work within him; that is for him a new and all-significant fact; it holds within it the secret of goodness and holiness, without which no man shall see God. God builds a great structure upon that personal decision and deliberate set of the will towards him which we call faith.

There is generosity with him, and a courage far removed from our caution. To him Abraham leaving Ur is already the father of the faithful. All the promise of his achievements lies in the venture upon the word of God which led him out from his father's home. To us he is setting out; to God he has arrived.

III.

This translation is based upon the character of faith as a relation of trust between two persons. It is not a momentary emotion within the human breast which begins and ends there; it has all the power which comes not from this side only, but from the other. Its meaning cannot be exhausted until the purpose and power are known of the other Being now in covenant with the soul. It is not this end that matters most, but the other end at the Mercy Seat. Faith has unfathomable reaches within it. God alone can see them and value them. He hears the new affirmation of the soul at his erthly end: but that is not all he hears. That affirmation means in the working out of itself within this scene a growing likeness to the Divine Nature; it means salvation The meaning of faith is unknown until it is revealed. God translates faith into the language of perfect deliverance; we speak of beginnings. He turns our words into the language demanded by final values of heaven. There is no fiction in this; there is no make-believe. It is but a plain dealing with realities. God is a perfectly accurate Translator when faith is acounted by him as righteousness.

IV.

If he would reveal his love to us, God had to act; words were not enough; love could not be revealed without deeds. And if man would speak back the reply of his heart to the Incarnate Word, he must answer like with like, words with words, deeds with deeds. All such answers are evidence of the heart's understanding of the Divine Purpose: all, therefore, are worship. It is fitting that man should devote all his words and arts to the praise of his Incarnate Lord; these belong to his worship; but if he would make the answer complete he must have his acts of mercy and service to bring. In the sight of the Divine Lord these, too, are pure worship. It may be that the men who offer this are unconscious of all that their acts mean. "Lord, when saw we thee a-hungered and fed thee ?" said the men on the right hand; the Judge seemed to be speaking a strange language, but he had but translated the doings of earth into their eternal value.

V.

Once more: there is prayer for ever rising from earth to heaven. It seems little to us; it is but the feeble cry of a soul for strength, or a word of submissive faith, "God have mercy upon me!" "Thy will be done!" Only prayer is left, we say; we cannot do anything else, we can only pray. Yet, since prayer is in the heart of it, the offering of the soul to God, it is from the other side the opening of a channel; it is the signal for the release of of Divine energy. It rises as desire, or longing, or submission, that is our language. But what does it mean in the currency of the world unseen, where Christ forever pours out his soul in intercessions ?

There it is translated; its value is measured not in longings and aspirations, but in mighty deeds. It can only be understood when it is transposed into the terms of that abiding world whose energies we can but dimly trace. In the book of the Revelation the translation of prayer is set forth in solemn and moving symbols. "The angel stood over against the altar having a golden censer, and there was given unto him much incense that he add it unto the prayers of all the saints upon the golden altar which was before the throne. And the smoke of the incense with the prayers of the saints went up before God out of the angel's hand." Then what did these prayers become ? "And the angel taketh the censer and he filled it with the fire of the altar, and cast it upon the earth, and there followed thunders and voices and lightnings and an earthquake." We have heard the prayer; we have seen, it it may be, the spiritual revolutions, swift as an earthquake; but we have not known how they were related; that the earthquake is but the translation of what may be but a still small voice.

This is his generous way of dealing with our gifts and offerings. He is a God who makes much of them. He is a General, proud of him men, ready to praise them and take into his mighty purpose all their gifts of brain or heart. He is not ashamed to be called their God. He is for ever translating into higher values all that they offer to him. It might be easier to resist a god who was always on the watch to trap us, and was always reducing our personality by his cold and harsh bearing. But it is hard to say "No" to one who makes so much of our least offering. It cannot be easy for anyone to fail such a God, when everything of ours is magnified by him a thousandfold. Such is the God with whom we have to do.

A noble servant of God himself, a true poet, Alfred Norris, told once the story how as a boy he had carved a boat as well as he could, and left the poor fragment by his bedside. As he slept his father came, and finished his work, so that when he awoke his boat was there not as he had left it, but as he had dreamed of it. When we awake, we shall find what the generous Father of our spirits has made of our unfinished works. And we shall be satisfied when we awake with his likeness.—Sel. by Brother Geo. B. Alldridge.

MEMORY VERSES: MICAH 6:8. TITUS 2:13,14.

GOLDEN TEXT: 1 Peter 4:11

MAKE THE BEST OF IT

If some pleasure come your way,
Though 'tis but a holiday,
Just an hour or two of play,
  Better make the best of it.
Drop your work, its care and strife,
Take your child, and take your wife,
Taste a moment's freer life,
  And just make the best of it.

Oft ungrateful you have been;
Though your home was sweet and clean,
Thought it only small and mean,
  Better make the best of it.
Think upon your table spread,
With enough of daily bread,
Bless your baby's curly head,
  And just make the best of it.

Perhaps you've gone with weary feet
Through the hay, and corn, and wheat;
When the harvest is complete,
  Make the best of it.
Though you've grumbled oft before,
At the smallness of your store,
Don't grumble any more,
  But make the best of it.

Two things since the world began
No one frets for, if a man—
What he can't help—what he can—
  But he makes the best of it.

What you can't help is God's will (Do you know what's good or ill?)
Cheerfully submit, and still
Try to make the best of it.

What you can help, help, if you
Would unto yourself be true;
A mistake has still its due —
'Tis to make the best of it.
Sorrow's only good for sin;
From each error you may win
Gain or wisdom—so begin
To make the very best of it.

There's no grief that can betide,
Loss or wrong, or wounded pride,
But will have a brighter side.
Find it, make the best of it.
Make the worst—you only place
Shame and anger to your case;
Better keep a cheerful face
And make the very best of it.

Inspiring Letters

What kind of letter do you write to an absent brother or sister that you would like to cheer, inspire and comfort? As an example of the sort of letter we enjoy—and we imagine we are just ordinary folk, that the brethren in general would enjoy the same kind—we are going to let you read a letter recently received from a good brother of Newark, N. J., sent us while on vacation.

Dear Brother and Sister Donaldson:

We were very much pleased to receive your missive and to learn that you are having an enjoyable ttime. We trust that your vacation may be of benefit, and that when we meet again we will see you improved in health.

As to the discourse on Rom. 8:4, you probably heard what might be expected of a "blind leader of the blind." Your refernce to Rom. 8:1 is appropriate; when we add Col. 2:10-14; 1:20-23; Jude 24, 25; and Rom. 8:30-39, we can readily say: Where is the disputer of this world? Where is the scribe? Where are the wise of this age?

We understand the Lord Jesus, when he says: "My peace I leave with you," and his apostle, when he says: "Stand fast in the liberty with which Christ has made you free."

Paul says: "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of Christ"; but the teachers of the world, both Jew and Gentile, preach the works of the flesh, and make the cross of Christ of none effect. Surely if their teaching is true, then the cross of Christ is foolishness. But, if their light be darkness, how great is that darkness!

"As oft as you eat this bread and drink this cup, show you the Lord's death until he come." Did he say this only to draw our attention to the fact that he is giving an example of brotherly love? Are we not thereby reminded of his word, that he came to do the work which the Father gave him to do, and that he finished that work on the cross? And he was obedient unto death, so that God wrought out the true and everlasting righteousness to be bestowed upon sinners, who flee to the Son, that sure refuge, who was found without sin and blameless, who has the testimony, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased," and our life is hid in Christ.

But the teachers of righteousness after the flesh must be popular, for men have itching ears and heap unto themselves teachers after their own lusts; and the serpent says: "Ye shall be as gods, knowing good from evil." And they preach as they know, to them is reserved the blackness of darkness forever.

We are having our meetings here every Friday evening, the children attending regularly.

All are enjoying good health, and trust that you are in good health also. Sister Dietz and all the children join me in sending Christian love.

Sincerely yours in the one faith,

Daniel Dietz.

Both Brother and Sister Dietz are good, consciencious children of God who, through their precept and example, have brought all their children, of proper age, into the family of our Father which art in heaven. They do not court publicity, and the publishing of this letter will, to them, be a surprise. We know they will not object, for they know our purpose is, not to glorify them, nor ourselves, but to give an object lesson in correspondence whereby God will be glorified. "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

By Their Works Ye Shall Know Them

Some time since, the editor and publisher of a certain religious weekly paper (we'll not say whether or not we refer to The Restitution) met an old time subscriber who was in arrears for his subscription, and in the course of their conversation the following remarks took place.

Sub.—How is it you never asked me to pay what I owe?

Ed.—I never ask a Christian for money.

Sub.—Indeed! then how do you get on if he does not pay?

Ed.—Well, if he does not pay within a reasonable time I conclude he is not a Christian, and then I ask him.

Needless to say the editor did not ask for the money due, still the subscriber paid on the spot.

Are You A Christian?

If so, settle your accounts at once. "Owe no man anything, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law."

Snobbery is the pride of those who are not sure of their position. Don't be a snob.

Some people are so busy doing nothing that they cannot find time to accomplish even that. They must needs get into mischief.

Did you ever actually know, personally, a man who killed himself by overwork? If so, he was not working in the interest of God and his Christ, was he?

The office of parent is a high one, and it is an office also that sometimes [illegible]. There is no higher or nobler calling than to teach youth to regard their fellows, love their family and friends, reverence God and his Christ, and so live that they will gain and hold the respect of all with whom they come in contact.

True Christianity

"That Christianity which catching its inspiration from on high, and leaving at an immeasurable distance below all lesser, groveling, personal interests and feelings, animates and prompts to deeds of sacrifice, of valor, of love, of devotion, of reverence, that is true Christianity; that is the greatest, the sublimest of all great things."

Good Advice

If you are a good Christian you will be more concerned about your contribution to the world than you will be about what the world thinks about it. It is the person who can forget what the world may think, in his desire to give the world the best, who really deserves praise. Forget the unkind words and dismiss the irritating acts of people about you. Censor all that you hear for the good that is in it and [illegible] it by the result. You will be far [illegible] and the world will hear from you.

Bible Lesson

Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him.

In the preceding part of this chapter Paul says, "Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." In this he means that we are dead to the world. We are to have no further interest in, or love for the pleasures of worldly things, and as our "life is hid with Christ in God," it is from Christ we are to get our animation, our spirit, our very life. The things that now are to interest us, are godly things. As Jesus Christ was the embodiment of God on earth, we are to get these through Jesus by faith and obedience; therefore Paul says, "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom." We are not only to "have" the word of Christ, but we are to have it "richly," that is, in abundance, and we are to use it wisely. How wisely? In teaching and admonishing (or [illegible]) one another in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs (all of which can be found in God's own holy book). As it says in the 6th verse of the following chapter, "Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man." It is a great thing to know how to talk to a person concerning the things of "God and his Christ." At all times we are to be calm, we are to be courteous, we are to be interesting, we are to be patient that we may be convincing. Is this all? On the face it seems as if it was about complete. But let us see: above all else we are to have and practice love and modesty, giving God the glory.

Be Christian

In the United States there are [illegible] Protestant church members and 170 different denominations. It is possible to be six kinds of an Adventist, 12 kinds of a Mennonite or a Presbyterian, [illegible] kinds of a Baptist, [illegible] kinds of a Lutheran or 17 kinds of a Methodist.

These denominations have many features in common. Above all, they have the same goal, the furthering of the kingdom of Christ on earth in this age through belief in [illegible] and other like doctrines that we are sure are displeasing to the Master.

And with all these denominational divisions and sub-divisions there is but ONE CHRISTIAN CHURCH founded on the fact that "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; One Lord, one faith, one baptism, One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all."

Are you a denominationalist, or a Christian? Very easy to know the difference if you study your Bible.

Lower East Side of New York

On the lower East Side of New York City there is a section which is a large city in itself—80,000 people—and there is only one Protestant house of worship, and this with such a small congregation that it hardly is noticed. The population of this district is [illegible] Jewish, and that of the most poverty stricken sort. The balance is Roman Catholic, about equally divided between Irish and Italians.

Books and Teachers

Books are teachers whose instructions are unaccompanied by blows or harsh words, and who demand neither food nor wages. You visit them, and they are alert; if you want them, they do not secrete themselves; nor do they ridicule your ignorance, be it ever so gross (Richard de Bury).

When Jesus Comes

Soon Jesus will come and claim his own,
  Then sorrow and sighing shall ne'er be known;
That day of endless day and light,
  Shall banish all sorrow, death, and night.

The glory of heaven shall cover the land,
  There the temple of God shall evermore stand;
There heavenly hosts shall sing God's praise,
  And all shall be happy through endless days.

God shall be there, the Father of all,
  The earth made free from the curse of the fall;
There his will shall be done, as in heaven above,
  And all shall dwell there in infinite love.

The Last Days

Chronological Signs Considered

A. E. Griffiths

NO OCCUPATION is so engrossing or more profitable than studying the word of God, and of all the multitudinous themes that are to be found therein, there is no subject of more absorbing interest to believers than that contained in the prophecies relating to the closing of the times of the Gentiles, which culminates in the return of Christ and the establishment of his rule and authority over all the earth.

In these last days the one question continually uppermost in our minds is, "When will Christ come"? This is a matter of the utmost importance, especially to those who have taken on the all-saving name, for his arrival means our change from this mortal state to the immortal, or the alternative, condemnation; a most appalling disaster which happens to those who "have done evil" (John 5:29). This being the case, let us look into these things, for the word of God was given for our enlightenment, and we should understand it.

The prophecy relating to this subject is chiefly to be found in the book of Daniel, and Christ, when giving his prophecy in Matthew 24, referred to Daniel remarking, "whoso readeth, let him understand" (vs. 15), therefore proving that Isaiah's words were true when he said, "I have not spoken in secret, in a dark place of the earth: I said not unto the seed of Jacob, Seek me in vain. I the Lord speak righteousness, I declare things that are right" (Isa. 45:19). These texts show clearly that God wishes us to understand the records he has made for us; and with that thought in mind let us first apply ourselves to the eighth chapter of Daniel, and study

The Little Horn of the Goat

The opening of this chapter introduces Daniel seeing a vision, and in the third verse he sees a ram that has two horns, and one horn higher than the other, and the highest came up last. Here we get a clear representation of the Medo-Persian empire interpreted in verse 20, the Medes coming into power last and predominating. In the fifth verse he sees a goat come from the west (the location of Greece from Medo-Persia). He touched not the ground, showing he came with great speed, and had a notable horn between the eyes, which illustrates the rise of the Greek power under Alexander the Great (vs. 21). In the sixth and seventh verses he conquers the ram (Medo-Persia), and then after the death of Alexander and the division of his kingdom between his four generals, Ptolemy, Seleucus, Lysimachus, and Antigones, we read in the ninth verse: "And out of one of them came a little horn, which waxed exceeding great, toward the south and toward the east, and toward the pleasant land." This is the little horn in which we are interested.

We must now take notice that this little horn of the goat is entirely distinct from the little horn of the terrible fourth beast of Daniel 7. The little horn of the goat is the desolator of Israel and their land, while the little horn of the beast is the down treader of Israel after the spirit; in other words, the little horn of the beast represents papal Rome and the little horn of the goat pagan Rome. Perhaps some objection may be found to classifying the goat as Roman, when we have previously described it as Greek, but we must remember that Rome conquered Greece, and so the goat represents whatever power takes possession of th territory it symbolizes, which was and still is the land now called Palestine and Arabia, or more descriptively Asia Minor. In applying these symbols to the subject in hand we must remember that the little horn of the goat antedated the little horn of the beast of Daniel 7, by many centuries, which has considerable bearing on our final analysis.

Another feature we would point out is that the abomination of desolation spoken of by Christ in Matt. 24:15 could not possibly have been papal Rome, because the papacy was not in existence at the time. The eighth, ninth, and eleventh chapters of Daniel are chiefly descriptive of the goat symbols, and deal with the Jews and their land, which must be kept separate from the ecclesiastical signs of Daniel 7.

Returning to Dan. 8:11 we read, "Yea, he magnified himself even to the prince of the host, and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down." It is here predicted that the little horn of the goat would magnify himself against the prince of the host of Israel. This he accomplished when he "crucified the Lord of glory" (1 Cor. 2:8), and after that, in A. D. 70, he took away the daily sacrifice through the instrumentality of Titus, son of the then reigning Roman emperor Vespasian; and the place of his sanctuary was cast down when Jerusalem was beseiged and taken. The casting down was so absolute that the site of the temple was actually ploughed up.

Daniel speaks of this same destruction in chapter 9:26: "And after three score and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself; and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of the war desolations are determined," showing that the goat power only was instrumental in crucifying Christ, in taking away the evening-morning sacrifice and destroying Jerusalem.

We will now continue the eighth chapter, verse 13: "Then I heard one saint speaking, and another saint said unto that certain saint which spake, How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice, and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot ?"

We have now established the fact that the little horn of the goat destroyed Jerusalem in A. D. 70, and causes the Holy Land to be trodden down, and now the question is asked, "How long shall this treading down be ?"

The first action concerning the vision in this chapter is the defeat of the ram by the goat, which interpreted means the victory of Greece over Media-Persia. On this point history supplies us with dates, viz., in 449 B. C. the Athenians conquered the Persians at Cyprus by land and sea, after which peace was proclaimed. So here we have a starting point. Continuing with our chapter the 14th verse reads, "And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred days, then shall the sanctuary be cleansed."

This verse gives us a definite period to examine, and if we deduct 449 B. C. from 2300, we get 1851 A. D. Now let us see how the year 1851 affects the land of Israel, or the cleansing of the sanctuary.

In the first place, the word "sanctuary" refers to the Holy Land, the land separated from that surrounding it for the special use of God's people. "Sanctuary" here used is translated from the Hebrew word "Quodesh," meaning "separation."

In the next place the word "cleansed" does not give the correct impression of the writer's meaning. The Hebrew word from which it is translated is "tsadaq," which the Revised Version translates "justified." Young gives this part of the verse, in his translation of the Bible: "Till evening-morning, two thousand and three hundred, then is the Holy place declared right."

According to these references something was to happen to Palestine in 1851 which would signify a vindication from injury and violence. We must not suppose that Christ was due immediately on the expiration of any given date, especially the first in the premise, because all divine action takes place by process, and things do not happen instantly. This date was only a commencement of something that would affect Palestine.

Practical Zionism Promoted

We find that in 1850 Lord Palmerston, at that time premier of England, advocated in Parliament a restoration of the Jews to their native land. This was the life work of Sir Moses Montefiore, by whom the work was commenced in the following year 1851, and has been carried on by progressive stages until the present time. The fact that the Jews in Palestine are now under British protection gives them the greatest freedom they have yet enjoyed, and proves that the land is being vindicated or avenged in stages, and the last stage is close at hand.

We read in Isaiah, "Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish first to bring thy sons from afar, their silver and their gold with them, unto the name of the Lord thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because he hath glorified thee" (Isa. 60:9). We have already plenty of records that England (Tarshish) has carried many Jews back with their belongings, which fulfills this prophecy. We must not look for a complete restoration of Jews in their own land. This work is not allotted to man, but to Christ. "And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth" (Isa. 11:12). Also "Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off and say, He that scattered Israel shall gather him, and keep him as a shepherd doth his flock" (Je. 31:10). These and many other texts show conclusively that the Jews will be gathered by Christ and not by man, and when they are gathered and restored by him, they will then accept him, whereas the Jews that are in Palestine today do not accept him, and will not in this dispensation. The Jews are as stiff-necked today as they were in the days of Moses, and will remain so until Christ returns.

Zionism Organized

Another period now claims our attention. We read: "And I heard the man clothed in linen, which was upon the waters of the river, when he held up his right hand, and his left hand unto heaven, and sware by him that liveth forever, that it shall be for a time, times, and a half; and when he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished" (Dan. 12:7). The length of this period is conceded by all Bible students to be 1260 years, counting a time as 360 years because there were 360 days to the Jewish year, and times as twice that amount, namely, 720 and a half 180, which added together give 1260. Now by adding this 1260 to our original starting point, 637, we have 1897; and this is the year in which the first Zionist Congress was held at Basle, at which Dr. Theodore Herzl was elected president. Here we see the creation of a world-wide organization to restore the Jews to Palestine, and occurring at exactly the time prophecied, and accomplished under the little horn of the goat. Once more nothing happened at this period to papal Rome, showing conclusively that all the prophecies relating to the Jews and their land are connected with the goat.

The Abomination that Maketh Desolate

Having now found that the prophecy of the 2300 days brings us from the rise of the Grecian empire to the beginning of the restoration of Israel and their land, we will now look into the prophecy of 1290 days which reads: "And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days" (Dan. 12:11). The evidence is very clear as to when the daily was taken away. The little horn of the goat accomplished this in A. D. 70, as already shown; but if after reading Dan. 12:11 we simply add 1290 to 70 we get 1360, which brings us to the midst of the blackest of all times when the papacy was flourishing. So this evidently will not solve the problem. Now if we examine this text carefully it does not state that the abomination shall be set up immediately after the taking away of the sacrifice. We have already shown how all things are worked out in a natural way by process. That being the case, we must look for the time when there was an abomination set up in the Holy Place, for it is an historical fact that Palestine and Syria were wealthy provinces of the Roman empire for some centuries following A. D. 70; and we can find no evidence of an abomination of desolation being set up for a long period. But if we wade through history till we reach the seventh century, then we can find something that will harmonize with the prophecy.

We know that today on Zion's Hill, where Solomon built the temple, stands the Mosque of Omar, and that Mosque is Mohammedan. If we refer to history we find that in 637 A. D. Jerusalem was beseiged by the Moslems for four months, after which it capitulated. A rather unusual occurrence took place at this time. The patriarch Sophronius appeared on the walls and demanded a conference: he offered to surrended, but with this clause that the articles of security be ratified by the authority and presence of Omar himself. This was taken up by the council at Medina, and it was decided that the caliph should gratify these wishes on account of the sanctity of the place; he therefore departed for Jerusalem. After arriving among his people he signed the capitulation and then entered the city, and here a very significant exclamation is recorded. It is remarkable how historians give us the fulfilment of prophecy even in Bible language; and in this case we quote Gibbon who, when recording this incident, says: "After signing the capitulation, he entered the city without fear or precaution, and courteously discoursed with the patriarch concerning its religious antiquities. Sophronius bowed before his new master, and secretly muttered in the words of Daniel, 'The abomination of desolation is in the holy place.' " What a wonderful confirmation here of David's words, "Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee" (Psa. 76:10). Here we have Gibbon, a man who was a skeptic and did not believe the Scriptures, actually quoting from them and establishing the truth of them. Truly God works in a mysterious way.

However, we find now that "the abomination that maketh desolate" was set up in 637 A. D. There can be no mistake about that; it harmonizes perfectly with the little horn of the goat, which was the desolator of the land in all these prophecies, and we notice that this setting up of the abomination had nothing to do with persecuting or prevailing against the saints of the Most High, which was the work assigned to the little horn of the beast or papal Rome. The Moslem or Turkish power, as it is now called, has always been a desolater, wherever it has held sway. We have plenty of evidence of that in the way Palestine has been trodden down by it for so many centuries.

Having arrived at the date 637 when the desolation was set up, let us now add 1290 years, as indicated in Dan. 12:11, and this brings us to 1927, which will be the "time of the end" (Dan. 11:35).

Beloved, this is a serious thought: if we have read prophecy aright Christ will be on the earth in eight years and the work of establishing his kingdom in progress. Once more we must bear in mind that the setting up of the kingdom will not be an instantaneous event, but one occupying a period of time. We read in reference to the image of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, "that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces" (Dan. 2:34). Then in the next verse we read, "And the stone that smote the image became a great mountain and filled the whole earth," showing clearly that the setting up of the kingdom will be an event that will take a period of time, and will not appear like a mushroom over night.

According to our study of this subject the return of Christ is very imminent, and considering that the saints are to be taken away for a time to be with him before he is manifested to the world, it is evident that the coming as a thief in the night is due any day. What a serious thought this is! Are we conducting ourselves each day in such a way that we are always in a mood agreeable to him if he should call us ? Are all our thoughts constantly centered on him ? They should be. No matter how much we do to serve him we cannot do enough, for we are unprofitable servants; but by his infinite goodness God is overlooking our sin and degradation for the sake of his beloved Son whose name we bear. So let our minds be centered on this one thought: Christ is due any minute.

Daniel's Last Date

There is one more date for our consideration and that is the one contained in Dan. 12:12: "Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days." If we add 1335 to 637 we get 1972, which will allow 45

Editorial

This week the reader will observe a change of type in the names of our contributors. Original perhaps, but we hope readers will approve the change.

It is interesting to note how fluctuating the world is in its code of morals. Before the world-war began we all can remember how preachers of "civic righteousness" howled about the "pernicious tobacco habit." Chewing gum was hardly tolerated by these moralists, and he who presumed to smoke a cigar was doomed to perdition. When we were a school boy we vividly recall those gruesome pictures they used to show us school boys of nicotine, "tobacco heart," etc. But during the world war these same moralists, forgeting their past moralizings and preachings, did not insist on the wounded soldier, lying in the trenches with his life slipping away, being warned that the cigar he asked for with his ebbing breath was "one more nail in his coffin." No; not a word of this. The Y. M. C. A. man, the Red Cross worker, and the preacher called a "chaplain" all vied with each other in putting tobacco, cigars, and cigarettes to the lips of the dying. The only exception is probably the the W. C. T. U. Here we have a complete change, a somersault in morals, within a few years. The fact is, people must have a fad it seems; and the fad changes according to circumstances and convenience. "The word of the Lord endureth forever; and this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you."

——o——

Again to show that men can change their morals as easily as their clothes. recall how statesmen, preachers, politicians, moralists and all, previous to the war with the central powers, preached peace. We were too proud to fight—too civilized! These very men, particularly so-called "preachers," so soon as war was declared, converted the very churches in which they had preached this twaddle, into recruiting stations: and an eminent minister in this city, Dr. Bustard thundered from his pulpit, "To hell with the Germans"! But enough. Let this suffice to show that morality with the world is a fad, and is as changeable as the weather.

October 26th all were glad to welcome to the Lord's table Sister Elsie Heacock, of Canton, Ohio.

The Sister's Society held a meeting Thursday afternoon, Oct. 23, at the home of Sister Ruth Pate. There were nineteen members present. It was reported that several calls had been made and flowers and letters sent to the sick. Sister Nellie Pate conducted the lesson, which was the third part of the eighth Bible Lesson, showing that the gifts of the Holy Spirit were only temporary investments of divine power. The meeting was closed by all repeating our motto found in Heb. 13:15, 16.—Addie Gibbs.

During the past week we responded to a call from Brother and Sister Eidemiller, of Troy, Ohio, who had been enveloped in sorrow by the death of their daughter. We hurried to their home and did what we could to bear them up over so trying an ordeal. Incidently we met a number of the faith from Brush Creek and Springfield, and had fragmentary visits with Brother and Sister Westfall and Brother and Sister Garard. In a sense which can only be understood and appreciated by those of like precious faith, we "rejoiced in tribulation." If spiritual felicity is evidenced thus in poignant sorrow, what a weight of happiness the saints shall wear in the graveless kingdom to come!

To Isolated Brothers and Sisters: The Young People's Society of the Church of God at Cleveland are anxious to keep in touch with brothers and sisters in the faith who are scattered through the country but sparated from us only by distance. In hope and all things essential we are one, and in these last days we need the strength which we can derive from one another. If any brother or sister would like to correspond with us, please address the undersigned, and in return receive a copy of our year's program. This will acquaint you with the subjects which we discuss: and our Society would be more than pleased to receive thoughts on the lessons we study from those who are interested. We, too, will be glad to mail sermon notes and other data of interest from our Cleveland church to any who wish to put themselves on our correspondence list.

Please consider this matter and let us hear from you.

Communications

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

Brother Huggins:

I noticed a letter in The Restitution yesterday regarding sending some one to Canada to baptize Mrs. Howard. Will you please state to the readers of The Restitution that I was sent there for that purpose, and had the pleasure of baptizing her the 5th day of Oct. I am at Blair, Neb., for severel nights, then to Arlington and Lincoln, Neb.

Your for truth,

J. A. Drinkard.

——o——

Dear Brother Huggins:

Tell the brothers and sisters not to send any more money: we have enough and the work is done. Brother Drinkard, of Holbrook, Neb., went to Canada and baptized Mrs. Howard, now our sister. He found her well posted on the fundamental principles. I want to ask the brethren what to do with what money is left over. As soon as we hear from Brother Drinkard again will make a report of the money left, after we have refunded the loan of $35.00 from Brother Garard. We feel that our dear brother should have something for his time and trouble as he denied himself a berth—a tiresome long trip to make in a chair car. Please publish this letter.

Your sister in hope and love. Greetings to all of like precious faith,

Mrs. L. Sweet.

Dear Restitution:

I see the time is up so I must renew another year. I am sending a bank draft.

Dear Brother Huggins, will you or someone give through The Restitution an article showing how to go about giving one tenth to the Lord. I am anxious to know, and there are others who need it made plain. Do we give one tenth of all we take in or what is one's support? We rent a house; do we give one tenth of the rent, or after taking out the taxes and insurance and the repairs on it, then take the tenth of what is left. Does a farmer give one tenth of all he sells or after paying for labor and what it takes to house the crop. I wish to do what is right so please enlighten me as well as others. The paper grows better all the time. There is not a member of the Church of God in this place so the paper is more dear to me. May the good Lord bless and prosper you in your good work.

Mrs. E. Seely

Dear Restitution:

With joy I will try to tell of some joyful meetings.

Leaving home and loved ones Saturday, Aug. 3, 1919. I spent a pleasant evening and night in Hot Springs, Ark. Sunday morning found me on my way to Memphis and Copleville. Tenn., near where Brother J. R. Ham lives, who received us gladly (Acts 21:17), to answer a call for baptism. A few days were spent with them in visiting other friends and relatives in a beautiful country (Psa. 48).

Sunday evening a goodly number gathered at Mr. Wilson's pool to witness a solemn scene, the burial in water of Sister Dellar Robison, the widow of Asa J. Ham, deceased.

Again, on Sunday near Raleigh, Tenn., where a nice pool had been mad ready for the occasion by Mr. H. D. Dodson a time of rejoicing came when two sisters and a brother were born of water (John 3:5) in the presence of their earthly parents, thus sealing their faith in Jesus being the way into the everlasting kingdom of God (John 14:6; Rom. 4:11; Gal. 3; 2 Pet. 1:11). This being our day to get in the Way. Mrs. S. J. Dodson, Mrs. M. M. Humphries, and Jas. W. Ham, a brother and two sisters of Asa L. Ham, deceased.

Then it was decided that we visit some of our Missouri brethren and see how they do, and were helped to Memphis by Mr. Dodson, to a nice resting place, one of our Mary's (Acts 12:12) to wait for an evening train to take us on our way toward Fredericktown, Mo., where a Bible School was in progress.

September 17, Fredericktown was found to be some seven or eight miles from Blush Church, the place of meeting. And the most eminent man of the town to us was found in his room at the Courthouse, Brother W. S. Cooper, who has the oversight of public schools in his county. So reminding one of Nicodemus (John 3:1), who could leave his office when occasion required. We were soon at the meeting in the midst of the week where we formed the acquaintance of many that we had never met before. We were "like a drunken man, one whom wine hath overcome" (Jer. 23:9), so to speak: but they made us feel happy. The force of Rom. 15:1-7; Gal. 6:2 in bearing our R. R. expenses there when we had not informed them of our coming. God bless them.

We are now in Tenn., expecting to visit our old place in Misc., and Tee Co., Ark., ere we return. Brethren, pray for us (Jas. 5:13,16). Good bye. Yours in hope of life, years for completing the work which Christ commences on his arrival, and at that time the temple will be built and everything in order, the nations subdued, and the time will have arrived "when thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness" (Isa. 26:9). Surely this is something worth striving for. The glories of the kingdom cannot be conceived by us with our finite minds, but let us pray that we may be like Daniel and stand in our lot at the end of the days, and then, and not till then, shall we be able to realize what God's love is to them that fear him and keep his commandments.

R. A. Humphreys

Future Relations

WILL FLESHLY relations be perpetuated in the kingdom of God? is a subject that is very perplexing to most of our orthodox friends who build so much on being reunited with their relations and friends in the future life. Our answer to this question is that

1. In the sense of intercourse commercially, industrially, and educationally after the manner of mankind--yes.
2. In the sense of kinsfolk among the mortals—no.

Under one, concerning intercourse, enterprises among the nations existing at the time of the Lord's reigning, let us read some texts. Because Christ is ruling and there are special blessings for the nations on the earth, will each individual raise his own sheep for his clothing? produce his own leather? live in unventilated houses, as those of ancient times? We think not. Even now unsanitary conditions are being overcome in the nations of Europe and Asia. Ezek. 36:33-35: ". . . . the desolate land shall be tilled, whereas it lay desolate in the sight of all that pass by. And they shall say, this land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden."

The Millennium a Period of Reconstruction

The wasted, desolated, and ruined cities are to become fenced and builded. Can't you see a systematic procedure of a sort of land army that will be superitended by the righteous? Nowhere has God ever let man fold his hands and he do the work. How often we are reminded that God's designs are always carried out by natural means. The following text say in so many words that a cleaning up in the earth is done by a force of workers: "Yea, all the people of the land shall bury; and it shall be to them a renown the day that I shall be glorified, saith the Lord God. And they shall sever out men of continual employment, passing through the land to bury with the passengers those that remain upon the face of the earth to cleanse it" (Ezek. 39:12-14). Psalms 46:8-10 is confirmed in Ezek. 39:6, 9, 10: "And I will send a fire on Magog and among them that dwell carelessly in the isles; and they shall know that I am the Lord. And they that dwell in the cities of Israel shall go forth and shall set on fire and burn the weapons, both the shields and the bucklers, the bows and the arrows and the hand staves and the spears, and they shall burn them with fire seven years. So that they shall take no wood out of the field, neither cut down any out of the forests; for they shall burn the weapons with fire." The mandates that proceed from Jerusalem which are to effect the renewing of the earth in Alaska or Cape Horn or the districts of Africa must be executed by the nations of the earth under the superintendency of the governing Christ and saints. This will take years of vigilant working to do.

The Industries of the Future Age

"And I will set a sign among them, and I will send those that escape of them unto the nations, to Tarshish, Pul, and Lud, that draw the bow, to Tubal and Javan, to the isles afar off that have not heard my fame, neither have seen my glory; and they shall declare my glory among the Gentiles" (Isa. 66:19). This making gorious God's name and instructing men in righteousness leads to travel and transportation. We have read about the punishment of those nations who fail in their religious duties, and how the wealth of the nations are to be brough to Jerusalem. Surely the boats in the kingdom age will be propelled on lines of now-a-days. Whether by coal or powerful motors a boat which is not crude demands mechanical power. This gives room for the industries of the future age: coal mining, cutting of timber, hewing of stone, manufacturing of machines, whether for air craft with travelling planes or the making of plows. Even in one of the city's newspapers an announcement was made that a powerful plane is being developed which in time they hope to travel 1000 miles an hour. Think of it; and the equator only 25,000 miles around. Around the world in 25 hours! No wonder the nations can worship at Jerusalem.

Wonders in the Agricultural Calling

"But ye, O montains of Israel, ye shall shoot forth your branches and yield your fruit to my people of Israel, for they are at hand to come. For behold, I am for you, and I will turn unto you, and ye shall be tilled and sown" (Ezek. 36:8, 9). "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt" (Amos 9:13). With crops all the year round surely the fortunate mortal in the kingdom will not resort to the walking plow. Think of the modern tractors which pass over a field acres long and in that sweep the land is plowed, harrowed, disked, and sown. Surely Amos lets us see that some such arrangement is meant. With this contrivance the wheat could be cut and sown again by one motion.

Great publishing houses will be used to publish the name of the Lord, as that is more reliable and permanent than verbal messages. For example: we read in Deut. 32:3 of a song which Moses was speaking, but previous to this by a command of God he had written the words (Deut. 31:19-22). When Moses published the name of the Lord he repeated the words already written. Mark 13:10 states that the gospel must have been published among the nations by the apostles, and the whole New Testament Scripture is proof of this publication in writing. This art of publishing will call for machines, paper, metal, ink, supplies, workers, and recompense.

The buying, selling, and exchanging of land shall be in vogue, for the priests are commanaded not to do this. Read Ezek. 18:11, 12, 14 to see why the priestly order is warned against such a custom.

The Millennium a Medical Age

The science of medecine will still be in the earth. Isaiah speaks of using ointment or oil for bruises and sores, and in many places the tree of the healing leaves is mentiontd by Bible writers. By comparing Ezek. 47:12 and Rev. 22:2 we discover that the tree whose leaves are for the healing of the nations lasts down to the end of the thousand years. So there will be need of medical advice among the nations who are born and who die during the reign of Christ.

An Age of Commercial Wealth

Zechariah tells us that the wealth of the nations, gold, silver, and apparel in great abundance is to be brought to Jerusalem. Isaiah commenting on this subject in the 60th chapter of his book says that the gates are open continually "that men may bring unto thee the wealth of the Gentiles." As the wealth of the nations is their resources converted into gold and silver, powerful and strong nations make up the dominion of Christ and the saints. Although commercially, industrially, and educationally the world goes on the same through the reign of Christ, there will be no such times as on the earth today. Why? Turn to Ezek. 38:19-22; 39:2-6; 36:25-27 and you will find interesting reading.

God will not keep all this purified people of his at Jerusalem, but will place them all over the earth as a help to the Gentiles who have been tried with fire likewise. And because the King reigns righteously, and judgment and justice rule in the wilderness and isles Isaiah 32 reads: "My people shall dwell in a peaceable habitation, in sure dwellings, and in quiet resting places; and the effect of righteousness will be quietness and assurance."

Now briefly shall we touch upon the second part of the subject, namely, what my relations to my mother, father, grandmother, etc., shall be in the kingdom.

Fleshly Relationships Impossible in Immortality

"Shall mortal man be more just than God? shall a man be more pure than his maker? Behold, he put no trust in his servants, and his angels he charged with folly. How much less in them that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundation is in the dust, which are crushed before the moth? They are destroyed from morning to evening they perish forever without any regarding it. Doth not their excellency which is in them go away? they die even without wisdom" (Job 17:21). With such a race of weaklings the race would be entirely lost. So Jesus tells of the arrangements needful for the production of mankind in Luke 20:34: "The children of this world marry and are given in marriage." But by contrast he teaches us of the children of the resurrection: "They which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead neither marry nor are given in marriage, neither can they die any more, for they are equal unto the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection" (Luke 20:35, 36). "As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God, neither doth corruption inherit incorruption" (1 Cor. 15:49, 50). As the very nature of man is changed, living forever is one of the blessings of the resurrection. The means for propagating the race is entirely unnecessary then.

Paul in Gal. 3:24-29 tells us that we are children of God by faith, being baptized into Christ. And being baptized into Christ we are all one in Christ Jesus, throwing aside the family relationship. Christ, filled with the glories of the future, recognized no family connections other than those, who loved the Lord (Matt. 12:46-50). Just as the present food and the necessities of this life are cast off with the old man at the resurrection, so will the family relationships be dissolved as entirely unnecessary, and we shall all be one family in God, heirs of promise with Jesus our Lord.

Brother Anderson Visits Kentucky

Having received a request to go to Brumfield, Ky., for a meeting, we left home Sept. 30th, 1919, and arrived at Danville next day. At Danville we were met by Brother Frank Skeels and his sisters, Viola, Sadie and Laura. We got into his Ford and drove us to his home, some 15 miles from Danville. As we drove along we talked of Bible doctrine and soon found we had met people who were sound in the faith, and wanted the truth just as found in God's book.

After supper we went to the church where we met the brethren and a large congregation, who gave us good attention during the service. The meeting continued till Oct. 12th. As a rule the house was full and a number on the outside. During the meeting we had the very best of attention. We believe there are a number interested and feel sure that if the work could continue some would obey.

On Sunday Oct. 12, we went to the water and baptized Mrs. Verdie Carpenter, wife of Brother Vernon Carpenter. May she prove faithful and receive the reward when Jesus comes.

We have been in the work for twenty-three years and Kentucky is the tenth state in which we have worked, and we must say we were never better treated anywhere than we were in Kentucky. It makes us feel good to meet people who want truth and who are not afraid for the preacher to preach the truth.

Esau sold his inheritance for pottage. Afterwards he regretted his folly and wept. Lysimachus, beseiged by the Goths suffered so severely from thirst that he offered his kingdom to his foes for a supply of water. Having quenched his thirst he cried: "O wretched man, who for a little joy has lost so great a kingdom!"

"None of us liveth unto himself" (Rom. 14:7). This text is often used to emphasize the idea that it is impossible for a man to keep from affecting the lives of others by his life. However true this sentiment man be, it is not the meaning of this Scripture. By "us" the apostle simply refers to Christians. If we interpret by the context, as we certainly ought to do, we find that the general subject is obedience to God. We are to seek not our own pleasure, but the pleasure and will of God. We are not to live for ourselves, but for God. The apostle here does not mean that men have influence one over the other.

Brother Thos. Shelton, a brother of long and honorable standing in the truth, was laid to rest Oct. 18th. His death was a shock to the church, and a distinct loss to every member. In his illness which terminated in his death, his enforced absence from the Lord's table was continually lamented. His "meek and quiet spirit" made him a monument for the truth in the highway of life. He never allowed hatred to soil his soul. With all his kindness and gentleness he was faithful to the end. He loved the truth. In his long career in the faith, a career of distinguished faithfulness, he was never known to be in a quarrel. With rare discretion he was faithful without compromise and acrimony. He adorned his faithfulness with sweetness, and died in the faith and love of the gospel. After words of comfort were spoken to Sister Shelton and all the bereaved brethren, sisters, friends, and relations we wended our way from the church to Lakeview Cemetery where we tenderly laid our Brother to rest until the voice of the Son of Man shall call him forth to "the resurrection of life" (John 5:28, 29).

"Come Thou with us, and we will do Thee Good"

NUMBERS 10: 29.

The following letter was a private epistle, which accounts for the names and addresses being omitted. A few individuals "went out from us" twenty or more years ago. Our only motive in publishing this letter is to show the reader that any one in Cleveland who is not in our fellowship is barred soleiy because he refuses to accept "the one faith." This letter reveals that transparently, placing the responsibility solely upon him. Rejecting our basis of faith is a negation of the gospel; and with such we can have no affiliation. The letter follows:

> Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee (Gen. 13:8).
> Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" "There the Lord commanded the blessing, even life for evermore" (Psa. 133:1, 3).
> Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are" (John 17:11).
> That they may all be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me (John 17:21).
> And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them: that they may be one, even as we are one (John 17:22).
> There is one body, and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all (Eph. 4:4-6).

Dear ———— :

May I ask you to meditate prayerfully upon the above testimonies of the Holy Spirit. A division of "the one body," in direct violation of these passages of Scripture, took place several years ago. What added to the odium of the schism was the fact that the division was occasioned by matters purely personal, and regardless as to what might have been the merits or demerits of these personal matters, personal feeling in regard to them has long since ceased to exist. When you left us you went away with "the one faith" common to us all. Now after an experience of several years of separate and independent existence, all must see the futility of perpetuating a division which the Bible condemns, and which experience has demonstrated is of no benefit to anyone.

All should be desirous of clearing themselves of every vestige of responsibility for this carnal situation (1 Cor. 3:3). Therefore, in the hope of seeing all reunited in "one hope, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, and one God and Father of all," I now approach you with an overture of amicable reconciliation. The imminence of Christ's coming, now so plainly declared by the signs of the times, will doubtless predispose you to an examination of the faith and fellowship I propose, as its adoption will be satisfactory to me and acceptable to you. I am enclosing herewith a copy of "Our Confession of Faith," acceptance of which will no doubt be, on your part, prompt, hearty, and entire. In proposing this basis of faith and fellowship, I am merely asking you to return to the original body on the condition that you bring back "the one faith" you took with you when you left. Upon this condition you will be received cordially into fellowship without the imposition of any other conditions. And your welcome will be none the less cordial in case you elect to maintain a separate meeting, provided such meeting adopts "Our Confession of Faith" as the basis of its faith and fellowship.

In view of the importance of all being "with one accord in one place" (Acts 2:1), as "there the Lord commands the blessing, even life for evermore" (Psa. 133:3), will you, after careful consideration of the matter, let me hear from you with the promptitude which befits a matter involving present and eternal interests.

Your brother "endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace" (Eph. 4:3).

"Out of Darkness Into Light"

By Allen D. Strickler

Writing further upon the subject to the Hebrews he says: "Hath at the end of these days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he appointed heir of all things, through whom also he made the ages; who being the effulgence of his glory, and the very image of his substance." Christ was the great mystery of the gospel when it was preached in all the ages before the Christian era. The truth that God would have a Son from the human family by the power of his Holy Spirit, who should have a free will and by faith in the gospel preached to the fathers of Israel, in conjunction with the law and testimony of the Lord, create in his heart "the mind of the Spirit," that is, "the divine nature" spoken of by the apostle Peter, and in no way be under the control of his human nature; who should also die and be raised from the dead as the first of a new order of human beings, was indeed a great mystery, and something that needed to be revealed, not only that the Jews might have "the mind of the Spirit" such as Christ had; but "the Gentiles also; and be fellow heirs, and fellow members of the body, and fellow partakers of the promise in Christ Jesus through the gospel" (Eph. 3:6).

Paul in Romans 16:25, 26 presents in glowing language how the mystery of the gospel has been revealed and made plain. Here is what he says: "Now to him, that is able to establish you according to my gospel and the preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery which had been kept in silence through times eternal, but now is manifested, and by the Scriptures of the prophets, according to the commandment of the eternal God, is made known unto all nations unto obedience of faith." In Paul's letter to the Colossians, writing about the brethren at Laodicea and others who were not personally acquainted with him, he says: "That their hearts may be comforted, they being knit together in love, and unto all riches of the full assurance of understanding, that they may know the mystery of God, even Christ, in whom are all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge hidden" (Col. 2:2, 3). In chapter 1:27, 28, the apostle says: "To whom God was pleased to make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory; whom we proclaim, admonishing every man and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we may present every man perfect in Christ." Christ; and Christ in both Jew and Gentile, go to make up the mystery of the gospel and the fellowship of it. It is a revealed mystery now, although spoken of as the mystery of the gos- in the Scriptures.

We are told in Deut. 29:29 the "the secret things belong unto the Lord our God; but the things that are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever, that we may do all the works of the law."

The how and the wherefore of salvation have their answers in Christ Jesus. God in sending forth his word to accomplish his good pleasure, was successful; one man from the human family was saved. Both Jew and Gentile now, in this Saved One, have the proof and demonstration of eternal life for man; but it is promised upon conditions. There is no such a thing as the continuity of life. All nature testifies to the fact of death. This Saved One said: "I am he that liveth, and was dead" (Rev. 1:18).

The condition upon which eternal life can be had is as stated by Paul in Colossians and Romans. "Christ in you, the hope of glory." "And if Christ

Remarks

Another year has passed into history. In taking a retrospective view of the work with all its handicaps, it was quite fruitful. Twenty were added to the body, not a great number; some young, and some heads of families. Our chiefest joy will be to meet them in the kingdom, where this strenuous work will be ended, and peace and good will replace strife and hatred.

At the close of conference we put in the week following, straightening out the odds and ends of the work, and preparing for the present year's campaign. On the 7th, after Sunday School, we went to the Municipal Beach, where in the placid waters of the lake, we planted six young people into the saving name. How glorious to see these young people, just budding into manhood and womanhood, safeguard their future by taking Jesus as their leader and example! His lead is a straight path to the kingdom. The last night of conference, after the closing sermon, the invitation was given to accept the gospel terms of salvation.

But here let me say first, three years ago the enemy for the first time visited our home, and took our second daughter, and her home was left with two girls and a little boy; but when she went she left her impress upon them, and her life and character still lived in them; and when I gave the invitation, the oldest of these girls responded, then the next one. Then every one's mind went to the mother who slept, and there was hardly a dry eye in the house. As Sister Mynhild Sorrenson led her forward, Sister Cronk said, "Brother Adams, you can rejoice, for you can see Maudie's work going on." Then came Russell, our grandson, accompanied by his companion Gifford Sorrenson, who the day before had debated, as reported by Sister Free; then came our niece, and later Walter Cronk, Jr.

Can you wonder our hearts were full? When I left on my trip in the spring Sister Cronk told me she wanted to have her class ready for baptism when I returned, and she was true to her word. Now Sister Myrtle Adams has a class of bright little girls (and you ought to hear them sing) that if the Master delays his coming she will have ready soon as they are old enough. Because the prospects do not always look bright we often let opportunities slip by, thinking there is no use. But that will not excuse us: the Lord expects us to use every moment of time in some effort to enlighten those about us, and leave the result with him. I heard Myrtle say the other day that in training the children for their program, she got as much out of it as they. In other words, she learned things that were of benefit to herself as well as the children. So in all our efforts we receive some benefit.

On the 13th I started for Pelmer, Neb., and as Myrtle, our daughter-in-law, had a pressing invitation from Brother and Sister Russell Zeller to make them a visit, she accepted and took advantage of the oppirtunity to go while my meeting was in progress. Brother Zeller being president of the State Berean Society, and she Secretary and Treasurer, they planned a forward movement which is bearing fruit. Here we had a very good meeting, and the meetings themselves were not the only time of enjoyment. The visits in the houses, where the harmonious converse upon things of vital interest to us all, were both pleasant and profitable, and go far to smooth the pathway of the weary pilgrims.

The next point was Loretto. Brother Courtney had invited the Palmer brethren to visit them and attend the meeting on Sunday, which they planned to do; but a rain Saturday night spoiled it. However, about eleven o'clock Brother Zeller thought we could make it; so Sisters Helen, Frances, Myrtle and myself started with Brother Morris Zeller at the wheel of the big Jeffrey, and all who know him know they will be at their destination (if not their destiny) at the quickest possible time. We arrived safe, but too late for the forenoon meeting. In the afternoon Brother Courtney invited some by phone, and we proceeded to the Maple Hill School house, where a few gathered to listen to God's message to the world. The preliminary time was enriched by the appropriate songs, and splendid voices of Helen, Frances, and Myrtle. Beautiful songs inspire a speaker to his best, and fit the hearers to receive the message with better grace. Here the congregation increased until the last night we had nearly a capacity house. As a whole the people had never taken much interest in church work, and this seemed the first in that line. Urgent calls at other points caused us to close sooner than we otherwise would; but as some were asking for baptism we deemed it best to go. I am quite sure a work will be done here later. We made our home while here with Brother and Sister Courtney. They certainly know how to minister to one's comfort. Brother Courtney is well versed in Scripture and current events. Their daughter Leoda, came from Norfolk to attend the meeting, and she and Myrtle being of the quick active type, and they made things quite lively for Brother Courtney. Young Sister Gladys Courtney, daughter of Brother Charles Courtney, presided at the organ. Am now starting for Buck Hart, Mo. Pray for the work.

Lesson XXXIX

DEATH BY SIN

MEMORY TEXT: By one man sin entered into the world and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned (Rom. 5:12).

1 And the Lord God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou?

2 And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I did hide myself.

3. And he said, Who told thee that wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldst not eat?

4. And the man said, The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree and I did eat.

5. And the Lord God said unto the woman, What is this that thou hast done?

6. And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife;

7. And hast eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it;

8. Cursed is the ground for thy sake, in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life;

9. Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field:

10. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken;

11. For dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.

12. And the Lord God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil:

13. And now lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever;

14. Therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken.

15. So he drove out the man; and placed at the east of the garden of Eden, Cherubim and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life (Gen. 3:9-24).

16. For since by man came death, by man also came the resurrection of the dead (1 Cor. 15:21).

Practical Truths

In this lesson we are considering the sin of Adam and its penalty death. The sin was in disobeying God. Death came into the world by sin. In our last lesson we found that God gave a command. Now we find by our lesson today that man broke the command, and thus sin entered into the world. It is generally believed that the sin of Adam brought death to all his posterity, by inheriting his nature. If this is true, mankind is wholly mortal and must inevitably die, and as Jesus is the life as well as the resurrection, then a resurrection to eternal life can only come through obedience to the gospel of Christ. We also see, if this is true, how important it is to know the nature of sin and its penalty that we may apply the remedy for sin.

Notes on the Lesson

Death by Sin.—Death came by sin. If sin had never entered our world the inference is there never would have been any death.

1. Adam.—Man of earth.

2. I was afraid.—Sin always brings fear. Fear brings torment (or pain) and leads to sickness, and sickness to death. How often we are told in the Scriptures to not fear, and the only way to avoid fear is not to sin.

3. Hast thou eaten. Hast thou broken my command?

4. I did eat.—Adam confessed his sin, but blames Eve for giving him the fruit.

5. What is this that thou hast done.—A reproof, direct in its nature, although in the form of a question.

6. Because.—For this reason or reasons.

8. Cursed. Evil pronounced or invoked.

10. Return unto the ground. this is a forcible definition of what God meant when he said, "Thou shalt surely die." The penalty must always be the same as the law threatens. God threatened death. When he pronounced the verdict he says, "Thou shalt return unto the ground.

11. Dust thou are.—Adam was by nature and creation of dust. The sin once committed and his access to the tree of life cut off, he must necessarily die and this death is necessarily a physical one, for nothing but the physical man could return to dust.

13. Lest.—For fear that.

14. Sent him forth.—Forcibly ejected him (see 15.) Till the ground.—His work was changed from "dressing and keeping" a garden to that of a tiller of the soil: showing that had he been obedient the trees would have yielded him their fruit with comparatively little labor. But now he must till the soil, and even then it would be by sorrow that he should eat the bread so dearly earned.

15. Cherubim.—A higher order of angels. These were placed with flaming sword to guard the tree of life lest Adam should now become immortal in sin. God foresaw such a calamity as an immortal sinner, and wisely prevented his eating of the tree of life after he had sinned.

16. By man came death.—So we see that by sin death has come. Let us hope for a life through Jesus.

Suggestive Topics and Questions

1. The sin.—What is sin? What follows sin? What is the wages of sin? (Rom. 6:23). Did God tempt Adam? (Jas. 1:13-15.) Who was the tempter in the garden? Who sinned first, Adam or Eve? Is it sin to disobey God? Why did Adam hide himself? (2.) Did Adam confess that he had eaten the forbidden fruit? (4.) Did Eve confess that she had done contrary to God's command? (Gen. 3:13.)

2. The penaly.—What is the result of Adam's sin? Memory text. Was the cursing of the ground a result of sin? (8.) What is said about thorns and thistles? (9.) What was God's sentence against Adam? (10.) Out of what was Adam made? (Gen. 2:7). Was returning to the ground the penalty for sin? What precaution did God take that Adam should not eat of the tree of life? (15.) How would eating of the tree of life affect Adam? Did Adam die? (Gen. 5:5).

GOLDEN TEXT: Psa. 116:1, 2

FILL ME WITH THY FULNESS, LORD

Lord, speak to me, that I may speak.
  In living echoes of thy tone:
As thou hast sought, so let me seek,
  Thy erring children, lost and lone.

Oh teach me, Lord, that I may teach
  The precious things thou dost impart,
And wing my words that they may reach
  The hidden depth of many a heart.

Oh give thine own sweet rest to me,
  That I may speak with soothing power
A word in season as from thee
  To weary ones in needful hour.

Oh fill me with thy fulness, Lord,
  Until my very heart o'erflow
In kindling thought and glowing word
  Thy love to tell, thy praise to show.

The Church and the Children

Of all the many movements, which today are working for betterment, none is so important, so urgent, so full of hope as that which is concentrating attention upon the boys and girls. The grave fact, gathered from evidence, goes to show that the great preponderance of the youth of our country has little, or no connection with any of our churches, and that behind this there lies a deep misunderstanding of the faith and ideals by which Christian men and women live. In trying to discover the cause of this indifference to the church, it must be humbly acknowledged that the greatest is our failure as followers of Christ to show him forth. If this is so, then it is our part, as it is the part of every individual Christian to re-consider our witness-bearing, since upon it depends the gaining or losing of the rising generation which is of such infinite importance.

Deep down in our heart we are convinced that our Master and Lord has in himself that which has power to win and hold.

It is for us to re-discover for ourselves his matchless worth, and so come under the spell of his transforming grace, that we ourselves with unveiled face, reflecting as in a mirror the character of Christ, may be changed into the same image of character.

What is it our boys and girls, our young people, are feeling after, often unconsciously perhaps? What is it they need, what are their secret ideals and ambitions? If we can but come to them with understanding, we can surely show them that in Christ, and in him as nowhere else, can they find what they want—a trusted Leader and Commander. One who may well be called the "Beloved Captain." "Jesus our Guide, our Hero, and our Friend." Finding this they will also find more, for they will come to call his Name Jesus, knowing that he saves from sin. They will come to think of him as the mighty Son of God by whom the worlds were made and in whom all things are held together, and they will learn to look eagerly for the time when, as Prince of Peace, he will take his power and reign.
